UNITED STATES

OF AMERICA

Congressional Record

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 76th CONGRESS FIRST SESSION

VOLUME 84—PART 3

MARCH 7, 1939, TO MARCH 29, 1939 (PAGES 2335 TO 3502)

UNITED STATES

mons/il bhoisentines

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 76" CONCRESS

VOLUME 84 CPART. 5

MARCH TO 1939, TO MARCH TO 1939.

UNITED STATES

AMERICA OF

Congressional Record

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 76th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

SENATE

TUESDAY, MARCH 7, 1939

(Legislative day of Monday, March 6, 1939)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, the Reverend ZeBarney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Father of infinite mercy, love, and power, hearken to the prayer of Thy children, though we bring to Thee but broken aspirations and many a failure that maketh us ashamed.

Thou didst send us into life like infants, without knowledge, and because we failed to comprehend or grasp our little life's full meaning we essayed to manage it alone, lured by false promises of fame and the seductiveness of sin. Save us, O God, from the false choices we have made, and give to us hearty repentance. Quicken our wills that, remembering still the Father's house, where even the servants have enough and to spare, we, Thy children, may turn our steps homeward where, with the kiss of peace, Thou wilt meet our deep necessities and answer our unutterable desires. We ask it in the name of Thy beloved son, Jesus Christ our Lord.

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Monday, March 6, 1939, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States submitting nominations was communicated to the Senate by Mr. Hess, one of his secretaries.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 660) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, to provide for the reapportionment of cotton acreage allotments not planted by farmers entitled thereto, with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills and a joint resolution, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 136. An act to authorize contingent expenditures, United States Coast Guard Academy;

H.R. 139. An act to amend paragraph (1) of section 96 of title 2 of the Canal Zone Code relating to method of computing annuities;

H.R. 153. An act to transfer jurisdiction over commercial prints and labels, for the purpose of copyright registration, to the Register of Copyrights;

LXXXIV-148

H.R. 899. An act to provide for the establishment of a Coast Guard station on the east coast of the Keweenaw Peninsula, Mich.;

H. R. 913. An act to prohibit the unauthorized use of the name or insignia of the 4-H clubs, and for other purposes;

H. R. 1776. An act to provide for the assignment of medical officers of the Public Health Service for duty on vessels of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and for other purposes;

H.R. 2750. An act to prohibit the issuance and coinage of certain commemorative coins, and for other purposes;

H. R. 3537. An act to extend the facilities of the United States Public Health Service to active officers of the Foreign Service of the United States;

H. R. 3577. An act to amend the Canal Zone Code;

H.R. 3655. An act to amend the act entitled "An act for the grading and classification of clerks in the Foreign Service of the United States of America, and providing compensation therefor," approved February 23, 1931;

H. R. 3812. An act granting postal employees credit for Saturday in annual and sick leave law, thereby conforming to the 40-hour workweek or 5-day-week law; and

H. J. Res. 150. Joint resolution to amend the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution to provide that the United States extend to foreign governments invitations to participate in the Third International Congress for Microbiology to be held in the United States during the calendar year 1939."

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, as it is apparent that the pending amendment requires a vote, I note the absence of a quorum and suggest a roll call in order to secure one.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams Andrews Ashurst Austin Bailey Bankhead Barbour Barkley Bilbo Borah Bridges Brown Bulow Burke Byrd Byrnes Capper Caraway Chavez Clark, Idaho Clark, Mo. Connally

Davis Donahey Lee Lewis Lodge Ellender Logan Lucas George Gerry Gibson Gillette Lundeen Glass Green Guffey Gurney Harrison Hatch Hayden Herring Hill

Danaher

Holman

King

Hughes Johnson, Calif. Johnson, Colo.

McKellar McNary Maloney Mead Miller Minton Murray Neely Norris Nye O'Mahoney Overton Pepper Pittman Radcliffe

La Follette

Reed Reynolds Russell Schwartz Schwellenbach Sheppard Shipstead Smathers Smith Thomas, Okla. Thomas, Utah Tobey Townsend Truman Tydings Vandenberg Van Nuys Wagner Walsh Wheeler White Wiley

2335

Mr. LEWIS. I announce that the Senator from California [Mr. Downey] and the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT] are detained from the Senate because of illness.

The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Stewart] is absent on important public business.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Ninety-two Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

BOARD OF VISITORS TO THE MILITARY ACADEMY

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I send a statement to the desk, which I ask to have read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read. The Chief Clerk read as follows:

United States Senate, Committee on Appropriations, Washington, D. C., March 7, 1939.

To the Senate:

By virtue of the authority vested in me by the act approved May 17, 1928, I hereby appoint Senators ELMER THOMAS and ALVA B. ADAMS to represent the Senate Appropriations Committee on the Board of Visitors to the United States Military Academy during the remainder of the first session of the Seventy-sixth Congress.

CARTER GLASS,

Chairman, Senate Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I send a statement to the desk and ask that it be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

UNITED STATES SENATE. COMMITTEE ON MILITARY AFFAIRS, March 7, 1939.

[Visitors to the U. S. Military Academy from the Senate Committee on Military Affairs]

To the Senate:

By virtue of the authority vested in me by the act approved May 17, 1928, I hereby appoint the following members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee to the Board of Visitors to the United States Military Academy for the first session of the Seventy-sixth Congress; Senators Schwartz, Hill, Clark of Missouri, Austin, and HOLMAN.

> MORRIS SHEPPARD Chairman, Senate Committee on Military Affairs.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following resolution of the Senate of Indiana, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

Whereas one George G. Waldrop, a resident of the city of Fort Wayne, Allen County, Ind., was mustered into Federal service at Lexington, Ky., during the Spanish-American War as a private in Company F, of First Kentucky Volunteer Infantry; and Whereas 3 days after such mustering in, he was taken seriously ill and was removed to a Government hospital, where he was confined for a considerable length of time, and was then taken to his home by relatives, where he was reported to have died; and Whereas because of said erroneous report, the officers of his company found in the history of the company of the pany failed to list his name as a member of said company on its muster roll; and

Whereas the War Department of the United States has no record

Whereas the war bepartment of the Officer States and Percola of such enlistment or of his discharge from service; and Whereas special legislation is to be introduced in the National House of Representatives on behalf of the said George G. Waldrop to establish his status as an enlisted private in said Company F, First Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, for service during the Spanish-American War: Therefore be it

American War: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate of the Eighty-first General Assembly of the State of Indiana, That it does hereby respectfully and earnestly urge upon the Congress of the United States to enact such legislation for the relief of the said George G. Waldrop, and that the Senators and Representatives in Congress from this State support such legislation; and be it further

Resolved. That copies of this resolution be transmitted by the

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted by the secretary of the senate to the United States Senate and the National House of Representatives, and to the Senators and Members of Congress representing the State of Indiana.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a lengthy telegram from John I. O'Neill, Esq., counselor at law, Jersey City, N. J., relating to the bankruptcy proceeding in the case of William Berkowitz, and related matters, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. MEAD presented the petition of Rev. M. J. Higgins and sundry other citizens of Niagara Falls, N. Y., praying that the United States adhere to the general policy of neutrality as enunciated in existing law and extend the law to include civil as well as international conflicts, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. CAPPER presented memorials of members of the First Presbyterian Church of Vermillion and members of the Kansas City Baptist Theological Seminary and pastors of Baptist churches in the Kansas City area, in the State of Kansas, remonstrating against inclusion of religious bodies under the operation of the social-security system, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented the petition of members of the Women's Missionary Society of Iola, Kans., praying for the adoption of a policy of nonparticipation in aggression and discontinuance of the shipment of war supplies to Japan for use in operations in China, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented the petition of members of the American Association of University Women, of Pratt, Kans., praying for revision of the neutrality law so as to grant the President a wider discretion in the interpretation thereof in the interest of the maintenance of peace, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I have before me a letter from the secretary of the State of Utah enclosing a concurrent resolution adopted by the legislature of that State, which I present and ask that both may be inserted in the RECORD and appropriately referred.

There being no objection, the letter and resolution were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and, under the rule, ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE STATE OF UTAH,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE,
Salt Lake City, March 4, 1939.

Hon. WILLIAM H. KING,

Hon. William H. King,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

Dear Senator King: I am requested by the Legislature of the State of Utah and have the honor to transmit to you herewith a copy of House Concurrent Resolution No. 6, passed by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Utah, entitled "A concurrent resolution favoring stabilization of the price of silver and the employment of silver purchases to increase exports of United States products."

Yours very truly,

E. E. Monson, Secretary of State.

Concurrent resolution favoring stabilization of the price of silver and the employment of silver purchases to increase exports of United States products

Be it resolved by the Legislature of the State of Utah (the Governor concurring therein):

Whereas the welfare of the State of Utah is concerned in the price of silver and also in the maintenance and expansion of foreign markets for United States products, especially agricultural

Whereas this legislature has already adopted a resolution with reference to the price of domestically mined silver; and Whereas it is the belief of this legislature that acquisitions of silver of foreign origin can be made to the benefit of the United States when the proceeds therefrom are employed to pay for exports from the United States: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Legislature of the State of Utah and the Governor approve and endorse a silver program for the United States of the nature set out in that certain bill known as S. 800 (76th Cong., 1st sess.) introduced by Senator KEY PITTMAN, of Nevada, and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry of the United States Senate, which bill proposes to continue acquisition by the Government of domestically mined silver and also to accept silver from foreign countries when the proceeds therefrom shall be used and applied solely in the purchase and payment for exports of United States products; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded by the Governor and secretary of state to each of the Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of Utah, to the chairman of the Agricultural Committee of the United States Senate and to the Legislatures of Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Michigan, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, South Dekota, Tennessee, and Texas. Dakota, Tennessee, and Texas.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I present a resolution in the form of a memorial from the Oklahoma State Senate and ask that it be printed in the RECORD as is usual and referred to the appropriate committee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the memorial will be received and properly referred, and, under the rule, printed in the RECORD.

To the Committee on Immigration:

Senate Resolution 17

Resolution memorializing the Federal Congress to enact adequate legislation providing for speedy deportation of all alien residents who do not signify their willingness, desire, and intention to become citizens of the United States within a reasonable time after entry into the United States of America

after entry into the United States of America Whereas it is estimated that there are approximately 8,000,000 residents within the boundaries of the United States of America who have neither become naturalized nor filed any declaration of intention to become citizens of this Nation; and Whereas this large group of alien residents provides a fertile field for agitators and organizations who are not in sympathy with the American form of government; and Whereas it is the sense of the State Senate of the State of Oklahoma that this large group of alien residents should not be permitted to enjoy the freedom and privileges of this Nation without assuming the corresponding duties and obligations of citizenship: Now, therefore, be it permitted to enjoy the freedom and privileges of this Nation without assuming the corresponding duties and obligations of citizenship: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Senate of the State of Oklahoma*, That the Federal Congress be, and it is hereby requested, to direct its attention to this condition and to enact adequate legislation which will provide for speedy deportation of all alien residents of this country, who do not within a reasonable time signify their willingness, desire, and intention, and qualify to assume the obligations of citizenship and become citizens of the United States of America: be it further

America; be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of the State senate be, and he is hereby, directed to transmit properly authenticated copies of this resolution to each branch of the Congress, to each member of the Oklahoma congressional delegation, and to each of the United States Senators from Oklahoma; be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of the State senate forthwith transmit presents without the state of this resolution to each of the mit properly authenticated copies of this resolution to each of the legislatures of the several States of the Union, which are now in session, same for their consideration and action, if they so desire.

OLD-AGE PENSION-PETITION

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, I present for the Record and appropriate reference a petition signed by over 500 citizens of Mississippi, asking for $30 a month pension. I ask that the body of the petition, without the names, be printed in the RECORD.

The petition was referred to the Committee on Finance, and, there being no objection, the body of the petition was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MISSISSIPPI OLD FOLKS PENSION CLUB Charleston, Miss.

To the President and the Congress of the United States:

The old people and their sympathizers of Tallahatchie County, Miss., petition you as their representative to devise every method that can be brought to bear to get the Federal Government to appropriate $30 a month for the relief of the old of 60 years of age and older. Respectfully,

J. L. BURKE, Secretary, Old Age Pension Club of Tallahatchie County, Miss.

(513 signatures attached hereto.)

UNITED STATES HOUSING ACT

Mr. WAGNER presented resolutions of the New York State Industrial Union Council, New York, N. Y., and Flint Chapter 202, Society of Designing Engineers, of Flint, Mich., which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas the increasing housing shortage is resulting in serious hardships for the low-income families of New York State; and Whereas housing construction provides much-needed employment for our building trades, industrial, and technical workers; and

Whereas the United States Housing Authority is an effective instrument for meeting the housing and employment needs of our community: Therefore be it Resolved, That the New York State Industrial Union Council, affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations, support and urge the passage, at the present session of Congress, of the United States Housing Act of 1939; and be it further Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to Senator James M. Mead, Senator Robert F. Wagner, and to Nathan Straus, Administrator, United States Housing Authority.

Whereas the increasing housing shortage is resulting in serious hardships for the low-income families of the city of Flint, Mich.;

Whereas the housing construction provides much-needed employment for our building trades, industrial, and technical workers;

Whereas the United States Housing Authority is an effective instrument for meeting the housing and employment needs of our community: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Society of Designing Engineers, Flint Chapter, No. 202, support and urge the passage, at the present session of Congress, of the United States Housing Act of 1939; and be it Resolved. That copies of this resolution be sent to Senator ROBERT F. Wagner, of New York; Senator Prentiss M. Brown, of Michigan; Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, and Nathan Straus, Administrator, United States Housing Authority.

FREIGHT RATES

Mr. WAGNER presented a letter from the Chamber of Commerce of Jamestown, N. Y., with an accompanying resolution of the board of directors of that chamber, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, Jamestown, N. Y., February 22, 1939.

SENATOR ROBERT F. WAGNER,

Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I am enclosing a copy of a resolution adopted by the Board of Directors of the Jamestown (N. Y.) Chamber of Commerce at regular meeting February 21, opposing the enactment of S. 158 and also H. R. 188, or other bills having the same purpose. Yours very truly, Jamestown Chamber of Commerce, G. L. Hilliard, Commissioner, Transportation Department.

Whereas there have been certain bills introduced into the Seventy-sixth Congress, namely H. R. 188 and S. 158 which, if passed, would be harmful to labor and industry in Jamestown; and Whereas the primary object of these bills is to compel by legislative action the establishment and maintenance of freight rates from one rate territory to another on the rate per mile that applies within the destination territory which in turn would provide a substantially higher rate in one direction than in another white a substantially higher rate in one direction than in another over the same rails and between the same points; and

Whereas the United States has been naturally divided into several rate territories because of differing costs of transportation caused primarily from the fact of differing volumes of tonnage produced and available for transportation in the various sections of the country; and

Whereas Jamestown is located in what is designated official territory and being that territory lying east of the Mississippi River and north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers, and recognized as one of the greatest industrial sections, not only in the United States but of the entire world, and because of this fact it provides the greatest. est number of tons per mile of transportation and consequently the lowest cost of operation for the railroads in that territory of any territory in the United States; and any territory in the United States; and Whereas these bills or any of them, if enacted into law, would require the Interstate Commerce Commission, regardless of the facts, evidence, equity, their better judgment or otherwise, to disregard differing costs which form the basis of these different rate territories, and arbitrarily make from official territory to all other territories rates which would be materially higher than would be charged shippers in these other territories for shipping the same or similar articles, the same or similar distances into Jamestown, to the serious disadvantage of, and discrimination against Jamestown; and

Whereas such a prejudice to Jamestown and preference to these

Whereas such a prejudice to Jamestown and preference to these other territories would not only seriously restrict the marketing and consequently the production of articles of commerce in Jamestown to the substantial and grave loss of its labor and industry, but, even more seriously, would induce removal of manufacturing operations from Jamestown to these more favored localities to the disadvantage of all its citizens: Therefore be it disadvantage of all its citizens: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Board of Directors of the Jamestown Chamber of Commerce, That New York Senators and Representatives in Congress be earnestly requested and urged to not only vote against these bills and any other similar bills or amendments to or provisions of bills which have the same purpose, but to also use their effort to convince their colleagues in both Houses of Congress of the unfairness and impropriety of such legislation and that copies of this resolution be forwarded to each Member of the Seventy-sixth Congress from the State of New York.

EXCLUSION OF RELIGIOUS BODIES FROM SOCIAL-SECURITY SYSTEM

Mr. WAGNER presented a letter from the Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of Troy, Synod of New York, Mechanicville, N. Y., which was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

> PRESBYTERY OF IROI, > SYNOD OF NEW YORK,
> PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
> March 3, 1939. PRESENTERY OF TROY,

Senator ROBERT F. WAGNER. Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: At a regular meeting of Troy Presbytery, held February 22, at Glens Falls, N. Y., I was authorized to forward the following resolution to each of our representatives in Washington:

"We, the representatives of Troy Presbytery, representing 37 churches, with a membership of more than 10,000, voted unanimous approval of the resolution that all ministers and other employees who are included in the pension plan of the Presbyterian Church be excluded from the Federal Social Security Act."

Very sincerely,

JAMES K. STEWART, Stated Clerk.

COMPENSATION TO VETERANS AND THEIR DEPENDENTS

Mr. WAGNER presented a letter from Ted Reilly, county adjutant, the American Legion, of Queens County, N. Y., which was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

QUEENS COUNTY COMMITTEE,
THE AMERICAN LEGION,

DEPARTMENT OF NEW YORK.

Whereas the American Legion has sponsored legislation granting whereas the American Legion has sponsored legislation granting suitable compensation to all veterans attached in camps known as veterans' camps Nos. 1, 3, and 5 who suffered injuries, died, or shall die as a direct result of the hurricane at Windlys Island and Matecumbe Keys, Fla., on September 2, 1935, and to their dependents; and pendents; and

Pendents; and
Whereas the laws granting such compensation limit the time for the filing of claims to such an extent that needless hardships and injustices have resulted: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Queens County Committee of the American Legion, in regular meeting assembled this 24th day of February 1939, endorse the bill recently introduced in the House of Representatives as H. R. 3760, making the provisions of section 500 of the act entitled "An act to liberalize the provisions of Public Law No. 484, Seventy-third Congress," etc., applicable to those veterans aforesaid, or their dependents, who shall make application for compensation prior to July 1, 1941; and be it further Resolved, That copies of this resolution be forwarded to Senators Robert F. Wagner and James M. Mean, to Representative at Large Matthew J. Merritt, and to Representatives William B. Barry, Eugene J. Keogh, and Leonard W. Hall, with the request that each of them give his active support to the enactment of the aforesaid bill, and also to John Thomas Taylor, national legislative chairman of the American Legion.

chairman of the American Legion.

TED REILLY. Queens County Adjutant.

CONSOLIDATION OF POSTAL DISTRICTS IN QUEENS COUNTY, N. Y.

Mr. WAGNER presented a resolution of the Central Civic Association, Hollis, N. Y., which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas the county of Queens, N. Y., has for years been divided into four separate postal districts, each under direct supervision of a postmaster; and Whereas there is now pending in the Congress of the United States a bill designated as H. R. 2552, introduced by the Honorable WILLIAM B. BARRY, same being referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads; and Whereas this bill provides for the consolidation of the four postal districts in the county of Queens, N. Y.; and Whereas the establishment of one postal district in the county of Queens, N. Y., would dispense with the services of three postmasters and their respective staffs, thereby reducing unnecessary costs; and and their respective staffs, thereby reducing unnecessary costs; and Whereas the passage of this legislation would correct and remedy the present discriminatory conditions which have been a detriment to the 1,300,000 people of the county of Queens, N. Y., and automatically grant to them a 2-cent postage rate: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the officers and members of aforesaid organiza Resolved, That we, the officers and members of aforesaid organization, in regular meeting assembled, do hereby respectfully petition the Congress of the United States to eliminate the injustice and discrimination so long endured by the people of the county of Queens, N. Y., and impel the enactment into law of the bill known as H. R. 2552; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary be, and is hereby, instructed to transmit copies of this resolution to the following: Hon. Robert F. Wagner, Hon. James M. Mead, Hon. Kenneth McKellar, Hon. Hiram W. Johnson, Hon. Sheridan Downey, Hon. Milton A. Romjue, Hon. William B. Barry, Hon. Leonard W. Hall, Hon. Eugene J. Keogh, Hon. Matthew J. Merritt, and to the press.

ADMISSION OF GERMAN REFUGEE CHILDREN

Mr. WAGNER presented several letters and sundry newspaper editorials relative to the admission of German refugee children into the United States, which were referred to the Committee on Immigration and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL BOARD OF THE YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATIONS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
New York, N. Y., March 2, 1939.

Senator ROBERT F. WAGNER,

Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR WAGNER: It is a pleasure to notify you that at its meeting yesterday the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Associations voted to endorse the Wagner-Rogers bill in favor of the admission to this country in the next 2 years of the refugee children from Germany. This endorsement means that the association is now at liberty to work for the passage of this bill and that we shall certainly do so as best we may.

May we congratulate you upon the introduction of the bill and express to you our appreciation and thanks. Very sincerely yours,

EMILY HICKMAN, Chairman, Public Affairs Committee.

Board of Education, City of New York, March 3, 1939.

Senator ROBERT F. WAGNER

Senator Robert F. Wagner,

Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR Wagner: My heartiest congratulations to you for introducing a bill to permit the admission of 10,000 German refugee children this year and next.

You have my heartiest support and that, I am sure, of all other liberal-minded educators. My best wishes to the success of the measure.

Sincerely yours,

RUTH GILLETTE HARDY, Principal.

BROOKLYN SOCIETY FOR ETHICAL CULTURE, Brooklyn, N. Y., March 2, 1939.

Senator ROBERT F. WAGNER,

Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Wagner: Your bill to permit America to receive 10,000 German refugee children strikes me as eminently worth passing. It is not enough that we voice our sympathy for these unfortunate young people. Here is an excellent chance to do something for them to which nobody can offer any reasonable objection. objection.

With warm respects, Sincerely yours,

HENRY NEUMANN.

[From the Christian Science Monitor of February 17, 1939] HOME AND HOMELAND

A family with 2,000 children would hardly notice the difference if by adoption it should increase the number to 2,001. But to the one, what a difference the adoption might make! This is the case for Senator WAGNER'S bill which seeks to permit 20,000 children under 14 years of age to enter the United States from Germany. The proportions of the burden are as one to 2,000. The proportions of the blessing cannot be measured in cold figures.

These children are of the 50,000—shoult half of whom are Jew-proportions of the blessing cannot be measured in cold figures. These children are of the 50,000—about half of whom are Jewish—who are innocent victims of social and political upheaval in Europe. Great Britain already has offered to adopt 5,000, and the Netherlands to take 1,700. The proposal for a similarly humane provision by the United States is not a proposal to increase the country's public charges; the children would be sent for by persons willing to take care of them. Not race alone, but in many cases their parents' courage to stand by convictions which every American shares, accounts for the need these children have of that which the United States can give them—homes and a homeland.

[From the Waterloo (Iowa) Courier of February 17, 1939] HUMANITARIANISM AND POLITICS

Partisan politics has no place when the fate of persecuted children is at stake.

Senator Wagner has introduced a bill providing for the admission of a certain number of German refugee children into the United States in the next 2 years. Representative EDITH NOURSE Rogers has introduced a companion bill in the lower House of Senator Wagner is a Democrat. Representative Nourse Rogers is a Republican.

"Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not," He said.

[From the Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette] A DECENT DEAL FOR REFUGEE WAIFS

Fifty thousand children of German birth and background—all of them under 14 years of age—have been expelled from Germany with a minimum of clothing on their backs and a few cents in their pockets, and must henceforth rely on individual citizens in their pockets, and must henceforth rely on individual citizens in other nations to provide them with the necessities of life.

Approximately one-half of these boys and girls are Jewish. Some are Protestant or Catholic in faith and with predominantly non-Jewish heredity, the fact that one grandparent was a Jew being the sole cause of their persecution.

Not a few of the 50,000 have absolutely no Jewish blood at all. There is no racial antipathy toward this element in the homeland. It merely chances to be composed of the sons and daughters of men and women who actively opposed the new dominant regime and are suffering for that opposition.

These children need homes. Great Britain has opened its doors to 5,000 of them. Other countries have cooperated.

These charter heed homes. Great Britain has opened its doors to 5,000 of them. Other countries have cooperated.

It is now proposed that 20,000 be permitted to enter the United States in 1939 and 1940 in addition to those authorized by existing law, with the proviso "that satisfactory assurances are given that such children will be supported and properly cared for through the voluntary action of responsible citizens or responsible private organizations * * and consequently will not become public

Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, has introduced a resolution containing this proposal, and the resolution has been referred to the Senate Committee on Immigration.

ferred to the Senate Committee on Immigration.

Catholic and Protestant churchmen have endorsed the resolution. Both labor groups have given it their stamp of approval, with the understanding that the youngsters would not compete in American labor markets. And other influential individuals and organizations have accorded it their support.

Under the conditions outlined above it certainly appears that the United States would make no mistake in permitting these unfortunates to be cared for within its borders. Not weepy sentimentality but common decency and common sense demand such action.

[From the Wilmington (N. C.) Star of February 18, 1939]

[From the Wilmington (N. C.) Star of February 18, 1939]

The normal human heart goes out in natural sympathy for all those in distress and particularly when those suffering the vicissitudes of a fate over which they have no control are children.

For the moment the most appalling picture of this kind is the Jewish children of Germany, too young to understand why they are mistreated; already looking at life with the hurt expression of the pet punished when there is no cognizance of wrong.

A bill by Mr. Wagner, of New York, would permit some of these children to migrate to the United States and become absorbed in this Nation where religious freedom is a guaranteed right and where descendents of every race on earth live in harmony.

Discussing the proposal, the New York Herald Tribune says:

"When all the politics and the passions surrounding the Nazi dictatorship are forgotten, it seems probable that the memory of crowds of helpless children, thrust into trains with a bare 40 cents in the pocket of each and perhaps, or perhaps not, tags recording the names of the parents who were forced to abandon them to perpetual exile, will survive as the most vivid monument to the inhumanity of the Hitlerian god state.

"The United States cannot and should not be asked to succor all the victims of race prejudice and high politics who have been set cruelly adrift by the new barbarism. Its first duty is to preserve its own unity as a nation. But the children are a special case. There are estimated to be about 50,000 German children under 14 whose parents are in concentration camps or who, for one reason or another, have been thrown on the mercy of the outer world. About half of them are Jews; the rest are Catholic or Protestant children who committed the crime of having a Jewish grandparent or were guilty of being born to purely Teutonic parents of too liberal or independent a cast of mind. Great Britain has already agreed to take 5,000 of these waifs; small and crowded Holland has taken in 1,700 and is accepting more. Senator

[From the Galveston News of February 20, 1939] GERMAN REFUGEE CHILDREN

No decisive objection can be offered to the proposal to admit 10,000 German refugee children into the United States during each of the calendar years 1939 and 1940. Introduced into the Senate as a joint resolution by Senator Wagner and referred to the Committee on Immigration, the proposal has the support of many prominent Catholic and Protestant churchmen and also of the leaders of both branches of organized labor.

Admission of these refugee children, all of whom would be 14 years of age and under, would not affect the domestic unemployment situation. The stipulation that none should be admitted until provision for their care had been made by responsible American citizens or private organizations would insure against their becoming public or private organizations would histor against the Charges.

It should be emphasized that the Wagner law would not suspend existing quota restrictions on the immigration of adults. Its sole effect would be to make possible the rescue of 20,000 hopeless and helpless children whom Nazi persecution has deprived of parental protection. In giving some of those children a chance to grow up free and self-supporting with the help of kindly Americans our country would be following the lead of England and Holland. Despite their crowded populations, those countries are admitting refugee children as rapidly as arrangements can be made to accommodate them.

modate them.

Among the victims of Europe's politically inspired hate, none are more pathetic than the German children whose parents have been sent to concentration camps, or who, for other reasons, have been thrown upon the mercy of the world. It is estimated that 50,000 children under 14 have suffered that dreadful fate. About half are Jewish and the rest are Catholic and Protestant. Some of the latter group are treated as outcasts because they had one Jewish grandparent. Others of "pure Aryan" ancestry had the misfortune of being born to parents who insist upon thinking for themselves, which in the Nazi code is a crime as great as the possession of Jewish blood. Jewish blood.

Much as Americans sympathize with the oppressed peoples of Europe, it is impossible to offer sanctuary in this country to all refugees, however urgent their need. It would dishonor our traditions of humanity and freedom, however, to refuse the small measure of help contemplated by the Wagner resolution.

[From the Asheville (N. C.) Citizen of February 21, 1939] ORPHANS IN THE STORM

ORPHANS IN THE STORM

The plight of the child refugees from Germany has nowhere been better described than in a recent editorial in the New York Herald Tribune. "When all politics and passions surrounding the Nazi dictatorship are forgotten," says the metropolitan champion of oppressed minorities, "it seems probable that the crowds of helpless children, thrust into trains with a bare 40 cents in the pocket of each and perhaps, or perhaps not, tags recording the names of their parents who were forced to abandon them to perpetual exile, will survive as the most vivid monument to the humanity of the Hitlerian god state."

There are said to be 50,000 German children under 14 years of

There are said to be 50,000 German children under 14 years of There are said to be 50,000 German children under 14 years of age whose parents are either in concentration camps or are otherwise victims of the National Socialist revolution. About half of them are Jews and the other half are Protestants and Catholics who had either one Jewish grandparent or whose parents, while entirely Teutonic in blood, were too liberal and too outspoken in their views. Of these small and helpless waifs, England has agreed to take 5,000, and is now in process of absorbing that number into her national life. Holland, with her crowded population, is accepting 1,700, and so on over the world.

her national life. Holland, with her crowded population, is accepting 1,700, and so on over the world.

Senator Wagner has now introduced a bill, approved by both the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O., as well as by highly placed churchmen of both Protestant and Catholic faith, to receive 10,000 of these children a year into the United States for the next 2 years. This number would be outside our regular immigration quota for Germany, but the roll is so small in proportion to our native children under 14—about 1 in 2,000—that the addition would be but a drop in the bucket to our own population. Yet it would definitely serve as America's contribution toward solving one of the most pathetic situations facing the earth today.

This newspaper does not believe in indiscriminately or lightly setting aside our national immigration laws merely to relieve the congestion of crowded Europe or to succor all the victims of the spleen of maniac dictators. That condition, bad as it is, is beyond our control in days when our own unemployment problem remain practically untouched. But these 20,000 German children, of Jewish, Catholic, and liberal parents, might well be an exception. They will be taken care of by private charity upon arrival and it will be many years before their slight competition in the economic field could be felt.

Senator Wagner's proposed legislation has met with a warm-hearted response from a generous public all threath this exerting Senator Wagner's proposed legislation has met with a warm-hearted response from a generous public all through this country. Our two giant labor organizations, themselves the ones to complain of competition if that is to be feared, are unitedly for it. It is difficult to see how even the most parochially minded Senator or Representative in Washington could refuse admission to these nitiful children.

[From the Miami (Fla.) News of February 21, 1939] SUFFER LITTLE CHILDREN

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead" that he can oppose Senator WAGNER's bill to raise the immigration quotas for the benefit of 10,000 refugee children this year and the same number next?

Ten thousand German refugee children under 14 years of age would be admitted, regardless of quotas, provided responsible citizens of institutions guaranteed their education and support, once they are here. This is the provision of the New York Senator's joint resolution now before the Immigration Committee of the Senate.

How many child refugees there will be in all from Germany—Catholic, Lutheran, and Jew—in these 2 years, no one can tell. Ten thousand, we may be sure, will be but a fraction of them all. We shall be admitting 20,000 in all. At the rate of 10,000 a year it would take a century to bring a million here. Twenty-five years ago we were receiving a total of a million allens a year.

Now we are asked to approve a special dispensation to permit the

Now we are asked to approve a special dispensation to permit the entrance of an extra 20,000—children, their support assured. There is a rumor that the plan will be opposed. We don't believe it. This is a land which professes admiration and even reverence for the source of the saying: "Suffer the little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not."

If there's a soul in free America so shrunk that he would not suffer these few children to come to us, there's more pre-Christmas Scrooges in the world than we had counted on.

The labor organizations are of all groups most sensitive to immigration acts. Confirming what has been said, the Wagner resolution has the approval of both John Lewis and William Green.

The proper objection to too-free immigration to the United States is social and political, not economic. Too much immigration can make serious difficulty with the social order and with politics. It does not, as so many suppose, take the bread out of the mouths already there. already here.

We can, and once on a time we did, welcome more immigration than we could comfortably digest. America is right in admitting no more immigrants than can be adjusted to their new environment and to our ways of thinking and carrying on. This is part ment and to our ways of thinking and carrying on. This is part of the wisdom gleaned from the war.

The operation of a democracy is a difficult thing. How difficult it is we can see from the few successes where democracy is tried. It takes a habit of restraint in the citizens, an experience to tell what will work and what will not. Learning to be a good citizen of a democracy involves a practice and learning not less arduous than the preparation to be a good mechanic, surgeon, or politician.

America has learned, on this account, to be careful about the immigration it permits. This is no consideration in admitting 20,000 refugee children—children young enough, given the right chance, to be "Americanized" with quickness and ease.

Least of all is the question of jobs, the economic question, to be emphasized. Some extraordinary foolishness is talked when this question comes up. There is a certain number of jobs in the country. The immigrant adds to the number competing for those jobs. This makes him a detriment to labor, a lengthener of the relief rolls. We must bar him out.

This we say forgetting that every immigrant brings with him,

This we say forgetting that every immigrant brings with him, along with his muscle to work, a back to be clothed and a stomach to be filled. As a consumer he creates the job at which as a producer he works. In the long run no one is hurt. We shall be able to discuss the immigration question sanely once we have got this simple fact through our heads.

[From the Birmingham (Ala.) News of February 22, 1939] THE AMERICAN BUND AND CHILDREN REFUGEES

There is no outward connection between this rather disgraceful

There is no outward connection between this rather disgraceful meeting of the German-American Bund in New York and the filing of a bill in Congress seeking to permit 20,000 children under the age of 14 to enter the United States from persecuted European areas, but there is a subtle contrast in those incidents which cannot and should not be overlooked.

The bund members talked of persecutions. By their words and in their manner they endeavored to arouse racial prejudice. Through their uniforms and their military salutes and drills they directed the mind toward thoughts of war and oppression. In their use of the young in all their activities and plans they disregarded the natural right of childhood to happy play.

Contrast this, if you will, with the purposes and motives behind this bill in Congress to provide a haven for the childish victims of Nazi persecutions abroad. In this proposed action we find the heart of humanity going out in kindness to those who have been hurt through no fault of their own.

There are said to be some 50,000 children who are innocent victims of Nazi persecution or related activities. About half of these are Jewish children. Great Britain is taking 5,000 of these childish refugees, and the Netherlands has offered to find homes for 1,700. France, always a warm-hearted haven, is taking care of many thousands through unorganized as well as organized charity. The bill introduced by Senator Wagner in Congress would suspend the immigration quota limits so that, in addition to refugees from other areas, 10,000 German-born refugee children could be admitted to the United States in the next 2 years.

Many of these children are orphans, their parents killed in the racial hatred which this bund meeting in New York tried to inflame. Others are the children of parents held in concentration camps in denial of many of those human rights which the bund speakers falsely pretended to in this New York meeting.

Most Americans will be unable to hear what the American Bund leaders have to say because of th they are made to suffer.

The American Bund leaders, in New York and in all their utterances, appeal to prejudice, which is an emotion. The sufferings of the children whose lives are seared by persecutions of the cousins of the bund across the seas arouse other emotions in American hearts, the emotions of kindness, generosity, pity, love, compassion, hearts, the emotions of kindness, generosity, pity, love, compassion, and sympathy.

Let the German-American Bund enjoy all the privileges of freedom of speech and assembly. Better it is for this country that it continue to enjoy such freedom. But let its members not try to deny the right of all the rest of the country to make a choice between listening to bigoted and inflammatory speeches like those given in New York or listening to the cries of little children who have been foully wronged by people like those who spoke in that New York meeting.

In this land of freedom we tolerate meetings and speeches like those offered by the spectacle in New York. But ours is also a land of kindly sympathy to all victims of persecution, especially to children. We tolerate prejudices, we aid the victims of prejudice.

[From the Lowell (Mass.) Evening Leader, February 13, 1939]

[From the Lowell (Mass.) Evening Leader, February 13, 1939]
There will be a good deal of sympathy, one imagines, with the proposal of Senator Wagner that the United States admit 20,000 refugee children from Germany. Representative Edith N. Rogers, of our own district, is introducing a similar proposal in the House. The plan is to sanction the entry of 10,000 this year and 10,000 next. Under its provisions there is no fear that this would involve any very serious burden, because no child would be admitted unless adequate guaranties were made for support and for assurance of a proper home with people of the child's own religious faith. Distributed as this responsibility would be, there is the impression that it would not be very difficult to finance the plan.

[From the Trenton (N. J.) State Gazette of February 23, 1939] CHILD REFUGEES

Human affliction makes its strongest appeal to sympathy when it touches those who are helpless by reason of advanced age or of extreme youth. It is upon these two classes that the effects of persecution in Germany fall most heavily. Among the saddest of sights in that benighted land at present is that of thousands of children, whose parents are in concentration camps or in exile, or who have mercifully been claimed by death, seeking vainly for a haven.

haven.

England and Holland have given sanctuary to many of these unfortunate children. Senator Wagner has now introduced a bill, endorsed by Catholic and Protestant churchmen, which would permit 20,000 children under 14 years to be received in the United States outside of quota restrictions within the next 2 years. They would not compete in American labor markets. They would not become public charges. They would simply be brought in by those already willing to receive and support them.

Adoption of this bill would constitute an immediate and practical contribution to the cause of human freedom, to which, as Senator

Adoption of this bill would constitute an immediate and practical contribution to the cause of human freedom, to which, as Senator Wagner says, "we are inseparably bound by our institutions, our history, and our profoundest sentiments." It would give practical expression to the sympathy which we profess to feel.

[From the Cleveland (Ohio) Plain Dealer of February 24, 1939] CHILDREN THE REAL VICTIMS

When the passions of prejudice have cooled there will be a terrible monument left to the memory of the Nazi state in the 50,000 children made to suffer because the regime does not approve the race, religion, or politics of their parents. The helplessness of these victims, all under 14 years of age, was shown recently when several hundred of them were shipped out of Germany with only 40 cents in their pockets and an unknown future ahead.

Senator Wagner has introduced a resolution, now before the Senate Committee on Immigration, to permit 10,000 of these children to enter the United States in the calendar years 1939 and 1940. They would be in addition to the regular number admitted under the quota system.

They would be in addition to the regular number admitted under the quota system.

Private individuals and public charities would provide for their future. In no way would they become public charges or in any degree a threat to employment. Senator Wagner's plan has been endorsed by labor, the Catholic and Protestant Churches, and by leaders throughout the country.

The United States, of course, should not feel bound to take all refugees, but it should furnish a haven for a portion of these children. Little Holland has already accommodated 1,700 of them. Britain is finding homes for 5,000 more. Ten thousand are not too Britain is finding homes for 5,000 more. Ten thousand are not too many for this country, with its resources and its organized charity. When the resolution is considered it will be well to keep in mind the misery such an act will end and its humanitarian influence on the rest of the world.

[From the Canandaigua (N. Y.) Daily Messenger of February 25, 1939]

CHILDREN IN THE DARK

It is hard to see how Congress or the American public can refuse the plea that Senator Wagner makes in his proposal to admit 10,000 German-born refugee children to the United States, outside the quota limits, within the next 2 years. If we had a barbed-wire frontier, as have some less fortunate countries, and could see these children, whose parents are dead or in prisons and concentration camps, we would not hesitate. All we need is imagination. They cry out to us from their darkness.

Can their admission do harm? To ask the question is to answer

Can their admission do harm? To ask the question is to answer it. All would be under 14, and so would not compete for employment. None could become public charges, for the law would require that their support be guaranteed by responsible individuals or organizations. They would be "of every race and creed." If heredity means anything, they would grow up to be good citizens, for in most instances they are alone in the world because their parents put obedience to conscience above obedience to tyranny. They would love liberty, because they know from bitter experience what the loss of liberty means.

We have gladly given aid at different times to the children of Belgium, of devastated France, of revolutionary Russia, of postwar Germany, of eastern Europe, of China. Though we no longer open our gates to all the earth's oppressed, it is our tradition, in keeping with the warm-heartedness on which we pride ourselves, to open them to these children.

There is nothing sectarian, nothing political in this appeal, nothing but a helping hand to young boys and girls who sorely need it. Surely Congress need not fear lack of popular approval in passing the Wagner resolution.

[From the Chattanooga News of February 27, 1939] LET IN A FEW MORE REFUGER CHILDREN

Senator Wagner has introduced a bill authorizing admission into the United States of a limited number of German refugee children. The resolution is particularly important at this time for Germany has resumed exile of the Jews on a large scale.

Wagner's resolution has received such widely varying support as from the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. on the one hand and the New York Herald Tribune on the other.

The letting down of the bars will not affect our wage earners. Indeed, the American public has a greatly exaggerated idea of the extent of immigration now. Dr. Jacob Billikopfi, formerly head of the national committee for coordinating immigration, points out that the entire German quota is limited to 27,300 men, women, and children. At most, such a quota does not represent more than children. At most, such a quota does not represent more than 10,000 wage earners. "The refugees from Germany and Austria are not economic cripples," said Dr. Billikopff. "They bring to this country new crafts, new arts, and new skills that do not compete with the native workers."

At any rate, the Wagner resolution for admission of a limited number of German refugee children should receive the sympa-thetic interest of the Senate. The Nazis have now demanded that the Jews leave Germany at the rate of 100 a day. If the "land of the free" shows no sympathy in their dilemma, what other country could be expected to do so?

[From the Hamilton (Ohio) Journal-News of February 27, 1939] CHILDREN REAL VICTIMS

When the passions of prejudice have cooled there will be a terrible monument left to the memory of the Nazi state, in the 50,000 children made to suffer because the regime does not approve the race, religion, or politics of their parents. The help-lessness of these victims, all under 14 years of age, was shown recently when several hundred of them were shipped out of Germany with only 40 cents in their pockets and an unknown future

Senator Wagner has introduced a resolution, now before the Senate Committee on Immigration, to permit 10,000 of these children to enter the United States in the calendar years 1939 and 1940. They would be in addition to the regular number admitted under

the quota system

Private individuals and public charities would provide for their future. In no way would they become public charges or in any degree a threat to employment. Senator Wagner's plan has been endorsed by labor, the Catholic and Protestant churches, and by endorsed by labor, the Catholic and Protestant churches, and by leaders throughout the country.

The United States, of course, should not feel bound to take all refugees, but it should furnish a haven for a portion of these children. Little Holland has already accommodated 1,700 of them. Britain is finding homes for 5,000 more. Ten thousand are not too many for this country with its resources and its organized charity. When the resolution is considered it will be well to keep in mind the misery such an act will end and its humanitarian influence on the rest of the world.

[From the Waltham (Mass.) News-Tribune of February 23, 1939] OFFER THEM A REFUGE

The proposal of Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, that The proposal of Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, that 10,000 refugee children from Germany be admitted to the United States within the next 2 years, outside the quota limit, is one that should appeal to the best instincts of every citizen of the country. Common humanity dictates that these helpless children, all under 14 years of age, shall be given the opportunity to grow to manhood and womanhood where they can develop as individuals, not as mere slaves of the state. Their pitiful plight is not their own fault. They are the waifs left behind when their fathers and mothers were hustled off to a concentration camp because of their race, or because they failed to appreciate the blessings of national socialism. Many of them have lost their parents in one or another of the mysterious disappearances which have become daily occurrences in Nazi Germany.

There may be excellent economic reasons for not letting down the bars to admit adult immigrants without limit, but these forlorn youngsters will not for years compete with American labor in any line. Neither will they become public charges, for their support would by law be guaranteed by either individuals or organizations. Although many, possibly most, of the children are of the Jewish race and religion, there are also many Catholics and Protestants whose relatives have preferred to exercise freedom of thought and action to surrendering the right inherent in every human being to those dominant in the state. The background of these children is such that in itself it is an incentive to good citizenship.

The resolution of Senator Wagner is in accord with the American tradition. It is to be hoped that Congress will give it favorable consideration.

[From the Danbury (Conn.) News-Times of February 20, 1939] ADMITTING REFUGEE CHILDREN

Americans almost unanimously support the Wagner bill proposing to improve the immigration laws so that 10,000 refugee children can be admitted from Germany into this country this year, and 10,000 next year.

There must be more than lip sympathy for the victims of Nazi persecution. These children will become a national asset if we take them in. How sad it is that children in such vast numbers must leave their parents and their friends because of man's cruelty to man. cruelty to man.

[From the Pensacola (Fla.) News of February 21, 1939]

UNITED STATES MAY AID NAZI REFUGEES

General approval is bound to come for a bill recently introduced in Congress, jointly sponsored by Senator Robert F. Wagner, Democrat, of New York, and Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Republican, of Massachusetts, which will provide for practical action by the United States to aid the most helpless victims of Hitler persecution, the children of Germany's undesired people.

The bill would permit bringing into the United States a limited number of German children when there are persons here willing to give them a home. The age of the immigrants would be limited.

number of German children when there are persons here willing to give them a home. The age of the immigrants would be limited to 14 years and under. Annual admission of 10,000 for 2 years is provided. The low age would mean that the new citizens would be no burden on the labor market. This phase of the bill has received approval of labor organizations.

approval of labor organizations.

American Friends Service Committee, although we hear little of it in the South, is a great factor in placing children in the East, and has pledged its support to the measure. Other organizations are willing to accept their share of the responsibility in getting the children into homes. This country should do this small part in helping to relieve a suffering people, suffering through no fault of their own. their own

[From the Newport News (Va.) Times-Herald of February 15, 1939] MERCY FOR REFUGEE CHILDREN

There is a striking unanimity and unity in the reception of a proposal to admit to the United States a limited number of refugee children from Germany during the next 2 years. Sympathy for the plight of these innocent unfortunates knows no politics nor creeds. A bill to admit 10,000 of the children for the next 2 years has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Wagner, a Democrat. Representative Epith Nourse Rogers, a Republican, has introduced a companion bill in the House. Leaders of various churches, Catholic and Protestant, have joined in approval. Offers to take such children to be reared in American homes have come from various outstanding people. The American Federation of Labor and the C. I. O. have approved in principle of the move.

The call of humanity in distress is universal and there is little The call of humanity in distress is universal and there is little doubt that the Wagner and Rogers bills will be adopted. There appears to be no reason to the contrary. A nation the size of ours can readily absorb this small group without materially affecting the unemployment situation. The wide prevalence of unemployment is, of course, the chief argument against any admission of immigrants. But that argument is transcended by the need for aid to the child refugees of Europe. Neighbor nations of Germany have the child refugees are numbered to the contract of the same problems as curve but have received great numbers. faced the same problem as ours but have received great numbers of these children, many of whom have been orphaned or made homeless by Nazi persecutions. The situation is a challenge to our freedom and democracy, the principles on which the Nation was founded and has existed. Tradition and humanitarianism unite in counseling us to aid the refugees in every way possible.

[From the Boise (Idaho) Statesman of February 28, 1939] THE CHILD REFUGEES

Elsewhere on this page is an editorial from the New York Herald Tribune describing a bill introduced by Senator Wagner, of New York, which would permit 20,000 children under the age of 14 years to be received in the United States outside of quota restrictions within the next 2 years. Purpose is to permit persons in the United States to receive some of the refugee German children whose parents are in concentration camps or "have been thrown on the mercy of the outer world."

It is noteworthy that Senator Wagner is one of the standard.

It is noteworthy that Senator Wacner is one of the stanchest supporters of organized labor in the Senate, that the measure has the endorsement of both the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. and also Catholic and Protestant churchmen.

After reading the Herald Tribune editorial it is impossible to reach any other conclusion except this: Humanity demands the bill's passage.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON INTEROCEANIC CANALS

Mr. CLARK of Missouri, from the Committee on Interoceanic Canals, to which was referred the bill (S. 50) to provide for recognizing the services rendered by civilian officers and employees in the construction and establishment of the Panama Canal and the Canal Zone, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 144) thereon.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. BROWN:

S. 1714. A bill to provide for the establishment of a Coast Guard station on the east coast of the Keweenaw Peninsula, Mich.: to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. McNARY:

S. 1715. A bill authorizing the restoration to tribal ownership of certain lands upon the Umatilla Indian Reservation, Oreg., and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma:

S. 1716. A bill granting an increase of pension to Alma H. Aultman: to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HARRISON:

S. 1717. A bill to revise the method of determining the payments to be made by the United States to the several States with respect to conservation lands subject to the jurisdiction of the Department of Agriculture; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. WALSH:

S. 1718. A bill for the eradication of the Dutch elm disease in America, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

S.1719. A bill for the relief of Edmund L. Moore; to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. BONE:

S. 1720. A bill prohibiting the use of funds granted or lent by the United States for the purchase of materials which are not of domestic origin, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

By Mr. CLARK of Idaho:

S. 1721. A bill conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and render final judgment on any and all claims of whatsoever nature the Snake or Piute Indians, or any band thereof, may have against the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. BANKHEAD:

S. 1722. A bill for the relief of Hannis Hoven; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. DANAHER:

S. 1723. A bill to correct the military record of George M. Ruby; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

HOUSE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED OR PLACED ON CALENDAR

The following bills and joint resolutions were severally read twice by their titles and referred or ordered to be placed on the calendar as indicated below:

H. R. 153. An act to transfer jurisdiction over commercial prints and labels, for the purpose of copyright registration, to the Register of Copyrights; to the Committee on Patents.

H. R. 913. An act to prohibit the unauthorized use of the name or insignia of the 4-H clubs, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

H.R. 136. An act to authorize contingent expenditures, United States Coast Guard Academy;

H.R. 899. An act to provide for the establishment of a Coast Guard station on the east coast of the Keweenaw Peninsula, Mich.; and

H. R. 1776. An act to provide for the assignment of medical officers of the Public Health Service for duty on vessels of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce.

H. R. 139. An act to amend paragraph (1) of section 96 of title II of the Canal Zone Code relating to method of computing annuities; and H.R. 3577. An act to amend the Canal Zone Code; to the Committee on Interoceanic Canals.

H.R. 2750. An act to prohibit the issuance and coinage of certain commemorative coins, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

H. R. 3537. An act to extend the facilities of the United States Public Health Service to active officers of the Foreign Service of the United States; to the calendar.

H. R. 3812. An act granting postal employees credit for Saturday in annual and sick leave law, thereby conforming to the 40-hour workweek or 5-day-week law; to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

H. R. 3655. An act to amend the act entitled "An act for the grading and classification of clerks in the Foreign Service of the United States of America and providing compensation therefor," approved February 23, 1931; and

H. J. Res. 150. Joint resolution to amend the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution to provide that the United States extend to foreign governments invitations to participate in the Third International Congress for Microbiology, to be held in the United States during the calendar year 1939"; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

PRINTING OF HEARINGS BEFORE SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON TAXATION OF GOVERNMENTAL SECURITIES AND SALARIES

Mr. BROWN submitted the following concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 6), which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That in accordance with paragraph 3 of section 2 of the Printing Act approved March 1, 1907, the Special Committee on Taxation of Governmental Securities and Salaries of the Senate be, and is hereby, authorized and empowered to have printed for its use 1,000 additional copies of the hearings held before said committee during the current session on the resolution (S. Res. 303, 75th Cong.) establishing a Special Committee on the Taxation of Governmental Securities and Salaries.

ASSISTANT CLERK TO COMMITTEE ON PATENTS

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I ask for the immediate consideration of Senate Resolution 85, Calendar No. 149. Let me explain that this is a formal resolution authorizing the Patents Committee to employ an assistant clerk. A vast amount of work is piling up, and so far, I have had no clerk to do it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Washington for the immediate consideration of Senate Resolution 85? The Chair hears no objection.

The Senate proceeded to consider the resolution, which had been reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, with an amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the amendment reported by the committee.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 4, it is proposed to strike out "$2,800" and insert "$2,200", so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved, That the Committee on Patents is hereby authorized to employ for the duration of the Seventy-sixth Congress an assistant clerk to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate at the rate of $2,200 per annum.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution, as amended, was agreed to.

REAPPORTIONMENT OF COTTON ACREAGE ALLOTMENTS

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, I rise to make a privileged motion. The House has passed Senate bill 660, providing for releasing the "frozen acres" and making allotments, with one amendment, which I have discussed with the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. I ask that the Chair lay the amendment of the House before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ASHURST in the chair) laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 660) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, to provide for the reapportionment of cotton acreage allotments not planted by farmers entitled thereto, which was, in line 8, after "subsection", to insert a colon and "Provided, That hereafter such allotment of acreage in counties shall be to such farms as the county committee of such county may designate. In making such designation the county committee shall consider only the character and adaptability of the soil and other physical facilities affecting the production of cotton and the need of operator for an additional allotment to meet the requirement of the families engaging in the production of cotton on the farm in such year."

Mr. LEE. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

FIRST DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives embodying an action of the House on certain amendments to the first deficiency appropriation bill, which the clerk will read. The legislative clerk read as follows:

> IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, UNITED STATES March 1, 1939.

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate Nos. 10, 16, 17, and 18 to the bill (H. R. 2868) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for other purposes, and concur therein;

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 13 to said bill and concur therein with an amend-

In lieu of the sum inserted by said amendment insert "$2,250,-

That the House insist upon its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 23 to said bill.

Mr. ADAMS. I move that the Senate disagree to the House amendment to Senate amendment numbered 13, and that it insist on the amendments still in controversy, namely, Nos. 13 and 23, ask for a further conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I desire to inquire whether all the amendments which were in dispute have been agreed to.

Mr. ADAMS. No; there are still in disagreement the two amendments above indicated, one in reference to the authorization of the construction of a building for the Census Bureau, the other what the Senator and I know as the "grasshopper amendment." My motion is that the Senate disagree to the House amendment to Senate amendment numbered 13, that it insist upon the amendments in disagreement, and ask for a further conference with the House thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, will not the Senator inform us in a word what the "grasshopper amendment" is?

Mr. ADAMS. I may explain to the Senator from West Virginia that what I referred to as the "grasshopper amendment" is an amendment to the House text. The House inserted in the original bill an appropriation of $2,000,000 for the eradication of a number of agricultural pests. The major one, in numbers, was the grasshopper, in the western prairie and farm country. The Senate committee, supported by the Senate, increased the amount allowed by the House to $5,417,000, which was the amount requested by the Department of Agriculture. The representatives of the Department told us that a partial battle against the pests would be practically useless, that in past seasons they had made a partial contest, that they had covered the cultivated areas, but that there was an infestation on uncultivated areas, where the grasshopper eggs were laid, and they stated that unless they continued their campaign out in those areas it would be impossible to carry on the battle in an efficient

The Senate committee felt that the Department should be given what they asked for in order to make the battle, and if they failed, then we might say that it was useless. So we are asking that we be permitted to go back and reconfer with the House conferees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS1.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. Adams, Mr. Glass, Mr. McKellar, Mr. Hayden, Mr. Byrnes, Mr. Hale, and Mr. Townsend conferees on the part of the Senate at the further conference.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF CONGRESS-ADDRESS BY SENATOR M'NARY

[Mr. Johnson of California asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a radio address by Senator

McNary on Saturday, March 4, 1939, in observation of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the first meeting of Congress, which appears in the Appendix.]

MERICAN FOREIGN POLICY—ARTICLE BY HENRY L. STIMSON

[Mr. Logan asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article concerning the foreign policy of the United States written by Hon. Henry L. Stimson and published in the Washington Post of this date, which appears in the Appendix.]

PRINCIPLES OF MONETARY SCIENCE

IMr. Logan asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a letter from Mr. A. N. McLean, of St. Johns, New Brunswick, Canada, addressed to former Senator Robert L. Owen, with regard to a document prepared by Mr. Owen on the principles of monetary science, which appears in the Appendix.]

FRANK AND JESSE JAMES IN REVIEW-ADDRESS BY HON. HARRY B. HAWES

[Mr. Truman asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by Hon. Harry B. Hawes, former Senator from Missouri, before the Missouri Society at Washington, D. C., February 25, 1939, entitled "Frank and Jesse James in Review," which appears in the Appendix.]

THE CONSTITUTION-REMARKS OF DANIEL WEBSTER

IMr. WILEY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record excerpts from remarks made by Daniel Webster in the Senate of the United States on January 25, 1850, on the subject of the Constitution, which appear in the Appendix.]

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF SIGNING OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE ACT

IMr. Hill asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD the proceedings at the Federal Reserve Building commemorating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the signing of the Federal Reserve Act, which appear in the Appendix.]

THE MONOPOLY INVESTIGATION—ADDRESS BY WENDELL BERGE

[Mr. Mean asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address on the subject of the monopoly investigation, delivered by Wendell Berge, special assistant to the Attorney General, before the National Retail Credit Association at Rochester, N. Y., February 20, 1939, which appears in the Appendix.]

OUR VARIED BUT UNITED STATES—ARTICLE BY WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE

IMr. Borah asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article by William Allen White, published in the New York Times World's Fair section for March 5, 1939, entitled "Our Varied But United States," which appears in the Appendix.]

PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE-ARTICLE BY H. FORD WILKINS

IMr. Gibson asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a portion of an article written by H. Ford Wilkins, appearing in the New York Times of February 26, 1939, entitled "The Filipinos View the Future With Misgivings," which appears in the Appendix.]

KEEPING OUT OF WAR-ARTICLE BY HARRY HANSEN

[Mr. Lundeen asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Appendix an article on the subject of keeping the United States out of war, by Harry Hansen, printed in the New York Telegram of March 6, 1939, which appears in the Appendix.]

AFFIRMATION OF CHRISTIAN PACIFIST FAITH

[Mr. Clark of Missouri asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an Affirmation of Christian Pacifist Faith, signed by various clergymen and printed in the magazine Fellowship, which appears in the Appendix.]

SILVER PURCHASE PROGRAM

[Mr. Townsend asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a statement by the Economists' National Committee on Monetary Policy relative to the silver-purchase program, which appears in the Appendix.1

ACTIVITIES OF NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS BOARD IN NEW YORK

[Mr. Wagner asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record the report of the second regional office, National Labor Relations Board, 1935 through 1938, published in the New York Times for Monday, March 6, 1939, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE PORT OF NEW LONDON—EDITORIAL FROM MANCHESTER (CONN.)
HERALD

[Mr. Maloney asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record an editorial from the Manchester (Conn.) Herald relative to the port of New London, which appears in the Appendix.]

RECOVERY OR ECONOMY-EDITORIAL FROM PHILADELPHIA RECORD

[Mr. Minton asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record an editorial from the Philadelphia Record of Tuesday, March 7, 1939, entitled "Recovery or Economy? We Can't Have Both," which appears in the Appendix.]

THE NATIONAL DEFENSE

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3791) to provide more effectively for the national defense by carrying out the recommendations of the President in his message of January 12, 1939, to the Congress.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, in view of the completion of action on the committee amendments to the pending bill, and in view of what I suppose is the completion of what might be termed general debate on the bill, I have felt it my duty as well as my desire to speak briefly concerning the situation which calls forth this measure, with particular reference to the range of the discussion which has been indulged in since the beginning of the consideration of the measure.

In doing so, I do not hope that I can add much, if anything, to the very able addresses which have been made by Senators on both sides of the question, if there really are two sides to the provisions of this bill. I do not know, of course, how many votes will be cast against the measure when it reaches final conclusion. I have a feeling that very few votes will be cast against it; that it will be enacted by an overwhelming majority. I have no doubt that some of our colleagues who have spoken against the policies which have called forth the bill, either specifically or generally, will vote for the measure on final roll call. But certain things have been injected into the discussion to which I wish to call attention, and, if possible, to brush aside some of the confusion which may have existed and may still exist in the minds of some of our colleagues and the public with reference to the things which have been discussed during the past week.

I am not going into the question of neutrality. We all have our individual opinions about the question of neutrality, about how neutral we really can be and remain when war is being waged in other parts of the world. We are all familiar with the effort, covering a period of more than 2½ years, from 1914 to 1917, to preserve neutrality as between the combatants in the World War, until we ourselves finally became a party to that great contest.

I voted for the Neutrality Act. Most of us here voted for it. All of us who voted for it, I am sure, did so in the hope that it might make a substantial contribution to the preservation of peace in the world. If it has made such contribution, the evidences of it are not now visible to the naked eye.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. When has the Neutrality Act ever been enforced?

Mr. BARKLEY. I shall discuss that subject a little bit

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I should be very glad if the Senator, in the course of his remarks, would point out the enforcement of the Neutrality Act as between China and Japan.

Mr. BARKLEY. Insofar as it has been enforced or observed, except probably in recent months, during which there has been a sort of understanding between the Secretary of State and the manufacturers of certain war implements, it is questionable in whose behalf it may have operated.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I was very free to yield to the Senator in both the addresses I recently made.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Does not the Senator know that the Neutrality Act has never been invoked to any degree whatever as between China and Japan, by reason of the fact that the President failed to find as a matter of fact that a state of war existed?

When every other citizen of the United States familiar in any degree whatever with the facts knew that a brutal war was in progress, the President of the United States did not recognize that a state of war existed between China and Japan, and never did put the Neutrality Act into effect, and the Neutrality Act has never been invoked to any extent whatever as between China and Japan.

Mr. BARKLEY. That raises the question whether the President of the United States has the authority under the act to invoke its provisions in an undeclared war, which is a new type of war in the history of mankind, at least in recent centuries. The President must act officially according to the terms of the law, and not according to what somebody else may think.

But regardless of what has happened in China and Japan, regardless of whether technically the President was right in not recognizing an undeclared war, which I think he was, in order that the Neutrality Act might be put into operation, the general observation I was in process of making was that it is doubtful whether the Neutrality Act, whether enforced or not enforced, has contributed to the peace of the world.

Mr. President, there has been a great deal of discussion here with respect to certain mysteries that have transpired in connection with the sale of airplanes to the Republic of France. I am only going to refer to that subject in connection with what, it seems to me, has been the general practice of our Government since the enactment of the Neutrality Act, and especially section 5, which authorizes the President to issue a proclamation with respect to the sale of munitions of war under the control of the Munitions Control Board in the State Department.

Under the law, every concern which engages in the export of war materials, whether airplanes or engines or parts or any other form of war materials, must obtain a license from the State Department, or from the Board set up by section 5 of the Neutrality Act to determine the right of exporters to engage in the exportation of war materials. The law requires that Board to make an annual report, which it does, The first report made by the Control Board was made for the year beginning November 30, 1935, and ending November 30, 1936.

During that 12 months' period, licenses were issued to exporters, and exportations of war materials were engaged in, to the Republic of Argentina in the amount of $2,922,369.

Australia bought from the United States—I mean by that not from our Government, of course, but from American manufacturers—$588,000 worth of war materials contemplated in the categories set out in the President's proclamation issued in pursuance of the law.

The Republic of Bolivia bought $96,000 worth.

The Dominion of Canada purchased, in 1935-36, $754,000 worth of war materials for which licenses had to be issued. The Republic of Chile purchased $276,000 worth.

The Republic of China in 1935–36 bought $7,547,653 worth under the license system inaugurated by section 5 of the Neutrality Act.

Costa Rica bought $453,000 worth.

During the same period French West Africa bought $344,-000 worth of war materials.

Germany bought $502,000 worth.

1939

Great Britain and Northern Ireland bought $348,727 worth of war materials.

Greece bought $1,111,000 worth of war materials.

The Irish Free State purchased in the same period an insignificant quantity, but there were some purchases made by the Irish Free State.

During the same period Italy bought $452,000 worth of war materials.

During the same period Japan bought $1,176,000 worth of war materials.

During the same period the Republic of Mexico purchased in the United States $733,000 worth of war materials for which licenses were issued.

During the same period the Netherlands bought $1,015,000 worth, and the Netherlands Indies purchased $1,505,000 worth.

During the same period Palestine purchased in the United States, under licenses issued, $254,000 worth of war materials.

Poland purchased $256,000 worth. Siam bought $786,000 worth.

Uruguay bought $1,330,000 worth.

And so on. These are the more important purchases by foreign nations from November 30, 1935, to November 30,

Mr. President, there may have been secrecy about that. I do not recall whether in 1935 and 1936, up to November 30, any publicity was given to the fact that these various nations were purchasing in the United States these war materials in the amounts shown by the figures which I have quoted. But I dare say there was no publicity connected with it, for the very reason that the countries purchasing these war materials, presumably to be used in their national defense, or in their national aggression, if such might have been the case with respect to any nation, did not advertise to their prospective opponents the fact that they were making these purchases in the United States of America.

I have here the second annual report of the National Munitions Control Board, set up by section 5 of the Neutrality Act. I wish to put into the RECORD a statement of the amount of munitions or war materials purchased in the United States by various countries.

During the same period to which I have referred, November 30, 1936, to November 30, 1937, Australia purchased $5,619,000 worth of war materials under licenses issued in the United Austria purchased $1,077,000 worth. Belgium purchased $162,000 worth. Brazil purchased $1,911,000 worth. Canada purchased $2,595,000 worth. China purchased $8,338,000 worth. Colombia purchased $304,000 worth. Czechoslovakia purchased $507,000 worth. France purchased $392,000 worth.

Germany purchased $1,042,000 worth of articles of war in the United States, some of which were airplane engines and other parts which went into the manufacture and assembling of airplanes for the benefit of Germany.

Great Britain and Northern Ireland, in the year referred to, purchased $1,940,000 worth of war materials.

Honduras purchased $360,000 worth. Iran purchased $199,000 worth. Jamaica purchased $370,000 worth.

Japan in the same period purchased $1,773,000 worth of war materials in the United States.

Mexico purchased $2,697,000 worth. The Netherlands purchased $2,535,000 worth. The Netherlands Indies purchased $3,686,000 worth. New Zealand purchased $201,000 worth. Rumania purchased $1,749,000 worth. Siam purchased $1,053,000 worth.

The Straits Settlements purchased $329,000 worth. Switzerland purchased $791,000 worth. Turkey purchased $4,971,000 worth of war materials. The Union of South Africa purchased $522,000 worth.

2345

The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics purchased $12,446,000 worth.

Venezuela purchased $444,000 worth of war materials. Yugoslavia purchased $174,000 worth.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Logan in the chair). Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Can the Senator inform the Senate whether in either of these years any of the raw materials purchased by the Straits Settlements, or the Windward Islands, or any other people had to do with the purchase of airplanes which were being prepared for entry in the competition of the American War Department before the War Department had a chance to examine them themselves?

Mr. BARKLEY. The report does not show. Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I dare say the report does not

Mr. BARKLEY. The report does not show, and the law does not require it to show, anything more than the issuing of the licenses and the sale of these war materials. I do not know, and I cannot obtain from the report, which is, of course, more or less statistical, information as to whether any of the things purchased by these various countries may have been articles similar to any which the United States would have bought, or did buy, or was in the process of purchasing. It is entirely likely that some of them were. Especially might that be true of the sale of engines for airplane construction to Germany, for instance.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Or scrap iron to Japan?

Mr. BARKLEY. Or scrap iron to Japan. It is impossible for me to answer the Senator's question from the report from which I have been reading.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. If the Senator will yield for just one moment, let me suggest to him that the whole importance of the incident to which reference has been made here, of the sale of these planes to France, had not anything to do with the sale of war materials, which is regulated by the law to which the Senator has referred, but it had to do with the unusual divergence from the regulations in force, promulgated by the Aeronautical Board set up by the Army and Navy of the United States, in permitting any foreign country to even observe, much less purchase, planes which were being prepared for the use of the United States Army, or entrance into the competition of the United States Army, at least before they had even been entered in the competition, or the United States War Department had had a chance to examine them.

Mr. BARKLEY. I think we all understand that there was an interdepartmental policy agreed to by the War Department and the Navy Department with respect to the sale or examination of these planes. It was not a matter of law; it was a matter of common agreement between the two departments, over which the President of the United States presides as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, and regardless of what individual opinion may be as to the propriety or the necessity or the desirability of the President's overriding of anyone in the War Department in respect to this matter, I think the testimony of the Army officers shows that while they did oppose the action in an initial attitude which they took, because it violated a policy which they themselves had adopted, they finally came to the conclusion, and so testified in the hearings before the committee, that there was no impropriety in the overriding of the Department by the President, that no secrets were divulged to anyone engaged in the process of purchasing this particular airplane which was inspected by the French mission to which the Senator refers.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Austin in the chair). Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. BARKLEY, I yield.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. There is not a scintilla of evidence in the record at any point, not one single scintilla of evidence in the whole record of the testimony before the Military Affairs Committee, in which any responsible officer of the War Department stated that the objections on the part of the War Department had been formal objections, or that the objections which they made had ever been withdrawn. They said they were instructed by higher authority.

Mr. BARKLEY. I understand that, but I think the Senator will recall testimony—I am not so certain about whether it was General Arnold or General Craig who testified, I do not recall now from memory which one it was, but one or the other of the responsible officers of the War Department stated over and over again that one of the reasons, whether it was the main reason or not I do not know, was that it was not in accordance with section so-and-so of their release policy.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Certainly, Mr. President, and it also was in violation of the causes and reasons for which those regulations had been adopted. I asked General Craig whether possibly the objection of the War Department might be that it would slow up the production of planes under the American program, and take away from us a plane which the War Department would like to have, and he said, "Doubtless that was one of the reasons for our objection."

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course the whole incident to which the Senator refers has been thrashed over here time and time again.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. The Senator is threshing it over again.

Mr. BARKLEY. It was not my purpose to go into that in detail. The reason I thought it proper to quote from these reports of the board that controls the exportation of war munitions was that in the sale of airplanes or in the sale of any other war material to France we have pursued no different policy from that which has been pursued with respect to the sale of similar munitions to all other countries, unless the Senator from Missouri and other Senators in perfect good faith wish to place in a special category this particular sale to France because of the circumstances under which the airplane was inspected.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me again?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I do wish to place a different construction on it by reason of the fact that in no other case, so far as I am informed, or have ever heard, in all these sales of munitions, has there been such a situation as existed in the case of the sale of planes, possibly necessary and desirable to the United States Army itself, to a foreign country upon the direct order of the Commander in Chief. And as far as the Army officers are concerned, I understand, of course, that the Army officers did not controvert the fact that the Commander in Chief of the Army had the right to give them an order which they were not only honor bound, but legally bound, to objey or else resign from the United States Army. There is no controversy about that. But when the Senator says that this remarkable transaction is on the same basis as the transactions represented by the statistics he has been reading, it seems to me that statement is open to very serious question.

Mr. BARKLEY. I imagine that there were different circumstances pertaining to all the sales made to all these countries. What those different circumstances may have been we do not know. There was no publicity given, so far as I recall, or so far as there is any evidence to show, concerning the sale of these other millions upon millions of dollars' worth of munitions of war to the various countries of the world, which were made legally under the sanction of the Neutrality Act to which I have referred. My object in putting them in the Record and calling the Senators' attention to them is that we may understand that there has been no difference in the policy adopted by our Government toward the various nations which have bought these things, subject probably to a reservation that in recent months the Secretary of State has had a gentleman's understanding with certain manufacturers in this country that they would not ship materials to Japan.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. I direct the Senator's attention to page 179 of the committee report, where General Arnold, in answer to various inquiries directed to him, gave the War Department grounds for objection, as follows:

General Arnold. The grounds of the objection, as far as I could recall now, were based upon the release policy, in that this did not conform to the release policy.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; that is what I am referring to—the release policy—and, of course, having agreed with the Navy Department upon a certain written release policy, they did not feel at liberty to deviate from it. But the President of the United States had the authority, and exercised it, to overrule that particular section of the release policy and permit the sale of these planes.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator again yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. The facts clearly show that the sale violated not only the written policy in existence between the War and Navy Departments, but the reason which had led to the establishment of that policy, which was that foreign countries will get planes which we might need before we get them ourselves,

Mr. BARKLEY. The proof, I think, shows that that reason did not exist, although they thought it might exist at the time. It turned out that it did not then exist.

Mr. President, I wish to complete a recital of these figures. I have here also a report for the year ending November 30, 1938. During that 12 months we sold to Argentina $7,219,000 worth of munitions. We sold to Australia $742,000 worth of munitions. To Belgium we sold $116,000 worth; to Bolivia, $528,000 worth; to Brazil, $2,627,000; to Canada, $3,171,000; to Chile, $136,000; to China, $9,180,000; to Colombia, $296,-000; to Cuba, $161,000; to Curaçao, $268,000; to Cechoslovakia, $156,000; to the Dominican Republic, $87,000; to Estonia, $692,000; to France, $6,446,000; to Germany, $189,000.

I call attention to the fact in connection with the dropping off of the sales to Germany in 1938, that in the meantime Germany had established her own munitions plants and made the products herself in sufficient quantities. They had bought from a certain manufacturer of airplane engines in the United States over 600 airplane engines, which they took to Germany and installed in German-manufactured planes, and they had obtained from a firm which manufactures these engines in the United States a license, issued in the name of the Bavarian Motor Works of Bavaria, authorizing them to use certain patents which were the property of the Pratt & Whitney Co., of Hartford, Conn., which explains why it was no longer necessary and why it is not now necessary for Germany to replenish her supply in the United States or elsewhere.

We sold in that year to Honduras $200,000 worth of munitions. We sold to Japan $9,241,000 worth of munitions.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. Can the Senator give us any information as to the kind of war material that went to Japan that year?

Mr. BARKLEY. A large part of it was scrap iron, out of which, of course, they could manufacture in their own country cannon and all sorts of war munitions. It has been facetiously said that every backyard in America has been cleaned up by the sales of scrap iron to Japan.

During that same year we sold to Mexico $1,091,000 worth of munitions. We sold to the Netherlands $2,357,000 worth. To the Netherlands Indies we sold $10,053,000 worth of munitions. We sold to Peru in that same period $1,227,000 worth of munitions. We sold to Poland $703,000 worth; to Rumania, $663,000 worth; to Siam, $765,000 worth; to Sweden, $215,000 worth; to Switzerland, $194,000 worth; to Turkey, $595,000 worth; to the Union of South Africa, $260,000 worth; to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, $2,263,000 worth; to Venezuela, $533,000 worth; and to Yugoslavia, in the year ending the 30th day of last November, $305,000 worth of munitions

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. KING. The Senator has stated the various amounts which have been sold to various countries. Is it not a fact that the larger part of those sales, although the ultimate destinations were the countries to which the Senator referred, were made to private individuals, and they made agreements, perhaps, with individuals in those respective States? The sale was from one individual to another individual, but perhaps ultimately the commodities were acquired by the governments of those various States.

Mr. BARKLEY. Undoubtedly many of them were sold to individuals in the countries to which they were destined.

Mr. KING. But not to the governments themselves? Mr. BARKLEY. But in many cases the government itself bought these munitions from the American manufacturers. That is true of Germany. It is true of France.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. It would be very important and interesting if the Senator were able to give us the total value of the munitions which were shipped from the United States during the 3 years mentioned by the Senator.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have not tabulated them, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. NORRIS. Will the Senator have them tabulated?

Mr. BARKLEY. I have the individual items here. I have not read them all, because some of them are small. I have read the outstanding items. But I can have them tabulated and placed in the RECORD, in connection with my remarks.

Mr. NORRIS. I wish the Senator would.

Mr. BARKLEY. Showing the total amount for the 3 years.

Mr. NORRIS. For each year and for the 3 years.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes. I can have that done. I think it would be very helpful to have it done.

The total amounts of their shipments are as follows:

For the 12 months ending November 30, 1936, $25,050,998. For the 12 months ending November 30, 1937, $45,076,316. For the 12 months ending November 30, 1938, $94,209,532. The total amount for the 3 years is $164,336,846.

Mr. President, I did not read those figures in order to go again into the circumstances surrounding the sale of airplanes to France, or the circumstances under which the French Government was permitted to inspect a particular plane in the United States. I think that the testimony before the Military Affairs Committee, regardless of the controversies about it and the differences of opinion which may exist, amply justifies the policy of the President in permitting the inspection and sale of this particular airplane. If there were anything lacking in the hearings, I think the very able speech made a few days ago by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Austin], who now occupies the chair, dispelled all doubt with respect to the propriety and the wisdom of the action taken by our Government at the time of the sales. I have placed these figures before the Senate, taken from official reports to show that we have dealt with practically all the great nations of the world impartially.

Mr. President, I now wish to revert for a few moments to what seems to me to have been an unjustified criticism, made either openly or covertly, of the President of the United States because of the foreign policy involved in his attitude and that of the Secretary of State in dealing with the very difficult problems which today beset the world of which we are a part.

Reference has been made to an address delivered by the President on the 14th of August 1936 at Chautauqua, N. Y., and an effort has been made to conjure up some sort of inconsistency between the policy announced in that address and the policy announced on October 5, 1937, in an address delivered in the city of Chicago; in the annual address of the President to Congress on the 4th day of January 1939; and in the statement he made only a few weeks ago in outlining his present policy in dealing with the nations of the world.

I wish to quote a few paragraphs from that famous Chautauqua address:

As many of you who are here tonight know, I formed the excellent habit of coming to Chautauqua more than 20 years ago. After my inauguration in 1933, I promised Mr. Bestor that during the next 4 years I would come to Chautauqua again; it is in fulfillment of this that I am with you tonight.

A few days ago I was asked what the subject of this talk would be read I am with the former of the subject of the subj

A rew days ago I was asked what the subject of this talk would be, and I replied that for two good reasons I wanted to discuss the subject of peace: First, because it is eminently appropriate in Chautauqua; and, secondly, because in the hurly-burly of domestic politics it is important that our people should not overlook problems and issues which, though they lie beyond our borders, may, and probably will, have a vital influence on the United States of the future the future.

Many who have visited me in Washington in the past few months may have been surprised when I have told them that personally and because of my own daily contacts with all manner of difficult situations I am more concerned and less cheerful about international world conditions than about our immediate domestic prospects.

prospects.

I say this to you not as a confirmed pessimist, but as one who still hopes that envy, hatred, and malice among nations have reached their peak and will be succeeded by a new tide of peace and good will—I say this as one who has participated in many of the decisions of peace and war before, during and after the World War; one who has traveled much, and one who has spent a goodly portion of every 24 hours in the study of foreign relations.

Long before I returned to Washington as President of the United States, I had made up my mind that pending what might be called a more opportune moment on other continents, the United States could best serve the cause of a peaceful humanity by setting an example. That was why on the 4th of March, 1933, I made the following declaration:

"In the field of world policy I would dedicate this Nation to the policy of the good neighbor—the neighbor who resolutely respects himself and, because he does so, respects the rights of others—the neighbor who respects his obligations and respects the sanctity of his agreements in and with a world of neighbors."

the neighbor who respects his obligations and respects the sanctity of his agreements in and with a world of neighbors."

This declaration represents my purpose; but it represents more than a purpose, for it stands for a practice. To a measurable degree it has succeeded; the whole world now knows that the United States cherishes no predatory ambitions. We are strong; but less powerful nations know that they need not fear our strength. We seek no conquest: We stand for peace.

Mr. President, I believe that the attitude expressed only 6 years ago last Saturday expresses the view, the attitude, and the purpose of the President of the United States at this particular time.

In the whole of the Western Hemisphere our good-neighbor

In the whole of the Western Hemisphere our good-neighbor policy has produced results that are especially heartening.

The noblest monument to peace and to neighborly economic and social friendship in all the world is not a monument in bronze or stone but the boundary which unites the United States and Canada—3,000 miles of friendship with no barbed wire, no gun or soldier, and no passport on the whole frontier.

Mutual trust made that frontier; to extend the same sort of mutual trust throughout the Americas was our aim.

The American republics to the south of us have been ready always to cooperate with the United States on a basis of equality and mutual respect, but before we inaugurated the good-neighbor policy there was among them resentment and fear, because certain, administrations in Washington had slighted their national pride and their sovereign rights.

Can anybody truthfully deny the accuracy of that statement? Can anybody deny, Mr. President, that after 6 years of the good-neighbor policy inaugurated by the present administration on the 4th of March, 1933, we now enjoy infinitely better relations with South America and Central America than we have ever enjoyed in the history of the Western Hemisphere? We have been able to convince the republics to the south of us that we desire to take no economic advantage of them; that we covet not a square mile of their territory; and that we demand from them no right that we are not willing to accord to them. Because of that friendly attitude, and because of the industrious efforts which have been made by our Republic, through the President and Secretary of State, we have been able to bring about a solidarity in the Western Hemisphere never before enjoyed or even dreamed of by preceding administrations.

The President, pursuing his address, in particular reference to this situation, said:

In pursuance of the good-neighbor policy, and because in my younger days I had learned many lessons in the hard school of experience, I stated that the United States was opposed definitely to armed intervention.

We have negotiated a Pan American convention embodying the principle of nonintervention. We have abandoned the Platt amendment, which gave us the right to intervene in the internal affairs of the Republic of Cuba. We have withdrawn American marines from Haiti. We have signed a new treaty which places our relations with Panama on a mutually satisfactory basis. We have undertaken a series of trade agreements with other American countries, to our mutual commercial profit. At the request of two neighboring republics, I hope to give assistance in the final settlement of the last serious boundary dispute between any of the American nations.

Since the delivery of that address that ambition has been very largely, if not completely consummated:

Throughout the Americas the spirit of the good neighbor is a practical and living fact. The 21 American republics are not only living together in friendship and in peace, they are united in the determination so to remain.

determination so to remain.

To give substance to this determination a conference will meet on December 1, 1936, at the capital of our great southern neighbor, Argentina, and it is, I know, the hope of all chiefs of state of the Americas that this will result in measures which will banish wars forever form this vast portion of the earth.

Peace, like charity, begins at home; that is why we have begun at home. But peace in the western world is not all that we seek. It is our hope that knowledge of the practical application of the good-neighbor policy in this hemisphere will be borne home to our neighbors across the seas.

For ourselves we are on good terms with them—terms in most our neighbors across the seas.

For ourselves we are on good terms with them—terms in most cases of straightforward friendship, of peaceful understanding.

But, of necessity, we are deeply concerned about tendencies of recent years among many of the nations of other continents. It is a bitter experience to us when the spirit of agreements to which we are a party is not lived up to. It is an even more bitter experience for the whole company of nations to witness not only the spirit but the letter of international agreements violated with impunity and without regard to the simple principles of honor. Permanent friendships between nations as between men can be sustained only by scrupulous respect for the pledged word.

In spite of all this we have sought steadfastly to assist international movements to prevent war. We cooperated to the bitter end—and it was a bitter end—in the work of the general disarmament conference. When it falled we sought a separate treaty to deal with the manufacture of arms and the international traffic in arms. That proposal also came to nothing. We participated—arms. That proposal also came to nothing. We participated—again to the bitter end—in a conference to continue naval limitations, and when it became evident that no general treaty could be signed because of the objections of other nations, we concluded with Great Britain and France a conditional treaty of qualitative limitation which, much to my regret, already shows signs of ineffectiveness. ineffectiveness.

We shun political commitments which might entangle We shun political commitments which might entangle us in foreign wars; we avoid connection with the political activities of the League of Nations; but I am glad to say that we have cooperated wholeheartedly in the social and humanitarian work at Geneva. Thus we are a part of the world effort to control traffic in narcotics, to improve international health, to help child welfare, to eliminate double taxation, and to better working conditions and laboring hours throughout the world.

We are not isolationists except insofar as we seek to isolate ourselves completely from war. Yet we must remember that so long as war exists on earth there will be some danger that even the nation which most ardently desires peace may be drawn into war.

war

I have seen war. I have seen war on land and sea. I have seen blood running from the wounded. I have seen men coughing out their gassed lungs. I have seen the dead in the mud. I have seen cities destroyed. I have seen 200 limping, exhausted men come out of line—the survivors of a regiment of 1,000 that went forward 48 hours before, I have seen children starving. I have seen the agony of mothers and wives. I hate war.

I have passed unnumbered hours, I shall pass unnumbered hours thinking and planning how war may be kept from this Nation.

I wish I could keep war from all nations; but that is beyond my power. I can at least make certain that no act of the United States helps to produce or to promote war. I can at least make clear that the conscience of America revolts against war and that any nation which provokes war forfeits the sympathy of the people of the United States.

Many causes produce war. There are ancient hatreds, turbulent frontiers, the "legacy of old, forgotten, far-off things, and battles long ago." There are new-born fanaticisms, convictions on the part of certain peoples that they have become the unique depositories of ultimate truth and right.

A dark old world was devastated by wars between conflicting religions. A dark modern world faces wars between conflicting economic and political fanaticisms in which are intertwined race hatreds. To bring it home, it is as if within the territorial limits of the United States, 48 nations with 48 forms of government, 48 customs barriers, 48 languages, and 48 eternal and different verities, were spending their time and their substance in a frenzy of effort to make themselves strong enough to conquer their neighbors or strong enough to defend themselves against their neighbors. In one field, that of economic barriers, the American policy may be. I hope of some assistance in discouraging the economic source be, I hope, of some assistance in discouraging the economic source of war and therefore a contribution toward the peace of the world. The trade agreements which we are making are not only world. The trade agreements which we are making are not only finding outlets for the products of American fields and American factories but are also pointing the way to the elimination of embargoes, quotas, and other devices which place such pressure on nations not possessing great natural resources that to them the price of peace seems less terrible than the price of war.

We do not maintain that a more liberal international trade will stop war, but we fear that without a more liberal international trade will stop war, but we fear that without a more liberal international trade war is a natural sequence.

The Congress of the United States has given me certain authority to provide safeguards of American neutrality in case of war.

The President of the United States who, under our Constitution, is vested with primary authority to conduct our international relations, thus has been given new weapons with which to maintain our neutrality.

Nevertheless—and I speak from a long experience—the effective maintenance of American neutrality depends today, as in the past, on the wisdom and determination of whoever at the moment oc-Nevertheless on the wisdom and determination of whoever at the moment occupy the offices of President and Secretary of State.

It is clear that our present policy and the measures passed by the Congress would, in the event of a war on some other continent, reduce war profits which would otherwise accrue to American citizens. Industrial and agricultural production for a war market may give immense fortunes to a few men; for the Nation as a whole it produces disaster. It was the prospect of war profits that made our farmers in the West plow up prairie land that should never have been plowed but should have been left for grazing cattle. Today we are reaping the harvest of those war profits in the dust storms which have devastated those war-plowed areas.

They would tell you—and, unfortunately, their views would get wide publicity—that if they could produce and ship this and that and the other article to belligerent nations, the unemployed of America would all find work. They would tell you that if they could extend credit to warring nations that credit would be used in the United States to build homes and factories and pay our debts. They would tell you that America once more would capture the trade of the world.

It would be hard to resist that clamor; it would be hard for many

It would be hard to resist that clamor; it would be hard for many Americans, I fear, to look beyond—to realize the inevitable penal-ties, the inevitable day of reckoning that comes from a false pros-perity. To resist the clamor of that greed, if war should come, would require the unswerving support of all Americans who love peace.

If we face the choice of profits or peace, the Nation will answer—must answer—"we choose peace." It is the duty of all of us to encourage such a body of public opinion in this country that the answer will be clear and for all practical purposes unanimous.

With that wise and experienced man who is our Secretary of State, whose statesmanship has met with such wide approval, I have thought and worked long and hard on the problem of keeping the United States at peace. But all the wisdom of America is not to be found in the White House or in the Department of State; we need the meditation, the prayer, and the positive support of the people of America who go along with us in seeking peace. peace.

No matter how well we are supported by neutrality legislation, No matter how well we are supported by neutrality legislation, we must remember that no laws can be provided to cover every contingency, for it is impossible to imagine how every future event may shape itself. In spite of every possible forethought, international relations involve of necessity a vast uncharted area. In that area safe sailing will depend on the knowledge and the experience and the wisdom of those who direct our foreign policy. Peace will depend on their day-to-day decisions.

At this late date, with the wisdom which is so easy after the event and so difficult before the event, we find it possible to trace the tragic series of small decisions which led Europe into the Great War in 1914, and eventually engulfed us and many other nations.

Because in that speech at Chautauqua the President called attention to our success in maintaining the good-neighbor policy in the Western Hemisphere, because we have succeeded in inaugurating a policy of solidarity among the nations of the Western Hemisphere, whether under the aegis of the Monroe Doctrine or under a universal desire in the western world to maintain peace and accord for our mutual advantage and advancement, the mere fact that the President mentioned these things is held up as an indication that we are not minding our own business, that we are taking part in the internal affairs of other nations, and that we are undertaking to pursue a policy which would involve the American Republic in war somewhere in the world. No man has ever more accurately expressed the aims or attitude of the American people.

Now I wish briefly to refer to the address delivered at Chicago when the President of the United States dedicated a bridge, as I recall, in the city of Chicago. After some preliminary remarks, he said, in part:

It is because the people of the United States under modern conditions must, for the sake of their own future, give thought to the rest of the world that I, as the responsible executive head of the Nation, have chosen this great inland city and this gala occasion to speak to you on a subject of definite national importance.

The political situation in the world, which of late has been growing progressively worse, is such as to cause grave concern and anxiety to all the peoples and nations who wish to live in peace and amity with their neighbors.

No intelligent man can deny that statement. No one will gainsay the assertion that between the 14th day of August 1936 and the 5th day of October 1937 conditions in the world were growing progressively worse. I need not refer to outstanding isolated instances; I need not refer to the fact that back in 1931 even before the present administration came into power one of the nations of the Orient started out upon an aggressive policy by the invasion of Manchuria. I need not refer to the fact that under a previous administration the Secretary of State, Mr. Henry L. Stimson, made representations to Great Britain with respect to the attitude of Japan in Manchuria because that attitude violated the Briand-Kellogg Pact and violated the Nine Power Treaty, to which we were all parties. I am not enough of a prophet to foresee what might have happened in the long processes of the aggressive attitudes of other nations if the Government of Great Britain had heeded the advice and warning of the Secretary of State under the Hoover administration.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield. Mr. ASHURST. The able Senator from Kentucky has put his finger upon a most important point. If firm action had then been taken, there might have been a more nearly tranguil world. With pride, every American will remember that our then Secretary of State, Henry L. Stimson, not only cabled but telephoned to Sir John Simon, the British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, directing the attention of the British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to the fact that Japan was violating the Kellogg-Briand Pact. Our Secretary of State, to his credit, urged the British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to cooperate with the American Government in directing attention to Japan's aggression. The British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs for 1 week declined even to answer Mr. Stimson's telephone messages or to communicate with him. Finally he declined to cooperate with the American Government. Japan would not have moved into China if the British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs had at that time agreed with Mr. Stimson. The Senator has called attention to a circumstance that in destiny will be of colossal consequence.

Mr. BARKLEY. I thank the Senator from Arizona for his contribution. Our hindsight in matters of this kind frequently is better than our foresight.

Mr. ASHURT. Mr. President, will the Senator pardon me for a moment more?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield. Mr. ASHURST. When Great Britain declined, the most surprised of all the statesmen of the world at that time were the Japanese statesmen, and, if Great Britain had supported the position of the United States, Japan never would have moved into Manchuria.

Mr. BARKLEY. And, in all likelihood, if the example which Mr. Stimson desired to set with respect to the particular nation had been followed, all the other series of aggressions which have continued from that day until now might never have occurred.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. Stimson, to his great credit and to the credit of the American Government, happened to be a statesman who believed in the sanctity of treaties and in keeping them.

Mr. BARKLEY. I desire to join with the Senator and with my colleague [Mr. Logan] in congratulating Mr. Stimson upon his statesmanship then and now, because in our international affairs, he rises above petty politics and endorses the course which has been pursued and is now being pursued by the present administration dealing with our foreign relations, though disagreeing radically with some of its domestic policies. It is a tribute to the broad-minded Americanism of Henry L. Stimson that he rises above petty considerations in dealing with a world which is almost on the verge of chaos and out of which we hope, in part, to lead it by the policies which we are undertaking to pursue.

Mr. KING. Mr. President-

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. KING. I desire to supplement the statement made by the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST]. When I was in Japan and in China only 2 or 3 years ago, as were other Senators who are now on the floor, I conferred with a large number of Japanese and Chinese. The statement from them was practically unanimous that when Manchuria was invaded Japan halted, particularly after the statement made by Mr. Stimson, as it was expected that the United States and Great Britain would join in remonstrating with Japan because of her violation of the Kellogg-Briand Pact and the Nine Power Treaty. It was stated to me that if Great Britain and the United States had persisted in that course, undoubtedly Japan would have desisted, and, of course, the consequences which have ensued since then would have been averted.

Mr. BARKLEY. The course pursued in that instance and in numerous others that have followed it-and they have followed because of it-have brought about such a world condition that we doubt now whether any treaty is worth the paper on which it is written and whether there is now among the nations of the world any international law which, prior to the World War, at least, we thought nations had risen high enough in the scale of civilization to develop and observe.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President— Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. ASHURST. The able Senator from Kentucky about 20 minutes ago, in the course of his address, diverted for a moment to refer to the fact that within recent years wars are not "declared." Our Constitution grants to Congress the

To declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal . . .

The particular portions of the Constitution regarding the granting of letters of marque and reprisal, of course, are not resorted to, and it is doubtful if any nation in the future will "declare" war. That is a doleful condition to contemplate, for, with all the horrors of war, its devastation and ruthlessness, there was once a sort of chivalry when a nation announced it was getting ready to fight. Chivalrous nations scorned to slay women and children and men not in uniform. Now nations do not "declare" war.

Amidst all the tragedy of the present posture of affairs there is irony that should not be overlooked. It was not very long ago when the Japanese Ambassador to China called at the Chinese chancery and collected a few dollars that happened to be due to his Government. He and the Chinese officials had tea together, decided that there was no war between China and Japan and that, therefore, they could conduct the negotiations, arrange for the payment of the small debt, and indulge in social converse. That is one of the ironies that should be remarked upon, tending to show that in the future war is not going to be formally declared.

Mr. BARKLEY. It is all a part of the situation which resulted in the violation of international law during the World War when vessels were sunk "spurlos versenkt" without warning and without trace, violating a tenet of international law that had existed for a century, that, although a belligerent proposes to destroy the cargo of a ship, even though it be neutral, if it is carrying contraband of war, it is required to give notice and to preserve the lives of the passengers on the ship, without regard to their nationality and bring the ship into a prize court. We have gotten away from those nice distinctions and observation of the proprieties among nations in time of war.

Mr. ASHURST. That is true, to my regret. When the Senator mentions the barbaric conduct of Germany which led us into the World War, I wish to put into juxtaposition with that conduct the action of a great man, Admiral Raphael Semmes, a Confederate commander, during the Civil War. Admiral Semmes captured a large number of Union prisoners. They were so numerous that there was hardly room for them on his ship. He was about to land the prisoners at a certain port, but, to his horror, he discovered that there was yellow fever at that port. He said, "No, I will suffer the inconvenience of a crowded vessel rather than land prisoners where they may contract yellow fever." That was chivalrous conduct on the part of that commander.

Mr. BARKLEY. Oh, yes; I appreciate that situation. Now, to resume my reference to the address of the President-

Mr. BONE. Mr. President-

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Washington. Mr. BONE. As I read the history of the World War, it seems very clear that during that war even the slightest pretense of respect for the maintenance of international law was wholly abandoned; that the nations of the world threw international law into the wastebasket. There was complete disregard for the rules of international law as lawyers and other students understood it for a hundred years.

Mr. BARKLEY. I agree to that statement; but I may say, to the credit of our own Nation, that we never abandoned the tenets of international law. Their abandonment was attempted to be justified by others purely on the ground that self-preservation is really the first law of nature. However, I wish to return to the address delivered by the President. because it has been injected into this debate and an effort has been made to create the impression that the President of the United States has not pursued a consistent policy of peace in his influence and in his statements.

Some 15 years ago-

Said the President at Chicago-

the hopes of mankind for a continuing era of international peace were raised to great heights when more than 60 nations solemnly pledged themselves not to resort to arms in furtherance of their national aims and policies. The high aspirations expressed in the Briand-Kellogg Peace Pact and the hopes for peace thus raised have of late given way to a haunting fear of calamity.

Can anybody doubt that?

The present reign of terror and international lawlessness began a few years ago.

Ought not the President to have said that? Was it not his duty, as the great leader of a great nation, to call the attention of our people to this era of chaos, of international banditry? Was it not his duty to call our people's attention to the fact that there was an outlaw abroad in the world, so that they might prepare themselves spiritually or physically, for any eventualities that might develop because of that situation?

It began through unjustified interference in the internal affairs of other nations or the invasion of alien territory in violation of treaties and has now reached a stage where the very foundations of civilizations are seriously threatened.

Is Franklin D. Roosevelt the only man who has said that? He was one of the first to say it. But read the article of Henry L. Stimson this morning in the Washington Post, and you will find that he says the same thing, and warns his own countrymen in almost the identical language, and certainly in the identical spirit, used by the President in his Chicago address.

The landmarks and traditions which have marked the progress of civilization toward a condition of law, order, and justice are being wiped away.

Without a declaration of war and without warning or justification of any kind, civilians, including women and children, are being ruthlessly murdered with bombs from the air. In times of so-called peace ships are being attacked and sunk by submarines without cause or notice. Nations are fomenting and taking sides in civil warfare in nations that have never done them any harm.

That was undoubtedly true.

Nations claiming freedom for themselves deny it to others. Innocent peoples and nations are being cruelly sacrificed to a greed for power and supremacy which is devoid of all sense of justice and humane consideration.

To paraphrase a recent author-

The President quotes:

"Perhaps we foresee a time when men, exultant in the technique of homicide, will rage so hotly over the world that every precious thing will be in danger, every book and picture harmony, every treasure garnered through two millenniums, the small, the delicate, the defenseless—all will be lost or wrecked or utterly destroyed."

If those things come to pass in other parts of the world, let no one imagine that America will escape, that it may expect mercy, that this Western Hemisphere will not be attacked and that it that this Western Hemisphere will not be attacked and that it will continue tranquilly and peacefully to carry on the ethics and the arts of civilization.

If those days come "there will be no safety by arms, no help from authority, no answer in science. The storm will rage till every flower of culture is trampled and all human beings are leveled in a vast chaos."

If those days are not to come to pass—

Said the President

If we are to have a world in which we can breathe freely and live in amity without fear, the peace-loving nations must make a concerted effort to uphold laws and principles on which alone peace can rest secure.

The peace-loving nations must make a concerted effort in opposi-tion to those violations of treaties and those ignorings of human instincts which today are creating a state of international anarchy and instability from which there is no escape through mere isolation or neutrality.

Those who cherish their freedom and recognize and respect the equal rights of their nations to be free and live in peace must work together for the triumph of law and moral principles in order that peace, justice, and confidence may prevail in the world.

Mr. President, I wish to read further from that address in order to see whether the President has been consistent and whether he is leading us down the road to war.

and whether he is leading us down the road to war.

A bishop wrote me the other day: "It seems to me that something greatly needs to be said in behalf of ordinary humanity against the present practice of carrying the horrors of war to helpless civilians, especially women and children. It may be that such a protest might be regarded by many, who claim to be realists, as futile, but may it not be that the heart of mankind is so filled with horror at the present needless suffering that that force could be mobilized in sufficient volume to lessen such cruelty in the days ahead. Even though it may take 20 years, which God forbid, for civilization to make effective its corporate protest against this barbarism, surely strong voices may hasten the day."

There is a solidarity and interdependence about the modern world, both technically and morally, which makes it impossible for any nation completely to isolate itself from economic and political upheavals in the rest of the world, especially when such upheavals appear to be spreading and not declining. There can be no stability or peace either within nations or between nations except under laws and moral standards adhered to by all. International anarchy destroys every foundation for peace. It jeopardizes either the immediate or the future security of every nation, large or small. It is, therefore, a matter of vital interest and concern to the people of the United States that the sanctity of international treaties and the maintenance of international morality be restored.

of the United States that the sanctity of international treaties and the maintenance of international morality be restored.

The overwhelming majority of the peoples and nations of the world today want to live in peace. They seek the removal of barriers against trade. They want to exert themselves in industry, in agriculture, and in business, that they may increase their wealth through the production of wealth-producing goods rather than striving to produce military planes and bombs and machine guns and cannon for the destruction of human lives and useful property. In those nations of the world which seem to be piling armament on armament for purposes of aggression, and those other nations which fear acts of aggression against them and their security, a very high proportion of their national income is being spent directly for armaments. It runs from 30 to as high as 50 percent. The proportion that we in the United States spend is far less—11 or 12 percent.

How happy we are that the circumstances of the moment permit us to put our money into bridges and boulevards, dams and reforestation, the conservation of our soil, and many other kinds of useful works rather than into huge standing armies and vast supplies of implements of war.

implements of war

implements of war.

I am compelled and you are compelled, nevertheless, to look ahead. The peace, the freedom, and the security of 90 percent of the population of the world is being jeopardized by the remaining 10 percent who are threatening a break-down of all international order and law. Surely the 90 percent who want to live in peace under law and in accordance with moral standards that have received almost universal acceptance through the centuries can and must find some way to make their will prevail.

The situation is definitely of universal concern. The questions involved relate not merely to violations of specific provisions of particular treaties; they are questions of war and of peace, of international law and especially of principles of humanity. It is true that they involve definite violations of agreements, and especially of the Covenant of the League of Nations, the Briand-Kellogg pact and the Nine Power Treaty. But they also involve problems of world economy, world security, and world humanity.

It is true that the moral consciousness of the world must recognize the importance of removing injustices and well-founded grievnize the importance of removing injustices and well-founded grievances; but at the same time it must be aroused to the cardinal necessity of honoring sanctity of treaties, of respecting the rights and libertles of others, and of putting an end to acts of international aggression.

It seems to be unfortunately true that the epidemic of world lawlessness is spreading.

When an epidemic of physical disease starts to spread, the community approves and joins in a quarantine of the patients in order to protect the health of the community against the spread of the

It is my determination to pursue a policy of peace and to adopt every practicable measure to avoid involvement in war. It ought to be inconceivable that in this modern era, and in the face of experience, any nation could be so foolish and ruthless as to run the risk of plunging the whole world into war by invading and violating in contravention of solemn treaties, the territory of other nations that have done them no real harm and which are too weak to protect themselves adequately. Yet the peace of the world and the welfare and security of every nation is today being threatened by that very thing.

threatened by that very thing.

No nation which refuses to exercise forbearance and to respect the freedom and rights of others can long remain strong and retain the confidence and respect of other nations. No nation ever loses its dignity of good standing by conciliating its differences, and by exercising great patience with, and consideration for, the rights of other nations.

War is a contagion, whether it be declared or undeclared. It can engulf states and peoples remote from the original scene of hostilities. We are determined to keep out of war, yet we cannot insure ourselves against the disastrous effects of war and the dangers of involvement. We are adopting such measures as will minimize our risk of involvement but we cannot have complete protection in a world of disorder in which confidence and security have broken down.

If civilization is to survive, the principles of the Prince of Peace must be restored. Shattered trust between nations must be

Most important of all, the will for peace on the part of peace-loving nations must express itself to the end that nations that may be tempted to violate their agreements and the rights of others will desist from such a cause. There must be positive endeavors to preserve peace.

America hates war. America hopes for peace. Therefore America actively engages in the search for peace.

The President goes on to compare the situation to an epidemic; and then he says, by way of analogy-whether or not it was a figure of speech I do not know-that where there is an epidemic, those who are afflicted with it or by it are quarantined, in order that the disease may not spread.

Members of the Senate and our fellow-citizens may quibble as they wish over the use of the word "quarantine." have always understood it to mean that the person afflicted with an epidemic disease would be isolated in a sense from the community, so that the disease would not spread to others. I have never understood it to mean that those who desire to protect themselves from epidemic will go out and murder the man, woman, or child who happens to be afflicted with a contagious disease. I think, if I might interpret the President's words, he had in mind an effort to insulate or protect our country, our hemisphere, the peace-loving nations of the world, from the epidemic of lawlessness and unprovoked murder which he was discussing in his address in the city of Chicago.

Mr. President, I do not intend to quote from it, but only to refer to the annual message of the President to the Congress of the United States delivered on the 4th day of last January, which fits into the policy that he announced in Chautauqua, the policy that he announced on the 4th of March, 1933, the policy that he announced in Chicago in 1937, and his foreign policy epitomized in the excellent statement he gave out to the press only a few weeks ago.

What is that policy?

On the 22nd day of February we heard read the great and immortal address of George Washington, in which he counseled us against entangling alliances. Most of us quote Washington and most of us quote Jefferson as the devil quotes the Bible for his own purposes, and frequently leaves out the most significant quotations in the context of that which we desire to use. Jefferson is frequently quoted as having remarked that "that government is best that governs least," without any regard to the context of what Jefferson was talking about. He was talking about an ideal society in which all men recognize the rights of all other men, and said that in such a society the least government is the best government, because it inflicts its orders and its regulations in the smallest possible degree upon the people over whom that government reigns. But in one of his great letters, written in 1824 or 1825, only a year or two prior to his death, Jefferson said he believed that all constitutions ought to be changed every 20 years; that there ought to be automatic provisions in them for their change, because he said no dead generation has any right to bind a living generation. Nobody ever quotes that from Jefferson.

In his Farewell Address, George Washington counseled us against permanent entangling alliances, and then almost in the same breath said we may rely upon temporary alliances in particular emergencies for the protection of the rights of the United States.

Mr. President, so far as I recall, we have never had an entangling alliance with any nation, either permanent or When, in response to the call of liberty and justice, in 1898 we fought the Spanish-American War, although the immediate occasion for the declaration of war was the blowing up of the battleship Maine in the harbor of Habana, fundamentally that situation arose out of the desire of the American people to abolish a festering sore of brutality and iniquity and despotism in the Western Hemisphere; but there was no alliance, either before, during, or after that war.

There was no alliance with Cuba. There was no alliance with any South or Central American nation. There was no alliance with the Philippine Islands. There was no alliance in the World War; but, if there had been, it would not have been in violation of the Farewell Address of George Washington, because, while inveighing against permanent alliances and giving the reasons therefor, he in effect counseled temporary alliances whenever the circumstances might justify them, growing out of conditions that might exist at the time. But in spite of the fact that General Washington apparently counseled temporary alliances, there has never been even a temporary alliance between the United States and any other nation that bound us to engage in armed conflict, to go to war to protect them or to protect anybody else, or even ourselves. We entered into the World War as the result of conditions that had accumulated for 21/2 years. We were associated with the Allies in the prosecution of that war; but there was no alliance, either openly or secretly, that took us into that war, or bound us by the terms of its conclusion.

We asserted our own independence as a nation when the war had concluded. Whether wisely or unwisely, we need not now debate, we asserted our independence in the matter of the solution of the world problems which came as a result of that war, and finally entered into a separate treaty with Germany and Austria in the settlement of the war.

What is our foreign policy, Mr. President? First, the President said, "We are against any entangling alliances, obviously." Of course we are. We have always been. We have never entered into one. We are not a party to any entangling alliance today, and I daresay that whatever may be the exigencies of our defense in the future, whatever may be the requirements of our National Government to protect not only our people and our liberty and our traditions, but whatever activities we may be called upon to indulge in to protect the Monroe Doctrine, or all the things that are associated with the Monroe Doctrine, it will not be done as the result of any alliance between our Nation and any other nation, but will be done in the protection of our interests, will be done in the protection of our civilization, will be done in carrying out the theory of the Monroe Doctrine, that any effort on the part of any European-or, I might add, Asiatic-nation to gain a foothold in the Western Hemisphere would be regarded as an unfriendly act by the United States. Of course we are opposed to entangling alliances, and the President is opposed to them.

No. 2. "We are in favor of the maintenance of world trade for all nations, including ourselves."

Mr. President, I need not go into any detail in discussing the desire for world trade. I need not call the attention of the Senate and of the country to the indispensability of international trade. There has never been a great nation, commercial or military, which did not have its ships plying the Seven Seas carrying to the waiting hungry, naked, and wanting nations of the world the products of its labor in field and factory.

I need not call attention to the fact that international law has so sanctioned international trade that even in time of war it protects trade carried by the ships of one nation to another nation, subject to certain reservations with respect to contraband of war, and search and seizure of ships, in order to prevent the enemy from obtaining supplies.

I need not expatiate upon the desire of this administration to bring about an increase in world trade. I need not refer to the fact that a decade ago, almost by our own example, barriers were erected around nations declaring themselves self-sufficient, announcing to mankind that they would neither sell nor buy, that they were a land unto themselves, and did not need their neighbors. I need not refer to the disaster which came over the world as a result of that policy, which was followed by other nations after the example had been set by one of the greatest nations in the world.

I need not refer to the fact that our great Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, who will go down in history as one of the great Secretaries of State of the American Republic, has devoted himself intelligently and patriotically to lowering some of these artificial barriers, so that the products of mankind may find distribution among those who need them and do not have them. Of course, we believe in international trade.

No. 3. "We are in complete sympathy with every effort made to reduce or limit armaments."

Can anyone deny that? Can anyone deny that we took the initiative soon after the World War, through our Secretary of State, now the great Chief Justice of the United States, to assemble here in Washington a conclave representing the great nations of the world in an effort to relieve the tax-burdened men and women of the world of taxation, and the burdens of armaments, in order that we might escape from the incentive or the inducement to war? And when that conclave had concluded its deliberations and had entered into a treaty providing for the 5-5-3 ratio as between the United States, England, Japan, and others, we rejoiced in the belief, we were spurred on with the hope, that, after all, there had come a reversion in the trend of international relationships, and that the suffering men and women of the world who are not responsible for war or for its disasters or its hazards or its catastrophes might, after a while, lift their bended backs and look the sun in the face, and feel that, after all, civilization and Christianity had come to their relief in lifting these burdens from their shoulders. How we rejoiced in the consummation of that treaty. Can anyone deny or doubt that it has been our policy from the beginning to encourage the limitation of armaments?

Then, when the Nine Power Treaty was entered into, and when, under the leadership of a great French statesman, Aristide Briand, and another great American Secretary of State, Mr. Frank B. Kellogg, nearly all the nations of the world entered into an agreement to abolish war as a means of advancing their national policy, those of us who love peace and hate war, those of us who desire to see the inventive genius of mankind converged upon the solution of social and economic problems, those of us who desire to take away the slavery from children in future generations who are in advance committed to a policy which may result in war, again shouted our hosannas and our hallelujahs across the world, which recognized the futility of war, because it had entered into an agreement encompassing nearly all the nations of mankind to abolish war as a means of national policy. No one can deny that it has been our policy to advocate limitation of armaments.

No. 4. Said the President-

As a nation, as American people, we are sympathetic with the peaceful maintenance of political, economic, and social independence of all nations in the world.

No one can deny that statement. No one can controvert the assertion that that is our policy, and has always been our policy, though at times in the past historians have criticized the course of the American Republic in marching across the Western Hemisphere and taking into its arms the body of the midcontinent between the two oceans. When the War with Spain was over, there were those in our country who announced that they were in favor of a policy which would take us on to Panama, on to Mexico, on to Central America, and when the Panama Canal had been completed there were important people in this country who advocated our taking every foot of land between here and Panama, in order that there might never be any occasion for any foreign nation to set foot upon the part of America which might be contiguous to the Panama Canal.

Happily we have followed no such policy; happily we do not believe in any such policy, and happily there is not a foot of land in the Western Hemisphere which we desire from any nation. Yet, as the Senator from Idaho stated a few days ago, the Monroe Doctrine is a doctrine which was instigated and inspired by an enlightened selfishness.

I do not believe there is any considerable body of American sentiment which would be in favor of the abandonment of the Monroe Doctrine, for if in 1823 the obtaining of a foothold by any other nation in the Western Hemisphere could have been regarded as an unfriendly act on the part of that nation toward the United States, certainly today it would be more dangerous than it was 116 years ago for any such nation to obtain a foothold in the continent of America.

So, Mr. President, I do not think it is necessary for us meticulously to examine the statements of our Government in order to prove that our foreign policy is a policy inspired by the desire for peace, and yet a policy inspired by the desire to protect and defend democracy, under which we have lived for 150 years, for the inauguration of which our ancestors did not fear to fight, and for the preservation of which our people for 150 years have been willing to make whatever sacrifice might be necessary not only to preserve democracy for ourselves, but to advance it among the people of the world.

I happened to be reading a day or so ago a book written by the very able senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. Vanden-Berg]. He has written two very excellent books on Alexander Hamilton, and one of these books is entitled "If Hamilton Were Here Today." I have marked a passage or two in the book which emphasize what I am trying to say with respect to our foreign policy.

As for the reciprocal elements of independence, this same Federalist—

He was quoting from the Federalist-sounded clarion call, not only to the young Republic, but to all generations that should inherit the benefits of unentangled freedom.

Then he quotes Alexander Hamilton:

Let Americans disdain to be the instruments of European greatness. Let the Thirteen States, bound together in a strict and indissoluble union, concur in erecting one great American system, superior to the control of all trans-Atlantic force or influence, and able to dictate the terms of the connection between the Old and the New World.

The Senator from Michigan uses the quotation as a basis for the assertion that the Monroe Doctrine was in fact the doctrine of Alexander Hamilton, and that later on James Monroe put it into language and emphasized it in the declaration which he made, which has come down to us as the Monroe Doctrine.

Then says the Senator:

One of the major reasons which the Federalist unremittingly urged for adequate military and naval defenses was the desirability of possessing a national strength equal to these national ideals, to the end that our obvious power should cause our independence of foreign turmoil and our neutrality in the midst of it, be acknowledged and thus to be unquestioned and pacifically respected.

Quoting again from Alexander Hamilton:

The rights of neutrality will only be respected when they are defended by an adequate power. A nation, despicable by its weakness, forfeits even the privilege of being neutral. * * * Our commerce would be a prey to the wanton intermeddling of all nations at war with each other; who, having nothing to fear from us, would with little scruple or remorse, supply their wants by depredations on our property as often as it fell in their way. Some of these observations

Said Senator Vandenberg in his excellent book-

Let it be parenthetically said, sound as though written in the midst of our vain efforts to maintain early neutrality during the recent World War. We do not discuss the question whether this early neutrality was right; we recall merely that it was impossible—largely for the reason of an unpreparedness which The Federalist warned would make neutrality impossible. "Should a war be the result of the precarious situation of European affairs—

Again quoting Hamilton-

And all the unruly passions attending it be let loose on the ocean, our escape from insults and depredations, not only on that element, but every part of the others bordering on it, will be truly miraculous. ulous.

Quoting again from Hamilton-

A cloud has been for some time hanging over the European world.

This was language uttered by Alexander Hamilton nearly 150 years ago, and yet it can be appropriately quoted today. Listen to what Hamilton said:

A cloud has been for some time hanging over the European world. If it should break forth into a storm, who can insure us that in its progress a part of its fury would not be spent upon us? No reasonable man would hastily pronounce that we are out of its reach.

The Senator from Michigan stated that what Hamilton said was true in 1914. It was true in 1923 when this book was written, and it is true in 1939.

I read further from the book of the Senator from Michigan:

Hamilton believed in looking these facts fearlessly in the face Hamilton believed in looking these facts fearlessly in the face—a habit too little maintained, unfortunately, in subsequent and recent eras of uncertainty, expediency, and drift. Can there be any mistake in deductions assuming to conclude what he would say and do if he were here today? He believed in an intelligently self-reliant Americanism, as independent abroad as it is at home. He believed in scrupulously denying ourselves to any entanglements not dictated by our own inclinations and welfare. In determining what our welfare is, he did not hesitate to consider situations in Europe and assess their possible relationship to our own posture. His allegiance stopped at the American shoreline; but his vision roamed the world. He was not the astigmatized isolationist who fools himself into thinking that America is wholly immune to the effects of eruption, economic or political, in wholly immune to the effects of eruption, economic or political, in other continents.

Neither was he the anesthetized internationalist who dreams himself into the notion that America must make common lot with all self into the notion that America must make common lot with all the uneasy, quarrelsome—and frequently imperialistic—powers on earth. His unremitting effort, if he were here today, would be to determine the extent to which American economic welfare is contingent upon Old World vicissitudes, and then to serve this economic need as a matter of enlightened national selfishness. But his unswerving counsels would compromise with no program seeking to the American destiny into the political fates of the Old World, or to make us party, directly or indirectly, to any compelling moral obligations that involve transoceanic partnerships. He would say again that, as Europe should keep out of America, so America should keep out of Europe unless Americanism itself is to America should keep out of Europe unless Americanism itself is to America should keep out of Europe unless Americanism itself is to be served by voluntary exceptions to this age-old rule. His "League of Nations" primarily would be Pan American, not intercontinental. Insofar as "isolation" implied American immunity to foreign contagions, Hamilton was its devotee and advocate. He was everlastingly wedded to that idea that the indivisible fidelity of American citizens should inure exclusively to the land of the Stars and Stripes. There were no hyphens in his heart or soul. "We are laboring hard to establish in this country principles more and more national," he wrote, "and free from all foreign ingredients, so that we may be neither 'Greeks nor Trojans,' but truly Americans." If he were here today, he would endorse, reecho, and promote every doctrine of this character which found its most recent and dynamic exponent in the late lamented its most recent and dynamic exponent in the late lamented Theodore Roosevelt.

But if Hamilton were here to day he would urge with all the earnestness at his command that America take nothing for granted in these respects; in other words, that she constantly maintain herself on a preparedness basis of adequate national defense—adequate, that is, in ratio, reduced or otherwise, with the armaments of other powers. Next to its persistent admonitions against the danger of multiphased faction. The Federalist had more to say of menace on this score of idealistic and impractical pacifism than of any other single subject. "Let us recollect that peace or war will not always be left to our own option; that, however moderate or unambitious we may be, we cannot count upon the moderation, we cannot hope to extinguish the ambitions of others. * * To judge from the history of mankind, we shall be compelled to conclude that the fiery and destructive passions of war reign in the human breast with much more powerful sway than the mild and beneficent sentiments of peace; and that to than the mild and beneficent sentiments of peace; and that to model our political systems upon speculations of lasting tranquility is to calculate on the weaker springs of the human character."

How bitterly true we found all that to be, in the wake of the Lustratia's destruction! "If a Federal Constitution could chain the ambition or set bounds to the exertions of all other nations, the ambition or set bounds to the exertions of all other nations, then indeed might it prudently chain the discretion of its own government, and set bounds to the exertions for its own safety * * . The means of security can only be regulated by the means and the danger of attack." In other words, we must avoid the menace of unshared idealism—"the paradox of perpetual peace." "The steady operations of war against a regular and disciplined army can only successfully be conducted by a force ciplined army can only successfully be conducted by a force of the same kind." We learned that lesson all over again within the last bloody decade. God only knows how many thousand men the last bloody decade. God only knows how many thousand men we sacrificed to the murderous notion that a good soldier needs nothing more than a willing heart.

This theory of resting American defense upon the untrained fidelities of "a million men springing to arms overnight" is the treachery of nonsense. "The facts which, from our own experience, forbid a reliance of this kind, are too recent to permit us to be the dupes of such a suggestion." Adequate national defense, legitimately proportioned to the defenses of other world powers, continues to be a necessity which Hamilton would preach—to put and keep the United States "in such a situation as, instead of inviting war, will tend to repress and discourage it." Then will foreign powers "be much more disposed to cultivate our friendship than to provoke our resentment" and, let it be added, much more than to provoke our resentment" and, let it be added, much more disposed to follow us in concerts that seek world-wide limitations upon these armaments which otherwise we are in position dominantly to use against them.

I should like to have my colleagues bear in mind that what I have quoted was written by Alexander Hamilton nearly 150 years ago, before a steam engine puffed its way on the first railroad between Baltimore and the city of Washington. That announcement by Alexander Hamilton was made decades before the invention of steam engines as a means of propulsion. It was written before the Atlantic cable was laid between the American and European Continents. It was made before the discovery of electricity. It was made before the wireless was ever thought of. It was made before the telegraph was invented, before the telephone was invented. It was made almost a century before the invention and perfection of the automobile. It was made a century before wireless, telegraph, and radio were thought of. It was made a century before the airplane came into play as a part of national defense and national aggression.

Hamilton's statement came in the "horse-and-buggy days" in all their pristine beauty, if there was such a thing. We now, in our imagination, look upon the beautiful old days when the stagecoach carried Washington, Jefferson, and Hamilton and all their contemporaries from one place to another, and if what Hamilton said a century and a half ago were true, when they did not have our present means of communication, when they did not have our present means of transportation, when it took 5 or 6 weeks to travel from one side of the ocean to the other, how much more true is it today, when time has been eliminated and space has been obliterated by the inventions of modern science, and when all nations have been drawn into infinitely closer relationships.

Mr. President, it is not our desire to stick our noses in other people's business, but what is our business and what is other people's business?

No straight line can be drawn by government, nor can we by the passage of any law or by proclamation make certain that always in the years to come all that is on one side of that line would be our business and all that is on the other side will be the other nation's business. For 150 years we have been devoted to democracy. For 150 years we have been devoted to self-government. We have developed a civilization which we are proud to believe justifies and emphasizes the right of man to govern himself, to protect his rights wherever those rights may be jeopardized. We have no desire to send a single soldier to the shores of Europe or to the shores of Asia to mingle in other Nation's internal affairs, and I dare say that we will not do so. But when by the confluence of influences and the convergence of authority and tendencies our own democracy, our civilization, not only within the bounds of the United States, but within the Western Hemisphere, are endangered, the American people are not so cowardly or supine as to take no note of those circumstances, and to defend the rights and traditions of our people and our Nation.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. King in the chair). Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from Vermont?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. I am moved to ask the Senator from Kentucky if we ought not to consider how far we are interested in affairs clear across the Pacific Ocean, if we stop to remember that there we have a United States Court for China, a part of the ninth circuit of the United States. We also have a bar association there, of which I happen to be a member. In addition to that we have the mixed courts before which American citizens have the right to appear if they are summoned as defendants. We are actively and physically represented in the spiritual and educational development of China, and for decades we have been a leader of all the great treaty powers of the world in undertaking to protect the territorial integrity and the governmental sovereignty of that great and helpless country.

For my part I appreciate the distinguished remarks of the Senator from Kentucky, because they bear directly on that situation in the Orient which in part impels me to support that program, which includes the development of Guam among the other preparations for national defense.

Mr. BARKLEY. I thank the Senator from Vermont, I do not wish at this time to enter into a discussion of Guam, because it is not in the pending bill, but later on I shall reserve the right to discuss that subject, and I will say to the Senator that I am in complete sympathy with the suggestion which he makes.

During all our national history our people have been meticulous in the defense and in the protection of our citizens and their rights. I believe that now, more than ever before, by reason of our foreign policy we are enjoying a greater degree of respect among the nations than ever before, not only in the western hemisphere but all over the world, with the possible exception of those who do not believe in our form of government, who do not believe in democracy, who talk about parliaments and congresses and legislatures as assemblages of gabbling geese, thus showing their disrespect for our process of government. I do not believe that the time has come in the history of America when we will abandon the policies which we have advocated and followed for a century and a half in protecting every legitimate right of the American people which they have been ready to believe they would enjoy under the right of international law.

We do not desire to enter into the internal affairs of the other nations. But Mr. President, what is the situation in the world? We are considering a bill to give our Army 6,000 planes. We are told on what I believe is reliable authority that one of the nations of Europe now has more than 10,000 planes, and that another one closely associated with it has 5,000 planes, making between those two nations alone a total of 15,000 airplanes. And we are told that at Munich Mr. Hitler told Mr. Chamberlain that unless England capitulated and unless France capitulated, Germany would send 100 airplanes every hour for 24 hours to bombard London. And before that time in England people were already digging subterranean shelters inside of London and throughout England to protect themselves.

I do not know whether Mr. Hitler delivered such an ultimatum as that to Mr. Chamberlain or not, but I do know that it is the general opinion that Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Daladier retreated and yielded because of the fear that Mr. Hitler would carry out such a threat as that. At least it is believed to have had an important influence in the events transpiring at Munich.

Mr. President, suppose such a threat were carried out. Suppose that airplanes were bombing the city of London and destroying millions of innocent civilians. Suppose that in that bombardment the American Embassy should be destroyed, and that the American Ambassador and American citizens housed in the American Embassy should be victims. Suppose the same thing should occur in the city of Paris, and the city of Paris were destroyed by airplanes, and the American Embassy there were destroyed, and the American Ambassador and American citizens who were there were victims. Does anybody doubt that the spirit of the American people would rise, just as it rose when the Maine was destroyed in the harbor of Habana? Does anybody doubt it?

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. I can understand the attitude of our country with respect to our ambassadors; but suppose that France and Italy, as now seems possible, should get into a conflict with reference to Corsica or Tunisia, the islands about which they are now in controversy. Does the Senator think that the spirit of the American people would rise to insist that we go over there and see that France succeeds in retaining her territory?

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not; and I have said in previous remarks that I do not think the American people would get worked up over a situation of that kind. That is quite a different matter from having some foreign nation deliberately and in cold blood murder American citizens. The point that I am making is not necessarily that we ought to have an ambassador in London or in Paris, but that if the things I have been describing should transpire, the American people will not be indifferent to them.

Mr. BORAH. Certainly not, Mr. President.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator that I would not advocate, and I do not believe that anybody in any responsible position in this Government would advocate, sending an Army or Navy into the Mediterranean Sea in order to protect Corsica or Tunisia, or any other property belonging to Italy or France, or any country on the Mediterranean. However, if the progress of such a conflict resulted in the destruction of France or England, and in the negotiation of a treaty of settlement the successful nation, as a part of the treaty, should demand and obtain the island of Trinidad, or Jamaica, or any other islands belonging to England or France in the route of our trade or our national defense, or of our hemisphere defense in the neighborhood of the Panama Canal, does not the Senator think that under the theory of the Monroe Doctrine we could not ignore such a conclusion as the result of a successful war by an aggressor nation in

Mr. BORAH. I agree with the Senator. If this debate is all over the question of whether or not the United States shall protect its citizens in their rights, and the interests and rights of the United States, then I can see that there is very little difference, if any, between us. Of course, it has been the principle of this Government, and of every government worthy of respect, to protect the rights of its citizens, wherever those rights might be assailed. That, I presume, we will always do and ought always be prepared to do. However, that is not the matter about which I am concerned. I am concerned about this Government's furnishing military forces to defend the supposed rights of the citizens or the rights of other governments.

Mr. BARKLEY. I realize that, if the Senator will permit me. However, that very question has been raised in the debate which has been in progress during the consideration of this bill. I think that in preparing ourselves for defense we must not only take account of the probabilities, but of the possibilities, because when things are transpiring which not only endanger our safety in continental United States, but the rights and liberties of American citizens wherever they are enjoyed under the tenets of international law, which we have always observed, if we are to take seriously our obligation to protect the Monroe Doctrine, as a selfish matter, as the Senator so aptly said the other day, because it is a doctrine of enlightened selfishness, we have to take into account not only the probabilities, but the possibilities. We must take into account the possibilities of world chaos as they now exist, 150 years after the wise words of the founder of the party to which those on the other side of the aisle pay and owe allegiance. It seems to me that the bill now under consideration goes no further than we ought to go in preserving our readiness to protect our country, our citizens, and our liberty.

So far from trying to drag us into war, I believe it has been the policy and is the policy of our President, our Secretary of State, and our entire Government, to pursue a course which will not only preserve peace in the Western Hemisphere, but may make some contribution to the preservation of peace in other parts of the world.

So far as I am concerned, I am proud of the standing our country enjoys among the nations of the western world. I am proud of the respect that it enjoys among the libertyloving nations of the world; I am not one of those who would tear to shreds the consistent policy which has been followed for the past 6 years, and even under prior administrations, in order to emphasize and enforce the doctrines of peace, democracy, and liberty.

I trust that not an airship we are providing for today will ever be necessary in armed conflict. I trust that not a battleship or cruiser or submarine which we provided for in the bill we passed a year ago will ever be necessary in armed conflict, either in the Western Hemisphere or any other part of the world. However, if they are necessary, I want them to be ready. As a nation, I want us to be in the attitude so beautifully described in the Bible:

Watch therefore; for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh.

I want us, as a nation, to keep our lamps trimmed and burning, for we know not when the enemy will come, nor from what quarter he may appear. This democracy of ours, this liberty of ours, is worth defending whenever it is in danger. It is worth bequeathing to our children for a thousand generations. Let us not be afraid to defend it or bequeath it.

Mr. NEELY obtained the floor.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, will the Senator be good enough to yield to me?

Mr. NEELY. I yield. Mr. JOHNSON of California. I wish to congratulate the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] upon the very eloquent address he has just delivered. He has spoken long and well. To most of it I can subscribe, and to most of it I do subscribe.

However, Mr. President, I still ask, What is the foreign policy of the United States? I have been unable to learn from the speech of the Senator from Kentucky what that foreign policy is.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, war is the bankrupter of nations, the blight of civilization, the scourge of Christianity, and the curse of the human race. Next in wickedness to the hideous crime of war is that of burdening taxpayers with the cost of preparing for military aggression.

The American people hate war. Correlatively they love They love it with an ardor second only to that with which they love their honor, their country, and their God. In the temple of peace Americans habitually worship, in the vineyard of peace they diligently labor, to the Prince of Peace they fervently pour out their hearts in prayer. They have unanimously and irrevocably determined that they will never go to war, except in defense of their territory, their institutions, their liberty, or their life.

The bill before the Senate is not antagonistic to these sentiments. Its object is not preparation for war to be waged by us against others, but indispensable preparation to defend ourselves against war which others may wantonly wage against us.

Unhappily no one knows or even pretends to know the exact number of military airplanes this country must procure in order to attain what Horace calls the "golden mean between the little and the great." In the light of worldwide unrest and recent and continuing European and Asiatic aggression, no one definitely knows whether we need 600 or 6,000 additional planes. But practically all wellinformed and solicitous American officials believe that we need more than we have. If this country does not need a greater air force than it now possesses, a city does not need a fire department when it is filled with the flames of its own combustion and shrouded with the smoke of its own conflagration.

Not a Member of the Senate would, for a moment, sympathetically consider a proposal that the United States manufacture a single airplane, build a single battleship, or cast a single cannon for this Government to use in an aggressive war against any nation on earth. We know and the world knows that the people of the United States covet no other nation's territory; that they are jealous of no other nation's success; that they intend to interfere with no other nation's internal affairs. Therefore, whatever military preparations may be made by the United States should be understood to be for the sole purpose of defense against overt acts of aggression by warlike countries that are situated beyond the

A friendly nation to the north of us: friendly nations to the south of us; a wide ocean on our east, and a wider one on our west make it possible for us to provide reasonable security for ourselves with comparatively moderate expenditures for defense.

Today no power in the Eastern Hemisphere has airplanes with which it could successfully attack us from bases within its own boundaries. But in spite of the fact that the highly developed, efficient air forces of certain European nations cannot, with their most modern instrumentalities, at present, raid our coastal cities without having first established operating bases near our shores, we have no assurance that rapidly, constantly, and persistently advancing inventive genius may not, overnight, make it possible for bombing planes to make round trip, nonstop, flights from Europe or Japan to America, or even around the world.

Experience teaches that this achievement in the near future should be prudently expected and not be imprudently ridiculed as a phantom of fear, or a spector of the imagination.

The debate has revealed the fact that some believe our national good conduct alone will render us immune from attacks by other countries. "For love of grace" let no one

"lay that flattering unction" to his soul.

Look at China-one of the most pacific countries in the world. She has been as free from offense against Japan as the lamb in the fable was innocent of injury to the quarrelsome wolf by which it was devoured. Yet Japan carved Manchukuo from the bleeding side of China and made of it a puppet state which she now rules as completely as she rules her own. And Japan, not content with this unprovoked act of monstrous injustice, has ruthlessly overrun China, bombed her cities, destroyed her railroads, laid waste her fields, seized vast areas of her territory, and murdered untold thousands of her unoffending people, including innocent babes in arms.

Look at Ethiopa. A few years ago it was at peace with all mankind. From motives of greed which manifest themselves with every throb of a rapacious dictator's heart, Mussolini, with no more right to Ethiopia than Japan has to China, laid this African country waste with fire and sword, and after slaughtering countless multitudes of the helpless inhabitants annexed it by force of arms to the new Roman Empire, over which he imperiously rules.

Look at Austria and Czechoslovakia. Until recently they were proud, independent, flourishing nations. Without a shadow of justification, Hitler annihilated the last vestige of the independence of the one, merged it with the German dictatorship, and with mailed fists, blood-curdling threats, and the disgraceful assent of England and France pusillanimously given, wrested from the other its most valuable territory and possessions, and millions of the Czechs are now subject to the most boisterous, blood-thirsty, and dangerous dictator on

But Hitler is not satisfied. His covetous eyes are looking to the Ukraine which he will doubtless sooner or later attempt to seize. A few days ago his field marshal-Goeringaccording to the reliable Associated Press, declared, "The German air force is the terror of our enemies and we are determined to keep it that way." In other words, the games of blackmail and terrorization, of which Hitler and Mussolini are consummate masters, are to be played on and on and onregardless of the rights or the protests of the rest of the Mussolini, as everyone knows, is now attempting to force France to surrender much of her African territory to him. Unless the French grant their own property to Mussolini as generously as they helped to give that of Czechoslovakia to Hitler, they will probably be attacked by Italy and a vast army of Italian soldiers will, in that event, be conveniently transferred from their drill ground in recently conquered Spanish territory to new battle lines in Africa and France.

And is anyone so blind that he cannot see, so deaf that he cannot hear, or so optimistic that he cannot understand that after the Mikado has absorbed all of China, and perhaps the rest of Asia, and Hitler and Mussolini have swallowed up Africa and parceled Europe between themselves they will, with the inexhaustible resources extorted from the nations they have conquered, attempt to do to America precisely what they have done to every country that has fallen before their infamous aggression?

And the day or the hour that this calamity may come upon us no man knows. But we should learn from the Master's parable of the fig tree:

When his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh: So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the doors. Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled.

In present circumstances we should learn another parable that of the 10 virgins, of whom 5 were wise and 5 were foolish. The foolish ones failed to prepare themselves for a most important event. They failed to provide oil for their lamps. And at midnight the cry was heard, "Behold, the bridegroom cometh. Go ye forth to meet him." And the foolish virgins, because of their failure to make proper preparation, discovered at the critical moment that they were in the dark; that the door of the marriage chamber was shut, and they could not get in. Let us emulate the wisdom of the wise and prepare to live in peace, and not repeat the folly of the foolish and die in despair.

Some of the opponents of the bill have reminded us of Washington's admonition against this country's entering into entangling alliances "with any portion of the foreign world." We remind them that Washington also said, "To be prepared for war is one of the most effectual means of preserving peace."

Since our highest ambition is to preserve the peace of this country, we should be reasonably prepared to defend it in the air, and that is as far as the pending bill will enable us to go.

The experts of our Army, in whose knowledge of military affairs the most of us have entire confidence, testify, in effect, that the Nation's safety demands all the airplanes authorized by the measure before us. In spite of my abhorrence of war and my antipathy to every expenditure for unnecessary defense, my conscience, my judgment, and my duty admonish me to vote for the protection provided by the bill. This admonition will not be ignored.

This country is the last great stronghold of democratic government. Under Washington's leadership our forefathers struggled and suffered and sacrificed and died to obtain the beneficent form of government which we enjoy as the most precious heritage ever bequeathed to man.

The patriotic descendants of those who purchased liberty for us with their blood will defend that liberty against the world, the flesh, and all the hosts of evil that may be launched against it until the end of time.

As we pass this defensive measure today, we solemnly warn all land-grabbing dictators, international gunmen, and militaristic racketeers that, regardless of our love of peace, if they and their minions ever attempt to set invading feet on American soil, they will be met at the water's edge by an innumerable and invincible host of adequately prepared defenders with banners bearing the minatory inscription, "All hope abandon ye who enter here." And over that patriotic host will brood the immortal spirit of every heroic American general and admiral from George Washington and John Paul

Jones to John J. Pershing and Dewey of deathless fame. And the descendants of all the heroes of Lexington and Concord and Bunker Hill will be there; and the posterity of all those who fought with Perry on Lake Erie and "Old Hickory" Jackson at New Orleans will be there; and all the descendants of the survivors of Gettysburg and Chickamauga, and of those who marched with Sheridan at Winchester, and stood with Stonewall Jackson at the second Battle of Manassas will be there; and the survivors of Manila and their sons and the veterans who transmuted apparent defeat into decisive victory for the Allies on the bloody fields of France-they, with millions and millions of others, will all-all be there. And, if necessary, all will defend to the last drop of their precious blood America's soil, her people, and her absolute freedom of speech and press and assemblage and worship and everlasting immunity from persecution because of race or color or religious belief. And everyone who shall, unfortunately, fall in this righteous defense, in this noble struggle, in this glorious cause will say with his latest breath, in the language of the immortal Nathan Hale: "I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country."

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ASHURST in the chair). Does the Senator from West Virginia yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. NEELY. I yield to the Senator, and also yield the

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, I was just wondering if the Senator had declared war.

Mr. NEELY. No, Mr. President; but if I were to declare war it would be first against those in this country who are encouraging the Hitlers and Mussolinis to believe that there is a division of sentiment among us concerning our intention to protect this Nation to our last dollar and our last man against all foreign aggression regardless of the country or the combination of countries from which it may come.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar].

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I desire to perfect my amendment, and I send to the desk a copy of it, so that it may be read by the clerk. After "$300,000,000" it has been suggested that I add the words "in addition to the amounts allowed by existing authorizations."

I should like to have the amendment, as modified, stated. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment presented by the Senator from Tennessee as modified by him.

The Legislative Clerk. On page 2, line 3, after the word "thereof", it is proposed to insert a semicolon and the words "there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for such purposes an amount not exceeding $300,000,000 in addition to the amounts allowed by existing authorizations."

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Reed Reynolds Russell

Sheppard Shipstead Smathers

Smith Taft

Schwartz Schwellenbach

Thomas, Okla. Thomas, Utah

Tobey Townsend Truman Tydings

Van Nuys

Wagner Walsh Wheeler White

Wiley

Vandenberg

Adams	Danaher	La Follette
Andrews	Davis	Lee
Ashurst	Donahey	Lewis
Austin	Ellender	Lodge
Bailey	Frazier	Logan
Bankhead	George	Lucas
Barbour	Gerry	Lundeen
Barkley	Gibson	McCarran
Bilbo	Gillette	McKellar
Bone	Glass	McNary
Borah	Green	Maloney
Bridges	Guffey	Mead
Brown	Gurney	Miller
Bulow	Harrison	Minton
Burke	Hatch	Murray
Byrd	Hayden	Neely
Byrnes	Herring	Norris
Capper	Hill	Nye
Caraway	Holman	O'Mahoney
Chavez	Hughes	Overton
Clark, Idaho	Johnson, Calif.	Pepper
Clark, Mo.	Johnson, Colo.	Pittman
Connally	King	Radcliffe

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Ninety-two Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I should like to ask the chairman of the committee a question. An amendment has been offered limiting to 10 percent the profits on the planes built in pursuance of the authority contained in the pending bill. I have no objection to the amendment, but I understand that in the wording of the amendment no allowance is made for certain expenses which should, in my judgment, be incorporated in the cost formula.

I should like to ask the chairman of the committee, now that the amendment has been tentatively agreed to, whether, if these objections are called to the attention of the conferees, it will not be possible to give those interested, and who are in full possession of the facts, a hearing, so that in conference the amendment basically can be perfected, not destroying its philosophy, but making sure that it does no more and no less than it is intended to do.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, the entire matter will be studied very carefully in conference.

Mr. TYDINGS. And there will be given to those who are interested an opportunity to present their side of the case?

Mr. SHEPPARD. Opportunity will be given to anyone who desires to come before the conference, of course.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Mary-

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Maryland yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. TOBEY. The Senator from Maryland, no doubt, is thoroughly cognizant of the fact that the amendment which I have offered and to which he has referred is practically identical as to exemptions of certain mechanical devices and materials with the amendment added to the Vinson-Trammell Act and the Merchant Marine Act and also with the provision which has been a part of all naval appropriation bills since 1934. I presume he likewise knows that losses in one year can be charged against the profits of the next. In other words, the Senator is aware of the fact that it is a replica of what has been done by the Senate at least four times heretofore.

Mr. TYDINGS. All that may be true, but the building of airplanes is not as old a business as is the building of ships for the high seas, and it is perfectly conceivable that this amendment may apply with equity to the lines of endeavor to which the Senator has alluded and not apply with equity to airplanes, the development of which is still in more or less of an experimental stage.

It has been represented to me that a great deal of the cost of airplanes is in experimental work, which continually goes on, and certainly the Government wants it to go on. My sole purpose in rising at this time is to make sure that we do not make the definition so stringent that the experimental work will cease. I am not quarreling with the general purpose of the amendment, but representatives of several concerns have called at my office today and suggested that the amendment as now worded will preclude them from carrying on some of the work which is essential to the most proficient planes.

Mr. TOBEY. If I may again address myself to the Senator from Maryland with reference to his remarks, concerning experimental work, as I stated yesterday, this Government, through the Navy and the Army, the Board of Aeronautics has contributed $45,000,000 in the last 4 years. The same attitude is shown both by the Army and the Navy. I certainly have no objection to the matter being reviewed, but I also wish to point out to the Senator that the amendment in the Vinson-Trammell Act includes all naval aircraft, as well as naval ships, so that the operations of the aircraft industry have been reviewed by the Congress several times, and the airplane producers have been functioning under the Vinson-Trammell Act and building aircraft thereunder for the last 5 years

Mr. TYDINGS. I think that never in the history of the United States have we embarked upon the purchase of aircraft, and particularly fighting craft, on the scale proposed by the pending bill. Everyone knows that the airplane industry is still in the infant stage, and it may be that the representations which the men who are engaged in this business have made to me are sound; namely, that there must be more latitude in the experimental part of the cost formula if the best plane possible is to be produced in the factories. I am not contending that that is the case, but I can see that it may be the case.

Mr. TOBEY. I can, also.

Mr. TYDINGS. The purpose of my question was to insure that these gentlemen obtain a hearing before the conferees, where if their case is good it can be accepted, and if their case is bad it can be rejected. Naturally, I am not familiar with all the details involved in a matter of this kind, but they have asked that they have opportunity to present what they claim is factual matter, which will prove that the definition as applicable to airplanes must be a little broader than that applied to the general, ordinary character of other governmental work. My sole purpose was to insure that they would get a hearing. As to the details of their case, I am not greatly familiar with them, and I am in no position either to advocate their contentions or oppose them.

Mr. TOBEY. My proposal is not de novo, but is something that has been in effect for years among the aircraft manufacturers themselves.

Mr. TYDINGS. I appreciate that, but I think we are engaged in airplane development on so large a scale that it would be wise to make sure that the best planes will be built within a certain length of time, and we ought not to put definitions in the measure which may prevent the accomplishment of that objective. For example, one manufacturer today represented to me that the penalties for not delivering planes in accordance with schedules were so prohibitive and the experimental work so varied that they might get into such a condition that if the Government enforced the penalties they would lose a considerable sum of money and make no profit at all. Whether or not that be true, I do not know. I am not familiar with the airplane industry even in the slightest degree. But I did want to make sure that these gentlemen would be accorded a hearing, and if their case is sound, I am satisfied the conferees will deal expeditiously and justly with them.

Mr. TOBEY. One more word and I will sit down. A concern may expend $100,000 or $1,000,000, we will say, on an experimental model for planes that may be put out on a large scale thereafter. It is beyond question that that concern should amortize that experimental cost into the amount it charges the Government for planes built on a production basis. They always do that. What I wish to guard against—and that is why I cited the horrible record yesterday—is that no fifth estate shall thimblerig these things, and to invade the Halls of Congress with their subtle arguments and try to prevent the passage of needed regulatory legislation.

Mr. TYDINGS. I think the position of the Senator from New Hampshire may be sound. I feel that now in airplane industry, even if a type of plane has been determined upon, it may be necessary to make experimental changes in an airplane from time to time as development proceeds, and that, as has been pointed out to me, is something which may cause extraordinary and unforeseen delay; therefore there ought to be sufficient latitude in respect to the penalties so that an honest manufacturer who wants to do honest work can safely cooperate with the Government and not be penalized by the profit limitation provision. I am satisfied if the conferees will hear these gentlemen, that whatever good there is in their case will be incorporated by any necessary amendment into the profit-limitation amendment. That was the sole purpose of my asking the committee chairman if he would not approach the proposal in the spirit I have suggested.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I desire to call attention to the fact that the House Committee on Naval Affairs at the present session has already favorably reported a bill (H. R. 7777) to amend section 3 of the act of March 27, 1934. The language of that bill is identical with the language of the amendment proposed to be made to the pending bill. I wish to bring to the attention of the chairman of the committee in charge of the pending bill the report filed by the Committee on Naval Affairs on that bill, H. R. 7777, which is a favorable report asking for the amendment of section 3, the language of which is now offered as an amendment to the pending bill. I think there are some very pertinent facts set out in the report.

I particularly want to say, Mr. President, that the mere matter of constructing 6,000 planes, even if the outside number should be purchased by the Navy and put in operation, would be of no great consequence in any great national emergency. If the national-defense bill is to be of real service, if it is to effectuate what I think must have been the intent and the purpose of the President of the United States in commending it and recommending it, producers must develop the capacity to produce in order to meet any emergency. I think the House of Representatives itself has recognized in connection with its own proposal to amend section 3 of the act of 1934, in language identical with the language of the pending amendment, that with respect to a new industry, in the development of which many experiments must be undertaken, and which necessarily changes from day to day, from week to week, from year to year, if the capacity to produce to meet an emergency is really to be secured under any national-defense bill, the industry cannot be hedged about by restrictions of the nature and character of the restrictions contained in the pending amendmet.

The House committee report contains a significant statement made by the Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics. I do not know whether or not it is true, but the statement is inserted as a part of the House committee report. It is the testimony of the Chief of the Bureau that in the years 1927 to 1933, inclusive, the producers of airplanes made a net profit of 8 percent upon the construction of planes, while they lost 34 percent upon all the experimental efforts to develop new types of planes.

The report also contains the statement that in the years 1934 to 1936, inclusive, while the audit is not complete, the airplane manufacturers made a net of 2.8 percent upon new production, but lost 71 percent in the construction of new types of planes. Mr. President, I consider the program under consideration purely a defense program. I have not been concerned about the questions of national policy, of neutrality, or what not, but I have regarded the program under consideration to be purely a defense program, one not inadequate, and one not out of proportion to the resources of this country to maintain. I am going to vote for it. I want to vote for the proposal as it has been submitted, because I must assume that in that field the experts of the Army and Navy, the experts in the Government, must know more about the subject than I can possibly know with the limited time I have to study it. Looking at the program from the standpoint of pure national defense there is danger that we may greatly hamper a new industry, one that must conduct experiments from day to day and from year to year, if it is to keep abreast of improvements and changes made in airplane construction. I imagine that there is nothing more useless for national defense purposes than a set of antiquated planes.

Mr. President, I imagine that the entire number of 6,000 planes provided by the bill would last us about 20 days in any great national emergency. I know that in order to develop an effective national defense the United States must develop the capacity of its plants to supply the necessary implements and munitions of war.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. MALONEY. I am anxious to associate myself with the remarks of the Senator from Georgia, not only as he refers to the pending bill but also in relation to the particular amendment now under discussion. I am fully aware of the abuses in this particular field in days gone by. As the Senate knows, we now have in effect a law which is similar to this amendment affecting planes and other equipment of national defense. However, it seems to me that the situation creating that law came as a result of these earlier abuses which were practiced at a time when planes were purchased by negotiation rather than by bid.

As I understand, it is now planned to purchase the planes as a result of bidding. Because competition seems to me to be pretty wide, I want to ask the Senator, who seems so well versed on the subject, if there is not keen competition in the field of airplane manufacture?

Mr. GEORGE. I understand that there is, Mr. President. I rose not so much to take issue with the purpose of the amendment offered, because I think all of us would readily agree with the purpose of the amendment; namely, that unconscionable profits should not be made by the manufacturer of any airplane or any of the appurtenances which go with it.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. GEORGE. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. I appreciate the force of the remarks which are being made by the Senator from Georgia. Of course, our primary purpose is not so much to regulate profits, but to provide for national defense. If, incidentally, we can regulate profits without in any way affecting or crippling the objective of the bill, I am in sympathy with that purpose; but I am wondering whether the amendment takes account of the fact that while the Government may indulge in certain research work in order to figure out the best possible planes, private manufacturers will also have to do the same thing. I am wondering whether the amendment takes sufficient account of the expenditure that may have to be indulged in for research and investigation, which might not reflect itself in the cost of producing a certain number of planes so as to make it possible to fix a limitation on profits. I think that element must be taken into consideration

In other words, if the 10 percent is to be on the over-all cost of investigation, research, and everything, as it may be allocated to the planes the Government actually buys, that might not be a bad thing. However, if the 10 percent is to be allowed merely on the actual cost of manufacture after the investigations, research, and preliminary work have all been done, it might result in a dead loss to the manufacturers, which would make it unattractive for them to bid on the planes.

Does the Senator know whether this amendment—which is really not the one which is pending, but is the one about which we are talking—sufficiently safeguards or insures proper competition on a basis which would be fair to all the concerns?

Mr. GEORGE. I will say to the Senator from Kentucky that I am not sufficiently well informed about the amendment to answer the question.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me on that question?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. MALONEY. I think the fears of the Senator from Kentucky are justified. Because this is a national-defense program, I think we incur some danger by imposing this limitation, because if we should rigidly enforce such a requirement we might not obtain the widespread distribution of the business we desire, or the widespread bidding on airplane contracts. I am fearful that a limited few of the large manufacturers might obtain the business.

I am in sympathy with what I believe is the intent of the proposal of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Tobey]; but it seems to me that we are living in an era of confusion insofar as international, military, and naval affairs are concerned; and I think we ought to proceed with great care, so that we will not bring about the situation feared by the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. I appreciate that; and that is what concerns me. We are providing a $300,000,000 program of construction. If the amendment of the Senator from Tennessee is adopted, it provides no authorization for future maintenance. We should require another bill authorizing the maintenance of the ships after they were constructed, because, as I see it, we are not going to spend $300,000,000 to build up an air force and then just leave it and go off and forget it. We must maintain it from year to year. That is one thing which makes me fear the propriety of the $300,000,000 limitation, because that is for the construction of the air force.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at this point?

Mr. BARKLEY. I have not the floor.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Will the Senator from Georgia permit me to ask a question of the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.
Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Does not the Senator realize that the figure $300,000,000 is taken from the President's estimate?
There is $170,000,000 for purchase and construction of planes during the next 2 years and $130,000,000 for other aviation purposes.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; I realize that.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, there is no difference between the President's recommendation on the subject and the amendment of the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. BARKLEY. No.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. If I may say so—because a number of Senators have asked me—there is no difference between the amendment which the Senator from Tennessee proposes and the amendment I proposed, except that the amendment of the Senator from Tennessee is more inclusive. He took the entire $300,000,000 recommended by the President for all aviation purposes. I simply took the $170,000,000 recommended by the President for the purchase or construction of new ships.

Mr. BARKLEY. I understand that, and I am not worried about that part of it. What I mean is that the bill as drawn provides a continuing authorization from year to year for the necessary appropriation to maintain the air force after it is constructed. The $300,000,000 is for the primary, initial construction to bring the air force into existence. The total authorization of the bill is $300,000,000. If this amendment is adopted, then when the air force is completed there will have to be another bill authorizing appropriations from year to year to maintain it.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, as I understand the amendment of the Senator from Tennessee, it is precisely in accordance with the President's recommendation. Mr. McKELLAR. It is absolutely in accord with it.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. It was never intended that the $300,000,000 should do anything except provide for the purchase of airplanes and the other purposes set out in the President's message for a period of 2 years.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not want to take the Senator's time. I did not rise to discuss that question. I was discussing an amendment which is not yet really before us. The point is that, so far as the figure of $300,000,000 is concerned, I do not differ with the Senator from Missouri in relation to the President's recommendation for construction. What I am saying is that we want to do more than simply authorize the construction of the planes. We want to authorize their maintenance over a period of years. After they are constructed there must always be an authorization for continuing the appropriation in the future.

The point I make is that the adoption of this amendment will make it necessary, after the program is completed, to pass another bill authorizing Congress to appropriate the money to maintain the air force.

Mr. McKELLAR. No; no.
Mr. CLARK of Missouri. It is hoped that Congress will be in session next year, the year after that, and in future years. That has been the theory of our legislation.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. GEORGE. I yield to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. McKELLAR. I find that there is a distinct item of $3,000,000 for maintenance.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is not for the maintenance of these airplanes.

Mr. McKELLAR. It says so. I am taking the word of the President in his message. The amount seems small.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator is too good a mathematician and financier, and has had too much experience on the Appropriations Committee, not to know that the $3,000,000 is not to be construed as an annual authorization to maintain a $300,000,000 air force.

Mr. McKELLAR. The bill provides for the annual maintenance of the airships. It will not be necessary to have any further legislation. All the amendment does is to limit the amount to that which the President recommended.

The Appropriations Committee ought not to have an unlimited appropriation for the purpose of building airships. The President has not asked for it. He has asked for $300,-000,000. The bill proposes to give it to him. As the chairman of the Appropriations Committee knows, the committee is constantly confronted with the question of unlimited appropriations. My amendment merely makes a limited appropriation in the amount asked for by the President.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Georgia yield?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I desire to get back to the matter which we are discussing. Let us suppose that some airplane construction company desires to enter this field. Let us suppose that on a contract for $50,000,000 worth of airplanes the company is required to make research of all sorts for the construction of the airplanes, which research would cost, let us say, $5,000,000. In the ultimate cost of the planes to the Government, will the $5,000,000 be taken into consideration in determining the basis on which a 10-percent profit should be allowed under the amendment?

Mr. GEORGE. I do not so understand. However, I obtain from the House committee my understanding of the amendment which is now offered to the bill. I am not prepared to speak beyond that understanding. My attention was called to the House bill and to the report on the House bill. I have had but little time to give attention to the matter.

It seems to me that the bill now before the Senate is an authorization bill. The Secretary of War is simply authorized to make contracts. I presume anything that is legitimately within the contract, so far as the purchase of planes, parts, and so forth, is concerned, would be covered in the contract. The amendment offered is not a cost-plus proposal.

Mr. BARKLEY. No.

Mr. GEORGE. It does not guarantee the builder of planes, or the concern which sells them to the Government, a profit of 10 percent. It merely puts a ceiling of 10 percent on profits. Therefore it seems to me that the observations made by the House committee were most pertinent, because they point out that when the manufacturers are merely reproducing planes according to an accepted model, they have made a profit during one period of 8 percent, and during another period an indicated profit of 2.8 percent, and that on all their experimental work or work of developing new types of planes they would sustain very heavy losses.

Inasmuch as the entire matter will be in conference, as I understand, the House bill having no provision of this kind, I wanted to call the especial attention of the chairman of the conference committee, who I presume will be the chairman of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, to the House report in considering amendments to the particular amendment which, as I understand, the chairman of the committee has indicated his willingness to accept as a part of the bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. I see the Senator from New Hampshire is present, and I should like to make an inquiry. I think we are all driving at the same object, though we may not have the same basis in our minds. However, for instance, if any single airplane factory or any group of them that might want to enter this field to compete for this Government business already have made research necessary for them to begin the construction of the type of airplanes the Government would want, of course, probably they would not be entitled to use the expenses heretofore incurred in research work as the basis or as any part of the basis on which this 10 percent would be allowed; but if in order to manufacture planes the Government would accept, they have got to start in ab initio amake necessary research in order to meet the requirements of the Government, when those requirements are met and the result of those researches can no longer be used in the ordinary manufacture of airplanes for private industrial or commercial purposes, then I think the amount of money spent in preliminary research ought, in fairness, to be included in the amount upon which the 10 percent may be allowed. Does the Senator's amendment make any provision for a situation of that kind, where part of the total expense of a given number of airplanes, say, a thousand, would perhaps be $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 expended in order to develop a type that would enable the manufacturer to compete?

Mr. TOBEY. An answer to that would be to assume that the Senator from Kentucky was in the manufacturing business and making a product, let us say, locomotives; that he had prospective orders from different railroad companies in the country, and he built a research laboratory and went to great expense to produce a locomotive to compete with others. The Senator from Kentucky, as would any good businessman, would take that cost and pro rate it in his selling price for the year; it would become an integral factor of his selling price. That is good business practice. We would all do the same thing.

Mr. BARKLEY. I appreciate that; but in that case the cost could be recouped over a period of years in general production.

Mr. TOBEY. I think the manufacturer, whether the Senator from Kentucky or myself, would cover it in the year's operations. We would clean it up entirely through the charges for overhead and other costs of the goods sold.

Mr. BARKLEY. What I have in mind is not to make the terms so hard that a concern will not be interested in engaging in this field of activity for the benefit of the Government.

Mr. TOBEY. I do not think there is a chance of that, I will say to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. President, the Senator from Georgia has the floor, has he not?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield to the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. TOBEY. I should like to read into the Record at this point a statement as to the amount of money that the Government, by its departments, has been expending for research and experimental work, some of this money being distributed directly to industries and some being expended by the departments themselves. I invite the attention of the Senator from Georgia to the fact that in the pending bill there is a $3,000,000 item for research and experimental work to be paid for by the Government. The amounts expended by the Government for research and experimental work in connection with aircraft and aircraft accessories, stated in tabular form, are as follows:

AIRCRAFT AND AIRCRAFT ACCESSORIES

Grants by Navy Department to private contractors for experimental and research work

1935	$1,319,000 1,270,000 1,781,000 3,854,000
Total	10, 400, 000
Total amounts expended by Navy D
1935
1936
1937
1938	4, 682, 812
1939	2, 903, 500
Total	14, 242, 000
Total amounts expended by the We research
1936	$2, 800, 951
1937
1938
1939	2, 107, 740
Total	10, 317, 000

Civil Aeronautics Authority—Amounts expended in experimental and research work

Approximately $200,000 Not yet available National Advisory Council on Aeronautics—Amounts expended in experimental and research work, as given by Dr. George Lewis, Director of Aeronautical Research

Proof, up je	General purposes	Construc- tion	Total
1935	$766, 530 1, 177, 550 1, 177, 550 1, 380, 850 1, 500, 000	$478, 300 1, 367, 000 353, 000 200, 000	$1, 244, 830 1, 177, 550 2, 544, 550 1, 733, 850 1, 700, 000
Total	6,002,480	2, 398, 300	8, 400, 780

Thus it will be seen that during the past 5 years the Government has expended for research and experimental work of the character referred to, a total of $43,559,780. Three million dollars of new money for this purpose is provided in the pending bill. So the Government is acting as a tutelary, so to speak, as a good neighbor and big brother to private industry in helping them by private grants, and by its own research work. There is no disposition on the part of the Government to hamper private industry or to discourage them in the attempt to engage in this business.

I believe half the suggestions made on this floor are not founded upon real need, because I know that in the House of Representatives the effort was made to enact legislation along the line suggested by the Senator, and for 4 years the House refused to pass it. The rights of private manufacturers are protected by allowing them 10-percent profit on what they sell to the Government. If all the manufacturers of this country in all industries could obtain 10 percent on the goods they produce we would have no unemployment problem in the United States.

Mr. GEORGE. But the Senator overlooks the fact that there is no guaranty of 10 percent.

Mr. TOBEY. It is up to the perspicacity of business and the acumen of those engaged in private industry to make 10 percent.

Mr. GEORGE. But one year they may make nothing and another year they may take a loss.

Mr. TOBEY. Then they would charge it against the profits of the next year under this amendment.

Mr. GEORGE. It may be that they could do that, but I do not so understand it.

Mr. TOBEY. They are allowed to do it by the very terms of the amendment.

Mr. GEORGE. I do not understand that the amendment does that. I am looking at the Vinson Act—

Mr. TOBEY. Let me read that to the Senator, if he will permit me.

Mr. GEORGE. I have it before me now, but it does not seem to me to do that. I am not quarreling with the Senator's purpose.

Mr. TOBEY. I understand that.

Mr. GEORGE. I served as a member of the Munitions Committee and I know something of the evidence that was adduced before that committee. I know something of the outrageous practices that were carried on by way of suppressing bids and predetermining contractors who would receive certain bids. I have the fullest sympathy with the amendment. I think, however, that a far better way of reaching it would be through a tax measure which has been introduced in this body, and a similar bill was introduced in the last Congress. In effect, it proposes to tax profits in excess of a certain fixed profit made upon Government contracts, so that if contractors with the Government make more on their whole transaction with the Government than a given percent, they lose in the excess-profits tax. But in that case they have always got a gain; they simply cannot carry the gain beyond the point fixed in the tax act. Here, however, there is simply a limitation upon profits that may be made under one contract, whereas other contracts may show net losses.

What I am trying to point out is that in a highly experimental and developing business, such as the manufacture of airplanes, upon which this Nation and all other nations now so vitally depend for national-defense purposes, any national-defense program must look not merely to the purchase of a few planes, safeguarding meanwhile the Government against unconscionable contracts for the purchase of those planes, but it must look to the development of the production capacity of the industry of the country, or else this whole national-defense program will be utterly useless after the next 2 or 3 years have elapsed.

I am not controverting the Senator's position; I am in fullest sympathy with the desire to limit these profits. I should say they should not be as high as 10 percent; if the proposal here was to impose an excess-profits tax on profits beyond 8 percent net income on these contracts, I would not have one suggestion to make about it; but inasmuch as the proposal is to limit the profits that may be made on any contract to 10 percent, with no guaranty of any profit upon other contracts, I thought it proper for the committee to take into consideration the bill now pending in the other House to amend the section of the Vinson Act which the Senator proposes to offer to this bill as an amendment, and especially the pertinent provisions in the House Naval Affairs Committee's report calling attention to what it undoubtedly thinks is the necessity of amending the act which we are now about to incorporate as an amendment in the pending national defense bill.

I want the Senator please to understand that I am not quarreling with his purpose, and I am not controverting the very great abuses that have led to these limitations upon Government contracts, because I am aware of those abuses. I sat through the committee hearings under the able leadership of the distinguished Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NyEl, the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK], the Senator from Washington [Mr. Bone], and other Senators, and heard developed step by step many of the perfectly outrageous advantages that were taken of the Government in collusive bidding by various contractors who desired to procure contracts from the Government. I wanted to call attention, however, to this other act and to the proposal to amend it.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from Vermont?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. AUSTIN. I ask the Senator if he interprets section 3 (b) of the act referred to in this amendment as tying up the Government or the contractor to any one contract in ascertaining the limit of the contractor's profits. The reason why I ask the question is that I myself must be in error if that is the meaning of the section.

May I, before finishing, read the section to which I refer? Mr. GEORGE. If the Senator will permit me to answer him, I think the section undoubtedly relates to one contract, even though the same manufacturer may have a series of contracts, because it expressly provides "in excess of 10 percent of the total contract price."

Mr. AUSTIN. That is the point of difference between us; and I am wondering whether there is an error in the copy the Senator is reading.

Mr. GEORGE. I am not prepared to say about that. Mr. AUSTIN. I have the original before me, and the word is "prices," not "price." The section reads:

Ten percent of the total contract prices of such contracts within the scope of this section as are completed by the particular contracting party within the income taxable year.

I should interpret that description-

Mr. GEORGE. That is different language from that which I have before me; and I should be disposed to interpret it as limiting the profits on all the contracts held by a particular contractor.

Mr. AUSTIN. Yes; that is the way I interpret it.

Now, if the Senator will yield once more

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Georgia further yield?

Mr. GEORGE. I do.

Mr. AUSTIN. I desire to ask the Senator how he interprets the first part of section 3 (b) with reference to the rule or rules to be applied by the Treasury Department in ascertaining costs. My question specifically is, Does the statute tie the Treasury Department to any specific rule of calculating costs when the statute uses this language:

To pay into the Treasury profit, as hereinafter provided, shall be determined by the Treasury Department—

My question relates to that language. Does it tie the hands of the Treasury Department at all in calculating the costs?

Mr. GEORGE. By any particular method?

Mr. AUSTIN. That is the question; does it?
Mr. GEORGE. I should think it would have precisely the same meaning that very similar provisions have throughout the tax act. The tax act, as the Senator knows, imposes a tax upon the net income, always as determined by the Treasury Department; and I do not think the Treasury Department is bound by any particular method of cost accounting. In fact, I am sure it is not bound by any particular method of cost accounting, except as it itself may approve that method, because from year to year in the Finance Committee we have had a proposal to compel the Treasury to use a certain cost-accounting method in instances of deferred sales or deferred payments over a period of time in ordinary cases of sale and purchase. I think this language would be given the same interpretation that is given very similar language in any of the tax provisions.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, if the opinion of the Senator from Georgia were followed by the Treasury Department, I think I should favor this amendment. I favor the principle of preventing excess profits. The question in my mind, however, is similar to the question raised by the Senator from Georgia, and that is whether this language would be so interpreted as to render entirely futile one of the principal objectives of the bill. That is the objective of research and development of planes, of tools, and of equipment with which to increase our production.

If I may be permitted just a minute more, I should think the Treasury Department, in construing costs to ascertain profits, should carry into effect one of these principal objectives of the measure, and calculate into the costs of the contracts of the taxable year all the costs of research and development, to which I have referred rather briefly, so that these institutions could go forward on a living basis and not be destroyed by the first year's attempt to do business under this law.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Vermont yield?

Mr. AUSTIN. I have not the floor. The Senator from Georgia has the floor.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Georgia yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield to the Senator from Washington. Mr. BONE. In the development of any particular model of plane which might be sold in considerable numbers to the Government, can the Senator advise us whether or not experimental work on that plane might by the Treasury Department be authorized as an overhead cost? I have not heard that matter discussed on the floor of the Senate. and that is one of the questions which the Senator from Vermont has raised.

Mr. GEORGE. I think the Senator from Vermont raised it, and the Senator from Kentucky raised it.

I should not be prepared to say that the Treasury Department, or the Secretary of War in the first instance, would not be authorized to take into consideration certain research work by the company in preparing to meet the terms and stipulations of a contract which the Department desired the company to enter into with it; but I should say, as the Senator knows, that the departments of Government are very hesitant to allow any latitude in that regard, because, of course, they would be very much afraid of criticism.

Mr. BONE. It might be very important for us to determine that particular fact, because, if the Treasury allowed that as a proper overhead expense, the contractor might be permitted to collect not to exceed 10 percent profit on that expense. Certainly it would be of no moment to the contractor how much experimental work he did, provided he made 10 percent on it. That is why I raised the question whether it might be allowed.

Mr. GEORGE. My answer to the distinguished Senator from Washington would be that the Secretary of War would not in the first instance, nor would the Treasury Department finally, approve a contract which included any item for experimental work, because, in the nature of things, I do not see how that could be done.

I yield the floor.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I wonder if I would be out of order if I should discuss the amendment pending before the Senate. [Laughter.]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is in order in discussing the amendment now pending.

Mr. NORRIS. With that assurance from the Chair, Mr. President, I will take up the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is not a violation of the rules of the Senate to discuss the amendment which is pending. [Laughter.]

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. Will the Senator permit the clerk to read the perfected amendment, to which the chairman of the committee has agreed, so that it may be before the Senate?

Mr. NORRIS. I was about to suggest a modification of the amendment which I thought would be satisfactory to the Senator from Tennessee and the Senator from Texas. Perhaps that has already been done.

Mr. McKELLAR. I suggest that the Senator wait and see. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee, as is his right, has perfected his amendment. The clerk will read the amendment as perfected.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In line 4 of the amendment, after "$300,000,000," there have been added the words:

together with such annual appropriations as may be necessary to maintain such air force.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, that perhaps meets the proposition to which I was going to call the attention of Senators

The measure which it is sought to amend by this amendment reads as follows:

The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to equip and maintain the Air Corps with not to exceed 6,000 serviceable airplanes

And so forth. The objection is made to the amendment by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] that the limitation put on by the amendment of the Senator from Tennessee would cripple the maintenance of planes, because it would limit the maintenance by the amount stated in the amendment. The amendment does make such a limit, because it applies both to equipment and to maintenance. was about to suggest that the Senator from Tennessee modify his amendment so that it will apply only to equipment, and not to maintenance, thus meeting the objection, which seems to me to have some merit, made by the Senator from Kentucky; but if the proposed change meets that point, I will not press my suggestion.

Mr. McKELLAR. I think the change meets that point, and the chairman of the committee has agreed to it.

Mr. NORRIS. Is the chairman of the committee satisfied with it?

Mr. SHEPPARD. I think the amendment meets the situation

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar].

Mr. SHEPPARD. I accept the amendment.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the chairman of the committee may be ever so influential, but he cannot bind the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon is correct.

Mr. McNARY. The proper procedure is to bring the amendment to the attention of the Senate for a vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, may we have the amendment stated?

Mr. SHEPPARD. Just a moment. In what I stated I meant, of course, that I accepted the amendment only insofar as my own action could affect the matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The Legislative Clerk. The amendment proposed, as modified, is as follows: On page 2, line 3, after the word "thereof", to insert a semicolon and the words "and there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for such purposes an amount not exceeding $300,000,000, together with such annual appropriations as may be necessary to maintain such air force."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Mc-Kellar] as modified.

The amendment, as modified, was agreed to.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, I now ask that the amendment I have presented be laid before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed to add the following new section at the end of the bill:

SEC. —. All of the provisions of section 3 of the act of March 27, 1934, as amended (48 Stat. 505; 49 Stat. 1926) (relating to payment into the Treasury of excess profits under contracts with respect to certain naval vessels and aircraft), shall be applicable with respect to contracts for aircraft for the Army to the same extent and in the same manner that such provisions are applicable with respect to contracts for aircraft for the Navy: Provided, That the Secretary of War shall exercise all functions under such section with respect to aircraft for the Army which are exercised by the Secretary of the aircraft for the Army which are exercised by the Secretary of the Navy with respect to aircraft for the Navy.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, General Arnold, the Chief of the Air Corps, in the course of his testimony before the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, stated, in effect, that a measure of this kind would be distinctly helpful.

Mr. TOBEY. Would "do the trick," in the general's own

Mr. SHEPPARD. So far as I am concerned, I have no objection to the amendment.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, prior to a vote on the amendment, I should like to read, for the benefit of the Senator from Georgia, the Senator from Vermont, and other Senators, the exact wording of the amendment to which the amendment I have offered makes reference. reads as follows, and I think covers some of the points brought out in the interrogations:

Provided, That no contract shall be made by the Secretary of the Navy-

And of course the Secretary of War would be included, under the proviso in my proposed amendment-

Provided, That no contract shall be made by the Secretary of the Navy for the construction and/or manufacture of any complete naval vessel or aircraft, or any portion thereof, herein, heretofore, or hereafter authorized unless the contractor agrees—

(a) To make a report, as hereinafter described, under oath, to the Secretary of the Navy upon the completion of the contract.

(b) To pay into the Treasury profit, as hereinafter provided, shall be determined by the Treasury Department in excess of 10 shall be determined by the Treasury Department in excess of 10 percent of the total contract prices of such contracts within the scope of this section as are completed by the particular contracting party within the income taxable year, such amount to become the property of the United States, but the surety under such contracts shall not be liable for the payment of such excess profit: Provided, That if there is a net loss on all such contracts or subcontracts completed by the particular contractor or subcontractor within any income taxable year, such net loss shall be allowed as a credit in determining the excess profit, if any, for the next succeeding income taxable year: Provided further, That if such amount is not voluntarily paid, the Secretary of the Treasury shall collect the same under the usual methods employed under the internal-revenue laws to collect Federal income taxes: Provided further, That all provisions of law (including penalties) applicable with respect to the taxes imposed by title I of the Revenue Act of 1934, and not inconsistent with this section shall be applicable with respect to the assessment, collection, or payment of excess profits to the Treasury as provided by this section, and to refunds by the Treasury of overpayments of excess profits into the Treasury: And provided further, That this section shall not apply to contracts or subcontracts for scientific equipment used for communication, target detection, navigation, and fire control as may be so designated by the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Navy shall report annually to the Congress the names of such contractors and subcontractors affected by this provision, together with the applicable contracts and the amounts thereof: And provided further, That the income taxable years shall be such taxable years beginning after December 31, 1935, except that the above provisor relating to the assessment, collection, payment, or refunding of excess profit to or by the Treasury shall be retroactive to March 27, 1934.

(c) To make no subdivisions of any contract or subcontract for the same article or articles for the purpose of evading the provisions of this act, but any subdivision of any contract or subcontract involving an amount in excess of $10,000 shall be subject to the conditions herein prescribed.

the conditions herein prescribed.

(d) That the manufacturing spaces and books of its own plant, affiliates, and subdivisions shall at all times be subject to inspection and audit by any person designated by the Secretary of the Navy, the Secretary of the Treasury, and/or by a duly authorized committee of Congress.

(e) To make no subcontract unless the subcontractor agrees to

(e) To make no subcontract unless the subcontractor agrees to the foregoing conditions.

The report shall be in form prescribed by the Secretary of the Navy and shall state the total contract price, the cost of performing the contract, the net income, and the percent such net income bears to the contract price. A copy of such report shall be transmitted to the Secretary of the Treasury for consideration in connection with the Federal income-tax returns of the contractor for the translet wars or years concerned. for the taxable year or years concerned.

Listen to this:

The method of ascertaining the amount of excess profit to be paid into the Treasury shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury in agreement with the Secretary of the Navy—

So the two, working together, might determine these factors making up the profits-and made available to the public.

That is important

The method initially fixed upon shall be so determined on or before June 30, 1934: Provided, That in any case where an excess profit may be found to be owing to the United States in consequence hereof, the Secretary of the Treasury shall allow credit for any Federal income taxes paid or remaining to be paid upon the amount of such excess profits.

The contract or subcontracts referred to herein are limited to those where the award exceeds $10,000.

Now I wish to revert to the remarks of the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TOBEY. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. I note that there is a limitation of time there which is in the past. We are talking about something in the future. Has the Senator considered that date-1934in the last proviso, with respect to ascertaining costs?

Mr. TOBEY. It reads that the method fixed upon in the beginning shall be so determined on or before that date. It shall be determined on or before that time.

Mr. AUSTIN. The Treasury Department has not had this type of law under consideration and this project of development under consideration before. I suggest to the Senator that he consider the question of the applicability of that particular clause to this amendment of his.

Mr. TOBEY. I am perfectly satisfied, myself, but I suggest to the Senator that we let the conferees, who will have charge of the matter in conference, consider that suggestion.

Mr. AUSTIN. Probably they will do it with more deliberation than we can on the floor.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. TOBEY. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. Is the amendment which the Senator has read the exact language employed now by the Navy Department in making its contracts for naval planes?

Mr. TOBEY. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. This method as to limiting profits has been in force for several years?

Mr. TOBEY. Since 1934. Mr. WALSH. And, so far as we know, it has been satisfactory?

Mr. TOBEY. Yes; and I may say to the Senator from Massachusetts and to the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, referring to what he said about General Arnold, that I desire to quote him again:

At this writing, Mr. Senator, we know the profits that every company makes that is connected in any way primarily with airplane contracts. For instance, last year the average profit made by all the airplane companies was 10.8 percent. The average profit on engines was 9.1 percent. The average profit on accessories was 24.2 percent. We have auditors in all those plants. With that background, we can come pretty close to telling when anybody bids on a contract how much the airplanes should cost.

Then he closed with these words:

That, coupled with a bill to limit profits to 10 percent, should do the trick.

I rest my case on that.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, if I may ask the Senator another question, if I remember correctly, this form of amendment has been evolved after a good deal of study and experience. The original amendment has been changed from time to time.

Mr. TOBEY. The Senator and I worked together on it.

Mr. WALSH. So that this form of language now used was found by the naval officials and others interested to be the acceptable manner of determining the best method of limiting profits.

Mr. TOBEY. Exactly.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator from New Hampshire yield?

Mr. TOBEY. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. I am in entire sympathy with the amendment. I am a little worried, however, by the question asked by the Senator from Vermont. The Senator from Vermont called attention to the fact that we were considering an amendment which is already law as applied to the Navy Department. When the Senator from New Hampshire reads that law, he finds in it something which shall be done prior to 1934, which, of course, we cannot change here. The date in the pending amendment should not be 1934, and I doubt whether the conferees will have jurisdiction to change the amendment so that it would not apply to 1934. I do not think it would be very serious, because any court, in construing it, I think, would have to give it a construction in accordance with the facts.

Mr. TOBEY. Yes.

Mr. NORRIS. But there might be some difficulty, and it might be impossible for the conferees to meet the point.

Mr. TOBEY. What would the Senator from Nebraska

Mr. NORRIS. Without having read the law recently, I would be unprepared to suggest anything to remedy the point now on such short notice. I do not see how we could put that date in the amendment.

Mr. TOBEY. Let us leave that clause out entirely. Mr. NORRIS. I should be afraid of that. We cannot leave anything out of another law which we are not seeking to amend here.

Mr. TOBEY. I should like to ask a question of the Senator from Vermont. Would it be his judgment with reference to the clause, "the method initially fixed upon shall be so determined on or before June 30, 1934," that it would not prejudice what I am trying to do, with the approval of the Senate; that it would not hurt the amendment of the measure to leave that sentence out?

Mr. AUSTIN. I think, then, that the proposal under consideration would have to be amended by adding at the end an exception, "except that part of section 3, as follows," which shall read so and so. I do not see how the conference committee can possibly take the bill with the pending amendment in it, and conform it to an old statute which has a date in the past. They would not have any jurisdiction to amend that old statute. The only way that I can see that the situation could be remedied would be to rewrite that particular part of the statute into the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire in the form in which he wishes to have it. I do not think the conference committee would have jurisdiction to do that. It is my opinion that only the Senate could do it, and the conference committee, if there be disagreement, can modify the language. I do not know whether or not they could completely rewrite the amendment.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. AUSTIN. I yield.
Mr. NORRIS. The sentence which brings on this difficulty is as follows:

The method initially fixed upon shall be so determined on or before June 30, 1934.

That time is long past. That sentence is now in the law. The amendment proposes to make that language applicable to the pending bill. It seems to me the Senator might add to his amendment language to the effect that the provision referred to shall apply to the measure we are now considering, with the exception of the date on which the method initially fixed upon shall be determined and put in some subsequent date.

Mr. AUSTIN. That is my idea.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not know that it would be a very bad thing to let it pass, knowing that it is a mistake to do so; that what is provided cannot, in fact, be done. If we adopt the amendment without change, we require the officials of the Government to perform an impossibility.

Mr. TOBEY. And let the chips fall where they may.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOREY].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 2, line 14, after "War", it is proposed to insert a colon and the following:

Provided, That for the purposes of this act or any other act heretofore or hereafter enacted, appropriating or authorizing the appropriation of any funds for national defense, no contract shall be awarded to any person who at the time of such award shall be interfering with, restraining, or coercing his employees in the exercise of their rights to self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their cown chossing or to energe in concerted activities for the of their own choosing, or to engage in concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection.

Mr. SHEPPARD. So far as I am concerned, that amendment is entirely acceptable.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I should like to ask the Senator from Kentucky a question. I want to see how that provision might operate under a certain set of circumstances. As I understand the amendment, no contract under the proposed expenditure could be awarded to any person who at the time of such award is deemed to be guilty of the various interferences set forth in the amendment, which are virtually the application of the Wagner Act to the bill. The question I wish to ask the Senator is, Suppose a contractor at the time of such award had an appeal pending from an order of the National Labor Relations Board, and, for the sake of the argument, suppose that appeal was upheld by the Supreme Court subsequently; if the award happened to catch the contractor between the Labor Board's order and the Supreme Court's decision, the contractor would be out of luck, would he not?

Mr. BARKLEY. In the first place, I will say to the Senator, that the provision is not to be administered by the National Labor Relations Board. While it deals with the same subject. it is not an amendment to the Wagner Act. It is not to be administered by that Board, but by the War Department. Undoubtedly the War Department could take into consideration the status of an official proceeding to determine whether a given concern was violating the provision, but the amendment is offered wholly independent of the National Labor Relations Act.

I will say to the Senator that I do not wish to call the names of any manufacturers, but it is true that some of them are at the present time paying lower wages than some of their competitors. They are also preventing the organization of their employees into unions for the purpose of collective bargaining. Obviously such concerns would have an advantage over a competitor who is observing the spirit set out in the amendment.

The object of the amendment is to create such a condition that a given concern would not by coercion and intimidation, or by any other method designed to prevent the organization of their employees, create such a situation that they would have an unfair advantage, not only over their competitors in bidding, but also with respect to their employees, and the employees of other concerns, because if they could take advantage of the situation to underbid their competitors, it would be not only unfair to their competitors but unfair to the employees of their competitors, who are permitted under the law or by mutual consent to engage in organization or collective bargaining.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I have no objection to remedying such a condition as that to which the Senator addresses himself, and I realize that the provision has nothing to do with the Wagner Act per se, or the Labor Relations Board per se; but I ask the Senator if the National Labor Relations Board had issued an order against a contractor, identifying him as being one who was restraining or coercing his employees in the exercise of their rights, and so forth, quoting the language of the Senator's amendment, would not the War Department consider that contractor automatically barred from building planes for the Government?

Mr. BARKLEY. I should not say so. I think the War Department would have the right to exercise its own judgment based upon its own information, independent of temporary adjudication of orders of the Labor Board or some other organization. I can see that there could arise a sort of a hiatus between the decision of the Board and the decision of the Supreme Court in a given case which might lead to confusion. I believe, however, inasmuch as the matter does not come under the jurisdiction of the Labor Relations Board but it is to be administered by the War Department itself, that the Department can exercise sufficient discretion in connection with any given case to determine for itself whether there is actually a violation, especially when it has not been ultimately determined by the final authority whether there is or is not.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I dislike to have the decision of the National Labor Relations Board final with respect to the rights of an employer under the language of the amendment. I now understand the Senator to say that he would not consider that a decision of the Labor Board would be in any degree binding upon the decision of the War Department under the amendment. Is that correct?

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator that in the case of a decision by the National Labor Relations Board, from which an appeal was taken to the Supreme Court, or any other court, very naturally a supersedeas would be executed, which would suspend the operation of the decision of the Board, and would hold the matter in abeyance until the Supreme Court decided the question, and in that situation I think the War Department would be justified in reaching its own conclusion based upon facts which it itself has looked into, and that it would not be bound by an order of the Board which was on appeal to a higher court.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Then, the Senator would say, speaking generally, that the point I raised can be obviated by the War Department as a free administrator of the amendment?

Mr. BARKLEY. I think so.

Mr. MILLER. In connection with the question raised by the Senator from Michigan, I ask the Senator from Kentucky if he would accept a perfecting amendment to the language of the Senator's amendment, in line 6, after the word "shall", to insert the words "be found by the Secretary of War to", so that that line would read:

The time of such award shall be found by the Secretary of War to be interfering with, restraining-

And so forth.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not object to that perfecting amendment being placed in my amendment. It will be necessary in any event to work the matter out in conference.

Mr. MILLER. I think my perfecting amendment would | clarify the language of the Senator's amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes, undoubtedly.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, a point of order. The Senate is not in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's point is well taken. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. REED. It is impossible to hear what Senators on the other side of the Chamber are saying.

Mr. BARKLEY. The suggestion is that the language in line 6 of my amendment be amended by adding the words "be found by the Secretary of War to." I stated that I have no objection to that language being added, because, according to my interpretation, the Secretary of War is the final authority anyway in the awarding of the contracts, and he can take the various facts into consideration. Inasmuch as the amendment will go to conference and it may have to be modified somewhat in conference, I have no objection.

I modify my amendment to meet the suggestion of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER].

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Vermont. Mr. AUSTIN. I ask the Senator if he would not be just as well pleased with his amendment if he confined it to the measure we have under consideration? I do not like to legislate generally upon so broad a subject as the matter of labor relations and the Labor Board and all its ramifications in an amendment of this kind, in which we really have not all the points of view on the general subject covered by the amendment.

In lines 2 and 3 of the amendment are the words "or any other act heretofore or hereafter enacted." Those are the offending words.

No; that provision has to do with national Mr. BARKLEY. defense. It is limited to national defense.

Mr. AUSTIN. I understand.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, so far as any previous acts are concerned, those acts are already in process of completion; I mean, the appropriations and the construction under them. The provision does not apply generally. As the Senator knows, we have the Walsh-Healey Act, which applies to certain contracts engaged in between the Government and private industry. The principles set out in this amendment have been heretofore adopted in regard to railroad labor. We have the act setting up the board of mediation, and also the act with respect to railroad reorganizations. In the Chandler Act, setting up a system of corporate reorganizations, we have a provision similar to the amendment.

There is nothing new in principle involved in the amendment. However, I think Senators will agree that any manufacturing concern which is violating the spirit of the amendment ought not to be permitted to take advantage of that situation in order to underbid other concerns which are dealing with their employees according to the spirit of our law. Inasmuch as the amendment is limited to acts providing for national defense, I do not think it ought to be limited to this particular measure.

Mr. AUSTIN. May I ask the Senator another question?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. Let us assume, for example, that we are about to build a base in Puerto Rico. Is it not apparent that if in the future we pass a statute relating to that particular item of defense, or if we pass one with respect to the Hawaiian Islands, or Guam, or the Philippines, or the Aleutian Islands, all such future acts would be brought under the scope of this particular amendment without any consideration at all by us of what may be the conditions and circumstances of those particular cases?

We are attempting to do something in the dark, without any knowledge of future conditions; and I should much prefer to have the words "or any other act heretofore or hereafter enacted" stricken from the amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course the Senator realizes that whether the great bulk of the work is done under an existing law, or under the proposed act, or under some future authorization, it will be done in the United States. If in the future an act should be passed covering Guam, or the Philippines, or the Hawaiian Islands, Congress could do with respect to that particular situation what it started to do in this bill. An amendment was reported by the committee and later withdrawn, which undertook to lift the contracts for educational orders from the provisions of the Walsh-Healey Act. That amendment was withdrawn, I think properly so, because it was thought by the Senate that in this particular measure there ought not to be any lifting out of the provisions of the law regulating the relationship of employer and employee in the manufacture of Government goods. In other words, the Government ought to require that those from whom it purchases goods shall comply with the spirit of the law which the Government itself has imposed with respect to private employment and the private purchase of materials.

In the case of Hawaii, or in the case of any other particular situation, if a necessity existed to lift a particular case out from under the provisions of the amendment. Congress could do so. It seems to me that course would be preferable to making the amendment applicable only to the measure which is under consideration.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Maine.

Mr. WHITE. As I understand, the Senator from Kentucky has modified his amendment so that it now reads:

No contract shall be awarded to any person who at the time of such award shall be found by the Secretary of War to be interfering with, restraining, or coercing his employees in the exercise of their rights to self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor organiza-

And so forth. Those are matters which, under existing legislation, are peculiarly within the jurisdiction of the National Labor Relations Board. What I desire to know is whether or not, with respect to this particular kind of contract, we are ousting the National Labor Relations Board of jurisdiction, or whether there is to be a joint coexistent authority between the National Labor Relations Board and the Secretary of War to determine such questions. I am wondering what the situation would be if there were a determination of one sort by the Secretary of War and a determination of an opposite sort by the National Labor Relations Board.

Mr. BARKLEY. There is no purpose to oust the Labor Relations Board from its jurisdiction, and the language does not do so. In other words, the amendment applies to the general run of business of a corporation manufacturing things for public consumption. The original purpose was to give the Secretary of War and the War Department the power to determine whether a given concern is violating the stipulation set out; and if so, to give the War Department authority to withhold the contract. The National Labor Relations Board has no jurisdiction over contracts of this sort.

Mr. WHITE. But the National Labor Relations Board has jurisdiction over the question whether an employer is interfering with, restraining, or coercing his employees in the exercise of their right to bargain collectively.

With respect to a particular contract, or the performance of particular work, the question might arise whether the power of collective bargaining was respected, or whether there was any attempt to interfere with or coerce the employee. What troubles me is that if we give to the Secretary of War the power suggested, it seems to me we necessarily oust the National Labor Relations Board from jurisdiction, or else we have a dual authority over the same subject matter.

Mr. BARKLEY. No; there would be no dual authority. Under the amendment the Secretary of War would have no jurisdiction to regulate the conditions of labor, the wages, the hours, the right to organize, or anything else. All he could do would be to withhold a contract from a company which refuses to permit its employees to exercise their rights.

Mr. WHITE. A company which he finds is doing so.

Mr. BARKLEY. A company which he finds is doing so. With respect to all other matters, and with respect to the general situation between employer and employee, there is no ousting of the jurisdiction of the National Labor Relations Board; but the Secretary of War is authorized, when certain conditions exist, to withhold the contract.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. KING. It seems to me this is a condition precedent to obtaining a contract, and the Secretary of War is charged with the responsibility of letting the contract. Suppose we should offer an amendment under the terms of which the Secretary of the Navy, in letting contracts, should determine whether or not any of the materials utilized in the construction of a battleship, or any other mechanism, is foreign in origin, in which event he is not permitted to let the contract to the particular concern involved.

Mr. WHITE. I have no quarrel with that position.

Mr. KING. Obviously, that is a condition precedent to letting the contract. After the contract is let, if the contracting party should violate the terms of the Labor Relations Act, then the contract, or at least the alleged violation, would be submitted to the Labor Board to determine what violation, if any, there was, and to judge the penalties to be prescribed.

Mr. REED and Mr. HOLMAN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. BARKLEY. If the Senators will wait just a moment I will say to the Senator from Maine that I wish to emphasize the fact that under the amendment the Secretary of War has no power to regulate the relations between employer and employee.

Mr. WHITE. I agree to that.

Mr. BARKLEY. He has only the power to withhold the contract if he finds that the terms of the amendment are being violated. He may accept or he may not accept, as advisory to him, the conditions which may be reported by the National Labor Relations Board on the general subject of the relations between the employer and the employee in cases in which the Board has authority to issue orders in relation to those relationships; but the authority of the Secretary of War is limited to withholding contracts.

Mr. WHITE. Yes; it is limited to withholding contracts upon a factual finding by him with respect to the very matters which are committed to the National Labor Relations Board.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course he may accept as evidence information from any official body, or any information which he himself has as to those conditions.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. REED. I wish to inquire of the Senator from Kentucky whether or not he is running into a further difficulty. The amendment reads as follows:

Provided, That for the purposes of this act or any other act heretofore or hereafter enacted, appropriating or authorizing the appropriation of any funds for national defense, no contract shall be awarded to any person who at the time of such award shall be found by the Secretary of War—

And so forth. All funds for the national defense are not subject to the War Department, are they? I ask the Senator from Kentucky. They might be a part of the expenditures of the Navy Department.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is true. They might be; yes.

Mr. REED. And yet the Senator would incorporate in the bill a provision under which the Secretary of the Navy would have to reject or accept a contract subject to a finding by the Secretary of War.

Mr. BARKLEY. No; I think not. I think that there is probably an oversight in the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Miller] to the amendment. The head of the department which has to do with a contract ought to pass upon the subject, but that is a technical matter that can be remedied. In the case of a naval contract, evidently the Secretary of the Navy, and not the Secretary of War, should make the determination. Of course, the Secretary of War was in the mind of the Senator from Arkansas because this is a bill dealing with the War Department particularly, but I think the Senator from Arkansas ought also to cover the naval situation. I thank the Senator for calling it to my attention.

Mr. REED. The distinguished Senator agrees that that should be corrected?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes. Our minds were on the military phases; but in naval matters it would apply, for instance, to the naval expansion bill that we passed a year ago, and that ought to be under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. REED. The Senator from Kentucky, of course, is a sailor, as he lives so close to the Ohio and the Tennessee, but the Senator from Arkansas and the Senator from Kansas are soldiers, as they live in the interior.

Mr. MILLER. The Senator from Kansas overlooks the fact that the Senator from Arkansas lives on the Mississippi, but I thank the Senator.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. President, I inquire if the Senator from Kentucky still has the floor?

Mr. BARKLEY. If the Senator from Oregon desires to address the Senate, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon is recognized.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. President, I am opposed to this amendment. On the Pacific coast we have seen aliens tie up industry and prevent the operation of manufactories that have had no trouble with their employees incident to conflicting jurisdiction claimed by the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. I can vision that in case of war, let us assume within the next few days or weeks, if we should adopt this amendment we might be confronted with a tying up of industry that would prevent the Government obtaining the needed munitions and equipment with which successfully to defend our Nation, due, possibly, to the interference of aliens, a situation which we have already witnessed in the United States. I think the purpose of House bill 3791 is in defense of our homeland and the protection of our country, and we should not involve such a grave matter in labor politics.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kentucky, which he has modified. The amendment as modified will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed to modify the amendment in line 6, after the word "shall", by inserting the words "be found by the head of the department awarding the contract", so as to read:

Provided, That for the purposes of this act or any other act heretofore or hereafter enacted, appropriating or authorizing the appropriation of any funds for national defense, no contract shall be awarded to any person who at the time of such award shall be found by the head of the department awarding the contract to be interfering with, restraining, or coercing his employees in the exercise of their rights to self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, or to engage in concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky as modified.

The amendment as modified was agreed to.

Mr. DANAHER, Mr. SCHWARTZ, and Mr. BRIDGES addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecti-

Mr. DANAHER. I have submitted an amendment, which I now offer. The proposed amendment is at the clerk's desk. I should like to have the clerk read the amendment as modified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has a right to modify his amendment. The clerk will state the amendment as modified.

The Legislative Clerk. On page 2, line 1, between the word "hangars" and the word "and", it is proposed to insert the words "radio stations, beacons, emergency landing fields, landing fields."

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I am willing to accept that amendment and have it go to conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment, as modified, offered by the Senator from

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. I desire to offer an amendment. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 4, line 12, section 4, after the word "schools", it is proposed to insert between commas the words "including at least one Negro school for the training of Negro air pilots."

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to offer an amendment, as I am compelled to leave the Chamber to attend a committee meeting?

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, the Senator from Utah [Mr. King] says he desires, necessarily, to leave the Chamber, and I yield to him in order that he may offer his amendment.

Mr. KING. I thank the Senator. There has been some discussion with respect to the status of Reserve officers who might be allocated for temporary service to Civilian Conservation Corps camps. The view prevailed that they were not in the military service of the United States and had not the status of those who were performing military service. In order to remove any doubt on that point, I offer an amendment which I have submitted to my friend the Senator from Alabama and ask for its adoption.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. Schwartz] temporarily to withdraw his amendment, and the Senator from Utah offers an amendment, which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 6, after line 17, it is proposed to insert the following:

Provided further, That the duty of the Reserve officers assigned to Civilian Conservation camps shall not be considered active military service.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Utah.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Utah if he understands what the effect of that amendment, if adopted, would be by way of discrimination between Reserve officers and officers of the Regular standing Army?

Mr. KING. As I understood the debate yesterday, there was some question raised as to whether or not Reserve officers who may not have been in the service for many years, but were temporarily selected to serve in Civilian Conservation camps, would be held to be in the military service so as to obtain all the benefits that would flow to persons who were in active military service. The amendment is designed to make it clear that such Reserve officers shall not be held to be in the military service.

Mr. AUSTIN. I should like to ask the Senator from Utah if he does not understand that officers of the Regular Army are detailed to Civilian Conservation Corps camps to perform exactly the same duties that Reserve officers perform?

Mr. KING. If they are, the amendment applies only to Reserve officers.

Mr. AUSTIN. Therefore, if a Reserve officer and a Regular officer, performing the same duty, should suffer similar injuries, one of them would receive a certain type of treatment and the other would receive another and different type of treatment, would he not, if the Senator's amendment should be adopted?

Mr. KING. I am not sure as to just what benefits would be derived by one in the military service, but it seemed to me, and I thought that was the view of the majority of those who participated in the debate yesterday, that Reserve officers who are clamoring for these positions in the Civilian Con-servation Corps camps—and the statement was made that 5,000 of them are now connected with the camps—and other persons taken from civil life and allocated temporarily to these conservation camps, are not, and should not be considered to be entitled to all the benefits of men who are in the Army and are giving their lives to the military service, assigned today abroad and assigned tomorrow in some military task in Washington or some other part of the United States.

It seemed to me, as the debate proceeded yesterday, that there ought to be a distinction between those in the military service per se and those who are temporarily placed in charge of some C. C. C. camp.

Mr. AUSTIN. That is the theory of the Regular Army Establishment. They objected to the whole proviso very strenuously. If we had followed that theory, logically we should not have this proviso in the bill at all. However, after consideration we decided, notwithstanding that argument, to put the proviso in the bill.

I call attention to the fact that the Reserve officer must have engaged in this service for at least 30 days in order to obtain the benefits of this proviso.

For my part, I conceive the detail to duty at a Civilian Conservation camp of either an officer of the standing Army or an officer of the Reserve Officers' Corps as military duty and as comprehended within the meaning of the proviso. Therefore I regret to say I shall feel obliged to oppose the Senator's proposal.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I think the amendment should be sent to conference. There is a question involved which ought to be worked out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING].

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wyoming renew the proffer of his amendment?

Mr. SCHWARTZ. I renew my amendment. It comes in on page 4, line 12, section 4. That section provides that the Secretary of War may lend to certain institutions which have military training courses aeronautical equipment and accessories belonging to the Government. My amendment proposes, in line 12, after the word "schools", to include the words "including at least one Negro school for the training of Negro air pilots."

At a time when I was not present in the Military Affairs Committee some representatives of the Negro race appeared before the committee and stated the reasons why they felt that some provision should be made whereby they would be given an opportunity to secure this training. The matter apparently was not further considered in the committee. As I am on the committee, and was not present at the time, I make this statement as my reason for presenting the amendment now, since the subject has come to my attention.

Of the schools that might be permitted, if the provision is put in the bill, to institute this training, I mention simply Howard University of Washington; Wilberforce University, which, as Senators know, is close to Wright Field in Ohio; Tuskegee Institute, at Tuskegee, Ala.; and Hampton Institute, at Hampton, Va. I believe the amendment does not touch any of the controversial matters that have arisen from time to time in the Congress relating to the Negro race. I believe the amendment will be supported, or should be supported, especially by those who come from States where there is a large Negro population, because, to my mind, the white men in those States have been the friends of the Negro, and they have always been glad to see him advance. But in these higher institutions of learning, some of which are already supported by the Federal Government, when an American citizen who is a Negro has demonstrated that he has the mental capacity to acquire the knowledge and the technique required of an air pilot, I feel that we should give him that opportunity.

Somebody may say, "There is no provision in the bill now which would prevent a Negro receiving such training," but, Mr. President, I can only judge the future by the past. I believe the situation is such that unless we give this specific and affirmative recognition, possibly our qualified Negro citizens will not have an opportunity to become air

For that reason I have offered this amendment. I will say at this time that according to the census of 1937 there are now 123 licensed commercial private and student pilots of the colored race; and, of course, if opportunity afforded, a great many more of them would be glad to go into this occupation, which, if they are called to the colors, they realize also would call them to the ground quite quickly.

I hope the Senate will not object to this amendment.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, some days ago, when this bill was first under consideration, I offered an amendment covering these points, and asked that it be printed. It was printed, and has been for several days on the desks of the various Senators. It covers, as I understand, the points outlined by the Senator from Wyoming.

I have before me a copy of the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming; and the amendment I have offered is a more complete amendment following through the bill. My reasons for offering the amendment are the same as those stated by the Senator from Wyoming. I believe members of the Negro race of America have a right to training similar to that which the white young men of our Nation receive.

With some 12,000,000 Negroes in the country, they constitute approximately one-tenth of our population. I believe they are entitled to special training along aviation lines. We are opening up a great new industry and a particular new branch of the service, and the Negroes should have consideration.

I should like to offer my amendment—which has been printed, and has been lying on the table for a period of days—as a substitute for the amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, I should like to add to what I have already said that my amendment has been submitted and is entirely satisfactory to Edgar G. Brown, president of the United Government Employees, and the leaders of the colored race, who desire to have this form of amendment. I do not believe we shall accomplish anything by an amendment to the statute which says that there shall be no discrimination on account of race, color, or something else, because we have had such a provision in the Federal Constitution, and what is or what is not discrimination has been a matter of great debate. All I am trying to do, without seeking to disturb social conditions here, there, or elsewhere, is to secure an affirmative, plain, simple declaration that at least one qualified colored college shall be given an opportunity to educate colored men as air pilots.

I hope the substitute will not prevail, and that the amendment as I have submitted it will be adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question first is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming. After that the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire will be in order.

Mr. BRIDGES. I offer my amendment as a substitute, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered in the nature of a substitute will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 4, line 18, after the word "purposes", it is proposed to insert a colon and the following:

Provided further, That the Secretary of War is specifically authorized to establish at appropriate Negro colleges identical equipment, instruction, and facilities for training Negro air pilots, mechanics, and others for service in the United States Regular Army as is now available at the Air Corps Training Center.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, may the amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming be stated?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming will be restated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 4, line 12, after the word "schools", it is proposed to insert a comma and the words "including at least one Negro school for the training of Negro air pilots."

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Is the substitute offered by the Senator from New Hampshire in order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the Senator from New Hampshire proposes, on line 18, page 4, to insert certain matter, whereas the Senator from Wyoming proposes, on line 12, to insert certain matter. There is an incongruity in that the matter proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire could not very well be a substitute for the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the only difficulty seems to be as to the place where the amendment is to be made.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is true.

Mr. McNARY. I understand that both amendments cover the same subject matter, but the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire covers it more comprehensively; so the situation could be met by having a common meeting ground somewhere in the bill where the substitute amendment could be inserted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is of that opinion. As the amendment is offered, it would not be a substitute. If offered at the same place in the bill as the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming, undoubtedly it would be in order as a substitute.

Mr. McNARY. I suggest that the Senator from New Hampshire offer his substitute at the same place in the bill where the original amendment was offered by the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. BRIDGES. I accept that suggestion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator may compose the matter by asking unanimous consent to insert the matter proposed by him in line 12, at the same place where the amendment is proposed by the Senator from Wyoming. Then a vote can be had on the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

Mr. BRIDGES. I make that request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, I do not see how the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire could be offered as a substitute for the other amendment, except possibly the first seven lines of the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire, because he also proposes to amend the bill on page 7, line 19, and on page 8, line 1, and on page 8, line 25, and on page 12, line 7. There are four proposals that do not deal with schools at all. The amendment offered by the Senator from Wyoming deals only with schools, whereas the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire, in the provisions that I have mentioned, deals with other matters, not schools.

I make that suggestion to the Chair, that the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire is not a substitute for the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming, and cannot be construed as a substitute, it matters not where it is put.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry, or perhaps I ought to make the inquiry of the Senator from Texas, in charge of the bill. Is there any provision in the bill for training women pilots?

Mr. SHEPPARD. There is none. At the Air Corps Training Center, at Randolph Field, near San Antonio, all men who qualify may enter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is of opinion that the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire is not tenable as a substitute. It is in order as an amendment to the other amendment. The Senator from New Hampshire may offer it as an amendment to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wyoming; but it is not tenable as a substitute, for the reasons pointed out in reading the amendment. Does the Senator from New Hampshire wish to offer it as an amendment?

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I offer my amendment as an amendment to the amendment of the Senator from

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is in order as an amendment to the amendment, and it will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, on page 4, line 12, after the word "schools", to insert a colon and the words "Provided, That the Secretary of War is specifically authorized to establish at appropriate Negro colleges identical equipment, instruction, and facilities for training Negro air pilots, mechanics, and others for service in the United States Regular Army as is now available at the Air Corps Training Center"; on page 7, line 19, after the word "center", to insert a comma and the words "or other Air Corps training schools or centers as may hereinafter be provided in accordance with this act"; on page 8, line 1, after the word "war", to insert a comma and the words "except no exclusion shall be made on account of color, creed, or race"; on page 8, line 25, after the word "discretion", to insert a comma and the words "provided the selection shall be made without regard to race, creed, or color"; on page 12, line 7, after the word "thousand", to insert a comma and the words "without regard to race, creed, or color."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, I do not know exactly what the Senator from Wyoming has proposed. I should be glad to have the clerk state the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wyoming.

The CHER CLERK. It is proposed, on page 4, line 12, after the word "schools", to insert a comma and the words "including at least one Negro school for the training of Negro air pilots" and a comma.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, I think that either of the proposals is satisfactory to me. I am not sure, however, that an amendment can be properly placed in the bill which will reach the point.

We all know that in every war we have fought members of the colored race have been most faithful and loyal soldiers. They have distinguished themselves on the battlefield. They are as loyal as any other group of people in the United States, and perhaps more patriotic. They never knew any flag but the Stars and Stripes. They have made greater improvement since the War between the States than any race in the history of the world ever made in the same length of time.

There are quite a number of Negro aviators in the United States at this time, and I ask to have printed as a part of my remarks a list of them, which has been handed to me.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

This list of Negro aircraft pilots were prepared in the office of the acting specialist, Negro statistics, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce, from information furnished by the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

Negro aviators

Name and address	License No.	Expiration date Feb. 28, 1939 Feb. 15, 1939 Apr. 30, 1939 May 15, 1939
Anderson, Charles A., 26 Ardmore Ave., Ardmore, Pa Coffey, Cornelius R., 1043 West Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill Greene, John W., Jr., 30 Bradford St., Boston, Mass Renfro, Earl W., 4646 Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill	7638 36609 15897 32546
LIMITED COMMERCIAL PILOTS		713 11
Allen, George W., 737 Waldon St., Latrobe, Pa Newkirk, Troy Webster, 574 St. Nicholas Ave., apartment 32, New York, N. Y. ¹ Powell, William J., 3705 Raymond Ave., Los Angeles, Calif. Wells, Irvin E., 938 East 48th St., Los Angeles, Calif.	32630 34797 24335 29884	May 31, 1939 Dec. 15, 1938 Mar. 15, 1939 Feb. 15, 1939
PRIVATE PILOTS	corbig	ma crists
Aiken, William, 1150 East 51st St., Los Angeles, Calif. Brown, Willa Beatrice, 5440 Indiana Ave., Chicago, Ill. Cable, Theodore, 423 North West St., Indianapolis, Ind. Chalmers, Willie J., Marion and Ist Ave., Glassboro, N. J.1. Claytor, W. W. Schieffelin, 1710 P St. NW., Washington, D. Cl. Cooper, Walter T., 173 Oakwood Pl., Orange, N. J. Davis, Ralph H., 51 Vine St., East Providence, R. I. Dillon, William H., 1528 Wallace St., Harrisburg, Pa. Forsythe, Albert E., 44 North Kentucky Ave., Atlantic City, N. J. Hutcherson, Fred, Jr., 1904 Asbury Ave., Evanston, Ill. Jackson, Abram D., 4020 West Lake Rd., Erie, Pa. Mills, Thomas, 238 West 146th St., New York, N. Y. 1 Expired.	35071 43814 33738 34527 31533 49886 45351 33192 27287 34679 49866 31780 30217	July 15, 1939 June 30, 1939 Nov. 30, 1939 Aug. 15, 1938 Dec. 15, 1938 July 15, 1939 Do. May 31, 1939 Oct. 31, 1937 May 31, 1939 Sept. 15, 1939 May 15, 1938 Sept. 30, 1939

Negro aviators—Continued PRIVATE PILOTS—continued

PRIVATE PILOTS—continued
Name and address	License No.	Expiration date
Paris, William, 1237 West 112th Pl., Chicago, Ill. Payne, L. Verdell, 306 Giles St., Ithaca, N. Y. Rey, Ernst F., Roosevelt Aviation School, Mineola, L. I., N. Y.¹ Robinson, John C., 3621 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, Ill. Sully, Justo R., 2109 8th Ave., New York, N. Y. Terry, Robert, Building Lane, Basking Ridge, N. J. Walker, Clinton T., Jr., 3858 Yemens St., Hamtramck, Mich. Ware, Charles, 227 West 149th St., New York, N. Y. Wheeler, Rostell C., 57 10th St., Springfield, Mass. White, Dale L., 4358 Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.	51064 28358 35216 26042 34781 29452 35477 34381 29196 34746	Aug. 15, 1939 July 31, 1939 July 31, 1939 July 31, 1939 May 15, 1939 Oct. 31, 1939 June 30, 1939 June 30, 1939 June 15, 1939
SOLO OR AMATEUR PILOTS
Cosby, Albert, 4612 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, Ill Darby, Dorothy, 307 Hendrie Ave., apartment 14, Detroit,	45027	Apr. 30, 193
Mich. Hankins, Roscoe, Jr., 2400 16th St. NW., Washington, D. O. Hurd, Harold, 6109 Calumet Ave., Chicago, Ill. Johnson, Charles Richard, 1048 West Van Buren St. Chi.	38794 58107 44998	Jan. 15, 194 Nov. 11, 193 Apr. 30, 193
cago, III Jones, Lola, 4919 Vincennes Ave., apartment 2, Chicago, III-Ray, Herman, 7235 Coles Ave., Chicago, III. Turner, Luther, 40 Herman St., Rochester, N. Y Walden, Coburn E., 1921 Magnolia St., Flint, Mich. Washington, Eddie, 110 North 2d St., Blytheville, Ark. Yates, Leonard L., 1975 Birchall Ave., New York, N. Y. 12_ Young, Perry H., 238 North Pleasant St., Oberlin, Ohlo	43038 43703 45512 43940 47366 47984 31806 43715	Apr. 15, 193 Do. Apr. 30, 193 Apr. 15, 193 May 15, 193 June 17, 193 Feb. 28, 193 Apr. 4, 193
STUDENT PILOTS	L GIA
Adair, Frank B., 1708 West 2d St., Pine Bluff, Ark. Alleyne, Joseph S., Jr., 38 Quincy St., Brooklyn, N. Y. Anderson, Grady Prince, Anderson, S. C. Ashe, Charles M., 1326 V St. NW., Washington, D. C. Avery, Delores, 3725 Rhodes Ave., Chicago, Ill. Benjamin, Zola A., 7381/£ East 48th St., Los Angeles, Calif. Black, William, Jr., 9022 Suthbin Blyd, Jamaica, Long Is.	54383 33428 (³) 54573 (³) (³)	Sept. 9, 193 June 21, 193 Aug. 4, 193 Sept. 29, 193 May 11, 193 Apr. 10, 193
land, N. Y.1	(3)	Oct. 28, 193
Brooks, Jesse L., 2441 7th Ave., apartment 42, New York, N. Y. Brown, Aaron, 2212 Division St., Baltimore, Md. Browning, Frank L., 4401 South Parkway, Chicago, Ill Bruce, Percy Lee, 1300 East 48th Pl., Los Angeles, Calif. Caldwell, Walter M., Jr., 123 West 129th St., New York,	51134 52476 (3) 55551	July 18, 193 Aug. 19, 193 June 7, 193 Sept. 1, 193
N. Y. Chipps, Leon A., 258 West 117th St., New York, N. Y. Coleman, Gus, 208 Inman Ave., Atlanta, Ga. Cox, Alexander, 220 East 55th St., Chicago, Ill. Davis, Albert Porter, 422 Minnesota Ave., Kansas City,	51133 45531 (³) (³)	June 23, 193 Apr. 30, 193 Feb. 18, 193 June 16, 193
Kans. Dickerson, Marie A., 12281/2 East Adams Blvd., Los Angeles,	3902	June 4, 193
Calif. Edmonson, Charles Milton, 946 East 24th St., Los Angeles, Calif. Calif.	(3)	Mar. 17, 193 Apr. 29, 193
Evans, Walter, 150-26 20th Ave., Whitestone, Long Island, N. Y.	(3)	Apr. 15, 193
Fisher, Albert Hobert, 1908 19th St., Santa Monica, Calif Freeman, Arthur Willie, 300 East Kennelworth Ave.,	(³) 57395	Oct. 21, 193
Freeman, Arthur Willie, 300 East Kennelworth Ave., Flint, Mich. Gales, Richard Alfred, 724 Wood St., Crestline, Ohio 1. Gans, Dr. Louis H., 6126 South Carpenter St., Chicago, Ill. Garrett, Leroy, 1068 West 13th St., Chicago, Ill. Greene, Bene LaRue, 877 East 47th St., Los Angeles, Calif. Grimmett, Theodore, 1704 Piggott Ave., East St. Louis, Ill. Hampton, Clyde Barthaw, 60 East 31st St., Chicago, Ill. Hanson, Jesse McCoy, 1018 4th St. NW., Washington, D. C. Harden, Rudy, 1509 Tacoma Ave., Tacoma, Wash. Hardel, Walter James, Jr., 42 Camp St., Providence, R. I.—Hawkins, Thomas, 504 Grand Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.—Herndon, Edward L., 76 South 23 St., Newark, Ohio. Howland, James H., 235 West 139th St., New York, N. Y.—Jackson, Lola, 172-06 108th Ave., Jamaica, Long Island, N. Y. Jefferson, Ann R., 9417 Parmalee Ave., Los Angeles, Calif.	(3) 43305 (8) 57404	Oct. 31, 193 Aug. 12, 193 Mar. 20, 193 Apr. 6, 193 Apr. 27, 193 Nov. 1, 193
Hampton, Clyde Barthaw, 60 East 31st St., Chicago, III Hanson, Jesse McCoy, 1018 4th St. NW., Washington, D. C.	(3) (3) 57282	Apr. 19, 193 Apr. 18, 193
Hardy, Fred, 257 North Artesian Ave., Chicago, Ill. Hareld, Walter James, Jr., 42 Camp St., Providence, R. I	(3) 57709	Aug. 1, 193 Nov. 3, 193
Hawkins, Thomas, 504 Grand Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y. Herndon, Edward L., 76 South 2d St., Newark, Ohio	41130	Aug. 21, 193 Feb. 7, 193
Jenerson, Karl Garrett, 9417 Parmaice Ave., Los Angeles,	8	Mar. 10, 193 Oct. 8, 193 Apr. 27, 193 Apr. 3, 193
Jones, Albert S., 444 East 64th St., Chicago, Ill.¹ Julian, Hubert, 2293 7th Ave., New York, N. Y.¹ Lilly, Joseph H 980 Washington Ave., Norfolk, Va. Love, Maxwell Lawrence, 1332 East 20th St., Los Angeles,	(3) (3) 42770	Apr. 28, 193 Apr. 28, 193 Apr. 1, 193
Calif. ¹ . Lowe, William E., 1714 Maypole Ave., Chicago, Ill. ¹ . Lundy, Russell G., 912 S St. NW., Washington, D. C. Lytle, Laurence E., 235 West 110th St., New York, N. Y.— McDonald, Clarence J. W., 1837 12th St. NW., Washington,	(3) (3) 48870 48206	Apr. 10, 193 Aug. 1, 193 June 17, 193 May 27, 193
D. C. McFarland, William P., 4641 South State St., Chicago, Ill.! Mitchell, Frank Braddock, 635 East 43d St., Los Angeles	48058 (3)	June 23, 193 May 2, 193
Calif.¹ Moulden, William W., 304 Grant St., Palo Alto, Calif. Muldro, Joseph, 1308 South Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.¹ O'Berry, Benny, 1315 NW. 6th Ave., Miami, Fla. Paris, Leon D., 1927 McCulloh St., Baltimore, Md. Parks, Perry C., Jr., 1335 East 15th St., Los Angeles, Calif Patrick, Howard N., 1409 West 35th Pl., Los Angeles, Calif Payne, Verdell L., 306 Giles St., Ithaca, N. Y. Perry, Lane G., 215 West 134th St., New York, N. Y. Porter, Ambers, 419 East 45th St., Chicago, Ill.	(3) 45437 (3) 58434 (3) (3) (3) (3) (3)	Apr. 30, 193 May 4, 193 Apr. 11, 193 Nov. 16, 193 June 3, 193 Apr. 10, 193 Apr. 3, 193 June 3, 193 Aug. 16, 193
Payne, Verdell L., 306 Giles St., Ithaca, N. Y. Perry, Lane G., 215 West 134th St., New York, N. Y. Porter, Ambers, 419 East 45th St., Chicago, Ill.	(8) 54784 (8)	Apr. 3, 193 June 3, 193 Aug. 16, 193 Mar. 22, 193

Amateur classification discontinued Nov. 1, 1937.

Student licenses issued prior to Nov. 1, 1937, did not bear license numbers.

Negro aviators-Continued STUDENT PILOTS-continued

Name and address	License No.	Expiration date
Proctor, Charles Vincent, 211 Murdock St., Canonsburg, Pa.		Aug. 3, 1939 June 15, 1937
Reed, Frank S., Jr., 5933 Lafayette Ave., Chicago, Ill	(3) 46079	May 12, 1939
Renfro. Anna Rosetta, 61 East 46th St., Chicago, Ill.		May 2 1937
Robinson, Robert Lee, 1109 Clanton St., Los Angeles, Calif.1	00000	Apr. 27, 1938
Ross, Curtis, 2300 East 97th St., Cleveland, Ohio	(3)	June 8, 1939
Ross, Harry M., 570 West 146th St., New York, N. Y.1	(3)	Jan. 26, 193
Ross, Timothy, 2300 East 97th St., Cleveland, Ohio St. Clair, Marie Rowe, 1102 West 61st St., Chicago, Ill	(3)	June 8, 1939 Sept. 4, 1939
Sansing, James, 302 Roosevelt St., Indianola, Miss.	(3)	July 15, 1938
Scott, David L., 116 Arnold St., Greenville, Miss	42257	Mar. 14, 1939
Sims, Willa Mae, 1670 East 111th St., Los Angeles, Calif.1	(3)	Apr. 17, 1938
mith, Archie, 34 Mount Morris Park, New York, N. Y mith, Floyd Joseph, 1309 Wallach Pl. NW., Washington,	53195	Aug. 16, 1939
D.C.	48270	June 7, 1939
Stanley, Milford, 190 Oakwood Pl., Orange, N. J	(3)	Dec. 25, 1939
ington, D. C.	(3)	Nov. 16, 1939
tevens, Leslie T., 1587 West 36th Pl., Los Angeles, Calif.1	(3)	Apr. 2, 1938
Strode, Bethel Julius, 3728 H St., Galveston, Tex.	(3)	May 4, 1939
Thomas, Robert, 229 West 136th St., New York, N. Y. Preadway, Timothy T., 108-43 171st Pl., Jamaica, L. I., N. Y.	40081	Apr. 3, 1937 Jan. 7, 1939
Valton, Bridget, 1786 West 35th St., Los Angeles, Calif.		May 8, 193
Vaterford, Janet Harmon, 363 East 51st St., Chicago, Ill.	(3)	June 17, 1938
Webster, George, 424 East 50th Pl., Chicago, Ill.1	(3)	May 2, 193
White, Harry C., 1163 East 51st St., Los Angeles, Calif.1	(3)	Apr. 3, 1939
Villiams, Lee A., 2527 East 115th St., Los Angeles, Calif. Villiamson, James C., 971 Austin St., Los Angeles, Calif. L.	(3)	May 18, 193 Apr. 27, 193

¹ Expired.
⁸Student licenses issued prior to Nov. 1, 1937, did not bear license numbers.

Although our effort has been to make this list of Negro aviators as complete as possible, some omissions and errors have no doubt occurred. Recipients of the list will confer a favor by calling our attention to omissions and errors.

Mr. LOGAN. As I have stated, Mr. President, I am not sure whether this amendment properly belongs in the bill. It seems to me, however, it can do no harm.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LOGAN. I yield.

Mr. BRIDGES. In connection with the list of aviators which the Senator has asked to have printed, I ask whether they are mainly aviators in the Military Establishment of the United States, or are they commercial aviators?

Mr. LOGAN. On page 313 of the hearings they are classified. The list was put into the record by Edgar G. Brown, who is the president of the United Government Employees. There are commercial pilots, limited commercial pilots, private pilots, solo or amateur pilots, and student pilots. None of them appear to be in the Regular Air Service of the United States.

The colored race comes and says, "We would like to have the privilege of fighting in your wars. If you have to have air pilots, we want to be in on it."

If I am correctly advised, the Civil Aeronautics Authority designates certain schools, and the War Department accredits those schools. At present I am advised-and I do not make the statement upon any authority except hearsay—that no institutions of learning for Negroes have been designated by the Civil Aeronautics Authority. It is true that no right is taken away from the Negro by the law as it is now, and the Civil Aeronautics Authority could designate such civilian schools and the War Department could accredit them; but it has not been done.

It seems that when a young colored man wants to go into the Air Service, and makes an application, he is in a good deal of difficulty, because he must be sent to some white civilian school, as there is no Negro civilian school to which he can go.

I am assuming that the amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire has been thoroughly worked out. I have tried to familiarize myself with it in the last few days. While it does not fit in exactly, I should like to have the Negroes of America know that the United States Senate appreciates their service in the past, and that when their sons go to the proper authority to ask to be enrolled, they need not be sent to some white school, where perhaps they would not be entirely happy. They would not be in the South, I am quite sure; the student bodies might not welcome them. It is unfortunate that such is the case, but we must take life as it is, and not as we would have it.

If either of the amendments should be adopted-and I do not think they differ materially, except that I think the Senator from New Hampshire has gone into the matter a little more fully-then such an institution as Howard University, or Wilberforce College, in Ohio, which has an R. O. T. C. unit, or Tuskegee Institute, in Alabama, or Hampton Institute, at Hampton, Va.—any of these could be designated by the Civil Aeronautics Authority and accredited by the War Department. Then, when Negroes asked for permission to enroll, they could be sent to one of those institutions. In my humble judgment, we ought to recognize this right, and I hope that one of the amendments will be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Bridges] to the amendment presented by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. Schwartz].

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, I should like to know whether the Chair has ruled that the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire cannot be considered as a substitute for the amendment I have offered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has so ruled. The question is on agreeing to the amendment to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. Schwartz].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I have a few amendments which have been approved by the committee, and which were overlooked in the report. I ask that they be presented.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendments offered by the Senator from Texas.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, on page 4, line 22, to strike out the word "call" and to insert in lieu thereof the word "order."

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 12, line 20, it is proposed to strike out the word "called" and to insert in lieu thereof the word "ordered."

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 12, line 24, it is proposed to strike out the word "called" and to insert in lieu thereof the word "ordered."

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 13, line 2, it is proposed to strike out the word "called" and insert in lieu thereof the word "ordered."

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 7, lines 16 and 17, it is proposed to strike out the words "completed not less than one year's" and to insert the word "performed."

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 7, line 19, following the word "Center", it is proposed to strike out the semicolon and to insert in lieu thereof a comma.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, on page 7, line 22, after the word "provided", to insert a semicolon.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment. If there be no further amendment to be offered, the question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REED (when his name was called). The junior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Stewart] is unavoidably absent from the Senate. Before he left I agreed to pair with him. If the junior Senator from Tennessee were present and at liberty to vote, he would vote "yea." If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. McKELLAR (when Mr. Stewart's name was called). The junior Senator from Tennessee is unavoidably detained from the Senate. If he were present and at liberty to vote, he would vote as stated by his pair, the Senator from Kansas [Mr. Reed].

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. BYRNES. I have a general pair with the Senator from Maine [Mr. Hale], but I am informed that if present he would vote as I intend to vote. I therefore am at liberty to vote, and vote "yea."

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis] and the junior Senator from Florida [Mr. Pepper] are detained on official business at Government departments.

I also announce that the junior Senator from Delaware

[Mr. Hughes] is unavoidably absent.

If the Senators named were present, they would all vote "yea."

I announce that the Senator from California [Mr. Downey] and the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE] are detained from the Senate because of illness. I am advised that if present and voting these Senators would vote "yea."

The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Bulow] is absent on official business.

The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Holt] and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] are detained because of illness.

The result was announced—yeas 77, nays 8, as follows:

	YE	AS-77
Adams Andrews Ashurst Austin Bailey Bankhead Barbour Barkley Bilbo Bone Bridges Brown Burke Byrd Byrnes Caraway Chavez Connally Danaher	Donahey Ellender George Gerry Gibson Glass Green Guffey Gurney Harrison Hatch Hayden Herring Hill Holman Johnson, Calif. Johnson, Colo. La Follette Lee	Logan Lucas Lundeen McCarran McKellar McNary Maloney Mead Miller Minton Murray Neely Norris O'Mahoney Overton Pittman Radcliffe Reynolds Russell	Schwellenback Sheppard Smathers Taft Thomas, Okla Thomas, Utah Tobey Townsend Truman Tydings Vandenberg Van Nuys Wagner Walsh Wheeler White Wiley
Davis	Lodge	Schwartz
	N.A.	YS-8
Borah Capper	Clark, Idaho Clark, Mo.	Frazier King	Nye Shipstead
	NOT V	OTING-11
Bulow Downey Gillette	Hale Holt Hughes	Lewis Pepper Reed	Smith Stewart

So the bill (H. R. 3791) was passed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGE REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ASHURST in the chair) laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States submitting several nominations in the Army, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF FINANCE COMMITTEE

Mr. HARRISON, from the Committee on Finance, reported favorably the following nominations:

Austin J. Mahoney, of Rochester, N. Y., to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 8, with head-quarters at Rochester, N. Y. (reappointment);

Surg. William L. Smith to be senior surgeon in the United States Public Health Service, to rank as such from April 15, 1939; and Asst. Surg. James G. Telfer to be passed assistant surgeon in the United States Public Health Service, to rank as such from February 5, 1939.

Mr. GUFFEY, from the Committee on Finance, reported favorably the nomination of Joseph T. McDonald, of Scranton, Pa., to be collector of internal revenue for the twelfth district of Pennsylvania, to fill an existing vacancy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will proceed to state the nominations on the calendar.

THE JUDICIARY

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Charles E. Clark to be judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the President be immediately notified of the confirmation of the nomination of Judge Clark.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the President will be notified.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Richard H. Rutledge to be Director of Grazing.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask that the nominations of postmasters be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations of postmasters are confirmed en bloc.

IN THE NAVY

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations for promotions in the Navy.

Mr. WALSH. I ask that the nominations in the nature of promotions in the Navy be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations for promotions in the Navy are confirmed en bloc.

That concludes the calendar.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. BARKLEY. As in legislative session, I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until tomorrow, Wednesday, March 8, 1939, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate March 7 (legislative day of March 6), 1939

APPOINTMENT IN THE REGULAR ARMY

Col. Edwin Martin Watson, Field Artillery, to be brigadier general from April 1, 1939, vice Brig. Gen. Evan H. Humphrey, United States Army, to be retired March 31, 1939.

APPOINTMENT TO TEMPORARY RANK IN THE AIR CORPS IN THE REGULAR ARMY

Col. Jacob Earl Fickel, Air Corps, to be wing commander with the rank of brigadier general, from March 1, 1939, vice Brig. Gen. Delos C. Emmons, wing commander, who accepted appointment as commanding general, General Headquarters Air Force, on March 1, 1939.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate March 7 (legislative day of March 6), 1939

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS

Charles E. Clark to be judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR

Richard H. Rutledge to be Director of Grazing, Department of the Interior.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY

Richard W. Ruble to be lieutenant commander. William E. Hennigar to be lieutenant commander, Samuel G. Fugua to be lieutenant commander. Joyce A. Ralph to be lieutenant commander. Philip D. Lohmann to be lieutenant commander. John A. Morrow to be lieutenant commander. William J. Mullins to be lieutenant commander. John R. Johannesen to be lieutenant commander. Oscar E. Hagberg to be lieutenant. Enoch G. Brian to be medical inspector. Harry A. Keener to be medical inspector. Harry M. Peterson to be chaplain.

POSTMASTERS

CALIFORNIA Mary E. Byrne, Hinkley. Lucy A. Angell, Rosamond.

Roy J. Summers, San Simeon. Pearl Bosch, Smith River. Opal Lambert, Summerland.

OHIO

Benjamin J. Chambers, Genoa.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

TUESDAY, MARCH 7, 1939

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m. The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou who art infinitely great and good, who hast set Thy glory above the heavens, create within us clean hearts; make our souls the sanctuary of Thy spirit. Impart unto us strength for our needs. In all that pertains to the issues of this day, possess us with Thy spirit that we may see clearly the way and walk fearlessly in consonance with the highest dictates of conscience. We earnestly pray Thee to make us rich in love that we may lose ourselves; fill us with faith that we may endure hardness and labor for the value of man, for whom our Saviour made the supreme sacrifice. From generation to generation may His voice resound through this burdened world. Heavenly Father, put a cross in our hearts; at its altar may we kneel, and henceforth may it be tomorrow's crown. Enable us to think nobly and to act worthily in the vocation whereunto our country has commissioned us. In the name of the Master. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate had passed a concurrent resolution of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. Con. Res. 3. Concurrent resolution authorizing the Temporary National Economic Committee of the Congress to have printed for its use additional copies of all parts of its hearings held in connection with a complete study and investigation with respect to the concentration of economic power in, and financial control over, the production and distribution of goods and services.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. BARTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

THE LATE FRANK W. STEARNS

Mr. BARTON. Mr. Speaker, years ago a leading Boston merchant, a trustee of Amherst College, used to come down to New York to attend the annual dinners of our Amherst Alumni Association. His purpose in coming was to tell us that we had a fellow alumnus in western Massachusetts, a young State senator, who would some day be President of the United States. The name of the State senator was Calvin Coolidge, the merchant was Frank W. Stearns.

We regarded his enthusiasm as a harmless eccentricity: but through the years he never wavered in his conviction that Providence had raised up this strange silent Yankee politician for special service to the Nation. The faith of Frank Stearns was fulfilled; he himself came to play a unique role in the life of our country. The closest friend of the President of the United States, he never asked a favor for himself or for anyone else. A dweller in the White House, he volunteered no advice, took no part in political discussions, sought to exercise no political influence. His attitude toward Coolidge was that of a father to a son. Seldom if ever has there been in our history such complete self-sacrificing devotion to a younger man on the part of an older friend. Stearns abandoned his business, put aside every personal consideration in order to serve the interests of Calvin Coolidge and, through him, as he firmly believed, the welfare of the United States.

He was peculiarly happy in his life and friendships. All of his dreams came true. He lived to see his dearest friend in the White House and his son, the Honorable FOSTER STEARNS, of New Hampshire, a Member of this body.

Running through the fabric of his practical New England character was a golden thread of mysticism. He was led in his last years to become a communicant of the Roman Catholic Church. He believed in God and in the American people. He never doubted that, in the long run, their voice would speak the divine decision. He lived 83 years, and his life was an abundant proof that love of country and unselfish friendship are the secret of serenity and peace.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HARNESS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD at this point on behalf of a bill which I recently introduced.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. HARNESS. Mr. Speaker, I have just introduced a bill which will force a drastic revision of the New Deal free-trade policy followed by Secretary of State Hull in negotiating reciprocal-trade agreements:

A bill (H. R. 4743) to repeal section 350 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, and to terminate all foreign-trade agreements entered into thereunder

Be it enacted, etc., That section 350 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

SEC. 2. After the effective date of this act, all foreign-trade agreements entered into by the President under the authority of said section 350 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, and all modification of existing tariff duties and import restrictions proclaimed by the President pursuant thereto, shall cease to have any force or

I realize, of course, that this has been the subject of many remedial measures and much debate and discussion in the Congress in recent years. Minority Members in both the House and Senate have opposed the program under which the free-trade doctrinaires have saddled a succession of these agreements upon the country. These same men in the minority have also repeatedly and forcefully warned against the damages which have resulted and are resulting from this blind sacrifice of American interests.

In submitting this measure, I know, therefore, there is little new that I can add to the case already made. Colleagues within my own party have pointed out that my protests will be ignored exactly as the protests of others have been during this regime. But I believe that the grave injustices resulting from New Deal tariff tinkering cannot be overemphasized. I believe that constant repetition on the subject will at least hasten the day when outraged public opinion will force the administration to remedy these injustices.

TRADE AGREEMENTS ARE INJURING INDIANA LABOR AND AGRICULTURE

Furthermore, it is my duty to speak the preponderant sentiments of my own district, which has been voiceless in this matter in recent years. I must also add to the already overwhelming evidence specific instances in which the present program has wrought serious hardships upon my Indiana friends and neighbors.

In my district there are steel mills, glass plants, shoe and paper factories, and other diversified industries bankrupt or working on reduced schedules, largely because foreign producers are absorbing an increasing share of their domestic market. There are thousands of skilled workers idle or on part time largely because low-wage foreign labor now has their jobs.

There are also hundreds of thousands of acres of Indiana farm land—literally the finest farm land in the world—in enforced idleness, while the farmers among my constituents are confronted with the bitter spectacle of sagging prices and a steadily growing invasion of their domestic markets.

The steel mill in my home town specializes in wire and farm fence. You would naturally assume that as a result of its favorable location and the consequent savings in freight rates, this mill would enjoy a practical monopoly in the immediate territory. Actually, however, Belgian barbed wire—shipped across an ocean, then reshipped half way across a continent—is retailing in the shadow of that mill at prices below those of the domestic products.

We naturally think of steel in this country as big business, and rightly so. Our mental picture of the steel industry is that of an industrial giant, capable of performing manufacturing miracles upon notice. We can scarcely imagine this domestic Goliath as being vulnerable to a foreign David. How, then, can a foreign steel producer undersell an American plant, in spite of the fact that he must absorb the important additional costs of freight and import duties? The answer for steel is the answer for a hundred other industries.

AMERICAN WAGE SCALES HIGHEST IN THE WORLD

Quality of product is a small factor in most cases. Where a foreign-made commodity is underselling an American-made counterpart, it will usually be found that the American product is superior in design, workmanship, and materials. That is demonstrably true in the case of the fence wire, which I use as an illustration. But that is by no means the important reason.

The Belgian wire maker clears the freight and tariff barriers almost solely on his advantage in wage scales. The average Belgian steelworker makes 17 cents per hour, while the average worker in an American steel plant earns 82 cents—almost five times as much. In fact, there is no steelworker anywhere else in the world who makes quite half as much as our own. The highest foreign scale is the English, where the worker receives 40 cents per hour. The lowest-paid steelworker is the Japanese, who receives only 10 cents per hour. Thus, the American workmen employed in the steel industry earn from 200 percent to 800 percent as much as their fellow workmen who make the steel in foreign mills.

If you were to run through every classification of industrial employment in this country, you would find American workmen enjoying similar wage advantages. In fact, nowhere else in the world does labor receive anything even remotely approaching the share of industrial income which goes to the people in industry here.

At Marion, Hartford City, Dunkirk, Redkey, and Gas City—all formerly prosperous industrial communities in our district—there are a number of glass plants which should be providing highly paid employment for several thousand skilled flint-glass workers. But here, also, foreign competition is making serious inroads on the industry. Foreign glass from Czechoslovakia, Japan, and England is now entering this country at such prices that every one of those plants is in a desperate struggle for its very existence, and idleness or parttime work is the lot of almost half of those skilled craftsmen. Yet, in the face of these facts, the administration made further concessions to foreign producers in the agreement recently concluded with Great Britain.

Worse still has been the plight of the shoe factories there. One in Huntington was long closed in bankruptcy and was finally reorganized only with the greatest difficulty. Another at Marion went through receivership and is now operating only because the employees themselves were willing to take the risk and the sacrifice of financing its reorganization out of their incomes. And neither of these companies is "out of the woods" yet by any means. In fact, they are confronted with foreign competition which can deliver shoes in their natural markets at or below their own former costs of production. For them this means deep cuts in production costs, including wages, must be effected. Or if not that, then it means added expenditures in a search for new outlets.

These examples are not merely selected exceptions. In fact they are distressingly typical. I could extend the story almost endlessly, for there are dozens of other industries in my district in similar plight. There are literally thousands of honest, industrious American workmen who are paying a terrific price for this New Deal folly; and they realize it. There are just as many thrifty, hard-working Hoosier farmers who also know the damage this program is inflicting on agriculture.

You can understand then that I speak the overwhelming desires of farmers, workers, and businessmen in my district when I urge an immediate revision of the destructive tariff policy which has brought about these conditions. Indiana producers want a fair chance to retain their natural domestic markets. Indiana labor wants a fair chance to make a decent, honest living. And I submit that this is nothing more than the minimum protection which our people have a right to expect and demand of the Government.

PRESENT TARIFF POLICY IS HURTING ENTIRE COUNTRY

If the total national results of this New Deal trade-agreement program were proving beneficial, I might be willing to admit the necessity of sacrificing my district to the general welfare of the Nation. But the things which are happening in the Fifth District of Indiana as a result of this policy are exactly the same things which are taking place everywhere else in the country. The Indiana story is merely the national story with local scenery.

Or if I could find any point of consistency between the New Deal domestic program and this tariff policy, I might at least understand the purposes which the administration has in mind in these trade agreements. But hunt as I will, I cannot find the first glimmer of intelligent relationship. At home the New Deal has tried for 6 frantic years to jack up prices, wages, and purchasing power. Everything attempted has been undertaken with that frankly avowed purpose. But, having worked on the one hand to rig wage and price levels, the administration has worked just as diligently on the other hand to knock down wages and prices through the reciprocal-trade agreements. It bemoans the misfortunes of our underprivileged, and preaches the gospel of the American standard of living; yet recklessly exposes us to the low-wage, low-standard foreign competition which is the surest brake upon any improvement in our own living standards. But, of course, this is merely another of the many New Deal violations of logic and arithmetic.

Even the constitutionality of the amendments by which this authority has been delegated to the Executive is sharply questioned. Important authorities maintain that Congress cannot divest itself of its constitutional duties of tariff and treaty making. I agree; but I see no reason to argue the matter of constitutionality of an act or practice which has proved so palpably unwise and costly.

RECORDS INDICATE THAT TRADE TREATIES ARE INEFFECTIVE

You know the important facts about our foreign trade in recent years, but I want to call certain items to your attention again; 1933 was the low point of foreign trade under the New Deal; 1937 was the high point. Between these years imports rose from $1,449,559,000 to $3,009,852,000—an increase of 107.6 percent. Exports likewise increased from $1,647,220,000 to $3,298,929,000; but here the increase, while impressive, was only 106.1 percent—slightly below the rate of increase in imports. To put it another way, in 1933 our exports exceeded our imports by some $200,000,000. In 1937 exports exceeded imports by some $290,000,000. Actually when volume of trade is considered, the percentage of favorable trade balance has diminished slightly over those 4 years. Every other factor aside, here is the proof that trade agreements are not working to our advantage.

When a New Deal department head starts glossing over the failures of the tariff program, a rosier type of figuring is invoked. As an example, a State Department release points to the export-import figures for January in 1937–38 to prove that the agreements are producing desirable results. Those figures indicate that exports increased 31.6 percent, while imports were declining 28.5 percent. The report, however, neglected to mention the significant fact that January of 1937 was at the peak of our business recovery, whereas January of 1938 found practically every important index near the bottom touched in the Roosevelt depression.

TRADE TREATIES FAVOR FOREIGN COUNTRIES

For the State Department's purpose, the figures are impressive. When compared with major trade indices for the same period, they become positively startling. They point out the fact that the slump in American business actually exceeded our drop in imports. They call glaring attention to the fact that our foreign competitors suffered lighter losses than our farmers, laborers, and businessmen. Since the figures are from New Dealers, they themselves have contrived a fitting commentary upon the blind course we are pursuing.

But let me point out further significant things about those figures. While the average of increase in exports was 31.3 percent, examination shows that the rate of increase to agreement countries was only 19.7 percent, while exports to nonagreement countries grew 35.7 percent in those selected months. On the other side of the picture, while imports were generally declining 28.5 percent, they fell only 21.1 percent from agreement countries, but dropped 32.3 percent from nonagreement countries. Taken as a complete picture, our trade position with nonagreement countries improved easily twice as much as it did with agreement nations. There, surely, is trade promotion in reverse.

INTERNATIONAL FACTORS AID AMERICAN EXPORTS

I scarcely need point out that the New Deal program has failed in spite of tremendous factors which have bolstered America in international trade. Most important among these factors have been dollar devaluation, plus heavy purchases of gold and silver; and the extreme demands for war materials from abroad. All these factors have served to swell our export trade.

When the New Dealers were presenting the case for devaluing our currency and sterilizing our gold reserves, half the argument in favor of the scheme was that it would automatically improve our competitive position in foreign trade. In fact, this was the only defensible assumption in the entire coin-clipping program. When we trimmed 40 percent off the dollar, we generously extended to any foreign country which cared to take advantage of the offer a flat 40 percent discount on every American commodity offered for sale in the international market. Dollar devaluation, likewise, amounted to a horizontal cut of 40 percent in all our existing tariff schedules.

The explanation, of course, is as simple as fifth-grade arithmetic. If, prior to devaluation, our dollar was worth 5 francs, it obviously took 5 units of the French buyer's money to buy a dollar's worth of American goods. Or if it were a case of a French seller sending goods into our markets, it took 5 francs to pay a dollar's worth of duty. But after devaluation the dollar which used to be worth 5 francs became a dollar worth only 3 francs. Because the franc became worth more in relation to our dollar, the Frenchman could buy more American goods, or pay more tariff duties with his money than before. The same was true of any foreign nation whose currency increased in value in relation to our dollar as a result of devaluation.

We at once made it easier for foreigners to buy goods, on the one hand, and we made it easier for the foreign shipper to pay his tariff duties here. This, of course, we did at a single stroke; and it was above and beyond every other concession the New Deal has so magnanimously made to our foreign competitors through the trade agreements.

GOLD PURCHASES SUBSIDIZE OUR FOREIGN TRADE

Our gold and silver purchasing has also had a tremendous influence on foreign trade. Since we have blindly followed this program of buying precious metals at ridiculously artificial prices, these metals have increasingly lost their monetary character and have more and more become inutile commodities. In the 5 years of money manipulation we have imported about $8,000,000,000 worth of gold and about $1,000,000,000 worth of silver. Only a fraction of this vast amount has had any sensible relation to the monetary system or to the normal balancing movements of international exchange. The vast residue should be frankly recognized for what it is—a heavy addition to our imports purchased out of American wealth. Common sense will tell you that this is just another way of financing foreign purchasers who come to our markets for American goods. It is some aid to our export trade, but it is an aid purchased at a terrific price.

Finally, even the most ardent New Dealer will admit that world conditions in the past few years have distinctly worked to our advantage in international trade. Widespread wars have raged, and the tensions between nations have grown increasingly bitter. As a result, there has been an unusual demand in our markets for all types of war materials and supplies. This, of course, has swollen our export volume. As a further result, foreign industrial systems have been so busy producing munitions and war materials that the natural competition we would ordinarily expect from them has been greatly curtailed.

Likewise, poor wheat yields in Canada and Australia, accompanied by good crops here, have also aided our exports. But these are extraordinary conditions which we cannot hope and do not want to see continued. America does not care to base its success in foreign trade on the misfortunes of the rest of the world.

No matter how you examine the records, these patent facts shine through the fog of wishful thinking, trick economics, and press agentry as proof that the New Deal reciprocal trade agreements have not only failed of their promises but that they are working tremendous hardships and losses on our farmers, laboring people, and our industries. And the fault obviously lies with the administration, which has usurped the congressional prerogative of tariff and treaty making. The trouble is born of those native, idealistic free-trade doctrinaires who have taken the subject of tariffs from the public forums to the star chamber, to the detriment of the American economy.

REPUBLICAN TARIFF METHODS THE ONLY SALVATION FOR AMERICAN LABOR, AGRICULTURE, AND INDUSTRY

Star-chamber tactics entered our tariff practice in 1934, as a New Deal amendment to the Tariff Act of 1930, a Republican measure which offered an honest, intelligent approach to our tariff problems. The Republican act of 1930 embodied the principles of reciprocity in tariffs. It established the Federal Tariff Commission as an impartial, bipartisan research and fact-finding body. It incorporated the flexible-duties feature, which is admittedly desirable in a world of unstable currencies.

Further, it insured the American enterpriser, farmer, and laboring man a voice in tariff making. It not only gave him the right to express his opinions in full and free open hearings, but it guaranteed that his elected representatives in Congress should be the final judges in accepting or rejecting tariff programs. But above everything else it guaranteed a schedule of duties which would protect the domestic markets against the inroads of low-wage, low-standard foreign competition

All this was Republican. All that has followed is New Deal. The Republican solution was an honest attempt to protect American wage scales and the American standard of living. The New Deal alternative is naive theorism sacrificing us to a world of realistic bargain drivers. The Republican method was an honest effort to provide for American welfare by giving voice to the farmers, laboring men, and industrialists. The New Deal alternative is to revert to the Old World star chamber, to which the common man has no access, and in which his interests are so consistently ignored.

This measure I offer is a simple one, but its importance is immeasurable. It fosters the interests of my district—and of the Nation. It will wipe out New Deal tariff tinkering and restore the sound principles of the act of 1930. And it will give back the duty of tariff making to those to whom the Constitution says it belongs—to the people and their elected representatives in Congress.

Under the Tariff Act of 1930 American farmers will again be given a chance to farm, and to supply the great domestic markets which have always been theirs. The skilled men and women who have always manned our industries will again have an opportunity for steady employment at decent, American wages. Our industrialists and businessmen will be permitted to operate at decent profits which will enable them to support the Government with taxes, and to serve as assets to the community and Nation.

I urge the passage of this measure for a return to sanity in tariff making as the broadest possible insurance of renewed prosperity in America.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I merely rise to call the attention of the House to the fact that today is an important anniversary in the history of our country.

Eighty-nine years ago today Daniel Webster made his famous 7th of March speech that probably had more effect on the affairs of this Nation at that time than any other one utterance made by any public man during that turbulant decade.

On that day, Mr. Speaker, there was born a man who was destined to play a great part in the history of America and, especially, to leave his imprint upon the history of the House of Representatives Champ Clark, of Missouri, a former Speaker of this House and one of the great men of this Republic. These two great men contributed much to the advancement of our American institutions, and we all join today in honoring their sacred memories. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SCHIFFLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and in addition thereto to include a publication in the Wheeling Intelligencer, relative to the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the Congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANGELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and to include a joint memorial of the Oregon Legislature with reference to the Port of Bay City, Oreg.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my colleague the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Wigglesworth] may have permission to extend his own remarks by publishing a statement he made over the radio.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and to include therein an address by our distinguished minority leader, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Martin], over the National Broadcasting Co. on Saturday, March 4, 1939, on the occasion of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the convening of the first Congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. GEARHART. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Appendix of the Record and to include therein a speech by the Secretary of the Interior, Hon. Harold L. Ickes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

CALENDAR WEDNESDAY

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that business in order on tomorrow, Calendar Wednesday, may be dispensed with.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

REORGANIZATION BILL OF 1939

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 4425) to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 4425, with Mr. McCormack in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox].

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, on the subject of the reorganization of the executive departments of the Government, I occupy the same ground that the opposition formerly occupied. If there has been any retreat, it has not been on my part. I opposed the reorganization bill that was considered during the last Congress. My opposition to the bill was predicated upon certain objections that were then developed in the debate. The gentleman responsible for bringing the pending measure before the House evidently took into account the objections then raised to that measure, as in the preparation of the bill all such objections are entirely eliminated. Therefore, I can find no valid ground upon which to base objection to this measure. Everyone frankly concedes that executive departments of the Government should be reorganized. Congress would probably undertake the task had it the facilities for working out essential details. Here draft is made upon the services of the official who is in best position to serve congressional needs. The President is designated as the agent to do the work, and heretofore there has been no serious objection to his being entrusted with the duties created by the bill. We must use his services if we are to get desired results. This is an intelligent approach to the solution of the problem.

Mr. Chairman, the bill we have before us may have been prepared upon the theory that some legislative power is being delegated to the President. I know there is difference of opinion between some of us as to this feature of the bill.

As for myself, I am not prepared to accede to the proposition that it is within the competency of the Congress to delegate essential legislative powers to the Executive, or to any other. This bill before us has been very carefully prepared, and no matter what theory the draftsmen may have had in mind in putting it together, it does not delegate any kind of legislative power to the agent of the Congress designated to do the job which the Congress proposes shall be done. The President is charged with the responsibility of making investigation, of ascertaining facts, and then applying the formula or rule which Congress lays down in the bill. There is left to the President no freedom of discretion that he might exercise independently of congressional control. The powers to be exercised under the bill are not legislative. They are not executive, but are ministerial only. The President is not given a roving commission of broad and unlimited powers to work his will upon the problem, but is confined within certain channels by limitations set up in the bill.

Mr. Chairman, except for some doubts expressed by some Members, I would hardly be justified in participating in this debate. But, for the benefit of the record, and for the influence it might have upon the determination of some question that might arise in the future in the event the bill is attacked in the courts, I feel it necessary to express a contrary opinion to that entertained by the author of the bill as expressed in the report filed by him. Certainly there is nothing critical in what I say. The gentleman, along with the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN], deserves the thanks and the applause of this House and the country, because they have done a wonderful job in the construction of the measure, and in their presentation of the proposal to the House. Because of their perseverance I believe we are now closer to the adoption of a reorganization bill, that its operation will reflect greater credit upon everyone taking part in its passage, than has heretofore been the case. The bill is expressive of the will of this House wholly uninfluenced by any outside interference.

I note in the report of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN], the author of the bill, that he says that the bill "unlike the bill voted on in August 1937, is a bill which has as its objective solely the reduction of agencies in the executive branch of the Government."

I think the gentleman inadvertently used the word "solely" because his bill is so drawn as to effectuate its major purpose, as set out in section 1, part 1; that is, reduce expenditures; increase efficiency; group, coordinate, and consolidate executive agencies of the Government; to reduce the number of such agencies through consolidation; and to eliminate overlapping and duplication of effort.

If my brethren will indulge me, I should like, in the effort to dissipate any doubt that may be upon their minds as to the constitutionality of the procedure here taken, to quote somewhat extensively from a decision of the Supreme Court rendered at the October term, 1938, in the case of Currin and others against Wallace. This was a case in which the constitutionality of the Tobacco Inspection Act of August 23, 1935, was raised. Gentlemen will recall the general provisions of that law. In this opinion the Court said:

Congress finds that the classification of tobacco according to type, grade, and other characteristics affects the prices received; that "without uniform standards of classification and inspection the evaluation of tobacco is susceptible to speculation, manipulation, and control" and "unreasonable fluctuations in prices and quality determinations occur," constituting a burden upon commerce; and that the use of uniform standards is imperative "for the protection of producers and others engaged in commerce and the public interest therein."

The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to investigate the handling, inspection, and marketing of tobacco and to establish standards by which its type, grade, size, condition, or other characteristics may be determined, and these standards are to be the official standards of the United States (secs. 3, 4).

The Secretary is authorized to designate those markets where tobacco bought and sold at auction or the products customarily manufactured therefrom move in commerce. He is not to designate a market unless two-thirds of the growers, voting at a prescribed Congress finds that the classification of tobacco according to a market unless two-thirds of the growers, voting at a prescribed referendum, favor it. The act provides that after public notice that a market has been so designated, no tobacco shall be offered for sale at auction thereon until it has been inspected and certified by an authorized representative of the Secretary according to the established standards.

Violation of the requirement of inspection and certification at designated markets is made a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than 1 year,

On the question of the delegation of power, the Court said:

The argument that there is an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power is equally untenable. This is not a case where Congress has attempted to abdicate or to transfer to others the essential legislative functions with which it is vested by the Constitution (art. I, sec. 1; sec. 8, par. 18). See Panama Refining Co. v. Ryan (293 U. S. 528, 541, 542, 553). We have always recognized that legislation must often be adapted to conditions involving details with which it is impracticable for the legislature to deal directly We have said that "The Constitution has never been regarded as denying to the Congress the necessary resources of flexibility and practicality which will enable it to perform its function in laying down policies and establishing standards, while leaving to selected instrumentalities the making of subordinate rules within prescribed limits and the determination of facts to which the policy as declared by the legislature is to apply. Without capacity to give authorizations of that sort, we should have the anomaly of a legislative power which in many circumstances calling for its exertion would The argument that there is an unconstitutional delegation of thorizations of that sort, we should have the anomaly of a legislative power which in many circumstances calling for its exertion would be but a futility" (Panama Refining Co. v. Ryan, supra). In such cases "a general provision may be made, and power given to those who are to act under such general provisions to fill up the details" (Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat, 1, 43). We think that the Tobacco Inspection Act belongs to that class.

So far as growers of tobacco are concerned, the required reference of the content of the state of the content of the state of Inspection Act belongs to that class.

So far as growers of tobacco are concerned, the required referendum does not involve any delegation of legislative authority. Congress has merely placed a restriction upon its own regulation by withholding its operation as to a given market "unless two-thirds of the growers voting favor it."

Here it is Congress that exercises its legislative authority in making the regulation and in prescribing the conditions of its application. The required favorable vote upon the referendum is one of these conditions. The distinction was pointed out in Hampton & Company v. United States (276 U. S. 304, 407), where, in sustaining the so-called "flexible tariff provision" of the act of September 21, 1922, and the authority it conferred upon the President, we said: "Congress may feel itself unable conveniently to determine exactly when its exercise of the legislative power should become effective, because dependent on future conditions, and it may leave the determination of such time to the decision of an executive, or, as often happens in matters of State legislation, it may be left to a popular vote of the residents of a district to be effected by the legislation. While in a sense one may say that such residents are exercising legislative power, it is not an exact statement, because the power has already been exercised legislatively by the body vested with that power under the Constitution, the condition of its legislation going into effect being made dependent by the legislature on the expression of the voters of a certain district."

Nor is there an unconstitutional delegation to the Secretary of Agriculture. Congress has set forth its policy for the estab-

Nor is there an unconstitutional delegation to the Secretary of Agriculture. Congress has set forth its policy for the establishment of standards for tobacco according to type, grade, size, condition, and other determinable characteristics. Sections 3, 4. condition, and other determinable characteristics. Sections 3, 4. The provision that the Secretary shall make the necessary investigations to that end and fix the standards according to kind and quality is plainly appropriate and conforms to familiar legislative practice as shown by the various statutes already mentioned. It is not different in principle from the authority conferred upon the Secretary of the Treasury to establish "uniform standards of purity, quality, and fitness for consumption of all kinds of teas imported into the United States" (Butterfield v. Stranahan (192 U. S. 470, 494)), or from that conferred upon the Interstate Commerce Commission to fix standards for safety devices and equipment (St. Louis & Iron Mountain R. Co. v. Taylor (210 U. S. 281, 286, 287); Napier v. Atlantic Coast Line (272 U. S. 605, 612)) or from that conferred upon the Secretary of War to determine whether bridges and other structures constitute unreasonable obstructions to navigation and to specify and prescribe the structural changes that are required (Union Bridge Co. v. United States (204 U. S. 364)).

The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to designate those

The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to designate those markets where tobacco bought and sold thereon at auction moves in commerce. Section 5: This calls for the ascertainment of a fact. The intention of Congress is clear that markets thus ascertained The intention of Congress is clear that markets thus ascertained shall be designated subject to the prescribed conditions and as rapidly as facilities for inspection are available. We find no unfettered discretion lodged with the administrative officer. The requirement of a referendum, as already noted, calls for the expression of the wishes of the growers and the Secretary acts merely as an administrative agent in conducting the referendum. The provision for the suspension of a designated market because competent inspectors are not available or the quantity of tobacco is not enough to justify the cost of the service, sets forth definite as well as reasonable criteria. The statute also lays down a practical rule for the guidance of the Secretary in the selection of markets in the event that because of lack of inspectors or other reasons the Secretary is unable to furnish inspection and certification at all auction markets within a type area. In that case he is first to designate those auction markets "where the greatest number of growers may be served with the facilities available to him."

The statute thus defines the policy of Congress and establishes

The statute thus defines the policy of Congress and establishes standards within the framework of which the administrative agent is to supply the details. The provisions of the act are well within the principle of permissible delegation which we applied in relation to the administration of the forest reserve in United States v. Grimaud (220 U. S. 506, 517); to the allocation of licenses, wave lengths, etc., in Federal Radio Commission v. Nelson Bros. Co. (289 U. S. 266, 285); and to the exercise of the powers conferred upon the Interstate Commerce Commission in New York Central Securities Corporation v. United States (287 U. S. 12, 24).

This same question was discussed in the case of United States v. Grimaud (220 U. S. 517). In that case Mr. Associate Justice Lamar, speaking for the Court, said:

It must be admitted that it is difficult to define the line which separates legislative power to make laws from administrative authority to make regulations. This difficulty has often been recognized and was referred to by Chief Justice Marshall in Wayman v. Southard (10 Wheat. 1, 42), where he was considering the authority of courts to make rules. He there said: "It will not be contended that Congress can delegate to the courts, or to any other tribunals, powers which are strictly and exclusively legislative. But Congress may certainly delegate to others powers which the legislature may rightfully exercise itself." What were these nonlegislative powers which Congress could exercise but which might also be delegated to others was not determined, for he said: "The line has not been exactly drawn which separates those important subjects, which must be entirely regulated by the legislature itself from those of less interest in which a general provision may be made and power given to those who are to act under such general provisions to fill up the details."

From the beginning of the Government various acts have been passed conferring upon executive officers power to make rules and regulations—not for the government of their departments but for administering the laws which did govern. None of these statutes could confer legislative power. But when Congress had legislated and indicated its will it could give to those who were to act under such general provisions "power to fill up the details" by the establishment of administrative rules and regulations, the violation of which could be punished by fine or imprisonment fixed by Congress, or by penalties fixed by Congress or measured by the injury done.

Thus it is unlawful to charge unreasonable rates or to dis-It must be admitted that it is difficult to define the line which the injury done.

by Congress, or by penalties fixed by Congress or measured by the injury done.

Thus it is unlawful to charge unreasonable rates or to discriminate between shippers, and the Interstate Commerce Commission has been given authority to make reasonable rates and to administer the law against discrimination. Int. Com. Comm. v. Ill. Cent. R. R. (215 U. S. 452); Int. Com. Comm. v. Chicago, Rock Island, &c. R. R. (218 U. S. 83). Congress provided that after a given date only cars with drawbars of uniform height should be used in interstate commerce, and then constitutionally left to the Commission the administrative duty of fixing a uniform standard. St. Louis & Iron Mountain R. R. v. Taylor (210 U. S. 281, 287). In Union Bridge Co. v. United States (204 U. S. 364); In re Kollock (165 U. S. 526); Buttfield v. Stranahan (192 U. S. 470) it appeared from the statutes involved that Congress had either expressly or by necessary implication made it unlawful, if not criminal, to obstruct navigable streams; to sell unbranded oleomargarine; or to import unwholesome teas. With this unlawfulness as a predicate the executive officers were authorized to make rules and regulations appropriate to the several matters covered by the various acts. A violation of these rules was then made an offense punishable as prescribed by Congress. But in making these regulations the officers did not legislate. They did not go outside of the circle of that which the act itself had affirmatively required to be done, or treated as unlawful if done. But confining themselves within the field covered by the statute they could adopt regulations of the nature they had thus been generally authorized to make, in order to administer the law and carry the statute into effect.

And again he said in Field v. Clark (143 U. S. 649, 694):

The legislature cannot delegate its power to make a law, but it The legislature cannot delegate its power to make a law, but it can make a law to delegate a power to determine some fact or state of things upon which the law makes, or intends to make its own action depend. To deny this would be to stop the wheels of government. There are many things upon which wise and useful legislation must depend which cannot be known to the law-making power and must therefore be a subject of inquiry and determination outside of the halls of legislation.

So, Mr. Chairman, there should be no serious doubt in the mind of anyone about the constitutional right of the Congress to do what is here proposed. The bill simply declares what is the purpose of the Congress and then sets out in language simple and understandable how those purposes can be effectuated. It names the President as its ministerial agent and charges him with the duty of investigating and ascertaining the facts and making application of the rule which is prescribed. In performing under the act the President exercises no legislative or executive power, but only as the ministerial agent of the Congress acts in accordance with directions that are given.

Some contend that under the bill there is provision made for the exercise of discretion on the part of the President, but that contention is erroneous. There is no room for freedom of discretion. There can be none if the bill is to stand against attack in the courts.

Mr. Chairman, possibly I would have preferred considering this question of reorganization under a plan submitted by the President, but the President has submitted no plan, and probably for the very good reason that he knows that such would have been an idle gesture; but the fact that this has not been done does not relieve this House of its own responsibility to do its part to eradicate the evils which are admitted to exist. If reorganization is necessary, and if that is the opinion of the House, then there is here before us the opportunity to bring it about.

So, Mr. Chairman, as one who believes he is entirely independent of every sort of pressure influence—and there has been none exerted in behalf of this bill—as one who has heretofore opposed reorganization upon certain grounds, I want to say that I find nothing in this proposal which offends the Constitution or my own understanding of what is reasonable and right.

Thus far the indications have been that our friends, the minority, will possibly, en bloc, oppose the adoption of this bill. I trust that that will not prove to be the case. Reorganization is not a partisan question. This bill should not be made a partisan issue.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. With great pleasure. Mr. MICHENER. The gentleman says reorganization is not a partisan question. In the last Congress, when the matter was being considered by the House, it was made a partisan question, and the distinguished majority leader [Mr. RAYBURN], who is now on the floor, took the floor as a partisan and appealed to the House to pass the bill as a partisan measure.

Mr. COX. If the former bill did take on the complexion of partisanship, it is to be regretted. However, if that was the case, it is no justification for our repeating a similar performance on this occasion. This is our common country, and we all want to serve it well.

Mr. MICHENER. I agree with that. Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. Certainly.

Mr. RAYBURN. Of course I took the floor and made an appeal to my colleagues on the Democratic side to support the measure, because I knew that was the only way to save it, and that will probably turn out to be so in the instant case, because I understand a conference was held yesterday afternoon. I do not know just what resolves were made, if any, but one gentleman on the Republican side, the leader in the opposition to this bill, made it a partisan issue yesterday insofar as he could, by saying that he was against any bill that would give to the present President of the United States any additional power.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I yield.

Mr. McCORMACK. I might call to the attention of my friend from Georgia the fact that apparently the merits of the bill will not govern the action of certain Members. Yesterday the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LAMBERTSON] said that he would not vote for this bill because he felt that the present man in the White House was not the man to reorganize the Government.

Mr. COX. Such remarks are to be regretted. It is quite probable that if the gentleman had presented to him the opportunity to make correction he would withdraw that statement. He probably had no serious intention of challenging the motives of the President.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. COX. I yield.

Mr. GIFFORD. I think I made a reasonable speech on yesterday and that the whole text of the speech fully explains the matter. Several Members tried to place me in an embarrassing position, but I think I expressed myself in my statement in a way and manner which anyone with any wish to understand would fully understand.

Mr. RAYBURN. I have no disposition to quarrel with anybody on this side or on the other side.

Mr. GIFFORD. There was plenty of quarreling yesterday, and now it has been brought up again. I simply ask anyone differing with me to read my remarks fully if he wants to interpret it.

As far as what the gentleman from Texas said last year, I read his remarks of last year only yesterday.

Mr. RAYBURN. That is perfectly all right, but I certainly did not start any quarreling this morning.

Mr. GIFFORD. The gentleman from Texas raised this issue.

Mr. RAYBURN. I did not. The gentleman from Michigan started this when he said it was a partisan issue.

Mr. GIFFORD. The gentleman from Michigan did not mention it in his speech. I was the one who mentioned it, day before yesterday.

Mr. MICHENER. I referred to positions taken in the last Congress on the reorganization bill. If anyone here says it was not a partisan question, why were the telephones so busy, why were so many Members being called to the phone and, man after man-and they will not deny it-told what to do?

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I cannot yield further.

Mr. GIFFORD. Here is the speech of the gentleman from Texas right here, if you would like to have the facts as to what he said in the RECORD.

Mr. COLE of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I yield.

Mr. COLE of New York. Apparently the gentleman is attempting to create the inference that the minority is injecting partisanship into this discussion. If the sponsors of this measure are so completely free of partisanship, would the gentleman tell me why section 11 was inserted in this bill limiting the application of the reorganization powers to the present President and to no succeeding President? If it is good for one President to do this why is it not good for his successor to have the same power?

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, on that question there is difference of opinion as between members of the Reorganization Committee. Those really dominating the question more or less arbitrarily accepted the date fixed in the bill, or else they timed expiration with the end of the term of the present President. But I am of the opinion that to make valid the grant it was necessary to fix some time within which the power was to be exercised; and I say this in spite of the fact that I know that heretofore a reorganization bill was passed in which no limitation as to performance was imposed.

In the Schechter case the Supreme Court on this particular point indicated that time of performance could not be left to the discretion of the delegate.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 additional minutes to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I yield.

Mr. WARREN. I think the gentleman from Georgia has covered it, but I may say further to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cole] that what governed us in putting a limitation in the bill was that we felt that an incoming President should not be bound by this particular scheme if he did not desire it, that we should not hamper an incoming President with it, that we should leave it up to him to make his own recommendations.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I yield. Mr. MICHENER. If Congress is going to do the reorganizing eventually, and we write a formula, why should we not write a formula that is good for Mr. A as President as well as for Mr. B as President?

Mr. WARREN. The gentleman and I are not an inch apart on that. As far as I am concerned, I am willing to see it made permanent law, but we did this to meet the objection that had been made by many Members that it should be confined to a single President.

Mr. MICHENER. May I say one thing more? I am not without misgivings. I have not yet decided how I am going to vote on this bill. There was no conference last night at which the Republicans decided how the Republicans were going to vote. We do not hold caucuses. We hold conferences, discuss our views, and then the Members are not bound but are permitted to vote as their consciences dictate.

Mr. WARREN. I am delighted to hear that. I have not accused the Republicans of that.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, in debate, of course, gentlemen will sometimes indulge in extravagant statements which do not altogether represent their quiet and deliberate judgment.

It has been stated by some that their sole objection to the pending bill is lack of confidence in the Chief Executive to believe that he will earnestly carry out the provisions of the law. I cannot believe that any gentleman really believes this. Speaking for myself, I have differed from the President on many occasions, but I could not say and I would not say that I have not the confidence in him to believe that he will faithfully perform the trust that is here reposed and bring back to us a reorganization plan or plans that we can gladly accept. He is obliged to be as greatly interested in bringing about the purposes of the bill as any other.

Mr. Chairman, in the instant case the Congress is doing a rather unusual thing in attaching to the grant the condition that Congress may set aside what is done in pursuance thereof by concurrent resolution. It is legal and has been done before but is unusual.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Will the gentleman yield right upon the point he is discussing?

Mr. COX. I yield to the gentleman from Montana.

Mr. O'CONNOR. My interpretation of section 5 of the bill is that the plan becomes effective unless within 60 days the Congress by concurrent resolution adopts a contrary

Mr. COX. That is correct.

Mr. O'CONNOR. All right. Now, is Congress required to adopt that plan in toto or is the plan subject to amendment?

Mr. COX. It is either up or down. That is my opinion and I think I am correct.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Is it fair that this Congress should be bound by a plan in toto that the President or anybody else may bring before this Congress and not have it subjected to amendment?

Mr. WARREN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina. Mr. WARREN. I will tell the gentleman why. I approached the problem for 3 months to give us a right to amend one of these plans, and after an exhaustive study of at least 3 months it was found it was humanly impossible. that there was no possible way whereby a rule could be drawn which would prevent a filibuster; therefore, give the opponents the right to vote, if you allowed amendment. In effect it will amount to this: Suppose the President would send up a plan with 15 or 20 propositions in it. Suppose all the debate centered around one single thing or two single things and the plan was rejected. There is nothing in the world to keep him from sending up the next day the very items in the plan to which there was no objection. It was simply impossible to prepare a rule which would prevent filibuster if we allowed amendments.

Mr. O'CONNOR. May I suggest this: Supposing the plan of the President would include say the transfer of the Forestry Department to the Interior Department, taking it away from the Department of Agriculture, and the gentlemen who happened to represent the western country or who may represent the western country in the next Congress, either ourselves or somebody else, would object to that transfer. Our hands are tied if we vote for this bill. In other words, we are hog-tied, as the phrase is used, if we adopt the rule here today that whatever plan he brings in, or whatever plan the President brings in, may not be subjected to amendment.

Mr. COX. If any plan offends a majority of the two Houses, then it can be set aside by Congress.

I was saying that what we are doing here is rather unusual. It is not the normal way of legislating. There are but few other incidents in our legislative history that accord with it. We are providing for something that is in the nature of a referendum. We designate an agent to do something which we cannot well do and at the same time provide that in the event we are dissatisfied with the result of his study and labor we may by concurrent resolution reject it. I might say, however, that I have no objection to the setting up of this check on the delegate. When Congress was considering the reorganization bill of 1932, which bill charged the President with the duty of working out a reorganization plan, the then Attorney General rendered an opinion in which he said that attaching the condition to the grant that any order made by the President might be vacated by action of either House was unconstitutional. This is erroneous. The Attorney General said that neither a simple nor concurrent resolution would satisfy the law; that nothing less than legislation would suffice. In my opinion, this opinion of the Attorney General was erroneous.

Mr. Chairman, if we expect to get reorganization of the executive departments of the Government within any time in the near future, a reorganization which effectuates economy, promotes efficiency, and eliminates duplications as a result of performance under the major provisions of the act, then this is our opportunity; and I trust that those on both sides of the aisle may find it perfectly agreeable to their sense of what is reasonable and right to adopt this measure and let this work be done. If there is any breach of the trust that is reposed, then we can exercise our right of rejection by concurrent resolution. [Applause.]

Mr. COLE of New York. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I yield to the gentleman from New York.
Mr. COLE of New York. There is a point involved in the bill which I would like to have the gentleman answer, because, being a leader on the Rules Committee, he is particularly fitted to answer this question. Is it the thought of the gentleman that this Congress, even by legislative act, has the power to prescribe the rules for a succeeding Congress?

Mr. COX. Oh, it is not binding, of course; no. This rule would simply govern the action of the two Houses—that is, the adoption of this bill, in which this rule is set up, would govern the action of the two Houses until repealed by either House.

Mr. COLE of New York. Until the Seventy-seventh Congress came into being; is that true?

Mr. COX. No; either House of the Congress might amend the rule the following day.

Mr. COLE of New York. Assume they did not amend it. Mr. COX. As a matter of fact, they might disregard it, because neither House of the Congress can constitutionally tie their hands in the fixing of their own rules.

Mr. COLE of New York. If then tomorrow the House of Representatives may ignore part 2 of this bill, why do we enact it?

Mr. COX. Yes; but it would be a most violent assumption to say that such a thing would take place.

Mr. COLE of New York. That is true. What I have in mind is that when the Seventy-seventh Congress comes into being on January 3, 1941, if part 2 is not binding on that Congress then what is to prevent the President from submitting a sweeping reorganization proposal on January 19 or a few days before his term expires?

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. COX. Yes.

Mr. WARREN. Of course, Congress could repeal this rule the day after it was enacted because the Constitution fixes in each House of the Congress the right to make its own rules; but is not this the answer, I may say to the gentleman, that we are setting up the rule for the consideration of this specific legislation? Is there no such thing as honor left in legislation any more? Does the gentleman believe either House after fixing the rule to consider this specific legislation would turn around after its enactment and repeal the rule?

Mr. COLE of New York. Not as far as the Seventy-sixth Congress is concerned, of course, but there is nothing we can do to bind the Seventy-seventh Congress.

Mr. COX. If I get the gentleman's thought, it is that this rule cannot be binding upon the new Congress?

Mr. COLE of New York. For that one month of January.
Mr. COX. It would be binding upon the Congress until either amended or repealed.

Mr. COLE of New York. That is right.

Mr. COX. That is correct.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. Burdick].

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Chairman, after listening to the debate upon this bill I have come to three definite conclusions: First, that the bill now before this body is not the same bill that was here last year; second, that it is going to pass because there are enough Democrats here to pass it; and third, the people have elected Democrats as the majority of this Congress and consequently they will be responsible to the people for this measure.

As I look at it, as the bill now stands it does not make a great deal of difference whether it passes or whether it does not pass. No power is leaving the Congress. I may say as one Republican that I have never been to any caucus or had any understanding with respect to how I am going to vote on the bill, and I am not saying now how I shall vote on it. However, I want to address this House on what I believe is a more serious question, one that affects the life and liberty of the American farmer.

Mr. Chairman, on the first day of this session I introduced in the House a resolution for the appointment of a Select Committee to investigate the subject of futures trading. It is known as House Resolution 25, and it has been referred to the Committee on Rules. The board of trade lobbyists that infest this city have sought in every possible way to prevent the appointment of such a committee and the holding of hearings on futures trading. Thus far the Committee on Rules has taken no action on my resolution.

On the second day of last month I addressed the House on the importance of an investigation such as is called for in House Resolution 25. I made mention of some very pertinent facts. I not only charged that futures contracts are gambling contracts and are generally recognized by the courts as such, but I also charged openly, on the floor of this House, that the practice of futures trading fixes a low ceiling above which the price of wheat and the price of cotton and the price of other exportable products cannot rise, try as we may to enact farm legislation in behalf of agriculture. That is a very grave charge for this House to permit to pass unchallenged.

I charged openly, on the floor of this House, that our farmers in the United States are today as much subject to the economic domination of Great Britain as they were in colonial days, before the Revolutionary War. I charged, and I now renew the charge, that the price of wheat and cotton and other exportable farm products is dictated from England; and that, due to the operation of the futures market ticker tape, American prices are lower than prices paid at Liverpool, which is a buyer's world market. That is a very grave charge for this House to permit to pass unchallenged.

I made other charges, which I am prepared to support. I charged openly, on the floor of the House, that Secretary of Agriculture Wallace condones the criminal conduct of the Chicago Board of Trade and permits his underlings to print, publish, and distribute false propaganda in support of such conduct. I mentioned one of several instances of that sort. I mentioned the propaganda article of H. S. Irwin, a Commodity Exchange Administration pay-roller, which was published in the June 1937 issue of the Illinois Law Review. That is a very grave charge for this House to permit to pass unchallenged.

I charged, and I now renew the charge, that Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and the Commodity Exchange Administration have condened the favoritism that has been shown by the business-conduct committee of the Chicago Board of Trade in favor of certain traders and against certain other traders. That is a very grave charge for this House to permit to pass unchallenged.

Mr. Chairman, I have barely begun to mention the charges that I shall, in due time, level against Secretary Wallace, the Commodity Exchange Administration, and the Chicago Board of Trade. The Commodity Exchange Act is not being enforced as the Congress intended it to be enforced. And Secretary Wallace and the Commodity Exchange Administration are equally guilty along with the commodity gamblers who continue, under the protection of friendly governmental agents, to rob and to exploit the farmers.

I shall be more specific in my charges. The Commodity Exchange Act, by its express terms and provisions, contemplates that the futures contract markets shall be markets for the future delivery of commodities. Today the wheat futures market, for example, is more of a gambler's market and less of a market for future delivery than it was yesterday. During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1937, the volume of deliveries under wheat futures contracts, on the Chicago Board of Trade, was only fifteen one-hundredths of 1 percent, and in the ensuing fiscal year the volume of deliveries was only thirteen one-hundredths of 1 percent. That is a very grave charge for this House to permit to pass unchallenged.

I charge that Secretary Wallace and the Commodity Exchange Administration, well knowing that one of the chief reasons for the enactment by the Congress of the Commodity Exchange Act was to eliminate excessive speculation in futures contract markets, have condoned the recent action of the Chicago Board of Trade in reducing margin requirements in wheat futures trading from 4 cents a bushel to 2 cents a bushel, with the obvious intention of stimulating speculation. That is a very grave charge for this House to permit to pass unchallenged.

I charge that short selling is rampant in all futures contract markets that are under the jurisdiction of Secretary Wallace and of the Commodity Exchange Administration. That is a very grave charge for this House to permit to pass unchallenged.

Mr. Chairman, my time is limited today. I shall have more to say on this important subject in the near future. However, before I take my seat I wish to go on record with another very serious charge against Secretary Wallace and the Commodity Exchange Administration. I refer to the willful violation by the Chicago Board of Trade of one of the most fundamental conditions imposed by the Commodity Exchange Act on futures contract markets. This willful violation has been under the protection of friendly governmental agents who are responsible to Secretary Wallace.

The Chicago Board of Trade boasts that it is the largest grain market in the world. That is far from the truth. It is a big gambling institution, dealing extensively in lottery tickets on price fluctuations, but it handles very, very little actual grain. This has for a long time been a bone of bitter contention between the Chicago Board of Trade, on the one hand, and the farmers, on the other hand. Yet the Chicago Board of Trade will not furnish any figures. The law requires, as a condition precedent to designation by the Secretary as a contract market that such market shall first make provision for—

The making and filing * * * of reports * * * showing the details and terms of all transactions entered into by the board, or the members thereof, either in cash transactions * * * or transactions for future delivery.

And shall make provision-

For the keeping of a record * * * showing the details and terms of all cash and future transactions entered into by them, consummated at, on, or in a board of trade * * *.

I wrote Dr. J. W. T. Duvel, Chief of the Commodity Exchange Administration, on February 13, asking whether the Secretary of Agriculture had ever complained against the Chicago Board of Trade for failure to keep records and to make reports of cash transactions. I did not ask Dr. Duvel as to records and reports of futures transactions. I asked him specifically as to the violation of the act for failure to keep records and to make reports of cash transactions. Dr. Duvel's reply, dated February 17, 1939, is evasive and unresponsive

I then wrote to Dr. Duvel on February 24, 1939, and asked him this pointed question:

Am I to understand from your letter that the Secretary, by failing to make and promulgate rules and regulations on the subject, has, in effect, repealed that portion of section 5 and subsections (a) to (f) that relate to cash transactions?

Dr. Duvel has not replied to my letter. I here and now charge that Dr. J. W. T. Duvel, Chief of the Commodity Exchange Administration, is protecting and has been protecting the Chicago Board of Trade in a very serious violation of the Commodity Exchange Act in this particular, which is a fundamental condition precedent to its designation by the Secretary of Agriculture as a contract market, without which designation it would not be entitled, under the law, to do business at all. And I charge that Dr. Duvel tried by his letter of February 17 to suppress the information I asked for.

These are very grave charges against Secretary Wallace and Chief Duvel. They are too grave for this House to permit them to pass unchallenged.

Mr. Chairman, I charge openly, on the floor of this House, that Secretary Wallace, in condoning the action of La Salle Street, contributes to robbing and exploiting the farmers. If Mr. Wallace were enforcing the law instead of condoning the illegal practices of the Chicago Board of Trade, he would be cleaning up the situation so that no investigation would be necessary.

Mr. Chairman, the honor of this House demands that the light of day be shed on the operations of these futures traders that nullify every legislative attempt to help the farmer and that seek, by underground means, to defeat the enactment of any measure that would be of constructive aid to agriculture.

Mr. Chairman, I here and now renew my demand on this House for the appointment of a select committee to investigate the important subject of futures trading, pursuant to my resolution, House Resolution 25.

If you will take time to figure it up, you can see by comparing the number of bushels actually handled with the number of bushels sold on futures contracts that if the grain merchants received one-eighth of a cent a bushel for the sale of every fictitious bushel, their income by reason of their one-eighth of 1 percent commission would be more than the farmer who raises the wheat today gets for it.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. REES of Kansas. I believe the gentleman has made a rather severe challenge there. As I understand, he is charging the Secretary of Agriculture, together with others, with permitting excessive speculation, which is not allowed under the present law.

Mr. BURDICK. The gentleman is correct. If this law were enforced, the number of bushels of cash wheat sold, the actual wheat, would be at our disposal. There is no record here in Washington anywhere that I can find, after communicating with the Commodity Exchange Administration, of the actual bushels of wheat sold on the Chicago Board of Trade. I can get only the amount of futures transactions.

Mr. GEHRMANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.
Mr. GEHRMANN. Does the gentleman from North Dakota believe that if we could pass the cost-of-production bill he would not have to look any further as far as the charges regarding these gamblers are concerned? Does not the gentleman believe the same group is opposing the gentleman's resolution that is opposing the cost-of-production bill? What effect would that have upon the trading in futures?

Mr. BURDICK. I believe the gentleman from Wisconsin is perfectly right in his conclusion. If we should pass a cost-of-production bill, of course, that would take away the power of these boards of trade to fix prices, which are gambling prices that are fixed upon the Liverpool price. Let me prove it to you.

I have here a report from Chicago yesterday which states:

Quiet but persistent selling of wheat prompted by lower quotations abroad caused fresh declines of as much as one-half cent in value here today.

Poor demands from importing countries, with shipments of exporters and wheat stocks afloat larger, had a depressing effect on prices at Liverpool and thus indirectly exerted pressure on the Chicago market.

If you do not believe this gambling operation has any effect on the price of our grain, listen to this statement from Chicago. John M. MacMillan, Jr., president of Cargill Elevator Co., speaking:

The position taken by the board of trade would tend to depress the price of corn received by the farmers and would benefit the short sellers in the Chicago corn pit. The only way shorts can fill their contracts is by bringing grain to the Chicago market.

But when they have sold short 100,000,000 bushels and the delivery day arrives and they are not compelled to go on the cash market and buy for the purpose of delivery, you see there is only one side to that market, and that is the selling side, and that is the side which is supported by the board of trade in Chicago and supported by the administration of this act, which is under the supervision of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Attorney General, and the Secretary of Commerce. Under the authority of this board their agents have published articles advising the American people it would be much better for us if we would legalize these transactions.

Mr. BOLLES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. BOLLES. Is it not the truth that this is one of the great reasons for the depressed price of grain?

Mr. BURDICK. Yes; one of the principal reasons; you are right. I now want to say that when this hearing opened it opened here in the city of Washington.

Mr. LANDIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield.

Mr. LANDIS. I notice an article stating:

Congressman named Burdick, he shot off his mouth over on the Hill. He has got it off his chest, and if he wants to follow these hearings he can follow them through the record prepared by our stenographers here.

Is it a fact that they moved these hearings from Washington to Chicago?

Mr. BURDICK. That is true.

Now, there are a lot of Members of Congress, some of them sitting here now, who would like to have taken in that hearing to understand what the situation is and then prepare to meet it by legislation, but the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Landis] is correct. That statement was made by this attorney for the Chicago Board of Trade on February 2, and he says that now if I want to find out what that committee is doing I can follow the records as they shall keep them by their stenographer, and they moved the hearings out of the city of Washington and moved them to the Sherman Hotel in Chicago, and that is where the hearings are taking place now.

However, you see, one of them has been injured. One of these gamblers has been injured himself, and it is a good deal like revolutions. The common people of the world never started a revolution in the history of time. Revolutions are only generated by the barons. When they injure the barons they will have a revolution, but the common people never had one. Now we are injuring the barons in these proceedings, and one of these barons himself states that this practice of protecting the men who sell without protecting the buyer has the effect of depressing the price of grain.

Now, what difference does it make? If we pass the cost-of-production bill, all the difference in the world. That is one act they do not want passed by this Congress because the moment you do that, you put them out of commission. There is another bill they do not want passed. They do not want the Townsend bill passed, and I will tell you why they do not. As I pointed out to this House a week ago, they sell so many bushels of paper wheat, that if they had to pay 2 cents on every transaction it would cost them $5 to carry on the fictitious sales that do not represent the sale of one actual bushel. They will fight that plan and they will fight the cost-of-production plan. They will fight anything that interferes with their power to continue gambling transactions in these boards of trade.

I have not anything against any individual in Chicago or elsewhere. The only interest I have in it is the thousands of farmers in my own State and the thousands in other States who cannot meet their interest payments, who cannot make a living, who are living off of this Government. When we have these millions of people in distress in America, it seems to me this Congress should be willing to appoint a committee to find out whether all of these statements I am making are true or false. Information will never hurt anybody, but the fact you do not have the information will hurt the farmers of this country.

When a man on the board of trade can sit there with his heels on a mahogany desk and make more money out of a bushel of wheat by gambling in it than a farmer in North Dakota or elsewhere in this country can make by digging the wheat out of the soil, it seems to me that the farmer's side of this question should be heard in this Congress, and I am thinking about those farmers, the men who raise corn and wheat and cotton and tobacco.

I know how poor they are. I live with them myself, and I know they are so poor they can hardly afford to raise a crop. There is no one who can raise cotton at the price they are getting today, and if it were not for the fact that these men who own the land have a sympathetic feeling for the men who till it there would be much more suffering in the South than there is today. Many, many thousands of the men who produce cotton in America are kept from abject want by the good will of the men who own the land.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Dakota has expired.

Mr. BURDICK. May I have 1 more minute?

Mr. GIFFORD. On the bill? I would like to know what the gentleman thinks of the bill.

I yield the gentleman 1 additional minute, Mr. Chairman. Mr. BURDICK. The gentleman insists that I talk on the bill——

Mr. GIFFORD. No; I do not insist.

Mr. BURDICK. If you do, I will surely give it to you.

Mr. GIFFORD. No; I do not.

Mr. BURDICK. The only thing I am asking of this Congress, and that is not very much, is to use your influence, if you have any—I do not think I have—to have a committee appointed by this Congress to investigate this gambling institution that does more harm and causes more losses to the American farmer every year than anything else permitted to continue in this country. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Halleck].

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed out of order on a matter of interest to all of us and to our districts.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Chairman and Members of the Committee, as some of you may know, I represent the Second Indiana District, a district located in the Middle West and which includes within its borders the city of La Fayette, Ind. My district is one of the greatest agricultural and dairying districts in the country. The dairy industry is carried on under strict supervision and regulation, and its products move into many markets over the country.

You probably have noted within the last few days an account in the newspapers of quite a spectacular capture of some cream alleged to have moved from La Fayette, Ind., to the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, in violation of law. Throughout many of the statements and articles there has been the implication that that product is impure and unfit for human consumption, and of such character as that it should not be permitted to come to the city of Washington and the District of Columbia by reason of these facts.

Being interested in my district and in the Middle West and its activities, in its agriculture and its dairying, and believing that anything that is good enough for a Hoosier is good enough for almost anybody, and knowing something of our regulations, rules, and practices governing the dairy industry, I called up Dr. John Noble, the bacteriologist of the Department of Health of the District of Columbia, and got from him the result of the tests which I understood were to be made on this cream. His first statement to me was, "It is very good," and then he gave me the figures. Samples were taken from different groups of five cans, selected at random, from that consignment.

On sample No. 1, he reported, the bacteria count was 30,000 with no B. coli; the second sample, 8,000 bacteria count and no B. coli; the third, 5,000 bacteria, no B. coli; the fourth, 4,000 bacteria, no B. coli; and the fifth, 6,000 bacteria, no B. coli. Experts in the cream business tell me this is a very high grade. I then inquired of Dr. Noble how that compared with the average cream produced in the vicinity of the District of Columbia and sold here. He said that it is as good as the average or better.

Mr. Chairman, I am not making this talk with the idea of going into the fundamental question of what is to be done in this country in respect to interstate barriers set up as against agricultural and other products, although I may have something to say about that later; nor am I trying a lawsuit here in Congress, because the lawsuit downtown should be tried in the courts and not in the Congress or in the newspapers. I am not talking about that, but I want the Congress and the people of the District of Columbia and the people of the country to know that so far as purity is concerned, and as far as quality of product is concerned, this cream that moved from my district in the State of Indiana is as good as any that can be found anywhere. [Applause.]

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Springer].

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Chairman, at the outset of what I have to say, I must say that I agree fully with everything that the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Halleck] has just said with respect to cream from Hoosierland.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPRINGER. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I might say to the gentleman that a few days ago all the members of my family were ill, with the exception of myself. I then switched to this particular brand of Indiana ice cream, and now they are all up feeling fine, better than they have been. [Applause.]

Mr. SPRINGER. That is mighty fine, and that is the usual result when you use Indiana cream.

I am very happy to present my views respecting the Reorganization Act of 1939, which, to my mind, is of outstanding importance to the people of our Nation.

We have listened to many speeches delivered on this floor which related to the liberty of our people and the freedom of our citizens, and it is well that we reflect upon the words spoken in those masterful efforts while we are considering the question of this pending bill. Let us keep in mind the liberty and freedom of the people while we, in our calm deliberations, consider this legislation. At the same time, I am certain we will remember that ours is a representative form of Government—one in which the chosen representatives of the people have the power, and they should retain that power, to determine what changes, if any, are necessary to be made in order to properly carry on the functions of our Government.

Much more is involved in the pending bill than the naked question of reorganizing the various agencies of our Government. The question of granting more power to the President of the United States is involved in this pending measure, and that means if more power is vested in the President, then the people will have been divested, to that extent, of their inalienable right to rule by and through their chosen representatives.

While it may be said by the majority that the granting of the right and power, sought in this bill, which is to reorganize our governmental agencies, is so slight and so insignificant that it should not be considered as an act of any great importance to the Members of this body, or to the people. However, may I suggest that the rights of a people, with respect to their government, are not usually taken entirely away at any one time. History tells us that in such cases the people's rights have been limited in some particular, in one instance, and at another and a different time those rights and prerogatives are further abridged until the people are, finally, without either voice or power respecting their own government, or its agencies.

This bill is just another measure which takes away from the people another segment of their rights as citizens of this country. It is of no concern to me how slight, or how insignificant, that loss of power in the people may be, if this measure should pass the House. We will remember that this bill does give to the President additional power to that which he now possesses, and, at the same time, it takes away from the people in every congressional district in this country, and from the people of every walk in life, some right and power respecting their own Government. Those Representatives who support the pending bill may have some explanations to make to their constituents back home.

Mr. WARREN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPRINGER. I cannot yield. I have but 8 minutes. Mr. WARREN. I just wanted to correct the gentleman. Mr. SPRINGER. I cannot subscribe to any plan which

Mr. SPRINGER. I cannot subscribe to any plan which takes away from the people any right or power respecting their own Government.

The Members of this House quite well recall the bill which was introduced during the last session of this Congress to do the same and identical things the present bill proposes, with but few exceptions and changes. That measure was defeated largely because it sought to extend more power to the President of these United States.

This proposed legislation is nonpolitical in its character. However, the right of the people to govern, under our Constitution, is directly involved in this proposal.

It is highly dangerous to vest unlimited power in any one man, no matter who that man may be. It is likewise unhealthy to grant to any President, no matter who that President may be, too much power. When great and unlimited power is once vested in any person, the tendency is to create a craving for more power. And when great power is vested in any person it is very hard to revoke or rescind that action and to get that power back.

The very first subdivision, title I, of section 1, of the pending bill identifies this measure and gives to it the true character which it bears. That portion of the bill reads:

The President shall investigate the organization of all executive agencies of the Government and shall determine what changes therein are necessary to accomplish the following purposes.

Therefore, by the specific terms of this bill, the President of the United States is the one person, of all of the 130,-000,000 of our people, who would have the right and power to "investigate" all executive agencies and to determine what changes are, in his opinion, necessary to be made. If this bill should pass, in my opinion, it would be another case of the Congress abdicating its power and right granted under our Constitution, to the President.

If this bill should pass, would the people have any voice or vote in the change or reorganization of our Government or its agencies? The answer is "no." It may be urged by the proponents of this measure that under section 5 of the bill the power is retained in the Congress. The power retained is negative power. If this bill should pass, we would have given the President the power to decide and to determine and to make such changes as he may desire in reorganization unless he is stopped by a negative vote, and that by a concurrent resolution of the Senate and the House. One of these bodies voting against such proposed change is insufficient to stop the action by the President. When Congress now possesses the power here involved, why pass it on to another, why delegate it to the President and reserve only the right to negative his action by a concurrent resolution adopted by both the Senate and the House?

The people of our country want a voice in any change or reorganization that may be made in their government or its agencies. And, if I mistake not, the people in our country still desire to rule. They are opposed to any further investment of power in the hands of the President. The people want some of the power which has heretofore been vested in the President, removed and taken away from him and restored again in the people, where it rightfully belongs.

We should well consider another element which is here involved respecting the usurpation of power. When the right and power to do a certain thing is removed from the people and given to any individual or to any President, a precedent is thereby established and thereafter it is quite, if not entirely, impossible to restore that power again in the people to whom it actually belongs. And, pray tell me, who can visualize today what the President of our Nation would do in the reorganization of the governmental agencies, in our country, if this pending bill should be enacted into law?

It is true that the proposed bill gives the added right to name and "appoint not to exceed six administrative assistants and to fix the compensation of each at the rate of not more than $10,000 per annum," and the President, and no other person, is by the bill fully authorized to prescribe all the duties of such administrative assistants. The people have no voice in it; they are merely the paymasters.

I cannot subscribe to the proposed bill because:

First. It vests greater and additional power in the President.

Second. It takes away the right of the people to determine for themselves their own policies of government.

Third. It vests the sole determining power in the President to change or reorganize our Government and its agencies as he alone may decide.

Fourth. If this bill should pass it strikes at the very fundamentals of our Government, in that it takes away the right of the people to govern themselves by and through their chosen representatives.

Fifth. If this measure should pass, it will tend to further centralize our Government and to create individual dictation and domination in our governmental affairs.

When I think of the ills in this pending and proposed legislation I like to read again the words of that great American, that great President of our Nation, Thomas Jefferson. He said:

To take a single step beyond the boundaries thus specifically drawn around the powers of Congress is to take possession of a boundless field of power no longer susceptible of any definition.

Let us awaken before it is too late. Let us retain the "boundless field of power" in the people themselves.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Rees].

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I have listened with some interest to those who are supporting the so-called "reorganization" bill. The debate up to this time has been more or less a bickering back and forth. Little has been said with respect to its value, if enacted into law.

We do need a great deal of revamping and readjustment as well as reorganization in the various departments of our Government, but unless it can be pretty definitely shown that this particular measure will result in material savings and benefit to our citizens, then we had better let the subject matter alone. I just do not believe the people of this country are in a mood to accept any reorganization plan which will give the Chief Executive any more power and authority than has been placed in his hands. As a matter of fact, I believe there is a general feeling that the Congress, whether it realizes it or not—has already surrendered too much of its power to the executive department.

So far as I have been able to learn, no one has been able to show that this bill will result in material financial benefit if its terms are carried out. Hardly anyone advocates this to be a fact. In passing, it provides for six executive assistants with annual salaries of $10,000 each.

I think it should be pretty definitely shown that the enactment of this legislation would not only provide for economy but would also provide for the elimination of a lot of red tape. It seems rather strange that those who are promoting this legislation admit that during the past 5 or 6 years a great bureaucracy has grown up in our Government. It is claimed this was done because emergencies existed, and it was in the interests of the people of this country. Now then, they tell us that in order to get rid of a lot of agencies and bureaus we do not need—that it is necessary for the administration to submit a plan of reorganization to Congress in order to dispose of them. In other words, the Chief Executive of the administration that created them is expected to bring in a plan to get rid of them where it is deemed necessary and for the best interests of our Government.

While we are talking on the form of this bill, you will observe that the President is to bring in a plan of reorganization and that unless both Houses of Congress vote negatively, then the plan will be carried out. No one on the floor of the House has yet been able to tell us why, if we are going to adopt this measure, it is not handled like any other law; that is, why not let the President bring in his plan and let Congress approve it if it is to become effective or disapprove it if it is not satisfactory. This would at least help the form of the bill. In other words, let us at least strike out section 5 and provide for an affirmative vote by Congress.

Furthermore, it is conceded by those on both sides of the aisle that the President now has the authority to submit to Congress any plan that he might have in mind, with reference to changes which may be suggested or reorganization which might be required in our governmental departments. Why not let him submit such a plan if he has one and let Congress pass on it in the regular way.

We could reach the same objective if a committee from the House and Senate would take charge of this problem, and would go into the question rather definitely after securing information from experts on the subject, and then submitting a plan to the Congress that would provide for the elimination of a number of useless bureaus and agencies, as well as the elimination of a number of duplications that now exist under our system.

I have been interested in reading some of the conclusions that have been reached by the Brookings Institution, which has made a complete investigation of this question. One of the conclusions says, in substance, that excess personnel in Government does not arise so much from duplication and overlapping but that the cause for duplication and overlapping and for unnecessary costs of Government come about by the creation of unnecessary positions that are filled by political appointees. This has been significant during the present administration.

Another interesting finding of the Brookings Institution is a further statement that the appointment of employees not possessed of proper qualifications for the efficient performance of their duties has also caused excessive costs in administration; and that failure to reduce the staff, when the organizational installation period is over, and permitting such individuals to remain on the pay roll, adds to the further cost of government. Furthermore, the failure to adopt efficient practices and procedures has made the cost of our Government extravagant.

In discussing this question the Brookings Institution says that what we really need is an honestly and efficiently administered competitive civil-service merit system. If such a system were properly operated, it would help prevent the creation of unnecessary jobs for political purposes. It would secure for every position a person qualified to perform efficiently the duties of that job. If we could operate on a merit career basis, we would be free from political and personal favoritism. It has been admitted a number of times on the floor this afternoon, on both sides of the aisle, that because of political favoritism it is difficult to eliminate some of these agencies or bureaus.

Under the Budget Act of 1921, the Budget Bureau may at any time, under the direction of the President, investigate the structure of the administrative branch of the Government and make recommendations with respect to its reorganization. That is the present law. The President is authorized to submit his recommendations to Congress. As I view it, Congress can pass the necessary laws. If the Budget Bureau would operate at its highest efficiency, it would help insure business practices and procedures in the organization of government. It could help determine the personnel employed to do the work.

A further suggestion offered by the Brookings Institution provides for a competent research investigating staff, under the independent control of Congress and responsible to Congress for its investigations and reports. I think a statement on this question is pertinent. I quote from the Brookings Institution report:

Under the American system of the division of powers and of checks and balances, the Congress exercises legislative control over the administrative branch of the Government. It controls the purse strings, and it should be equipped to use this power to check waste, extravagance, and inefficiency in the administrative branch. It may so operate by reducing appropriations, by passing laws that require administrative officers to follow sound practices in administrative matters, and through its power of investigation, by exposing to the public instances of abuse of trust by administrative officers. To perform its functions efficiently the Congress, and more particularly its appropriations committees, need a competent corps of independent investigators capable of getting information of a character that cannot be secured through committee hearings.

Since it has not been shown by those who are supporting this bill that any material benefit will come about by reason of its passage, and since there haven't even been any hearings held by the committee in charge of the legislation, and in further view of the fact that the people generally do not favor giving the Chief Executive further power and authority-it seems to me that this situation can, if we have a mind to do it, be handled just as efficiently without the enactment of this legislation.

It has been said that governmental reorganization would result in a saving of administrative expenses. It is, after all, Congress that spends the money. I know it is difficult to cut a great number of expenditures, and probably there are some which cannot be reduced. But, on the other hand, we are unnecessarily spending, and authorizing the expenditure of millions of dollars, thus increasing the ever growing national debt.

The Brookings Institution shows that about 17 percent of the money spent is for administrative expenses. I think this is too much, and it should be cut down, but I do think that when it comes to the question of cutting expenses, this Congress can do it a great deal more effectively and save a great deal more money in its authorizations and appropriations if it has a will to do so.

Just last week the House eliminated an unnecessary expense of $17,000,000 for the Gilbertsville Dam, but the Senate put it back, and the House agreed to it. In a few days we will consider the expenditure of $200,000,000 to build a canal across the State of Florida. Unnecessary; but there are a few people who think they want it. At the last Congress we spent millions of dollars for parks and parkways, as well as monuments of various kinds. All worth while, but in view of our financial circumstances certainly unneces-I am also advised that we are spending about $7,000,000 or more for a big Jefferson Memorial in St. Louis.

In closing let me suggest again that if we really want our Government to operate more efficiently and more wisely, there are many ways by which we can do it. We can adopt a competitive civil-service merit system. Right now we have almost 900,000 persons on the pay roll in the executive departments of our Government. A few years ago 80 percent of the Federal employees were under some kind of competitive civil-service system. Now the average has been reduced so that almost one-third, or approximately 300,000 Federal employees, who may or may not be qualified, hold their positions because their first qualification was that of party affiliation. We need to apply business methods in the affairs of our Government.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. RISK].

Mr. RISK. Mr. Chairman, I am going to attempt to approach this matter from a purely legalistic standpoint at the beginning, because it seems to me that there are two important questions involved: First, Does there exist at the present time a necessity for a reorganization of Government agencies in the interests of efficiency and economy? and second, Is the procedure as outlined in the bill in conformity with the spirit of constitutional government and long-established practices of the American Congress?

As to the first question, none of us who try to be sincere can deny the existence of a need for a thorough reorganization of governmental agencies. I believe we are unanimous in the opinion that, due to the magnitude of this thing we call Federal Government, errors and abuses are bound to creep in; that emergency units established from time to time outlive their usefulness, and that there are very often overlapping of function and duplication of effort.

The second question is not nearly so easily answered. Now, it might appear from a casual examination of the provisions of this measure that it is merely one which directs the Chief Executive to make recommendations for legislation designed to accomplish the purposes set forth. We may as well agree on one point right now, and that is that he knows and has known for 2 years or more exactly what is considered necessary. And that being so, we need only refer to article 2, section 3, of the Constitution, which makes it incumbent upon the Executive to "recommend to their—the Congress—consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient."

I do not propose to go into the reasons why the Civil Service Commission, the Board of Tax Appeals, and the Veterans' Administration were added to the exempt list, nor as to the reasons why the Department of Welfare, included in the 1937 bill, has been left out of this one. I fully agree with the gentlemen from North Carolina that no good purpose would be served by stirring up the feeling engendered by that title in the past but which has now subsided.

The gentleman from North Carolina truly said yesterday that section 5 is the heart of the bill. After the plan has been worked out and put into final form, the Executive is directed to transmit the plan to the Congress. Section 5 provides as follows:

SEC. 5. The reorganizations specified in the plan shall take effect

SEC. 5. The reorganizations specified in the plan shall case that in accordance with the plan:

(a) Upon the expiration of 60 calendar days after the date on which the plan is transmitted to the Congress, but only if during such 60-day period there has not been passed by the two Houses a concurrent resolution stating in substance that the Congress does not favor the reorganization plan.

In plain words, here is the situation if this bill is adopted in its present form. The Executive submits a plan of reorganization, involving one or a score of agencies. Both Houses, by joint resolution, must reject it within a period of 60 days during a session of Congress, or it automatically becomes the law of the land. The Congress thus grants to either body the power to enact the proposal into law by sitting tight and taking no action. It will then be not an instance of negativing proposed legislation, but one of legislation by negation. Why not reserve to both of the bodies of the Congress the inherent constitutional power that is theirs, namely that they must concur in the passage of Mr. WARREN Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. RISK. I yield.

Mr. WARREN. I wonder if the gentleman has read the opinion of Chief Justice Hughes in the tobacco inspection case, cited by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox].

Mr. RISK. I may say that I tried all morning to get a copy of it, but I listened with a great deal of interest to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox], and I think his explanation of it was so clear that I have a fairly good idea of the contents of that decision.

Mr. WARREN. Chief Justice Hughes wrote that opinion only about 3 weeks ago.

Mr. RISK. As far as that is concerned, that is merely a decision which upholds the constitutionality of a referendum provided in the act whereby a certain percentage of the farmers within a given area must approve a particular site selected by the Secretary of Agriculture as a tobacco market. I do not think anyone will contend that the two cases are parallel.

Mr. WADSWORTH. And that was affirmative action.

Mr. RISK. And that was affirmative action.

Now, Mr. Chairman, in the past few years I think we have all noticed the growing tendency on the part of the legislative branch of the Government to surrender its rights to the Executive, sometimes at the request of the Executive. But we must have this in mind, that we are sent here to represent constituencies and we are supposed to represent those men and women who elected us to office. Even though we might be inclined for political reasons to surrender our rights as legislators, do not forget that when we do so we surrender the rights of those people we represent.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Van Zandt].

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Chairman, like Topsy of Uncle Tom's Cabin, the executive branch of this Government just grew. From time to time for 150 years various executive functions and new offices have been added to the Federal governmental structure. Unfortunately, this growth has been accomplished without any special regard for some of the duties of already existing agencies. As a consequence of this piecemeal, patchwork job, our governmental structure now resembles a rambling old farmhouse with wings, cupolas, and gingerbread trimmings, many of them even less useful.

For many years Republicans and Democrats alike have advocated the streamlining of this architectural monstrosity. It is indeed a consummation devoutly to be wished from many standpoints. I dare say there is not a Member of this House, Republican or Democrat, Progressive, Farmer-Laborite, or Independent, who does not favor the reorganization of the executive departments, bureaus, and agencies. Certainly the American people all wish to see reorganization in the interest of economy and efficiency in government. Nothing would be more pleasing to the people than a businesslike coordination of the functions of government so as to reduce the number of alphabetical agencies and eliminate duplication and overlapping of effort.

If this measure would accomplish that purpose, I venture to say there would not be a single vote cast against it. Unhappily, however, this bill would do nothing of the kind. To enact this bill in its present form would be like buying a pig in a poke. We do not know what we would get. We do not know whether we would get anything at all or whether something distinctly undesirable would be foisted upon the country. And if we passed this bill in its present form, we would be powerless to prevent the President from putting over some sort of hocus-pocus.

Everybody who has read this bill carefully has discovered the weasel-worded "joker" in section 5. The President, his advisers, and the authors of this bill apparently failed to learn a lesson from the fate of the late and unlamented reorganization bill. They still are trying to sneak a fast one over the plate. But I trust they will meet with no more success this time than they did on a former occasion.

We will pass over the rather amazing declaration in subsection (b) of section 1, which is tantamount to a confession by Congress that it is not competent to reorganize the Government. While I do not for one moment concede even the fact that the President can accomplish reorganization "more speedily" than Congress could by the enactment of specific legislation, I would let that pass if it were not for the "joker."

Reorganization of the Government is so much to be desired that I might even be willing to overlook the unseemly haste with which some gentlemen are attempting to "railroad" this bill through the House if that "joker" were eliminated. Only two and a half hours' consideration was given to this bill in committee. All efforts to secure hearings on this important measure were denied. An effort was made to speed up the all too brief consideration and discussion of the bill on the floor. It was only after consent was denied to an agreement to read the bill for amendments that 8 hours' debate began. Hence the House and one of its committees will have devoted just ten and a half hours' formal consideration to the question of reorganization of the executive branch of the Government when we vote on this measure. And if that is not "railroading" a bill, I do not know what you call it.

After discovering this joker, it is easy to understand the evident haste of the sponsors of this bill to secure its enactment before the people can learn about it and unfavorable action comes from the country. For under that joker Congress would abdicate its legislative power to the Executive through a trick.

The bill provides that the President shall transmit to Congress all plans for the transfer, consolidation, or abolition of the various functions of executive agencies. The reorganizations specified in the plan shall take effect if both Houses of Congress fail to adopt a concurrent resolution vetoing the plan within 60 days after the plan is submitted to Congress.

The limitation of time is not so important. If Congress simply slept on its rights and allowed the 60-day period to elapse without taking action, Congress should deserve no better consideration. It is the negative action provided in the bill which is dangerous.

If we are to reverse the constitutional functions of the executive and legislative branches of government and surrender the legislative function to the President, Congress should most certainly retain the full veto power of the Executive. We do not want the President to effect any unwise or undesirable reorganization of the Government by the deliberate default of one House of Congress to act within the 60-day time limit. Yet that is altogether probable if a group of determined gentlemen in the body at the other end of the Capitol engaged in a filibuster.

This is no occasion for gentlemen to pooh-pooh such a proposition. The history of Senate filibusters for many purposes is all to familiar. It could and it would happen here if a little group of willful men took a notion to make it happen. And it is quite conceivable that this little group might have the support-even the inspiration-of the White House in their desperate enterprise.

Affirmative action by Congress should be required to make any reorganization proposal by the President effective. I would not object to a reasonable time limit if the bill provided that Congress must vote recommendations up or down. If Congress failed to act within the fixed period, it would serve the same purpose as a pocket veto by the President at the close of a Congress. That would be tit for tat in this proposed exchange of constitutional functions of the legislative and executive branches of Government.

Yes; I want reorganization to effect economy and efficiency in the Government, but I do not want it at the expense of delegating legislative authority to the Executive without Congress' being able to exercise a veto power. Congress wants reorganization, but not at the price asked for it in the present bill. The people want reorganization, but they already have demonstrated their disapproval of Congress' abdicating its constitutional powers to the President.

I know of no better illustration of the folly of the wholesale delegation of legislative authority to the President than the ruthless treatment of the veterans of the World War and the Spanish-American War under the so-called Economy Act. You gentlemen will remember with everlasting regret and shame the blanket authority granted to the President in the name of economy.

There may be some excuse for gentlemen who voted for that measure under a delusion that it would result in real economy in the Government. Ignorance of the law is no excuse when a citizen is haled before the bar of justice, but some of the gentlemen who voted for the so-called Economy Act may be excused on the ground of ignorance. That act was passed on March 20, 1933, little more than 2 weeks after this administration came into power.

With a great fanfare of trumpets, the Democratic National Convention at Chicago adopted a platform plank pledging the party and the nominee for President to effect a 25-percent saving in the cost of running the Federal Government. The Economy Act was supposed to be the first step in that

Well, the economies were taken out of the hides of the defenders of the American flag, Spanish-American War veterans, the men who charged up San Juan Hill, had their pittance, called compensation, cut to the bone. The widows of these men, who were heroes in 1898, had their pensions slashed from a measly $30 a month to $15. Battle casualties of the World War, men who had left an arm or a leg in France, had their woefully small pension cut by 40 percent. Many service-connected cases, battle casualties, had their compensation cut out altogether.

The most brutal action taken in that sorry and shameful chapter in our history was the evacuation of World War veterans from the Government hospitals. Veterans with wounds received in Flanders Field, men who were sick and dying of disease, who looked to a grateful Government for care in return for their sacrifices, were turned out of hospitals in the cold without adequate clothing. Thousands of veterans were forced to hitch-hike home, hundreds and thousands of miles in many instances.

Veterans who were entitled to every care and consideration the Government could give them were forced to depend upon the generosity of kind-hearted citizens for their very lives. Heroes who marched away in 1917 with the bands playing and the flags flying were forced to beg and borrow. Yes, and the number of suicides was appalling. Scores of veterans, too sick to work, too proud to beg, took their lives rather than carry on under conditions too cruel to bear.

Public opinion forced the restoration of most of the cuts in compensation to World War and Spanish American War veterans and their dependents. These restorations came little by little and the individual veteran and the veterans' organizations had to fight every inch of the way to gain them. And that is not hearsay with me. I was in the midst of that fight for justice to the veterans. I personally investigated hundreds of cases. When it comes to the Economy Act and what it did to the veterans, I know whereof I speak. The veterans never will forget that cruel deed done in the name of economy. And that is the last we have heard of economy from this administration.

"A burnt child fears the fire," according to the old saw. Never again do I want to witness anything remotely resembling the heartless action taken by the President under the blanket authority granted by the so-called Economy Act. But that is just what you will be inviting if you pass this bill in its present form.

If you are going to trade functions with the President, then I say trade him even. Do not vote away the constitutional powers of Congress to one man and take nothing in return for it. If economy and efficiency in government must be achieved in this way, Congress should at least insure itself of a veto power.

Advocates of this bill tell us that bureaucracy threatens to destroy this Government. Let me say to them that dictators are made by just such measures as this one. And let me add, a dictator would do a quicker and more complete job of destroying our Government than any bureaucrat who

There should be no question of partisanship involved in this question, despite the attempt of some Democrats to make it a party issue. I am opposed to this measure simply because I am convinced it is a bad bill. It may not be as bad as the original reorganization bill, but the very fact that the President yielded and the bill was rewritten, indi-cates that the old bill was a bad bill. If not, why did not the President stand by his guns?

Let the Democrats cry "partisanship" at those who oppose this measure. Despite my confidence that the next President will be a Republican I would not vote this delegation of legislative power to a Republican President any more than I would vote it to a Democratic Chief Executive, unless Congress retained an unqualified veto power over his actions in this respect.

The citizens of my district, Democrats as well as Republicans, sent me to Congress to legislate for them. They did not send me down here to delegate legislative power to any one man. I came down here to represent them, and that I am going to do. [Applause.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. FORD].

Mr. FORD of Mississippi. Mr. Chairman, I rise this afternoon to compliment the gentleman who prepared this legislation and brought it before the Congress. I happen to be one of those who could not support the reorganization bill that was before the Congress during the last session. I am glad to say, however, that practically all of the objections to that bill have been removed. In my judgment this piece of legislation will give the President of the United States an opportunity to economize and, at the same time, bring about efficiency in government through the elimination of overlapping bureaus, a condition which has grown especially bad in the last several years.

The gentlemen who have worked so hard and long in drafting this legislation deserve a vote of confidence on the part of the membership of this House. We, as practical men. know that it is impossible, with the many views that prevail among the membership of this House, for the Congress itself to undertake to reorganize the Government. We know that if we are to really accomplish anything, we are bound to delegate the authority to some one person or to some few persons who can study the reorganization question from one end to the other, and then eliminate, consolidate, coordinate, and abolish a great many of the useless bureaus and agencies of our Government if we are ever to do an effective job that the people of this country will be proud of. I stress the word "abolish." The pay roll of the Federal Government is more than twice larger than it should be. So I say to my friends here this afternoon that having opposed the other reorganization bill because of undesirable features of it I am glad to come before the House today and say that I think this piece of legislation will permit the job to be done in an effective and admirable way.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORD of Mississippi. I yield.

Mr. MAHON. I compliment the gentleman on his statement. I assume his position is that certainly no great harm could come of this revised bill, and yet it does afford great possibilities for good in the administration of the executive branch of the Government and also has possibilities from the standpoint of producing possible economies which might accumulate in the coming years.

Mr. FORD of Mississippi. That is exactly it. Under this legislation the President cannot add additional bureaus and agencies, but he is given authority and power to coordinate consolidate, and abolish a great many agencies and bureaus, and in that way actually bring about some economy in the Government. I trust that this bill will become a law and that the President and those working under his direction will cut the personnel of our Government and abolish bureaus at every turn. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JENKINS].

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I opposed the reorganization bill last year with fervor and intensity. I see no reason why I should change my attitude or my tactics. I expect to vote against this bill and do it most enthusiastically. [Applause.] I am not one of those who needs to apologize for my record in connection with reorganization bills, for I also voted against the reorganization bill of 1937. I am proud of this fact also. [Applause.]

Somehow I have an abiding antipathy for these reorganization bills because they are born out of an insincerity that to me is very plain. These bills that were considered in 1937 and 1938 have certain unmistakable marks of insincerity about them. This insincerity comes from a false presumption which is that the Congress of the United States is impotent to pass a reorganization bill. In these bills the President takes the position that Congress is impotent and incompetent. There is a sort of fatalistic feeling that the Congress of the United States cannot free itself from prejudice sufficiently to reorganize the departments of the Nation. I do not subscribe to this belief. In fact, I take the opposite view. Anyone who has observed the manipulations through the executive department in this country through the last 6 years knows that the present administration has seldom, if ever, presented a straight-out honest and sincere proposition without attaching to it some sinister ambiguous unpopular proposition with the sole purpose of getting some unfair advantage or taking from the Congress or the people some right that belongs to them and does not belong to the Executive. I maintain that if and when the Congress of the United States through its leadership in both the Senate and the House takes upon itself the responsibility of reorganizing the Government the same will be done. The Congress has not been responsible for increasing the bureaus and the alphabetic commissions by the hundreds as we have seen in the last 6 years. The Executive has been responsible and has been able to coerce a supine and tractable Congress into following his will.

I am opposed to the present reorganization bill for several reasons.

First. In this bill Congress surrenders up its legislative power into the hands of the Executive.

Second. It is evident from the wording of this bill that the Executive has some ulterior motives in view.

Third. Nobody has claimed that the reorganization that might be effected under this bill will save the people any money.

Fourth. The President has the power under this bill to wreak his vengeance on certain departments and certain groups as he might be disposed. Democrats who suffered the purge and Republicans who have observed the tactics of the administration know that the President will exact vengeance when he can.

Fifth. If this bill is passed as it is now written, the President can consolidate two departments which are now operated under laws which may be very inconsistent in their operation. The laws governing each of these departments before the consolidation will, of course, not operate after the consolidation. Two inconsistent laws could not operate. One would be in conflict with the other. In order for the President to make a consolidation effective it would require that he render null and void one or the other of these controlling laws. In that way the President would have the right to practically repeal statutes without any action on the part of Congress.

In the last 6 years, like never before, the Congress of the United States has been importuned at every juncture to abdicate its power of legislating in favor of the Executive. When the present administration came into power its cry was that Congress should give to the President great emergency powers. Under the magic of this appeal Congress did in many enactments surrender up its constitutional power to legislate and turned it over to the President through some form of commission or through the numerous alphabetical combinations with which we are all more or less familiar. It is in subsection (b) on page 2 of this bill that we find the first cowardly surrender by the Congress of legislative power given it by the Constitution for which we all profess so much reverence. Note how smooth this language is and how harmless it appears at first blush. When you consider it carefully, however, you will see that the Congress acknowledges its own inability to legislate for the best interests of the country. Here is the language:

(b) The Congress declares that the purposes specified in subsection (a) may be accomplished in great measure by proceeding immediately under the provisions of this title, and can be accomplished more speedily thereby than by the enactment of specific legislation.

I maintain that to vote for this bill with this language included is a complete surrender of the legislative functions of the Government over into the hands of the Executive. I maintain that too much power has been given to the present Chief Executive. The greatest task before the Republican membership of this Congress is to regain from the President many of these powers that he has usurped from the people by various pleas for economy and for emergency. By this language they make us recite after them, as a parrot would do, that reorganization can be more speedily accomplished by the Executive than by specific legislation. I for one am ready to reorganize the departments of Government. I shall vote for any honest, sincere program that will cut the Government red tape or will release the strangle hold which some of the bureaus have on the Government. I will vote for any reasonable reorganization plan that will save money. But, let not yourselves be deceived. This administration has never yet shown any signs of being anxious to economize. Day by day, as the days come and go our national debt climbs up the steps at the rate of about $10,000,000 per day. The Government employees are now at the highest number in the history of the country. Extravagance and wastefulness in governmental affairs is noted everywhere. While they profess a great desire to economize, we must know them by their deeds and not by their promises.

The second place in this bill where the administration insults the intelligence and the honor of Congress is in section 5 of the bill. Where the bill provides that when the President has figured out his reorganization plan and has submitted it to Congress it shall become a law. For emphasis, let me repeat, it shall become a law unless both Houses of Congress shall by concurrent resolution indicate that it does not favor the plan. In other words, unless both Houses indicated their disapproval of the plan it would become a law. Or stating it the other way, if one House unanimously opposed the plan and so indicated, and if the other House favored the reorganization plan or failed to act upon it through filibuster or negligence, then the plan would become a law. In order to state exactly what I mean, let me read this section to you:

SEC. 5. The reorganizations specified in the plan shall take effect in accordance with the plan:

in accordance with the plan:

(a) Upon the expiration of 60 calendar days after the date on which the plan is transmitted to the Congress, but only if during such 60-day period there has not been passed by the two Houses a concurrent resolution stating in substance that the Congress does not favor the reorganization plan.

I maintain that this surrender by the Congress to the Executive will not meet with the approval of the people of this country. I remember too well the tremendous opposition that was registered by the people to the passage of the reorganization bill in 1938. At no time in my somewhat long service in this Congress have I ever seen as much indignation expressed so universally as I did when the American people rose up in their might and smote the 1938 bill. 'The country had just come through the great agitation that had arisen because of the attempt of the administration to pack the Supreme Court. When the administration attempted to press the reorganization bill in 1938, it found the people up in arms against it. From every city and hamlet and from every countryside came a tremendous chorus of opposition. The bill was buried under an avalanche of opposition which was carried by many people into the last election. The great wave of resentment against the present administration as shown by the elections of 1938 was produced because of the revulsion of the people against the Supreme Court scandal and later against the attempted reorganization by misrepresentation and deceit.

The present reorganization bill is just as bad as the one that was defeated last year. I hope the membership of this Congress will not be misled by any representation to the contrary. All through this bill can be seen the fingerprints of the administration writing soft sentences here and omitting sentences there, all with the one purpose of filching from the Congress and the people the right to legislate for themselves and giving it to the Executive who can use it, and will use it, so as to find its way into the ballot box. In other words, we surely do not want every branch of the Government to present on election day the sorry spectacle that we saw in every section of the country last year among the W. P. A. employees. We should raise up in our might and again strike down this effort on the part of the Executive to arrogate to himself powers which the Constitution does not give him and which the people should not give him.

In support of my second and third reasons for opposition to this bill I shall say that this bill proclaims in strong language that it may be intended to reduce expenditures to the fullest exent. Let us not be deceived. It is not mandatory that the President must as a prerequisite to presenting the reorganization bill show that it will effect economies. If this bill passes the President can reach out and reorganize any department he pleases and can pass up any department that he pleases. If he wishes to punish and purge any department he can do so and pass by some other department that is servile to him and heeds his every beck and call. In the 1938 bill his main purpose was to reorganize the General Accounting Office because that Office had repeatedly called a halt to his extravagant expenditures. The leopard cannot easily change his spots. Be not deceived into the belief that great economies will be effected. Most of you have seen and are familiar with the recent opinion rendered through the Brookings Institution to the effect that no great economies can be expected from the enactment of this bill. Under my fourth reason for opposing this bill I will call your attention to the fact that this bill does not compel a complete reorganization of the Government. This is left absolutely to the discretion of the President. He can reorganize or consolidate or add to or take from as he sees fit. Judging the future by the past it is not too much to expect that he will set out to purge those departments that have not jumped to his every beck and call and that he will transfer favorites into favored places and will subordinate unwelcome groups to subordinate places to their disadvantage. He might transfer one group protected by civil service into a department not protected by civil service and thereby result in the loss of civil-service status to some of those transferred. In other words he can use this power that Congress is asked to surrender not to reorganize but to completely disorganize. If he sets out on a program of disorganization and sends such a program to Congress under a caption of "reorganization" he may be able to win his point because the Congress cannot stop his mad course except by a majority action of both Houses. In view of past experiences it surely would not be a violent presumption for me to presume that the present Chief Executive would mix a little politics into his reorganization program. Everyone who knows the facts knows that in the last 6 years politics has been a stronger factor in increasing the Government employees by several hundred thousand than practically any other factor.

Politics was a more important factor in the selection of this great army of employees than was the need of their services. Politics will be used to play an important part in any reorganization program. Then why should I be foolish enough to turn over the rights which the Constitution gives me to participate in legislation and give it over to any Executive, Republican or Democrat, who will be sure to be actuated to a large degree at least by political expediency?

My fifth reason may not appeal to you, but it appeals strongly to me. Somehow I feel that when the Congress of the United States goes through the prescribed formalities of passing legislation, and when this legislation receives the approval of the President and becomes in fact a live part of the organic law of the Nation, that nobody has a right to repeal that law except that it be repealed with the same formalities that attended its enactment. In other words, our National Constitution and the constitutions of our various States provide specifically how legislation is to be enacted. I confess that in many cases the laws are fearfully and wonderfully made, but when the law has received the constitu-tional sanction of the House of Representatives and the Senate and the constitutional sanction of the President, then that law is the law of the land. It shall continue to be the law of the land until it is repealed in a manner prescribed by the Constitution. The Constitution does not provide that the Executive can, directly or indirectly, repeal any law. He has no more to do with the repeal of a law than a man in the street. He can recommend to the Congress that certain laws be repealed and he can even go so far as to advocate the repeal of laws in the public forum. He has no right to counsel the nullification of a law. He has no right to counsel the violation of a law. On the contrary, he takes an oath to support and to execute all of the laws of the land. In this bill we open the way for him to nullify live statutory enactments. As I have heretofore stated, if he decides to consolidate a certain department which was set up under a certain law and has been operating under a certain law with another department that likewise had been set up under a certain law and was operating under a certain law and these laws are inconsistent, then it is inevitable that the new set-up cannot operate under inconsistent laws, and, of course, some of these laws must be nullified. This is a very serious prospect. I refuse to put myself in the position of giving support to any such program.

I am in favor of reorganizing the Government departments, but I insist that it be done legally and constitutionally, and by a branch of the Government to which the Constitution gives authority. I am willing to accept the aid of the Chief Executive, and, in fact, I would encourage any program that would call upon the Chief Executive to assist in the program of reorganization, but I would not surrender up to him authority which he does not have under the Constitution. [Applause.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes. Mr. Chairman, it was not my intention again to take the floor in general debate, but I think it is only proper that the membership of this House and the country understand the part the Brookings Institution has played in the reorganization plans that have been submitted to the Congress. It so happens that this Institution bears the name of a great citizen of the city which I have the honor to represent in part. It also happens that at the moment the chairman of the board of trustees also is a resident of my city, former Secretary of War Dwight Davis.

Back in 1936, when the late Mr. Buchanan, of Texas, was chairman of the Reorganization Committee, we made an agreement with the Brookings Institution. They came with a letter which they requested us to sign. Senator Byrd, of Virginia, had already made an agreement with the Brookings Institution to give them $20,000 of his appropriation, provided the House committee allocated $10,000 and the President's committee allocated $10,000. To this $40,000 the Brookings Institution agreed to add $20,000 of their own money. After reading the letter I called to the attention of Mr. Buchanan that they could comply with the requirements and earn their $40,000 by taking the Congressional Directory and listing the agencies of Government there appearing, and then turning to that part of the directory which carried the official duties of the various agencies and copying that.

We refused to sign the letter, but did make an agreement with them which specifically provided that they would be required to submit to the committee recommendations for reorganization and to state where reduction in expenditures could be made. I say the Brookings Institution has not fulfilled its contract or agreement.

On Saturday they issued their third study. If you have secured a copy of that book, you will find that it did not even pass the proofreaders, in such a hurry were they to get it in print, because in several instances it was necessary for them to take pen and ink and rearrange the paragraphs.

It was hurried along so it would reach the public on the eve of the consideration of this bill. What do they do in this latest study? It does contain some sound observations. They call attention to the fact that the administrative costs of this Government are only 17.65 percent of the total Budget. They are correct in their estimate, and this is one of the reasons why the members of the committee of this House have refused time and time again to say how much money could be saved by a general reorganization. It will be remembered that a year ago the administrative leaders were severely criticized by Senator Byrd and by conservative newspapers because they did not make such claims.

The Brookings book fully justifies the position of the President and of the leaders in Congress. However, it would be a mistake to assume that substantial and important economies cannot be secured through reorganization. Great economies were secured by the consolidation of the agricultural credit activities under the Farm Credit Administration and by centralizing purchasing and supply under the Procurement Division. These are two illustrations of economy that were achieved through reorganization in 1933. The savings to be made through sound administrative organization are not limited to administrative expenses. At the present time a number of different Government agencies often present to Congress requests for appropriations for competing and sometimes conflicting programs. If similar and related functions can be grouped together Congress will be in a much better position to consider Budget requests and to make reductions not only of administrative expenses but of functions of government. In fact, until the Government is soundly organized it will be extremely difficult to make the reductions in functions which are

What else do they advocate in this book? They advocate setting up in the Bureau of the Budget additional help so that the Budget Director could make investigations and challenge the requests of various Government departments when they submit their figures to him.

If they had read the hearings on the Treasury Department appropriation bill, they would have found that that question was thoroughly discussed, and when the bill was brought to the floor it provided an additional appropriation for the Bureau of the Budget to carry out the plan submitted by Mr. Bell, which is now pending in the Senate.

One thing that pleases me in connection with this report is the fact it recommends that Congress have an investigating agency of its own so that it could challenge Budget estimates. That provision is not in this bill, but it was in the bill which was defeated last year. That is just exactly what your committee did when it recommended an Auditor General answerable only to the Congress, the Auditor General to have no other functions than to make checks and investigations and report to the Congress, continually, day in and day out throughout the year, investigate the operations of the executive branch of the Government, and make reports to the Speaker and to the Vice President, so that the committees of Congress would have something to work on when the bureau chiefs came before them demanding appropriation of money. The Brookings study at many points reflects the fact that it has been in opposition to the reorganization legislation proposed in the last 2 years. Throughout the book the advantages of a thorough administrative reorganization are minimized. It is significant in this connection to note that until 2 years ago the Brookings Institution was the leading advocate of a thorough reorganization of the Federal Government. In 1933 Mr. W. F. Willoughby, the director of the institute for Government research of the Brookings Institution, published an elaborate study stoutly advocating a thorough reorganization of the administrative branch.

Mr. TABER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. I yield to the gentleman from New York. Mr. TABER. May I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that the appropriation to enlarge the activities of the Budget was first made last spring and took effect on July 1 last. In spite of this, there have been no recommendations, and the result has been only increased estimates.

Mr. COCHRAN. In reply let me say to the gentleman that I discussed this matter very fully with Mr. Bell, whom I have known for many years, and he told me the success of the organization that must be built up in the Bureau of the Budget depends upon the personnel that is secured. To get good men they must go slow. They are going to get career men of outstanding ability, men who have had experience in Government agencies and who will serve the Bureau of the Budget in the future and not be answerable in any way to any other Government agency. For a long time the Bureau of the Budget was required to borrow men from departments and independent establishments, who drew their pay from appropriations made to the departments and independent establishments. Now, when Mr. Bell places them in the Bureau of the Budget they will not be answerable to any officials of the executive branch of the Government but to the Bureau of the Budget alone. We expect to get something beneficial as a result of this set-up. I know we will if you will but give them a chance to select the proper personnel.

May I say further that I hope the time will come, whether it be through a reorganization bill or not, that this Congress will set up some kind of an organization such as the Auditor General we recommended last year, so that Congress will have an agency continually investigating the executive branch of the Government. If we do this, the dollars and cents saved to the taxpayers of this country cannot be estimated.

This study by the Brookings Institution is the third study which has been made attacking pending legislation in Congress. It was employed in 1936 by the committees from both Houses to make a thorough investigation of the administrative changes of the Government and to recommend reorganization to do away with overlapping and duplication and also point out where economies could be made. It failed to provide Congress with a constructive program and has devoted its energies to attacking programs developed by committees of Congress.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN].

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, yesterday when the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] was explaining this bill he made a statement, and as a member of the committee which had to do with the drafting of the bill now under consideration his statements are entitled to a great deal of weight, although not everything he states is true. He said, speaking of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber] and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gifford]—I quote from page 2311 of the Record

We have never yet heard a constructive suggestion come from either one of you.

Did that statement have anything to do with the merits of the bill, or was it intended to ridicule, to belittle, those two gentlemen; to detract from anything and everything that they may have said or that they may say in their opposition to this bill?

That you may get the full significance of that statement, let me read it again:

We have never yet heard a constructive suggestion come from either one of you.

JOHN TABER probably does as much work on the business before the House as any Member in it. Several of us know that the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] not only devotes his daylight working hours to the measures before the House, but that he spends evening after evening going over proposed legislation, gathering the facts and figures, delving into prior legislation and appropriations on the same subjects, and that he brings to this House a wealth of information which is invaluable; which saves many of us drudgery which we under no circumstances could give to the consideration of these appropriation bills.

Very true, we cannot all at all times agree with all the amendments that the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] proposes; we cannot always follow him on his amendments, his motions. But this without exception I think every Member on this side of the House and many on the other side will agree on: We never yet have seen the day or the hour when he has attempted to mislead us, to make an unfair statement or to advocate action in which he did not sincerely believe, after a painstaking investiga-

Yet the gentleman on the right-hand side of the aisle, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] says:

We have never yet heard a constructive suggestion come from either one of you.

Mr. WARREN. About this bill.

Mr. HOFFMAN. The gentleman did not say "about this bill." He said:

We have never heard a constructive suggestion come from either one of you.

That is what he said. If he did not mean that, why, all well and good. If it was not true, and it is not true in the opinion of many of us, why did he make it? Did it add anything to the knowledge we have of the bill? No, it did not. The Members all know that time and time again the suggestions of the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] of the Appropriations Committee have been adopted by the House and that those suggestions were constructive, that they were of value to the House as a whole and that they resulted in improving certain legislation. I know the gentleman was enthusiastic, as all of us get enthusiastic once in awhile. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] apparently wanted to detract from, to discredit, anything that either the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber], or the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gifford] might have said or might say against the adoption of this bill. But that is no reason why he should on the floor of the House attempt to create disrespect, want of esteem, for men who, in season and out, have patriotically given of their time, of their ability which is great, in order that there might be a better understanding in the House of measures on which we were called upon to vote.

Mr. WARREN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield to the gentleman from North

Mr. WARREN. I should not dignify what the gentleman is saying by attempting to reply.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Do not do it then. I am not asking the gentleman to either interrupt me or make any observation or comment. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Warren] asked me if I would yield and I yielded to him and, if he does not care to dignify what I had to say by making a reply, why ask me to yield? His statement shows a lack of consistency.

Mr. WARREN. I was talking about the bill; the gentleman knows that and the gentleman was sitting there listening.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Why did the gentleman say it then? He brushes it aside with this, that, or the other statement, but that is what he said about the activities of these two gentlemen. I read it again:

We have never yet heard a constructive suggestion come from either one of you.

Well might we ask who made him a judge over us.

Then the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] further said, speaking of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gifford], and I read from page 2312 of the Record:

Off the floor he is one of the most delightful gentlemen I have ever met. I really love him. Living at the same hotel I delight to talk with him nights, and I profit by his wisdom and his Cape Cod philosophy; but when it comes to this legislation, he is like a disappointed old woman; he becomes a carping and garrulous critic.

Now was that not a fine knife to stick into the back of the Member from Massachusetts [Mr. Gifford], who has served so long, so faithfully, and with such great ability in this House?

That statement of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Warren] takes me back to the statement of the President made down in Georgia when, speaking on the platform where sat his fellow Democrat, Senator George, the President, in substance, said that Senator George was a fine gentleman and a scholar but, if he, the President, had a vote in Georgia, he would vote for his opponent, and then went over, shook the hand of Senator George, and said something like this: "God bless you, Walter; I hope we can always be friends."

The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Warren] loves the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gifford] evenings and nighttimes. He "profits by his wisdom and his Cape Cod philosophy," but, like the President, when the gentleman whom he so greatly admires for his lovable qualities, and his wisdom ventures to disagree with him, then he would, politically speaking, assassinate him with the knife of ridicule or invective.

During the 4 short years that it has been my privilege to be here never yet have I heard successfully challenged any statement made by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gifford]. Those who have crossed swords with him in debate on the floor of the House know that always he has a ready and a logical answer to their taunts.

They know that he not only has done the research work necessary to marshal his facts but that he logically presents them. Many a dull moment has been enlivened by his discussions which are not only interesting but instructive.

Even the wise and gifted gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Warren]—and when I say wise and gifted I mean wise and gifted, and I am not being sarcastic—could at times on the floor of the House, as well as at the hotel where they both live, perhaps listen with profit to the observations of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gifford].

The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] is adopting the same tactics as his chief, the President. When he cannot argue with reason, then he ridicules his opponents and pokes fun at us; he abuses us and misuses us.

The two gentlemen about whom he made those disrespectful remarks took them in silence and without reply, evidently because they did not care to descend to personalities, but undoubtedly having been made by so prominent a Member of the opposition and being so utterly without foundation, they must have rankled in their minds. It is a tribute to their patience, to their generosity, that they did not reply in kind.

No reference to the matter would have been made by me, were it not that I wanted the Members to know that we on this side realize what he is doing and we were not deceived by it. Nor are we deceived by that plaster of flattery which the gentleman pasted over the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Mapes] and the other gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Crawford]. There is nothing new to those methods. They are old, old tactics, used sometimes by lawyers in a justice court.

When a certain type of lawyer—and I will not describe him; and I do not refer in any manner to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN]—finds both the law and the facts against him, then he resorts to abuse of his opponents, hoping to distract the attention of the jury, to confuse them and becloud their judgment.

It is the course followed by the great New Dealer himself from the very beginning of his administration, when, down through the years, he has branded everyone who ventured to disagree with him as lacking in knowledge, in wisdom, in kindliness, in charity, in patriotism.

The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Warren] did not go that far. He merely said that those two who happened to differ with him on this bill lacked the ability to offer constructive suggestions. It is fortunate that not all the wisdom is found in the possession of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Warren], because, if that were true, when the gentleman goes fishing, as he sometimes does, the House would be left without the ability to act.

Quoting a little further, on page 2312 of the Record, still speaking of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gifford], the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Warren] said:

He would vote against a bill containing the Ten Commandments if it were offered from the Democratic side of the House.

I do not know what the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gifford] would do, if, through some error or mistake, the President or the new dealers sent up to the House the Ten Commandments, but this I do know: That, with the record which this President and his administration have made for violating his and its promises, one could well justify his refusal to accept at its face value and without examination anything advocated by the new dealers.

With the record which this administration has for its refusal to carry out the promises contained in the platform it adopted in 1932 and which the President said, in substance, was a solemn contract with the people, no one in his right mind would be justified in placing any further reliance upon any measure advocated by it.

Having in mind the inconsistent statements which the President has made from time to time; remembering his transcendent ability to disregard without the quiver of an eyelash promise after promise which he made to secure votes, why should anyone with the record before him accept any New Deal measure without a careful examination?

Because the President has deliberately time and again failed to keep his plighted word with the people, if there should come to this House from the new dealers a bill labeled "The Ten Commandments" or "The Lord's Prayer," I for one would want to look inside the package to see what it was; see if the commandments had not been rewritten; if, in conjunction with John L. Lewis, the President had not added an eleventh one, one which read, "Thou shalt not work until you have signed on the membership card of the C. I. O." I would want to know that the President or his ghost writer had not rewritten the Lord's Prayer, if it came up to us from the White House—this not only because of the failure to keep faith, but because of that other attitude, that expression some time ago that certain things belonged to the "horse and buggy" days and that we must get away from them. If memory serves correctly, the Ten Commandments and the Lord's Prayer were further back even, than the "horse and buggy" days.

With the procession which has wended its way in and out of the White House since the beginning of the New Deal, I would be inclined to suspect that there are some among that outfit or on its fringes, some at least among that group which has supported the New Deal, who think they could improve on the Ten Commandments and perhaps the Lord's Prayer.

In fact, if information carried by the press is correct, the government which the President insisted upon recognizing, the Russians, those now in control of Russia, at least think they can do without the Lord's Prayer.

Mr. O'TOOLE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. No; I refuse to yield.

One gentleman this morning said, "Some of the things you have against this bill seem to grow out of the fact that you lack confidence in the man in the White House." I wish you would come over some time and read some of the letters written to me by the old farmers, the dumb old farmers, the uneducated old farmers who are furnishing the food on which you live, the farmers who work day after day, and some of them far into the night, to produce the things which keep us alive; who dig up the money to pay the taxes which we wastefully spend; and see what they say about the gentleman in the White House and what they think about his ability to carry out his promises.

Lack of confidence? Why, your own man over in the Senate, the head of the Finance Committee, and in the House here, the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Doughton], have written the President publicly telling him in effect, though not in words, that the people have no more confidence in him, in his spending program; that the things he has advocated have failed, and that he is down now to where he has to get back to hard common sense and adopt the one sure cure which, as an old farmer wrote me, is to do without the things we cannot afford to buy, the things we cannot pay for.

When we recall that the President told us the $5,000,000,000 deficit that Hoover ran up was going to sink us into bankruptcy, and then that he went on and every year on an average since then has given us a $3,000,000,000 deficit, and has been doing all these things that would make it sure that we go into bankruptcy, is it any wonder we do not trust him to monkey with the machinery of government? He is like an irresponsible, willful child who, when the folks go to church, takes the clock to pieces and cannot get it back together again. Here he is at the end of the 6 years, with all the wheels and strings and springs and weights on the floor, and he does not know what under heaven to do, so he comes forward and tells us we are in danger of war from some foreign power and we must have a reorganization.

Mr. BOLLES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin. Mr. BOLLES. I should like to ask the gentleman if he has noticed that the gentleman who proposed the bill very carefully said the White House did not have anything to do with the preparation of it?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Oh, yes; they took the White House label off it. The gentleman from North Carolina himself, if I recall correctly, and his associate the gentleman from Missouri, very loudly proclaimed that neither the White House, the administration, nor anyone else had anything to do with this bill—that it was their child. If I were really sure that it is their baby and that their line of ancestry went straight back for 500 years or more, I might be willing—I do not know—to accept it at its face value, but I am afraid they do not know the parentage of their own child. [Applause.]

Did the gentleman from North Carolina so painstakingly on the floor of the House assure us that this was not a White House and New Deal bill because he had confidence in the White House, in the New Deal? Or did he take that label off the proposed legislation because he realized that it was a discredited label; that no longer was it an asset; that it was a liability; that with a New Deal label on the bottle, no one cared to take a drink?

The people are suspicious of a reorganization bill which grants to the Executive any additional authority. The people in the last campaign saw the Communists in Michigan and the "wild and woolies" in other States; they saw the C. I. O. in Pennsylvania hook up, join forces, and present a common front with the President's new dealers. They saw the Communists in New York City join forces with the new dealers to defeat that capable, patriotic Democrat, John O'Connor; and they are now suspicious of anything and everything that the President backs. They have reason for their suspicion.

Throughout the 2 long years of the history of the sit-down strikes they saw the Communists, without interference from the Chief Executive or any of his friendly Governors, bring about violence, permit riots and civil strife in several of the States.

They recall that the President has told them time and again that the country was on the verge of bankruptcy, and then see him send in new requests for more money which would send us farther along that road.

They have heard him talk, and they have read his speeches about the unfortunate and the needy. They know that he said that some millions of our people were without the necessities of life, and then they have read how he went on vacations at public expense, vacations which cost the taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars, and they have wondered whether he ever really had one single thought while on those expensive vacations, enjoyed at their expense, about their hardships.

Certainly hundreds of thousands, yes, millions, of people lack confidence in him; do not want him longer entrusted with anything having to do with the reorganization of our Government.

In the years that have passed he obtained the appropriation of billions of dollars to be used for relief. Thousands of dollars of that relief money were used to advance the political interests of his favorites. The people suspect—and with good reason—that, if this bill is passed, he will use his powers to reorganize to strengthen the lines for his political favorites in 1940.

If he permitted the use, as he did permit the use, of money appropriated to buy food, clothing, and shelter for the needy, for the purchase of votes, is there any reason to believe that he would not use, or permit the use of, the power granted him under this bill to further the political fortunes of his favorites?

Those on the Democratic side should not forget so soon that the money they voted him was used in the purge. They should not fail to realize that the power now granted him by this bill will be used in 1940 against some of the very men who are now giving him this power.

The purpose of any reorganization bill is to accomplish two objects. One is economy. It is conceded that this bill will not do that. In any event, the President can bring about economy without the enactment of this legislation by lessening his demands for ever-increasing appropriations. He can bring it about by causing the discharge of those in many governmental positions where they are not needed.

The other purpose is to bring about efficiency. That, too, the President can accomplish without this bill. In one department alone, the N. L. R. B., which was recently granted some $3,000,000, he can get rid of inefficient, biased, and prejudiced Government agents who are continually creating and stirring up industrial warfare. And so it is in many other departments.

No, the President is not seeking economy. Has he not within the last few days announced that he intends again to insist upon an added $150,000,000 to the relief appropriation? Has he not within the last day or two refused, or failed, at least, to accept the suggestions of the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, of the House Ways and Means Committee, to join with them and give us real economy, not some time in the future, but at this session of Congress?

We do not need this reorganization bill at this time. The two great purposes which might be accomplished by reorganization can, as has just been stated, be brought about by the action of the President, and certain it is that any measure sent down here which promises economy and efficiency will receive overwhelming support in the House.

[Applause.]

Mr. BEAM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. VOORHIS].

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman who just preceded me mentioned something having been said that was not pertinent to the bill by one of the Members on the Democratic side. I feel it quite a privilege for me to be able to follow a speech which so carefully was limited to the merits of this proposed legislation and struck so closely home to the real point we have at issue here.

I should like to draw an imaginary circle here in front of the House. It is supposed to represent the present scope of the powers of the executive department of government. The limits of this circle have been determined by acts of Congress heretofore passed. Within this circle the executive department, including the President and other people who are working in that department, are allowed to operate under the mandates the Congress has heretofore given them. The President, as I might remind the House, because we may have forgotten it, is the Chief Executive of the United States according to the Constitution and is charged with the task of carrying out as best he can with the assistance of his Cabinet the laws which are passed. He is charged with the task of putting into operation those powers which the Congress delegates to him from time to time. As the Chief Executive of the Government the President therefore is responsible for the efficient operation of the executive department.

The bill we have before us now is in a certain very important sense different from any other kind of legislation we could be asked to pass upon, for it has to do only with the reorganization of the executive department in the interest of making of it a more efficiently functioning organization. There is nothing in this bill which extends the boundaries of that imaginary circle I drew—not one iota. There is nothing in this bill which gives to the President or any other executive officer a single bit of additional power he did not have before. There is nothing in this bill that states that Congress could not tomorrow immediately after passing this bill pass legislation to abolish entire departments or set up new ones or change anything else it might have in mind to change.

As I said a moment ago, the President is the Chief Executive of this Government. What we are saying in this bill is simply that we charge the President with the task of seeing to it that that job is done in a more efficient and effective and coordinated manner than it has been done heretofore.

With a view to accomplishing this purpose we instruct and empower the President to effect within certain limits such reorganization of the various agencies, bureaus, and entities within that circle that I drew for you as he may deem to be wise, subject, however, to the power of Congress to refuse to ratify the action he proposes to take.

SIGNIFICANCE OF REORGANIZATION BILL

Why do we have this bill? Fundamentally, I believe, we have this bill before us because it represents an attempt on the part of a democratic legislative body to prove to the world that it is possible for such a democratic legislative body to inject additional efficiency into the functioning of democratic government. We hear all the time about the fact that there is a conflict in the world between democracy on the one hand and dictatorship on the other. Well, the proof of democracy is going to be found in the ability of bodies like this House of Representatives to see to it that democratic government is conducted in such fashion that it can match the efficiency of any dictatorial government in the world and at the same time maintain those fundamental liberties which our Constitution guarantees. This measure, as I said, without increasing one single iota the power of the President or any executive officer, looks forward to that end and that goal, and as such it is a most important bill.

Now where does the opposition come from? So far as I can determine the opposition to this bill boils down substantially to this. After 6 years of the administration of the President, it has at last become possible, through a continuous hammering of propaganda, for political opponents to think that they can safely attack him and his policies and make effective political capital out of such attacks. I do not think they reckon with the very natural insistence of the people that some better answer to our economic problem be advanced by people who presume to try to tear the Roosevelt program to pieces.

I do not want to be misunderstood, neither do I want to be represented as saying that nobody who is opposed to this bill is sincere in his opposition. Of course, I know that many gentlemen are, but I am trying to summarize what seems to me to be the gist of the opposition, and it is that the country is not yet in a prosperous economic condition, that that is all the fault of the President, and therefore the reorganization bill must be a bad thing.

Now, fundamentally the basic economic policy of this administration is sound. And sometime when I get time before the House I shall demonstrate to you what I mean. The real economic difficulty in America lies in our failure to balance our productive capacity with equivalent capacity to consume. This administration has tried to attack that problem. It has accomplished much in that direction, though not enough, it is true, to bring us out of the difficulty that we now face. No policy which does not take account of this central problem and put it in its proper central place can possibly succeed over any considerable period of time.

It appears to me that after all the recital of the high crimes and misdemeanors of Franklin Delano Roosevelt has been gone through with, they sum up very largely to this fact: That he, among a very few people who have occupied high places in all the history of the world, has been one who has been willing, at times when it was difficult to do it, to stand before the world and before the people that he represents and say that the man who could not speak for himself, the little man of the Nation, the man who was pushed clear out of the economic system itself, has certain rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, and that he as President would do what he could to see that those things were protected, if not in the way that was best and easiest to do it, then in the way that was available to him under the circumstances and in view of the opposition.

I am not impressed by the possibility that some of our political bickerings here in the House are a means of solving America's problems. I know there are certain necessary measures that have got to be taken. I am hopeful in the course of a very few days to have one of them prepared so that I will be able to speak to the House about it. But I do not believe that America is going to be saved by Members trying to prove that one political organization is right and another one wrong, or that one man has made mistakes and another one has not. The only hope that we can offer the people of this country lies in constructive suggestions which may come from one or another of us as to what practically we can do about these things.

In this reorganization bill we have something of that nature. We have a partial answer, at least, to the multiplicity of bureaus and agencies which have grown up in the executive department of government over a period of time. We have a possibility of taking a step in the direction of making democratic government, through free democratic decisions, a more efficiently functioning organization. I think a far, far better thing can be done that offers far, far more hope to the American people by the passage of this bill than by a good deal of the inconsequential oratory which we have heard so much in this very vital session of Congress.

As I see it, this bill represents the very heart of this whole idea of reorganization to which some of us have devoted so much attention in the last few years. I think this select committee has done a fine job. I think Mr. WARREN, who drafted the bill, has done a fine job. I cannot find in it any objectionable feature, and I think it deserves the support of this House. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Johns].

Mr. JOHNS. Mr. Chairman, this is the first time I have appeared before you to say a word. [Applause.] I have been a patient listener to the proceedings of this House, and I know that if some of my friends back home could see the partisanship that exists here they would wonder how we ever get any legislation passed at all that is worth while.

It was my good fortune to be born in the West, educated in the South, and to finish my education in the East. I think this has made me more tolerant and has made me more cosmopolitan. I have learned to love a number of the men of the South, and some are here today. I owe a great deal of my success in life to Judge McReynolds, who is now a Member of Congress here and chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee. I am sorry he has not been able to be in the House more than he has.

However, I cannot let this bill pass by without expressing to you my views on it because we have a reorganization bill in the State of Wisconsin patterned after this bill and we have had experience with it and I can tell you first-hand just how it has worked.

I say to you frankly that it has been the most unsuccessful law ever enacted in the State of Wisconsin. In fact it has been so bad that the present legislature has wiped it out. I feel as one who has had observation in political life to some extent, and who knows something about the Constitution, having practiced law for over 30 years and having written articles on that instrument, that I know something about it, and it seems to me that we are doing the wrong thing here. The President of the United States is a very busy There can be no question about that. We are going to ask him to reorganize this Government. He cannot do that personally; he must delegate it to somebody else to do. We created these different departments here, and I think we ought to be able to take care of them when it comes to putting them out of existence, if they are not satisfactory, or if we do not need them any longer.

As I read the bill, the first object of the bill is-

To reduce expenditures to the fullest extent consistent with the efficient operation of the Government.

With that I am in hearty accord, and I think possibly they could be reduced very materially, and ought to be reduced very materially, and that very soon. Yesterday the Associated Press said that the Treasury figures showed that the first months of the present fiscal year cost over $6,000,000,000; that at the close of business on March 3 the expenses of the fiscal year which began last July 1 totaled $6,029,286,657.

This was $2,333,287,066 more than the Treasury's income in the same period, and resulted in hoisting the Federal debt to a new high of $39,927,798,000. It seems to me there is plenty of room for reducing the debt and that it must be reduced. If this reorganization will do it, of course the reorganization is a good thing. The only question involved is how it ought to be done. I am perfectly willing, sitting here as I have, from the time Congress convened up to the present time, and knowing the Speaker of the House as I do and the good Democratic friends that I have met on the other side of the House. without even consulting my colleagues on the Republican side, to let the Speaker of this House appoint a certain number of Democrats to reorganize the departments of the United States Government, and if they will bring in a report here and tell me what departments ought to be eliminated, I shall vote for it. Of course, that is all very nice; but something ought to be done and has to be done, and I think a committee of Congress is the proper way to go about this reorganization.

It is said that such a committee will never get any place, that they would not bring in any report, but nevertheless it is the duty of the Members of Congress to do it. When a new department is established we have hearings, and there is a reason given and some necessity shown for establishing it. If some of these departments are not workable, if they are not necessary, then the thing to do is to get the facts and figures and eliminate them. Let Congress do it. Congress created them, let Congress eliminate them. That is the way I feel about this thing. If we had a business, and if we found there was some department, as I have, that was not paying, then we would have an investigation made by men in whom we had faith, and if they reported that a certain department was losing money, and if we could not improve it in some way, we would eliminate it. That is the way I think Congress should do, because this is a business organization as well as a political organization.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNS. I yield.

Mr. MAY. We have heard a good deal about yardsticks lately, and I suggest as the yardstick for the elimination of unnecessary bureaus, the democratic platform of 1932 and the democratic platform for 1936, particularly that of 1932. We declared then in favor of a 25-percent reduction. Since the growth of bureaucracy in the Government from that time up to this time I think it ought to be a 50-percent reduction now.

Mr. JOHNS. I am in hearty accord with what my distinguished colleague from Kentucky says. I have read that platform, and as a man who loves his country, it might be interesting at this time if I say this to you, that I was interested particularly in what the President said about the debt not being any larger at the present time than it was in 1929. That is true to a certain extent, but here is the difference. The President of the United States said that he was 100 percent for the Democratic platform in 1932. That platform said that they were going to reduce the expenses of this country 25 percent. The people of the country took the President at his word. The private obligations of this courtry have been reduced $30,000,000,000 while the National Government has increased its indebtedness $30,000,000,000, so that we stand just where we did at that time. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. CLARK].

Mr. CLARK. Mr. Chairman, I am one of those who voted against the reorganization bills heretofore considered by this body. There were a good many objections, in my opinion, to the previous bills, many of which have been eliminated in the bill now under consideration. It has been my view that the people of the country have been interested in reorganization chiefly with two things in view: First, some economy in expenditures for the operation of the Government; and, second, the elimination of so much red tape, and in making contacts of the Government with its citizenship a little more simple.

I have looked through this bill in the hope of finding something that would at least tend in the direction of accomplishing some real economy in governmental expenditures. I want to call the committee's attention to the language of the bill, on page 5, in lines 17 and 18, where it is said:

The President in his message transmitting a reorganization plan is requested to state (in such cases and to such extent as he deems advisable) the reduction of expenditures which it is probable will be brought about by the taking effect of the reorganizations specified in the plan.

I had in mind to offer an amendment eliminating the rather ambiguous language above, and to require in direct and simple language that the President, with his plan, should submit at least an estimate of what it might be expected would be saved by the proposed plan. I have discussed this with some members of the committee and am pleased to find that the committee itself expects to offer that kind of an amendment. I feel that if that is done, there will be at least a great likelihood of showing some genuine reduction in the expenses of administering this Government. With that in the bill, I feel I can consistently vote for its adoption. After all, the effect of this bill will be to call upon the executive department, as it were, to make a report to this body as to what can be done in the way of reorganizing the Government, and what, if anything, can be done in the way of curtailing governmental expenditures. I shall be interested to see not only what the proposed plan may be, but very much interested to see what reduction in expenditures, if any, it is proposed to accomplish by such plan.

And I also hope that something may be worked out that will make the ever-increasing contacts of the Federal Government with its citizenship more simple and more understandable to the average businessman, and that in any proposed reorganization the useless expenditures of public funds in the administration of Government may be eliminated, or at least some practical plan laid down by which the Congress, in the exercise of the final right, may accomplish something concrete in both directions. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina has expired.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BENDER].

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Chairman, I did not have the privilege last year of voting against the reorganization bill because I was not here, but in my campaign for election to Congress, wherever I campaigned, I promised that in the event such a reorganization bill should be presented I would vote against it. I received a majority of over 100,000 votes on the basis of that pledge and other pledges that were made.

I was in the Ohio Senate for 10 years, and during that period I had occasion to listen to a lot of soft soap and a lot of honeyed words about various measures. They told us that certain measures would do this and others would do that. Then we voted for them or we voted against them on those promises or statements, only to find the Supreme Court of Ohio, and sometimes the Supreme Court of the United States, telling us we did not know what we were voting on or how we were voting or that we were voting wrong when we thought we were voting right.

This measure has been before this body only a few days. It was stated yesterday that only a few copies of the bill were available on last Saturday. Thus far we have heard not a word from the Nation. We have not heard from the people back home. We have had no demand for this legislation from anywhere. No one has asked us to vote for this proposition. No emergency exists. There is no need for haste. We have spent weeks in debate and discussions of various kinds, and we have accomplished very little in some directions, I think, sometimes, and yet the committee meets and forces this measure through without proper consideration, and here we have it on the floor, just as though the whole country were demanding that this be done.

There is no demand for it. You have had no word from back home. I do not care whether you are from California, Tennessee, Georgia, or Ohio, you have had no word from your constituents asking for this measure. Then, why the haste? Where does this thing come from? You say that our Parliamentarian, who comes from Ohio and who is a very good man, was the author of this legislation. Of course, he will prepare a bill for you or prepare one for me if we tell him what we want in the bill. But I would like to have word from him as to who asked him to prepare this bill. Some say that Franklin D. Roosevelt had something to do with it. Others say he had nothing to do with it. I would like to know what he did have to do with it.

I say in reply to the gentleman from California, who said in his statement that we have been here 6 years and this is the first time the people have risen in protest, I say that last year the Democrats and Republicans had the good sense to rise in protest and say, "No, this thing shall not pass." It failed of passage not because of Republican opposition, particularly, but because of Democratic opposition. I thank God for those Democrats and those Republicans who joined hands last year in opposing the reorganization bill.

I say to you that, in view of the fact that the only people who have prospered in the past 6 years have been the manufacturers of red ink, we ought to think pretty hard when the taxpayers are put through the wringer again. It is essential that we stop, look, listen, watch, and pray about this proposition.

I read in the newspapers yesterday and today certain comments from editorial writers-a very few of them. Not many have learned about it because they did not know it was before us. When the people back home hear about this railroading you are going to catch—well, you are going to catch plenty from them. They are going to tell you how they feel. They are not for this reorganization bill, especially not for section 301, under title III, which reads:

The President is authorized to appoint not to exceed six administrative assistants and to fix the compensation of each at the rate of not more than $10,000 per annum. Each such administrative assistant shall perform such duties as the President may

What does that mean? I think I understand the English language. I think it means that the Corcorans, the Cohens, and Jimmie Roosevelts will have some more time to experiment on the rest of the country—use the rest of us as a lot of guinea pigs as they have in the past.

I hope the Republicans and the Democrats in this House will have the good sense to join hands today or tomorrow, when the vote comes, and record a decisive "nay" vote on this measure. Your people back home will applaud you as they applauded you last year. Thank you. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. For the information of the Committee, the gentleman from New York has 1 hour 171/2 minutes remaining. The gentleman from Missouri has 1 hour and 30 minutes remaining.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Johnson].

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I was interested and amused by the alleged argument of the distinguished gentleman from Ohio who has just thanked God several times that the reorganization bill was defeated in the last Congress. I may say in reply that instead of thanking God he might thank the propagandists. He might also thank some of the anti-Roosevelt newspaper columnists. He might thank some of the reactionaries of both Houses and on both sides of the aisle who talked economy, fought against the only bill that made any serious effort to that end. He might thank those who gave out misinformation to the public with reference to the purposes of that bill.

I am not apologizing to anyone for having supported bills to reorganize governmental agencies in the past.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. I gladly yield to the distinguished gentleman from California.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Does not the gentleman feel that this is not a matter in which the people of the country can have any great interest one way or another, but that it it is a matter about which it is our responsibility to do something? When the opposition Members appeal for more time what they are really appealing for is a chance for those agencies who are against the bill to get in their work.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. There is no doubt, as the gentleman from California has pointed out, why those who are so vigorously opposing this bill are now demanding delay.

I do not agree, however, that the public is not greatly interested in this legislation. The public is interested in any kind of legislation that will bring about a greater efficiency and better coordination of departments of the Government and save hundreds of millions of dollars a year. I do agree wholeheartedly with the gentleman, however, that Government reorganization is the responsibility of this Congress [Applause.]

I supported a much more drastic reorganization in the last Congress than the pending measure. Before that I joined Republicans and Democrats alike in supporting such legislation back in those dark, never-to-be-forgotten days, when Republicans were in control. I voted to give the great engineer, Herbert Hoover, much more power than it is proposed to give President Roosevelt in the pending bill, or even in the bill defeated in the last Congress, and I did not hear all of this opposition from the Republican side of the aisle. Where were our Republican brethren then? We heard no talk then about a dictator, or charges and counter charges that we were giving President Hoover too much power. You see, it all depends upon whose ox is gored or in the ditch-or to be perfectly frank, who is to do the reorganizing.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. RANDOLPH. The able gentleman from Oklahoma would not agree, I feel sure, with the gentleman from Ohio, who just spoke, when he made the pronouncement that in a campaign he simply said he would be against reorganization legislation when he could not possibly know in what form the bill would come up or what provisions a reorganization measure might contain when it should come before the House of which he might or might not be a Member. Every measure coming before us should be considered on its merit at the time it is being debated and voted up or down.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. No; I do not agree that the gentleman's pronouncement to his constituents that he would oppose government reorganization before knowing what would be in a bill, is any definite proof or shows the essential marks of statesmanship. Of course, that is a matter of opinion. Never in the several years I have been here have I heard anyone admit, much less boast, that he promised his constituency to oppose a bill before any of the provisions of the bill in question could possibly be known. Frankly, I am really surprised that the gentleman now states he made a promise that he would be against any kind of reorganization bill even though the bill might save hundreds of millions of dollars to the taxpayers and promote greater efficiency in government.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. BENDER. I might amend that by adding: And attaching greater powers to the gentleman now in the White House.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Oh, I thought the gentleman would want to amend that statement. And as to the gentleman's statement that he is afraid this legislation might give President Roosevelt more power, I realize that the country has been propagandized so thoroughly for the past several months that some of our Republican friends in and out of Congress are still laboring under the hallucination that the President wants to be a dictator. This bill, of course, grants no such power. May I say, in passing, that if I remember correctly President Roosevelt swept the great State of Ohio by a tremendous majority in 1932, and increased that smashing majority in Ohio in 1936.

I happened to be in and through Ohio during both campaigns. The great masses of Ohio, like those in every other section, irrespective of politics, have an abiding faith in Franklin D. Roosevelt. [Applause.]

I was told that most Republican candidates in Ohio simply out-promised their Democratic opponents. In some districts I was told our Republican friends advocated and promised more funds for W. P. A., higher wages for all, decidedly increased pensions for the old, more funds for youth, and, of course, by all means, balance the Federal Budget. [Laughter.]

Oh, you boys are to be congratulated on establishing the record in the last campaign of being the champion promisers of the world. Not only in Ohio, but in other States that I visited, I found our genial Republican friends promising the world with a fence around it. They reminded me of the proverbial school teacher who in applying for a job declared he was prepared to teach either the flat or the round system. He freely admitted he was eminently prepared to teach any system, provided, of course, he could get the job. Many apparently were for anybody's system that was calculated to get the votes. [Applause.]

But getting back to the pending reorganization bill, in the years I have been in Congress I have noticed that regardless of whether the Democrats or the Republicans happened to be in power, when Congress has created a new agency of government, that almost without exception that agency has immediately begun to expand and expand. Like a rolling snowball, the agency, unit, board, or commission will keep on growing and, of course, demanding additional money in order to further expand. For the past two sessions of Congress I have had some responsibility in framing and presenting two of the large annual appropriation bills.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, it has been my experience that almost without exception when any Government agency, department, bureau, or commission comes before either of the Subcommittees on Appropriations, of which I happen to be a member, invariably they make it plain they feel that is the most important agency of any department of government. Even though it may be an emergency set-up, it soon blooms out as a regular governmental set-up and apparently here to say. No doubt they honestly believe in their hearts it is the most important function of the entire Government. In spite of the sincere efforts of our committees, which have consistently sought to cut these appropriations far below the Budget estimates, we find many of the functions of Government growing by leaps and bounds.

The gentleman from Wisconsin made the suggestion awhile ago, if I understood him correctly, that if Congress would reorganize the Government agencies he would support such a program. That sounds reasonable. But the RECORD will show that the same argument was used by the opposition against reorganization in the last Congress. This Congress, like past Congresses, will be unable to actually reorganize the departments of the Government. The reason is obvious. The departments and agencies are too powerful. They have too many friends in and out of Congress. Representatives of some Federal agencies of Government are out here in the corridor of the Capitol at this hour opposing this reorganization bill, because, forsooth, somebody might lose their jobs if and when this bill is enacted into law.

Mr. SIROVICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SIROVICH. As a matter of observation, under the Coolidge administration a committee of the House and Senate, under Republican influence, was appointed to reorganize the Government departments, as the gentleman from Wisconsin stated, but the bureaucracy was so strong the bill was unable to pass the House or Senate.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. The gentleman has stated the history of the record correctly as I remember it.

We all know as a matter of history that Congress has absolutely failed to reorganize the Government in the past. Even the most vicious opposition to this legislation freely admit that the Government should be overhauled and a lot of overlapping bureaus, boards, and commissions eliminated. For example, it has been pointed out time and time again that we have some 68 units of government doing statistical work when we know it should all be under one head. We have at least 15 or 16 agencies of the Government doing forestry work when it might be all under one head. If this Congress fails and refuses to do anything, then it is our responsibility. We cannot consistently pose as favoring real economy and at the same time refuse to vote to do anything about it.

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Yes; I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. The gentleman cast some reflection upon the campaign tactics used in the State of Ohio. I would like to inquire if the gentleman was speaking about the Thirteenth Ohio District, which I happen to represent?

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. I will say to my good friend from Ohio that I do not believe I happened to have the pleasure of being in the Thirteenth Ohio District which the gentleman represents, but I did visit some fourteen or fifteen States. I found that in practically every section in the States I visited that our Republican friends were all things to all people. I might remind the gentleman that I was merely answering his colleague from Ohio, who boasted that he had promised his constituents that he would not vote for the pending bill, although he could not have possibly then known a single provision in the measure.

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. I would not want the gentleman to apply his remarks to my campaign or to my district.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. I have just stated that I did not have the pleasure of being in the gentleman's district, so, of course, am not familiar with his campaign. I may say, in all fairness, that I have had the pleasure of serving on the same committee with the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. White], who represents the Thirteenth Ohio District, and I have found him to be a very sincere, capable, and fair-minded gentleman, for whom I have the highest regard.

Mr. BENDER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Since I anwered some of the statements the gentleman made, I feel that I should again yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BENDER. Which district would the gentleman say that actually occurred in?

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Well, I would not, for a moment, cast any aspersions upon the gentleman. His own admissions simply speak for themselves. Nor did I mean to be offensive to any of his Republican colleagues who may have made so many preelection promises. Of course, inasmuch as the gentleman solemnly promised his constituents that he would not support this bill, even before he read it, there is nothing he can now do but vote against it. But I repeat that some of his colleagues made many other promises—in fact every promise imaginable calculated to garner the votes.

Mr. THORKELSON. I did not promise anything of that

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Well, I am delighted to know there is one good Republican who admits he made no such rash promises. Such confessions might be good for the soul.

Mr. THORKELSON. The gentleman is the one who has accused me and I do not like it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Oh, I deeply regret that the gentleman takes exceptions to my remarks. Certainly I have no thought of being offensive. But, I submit that the opposition to this legislation injected politics into this discussion.

The discussion here today is not far different from discussions in the past for and against Government reorganization. Moreover, the tactics of the opposition to this measure are about the same tactics as used in the past.

In the first place, the opposition will attempt to load it down with amendments. That is always the tactics—clever tactics too—of the opposition to any legislation. If it cannot be defeated outright, then the idea is to destroy its usefulness and effectiveness by some perfecting amendments. So I warn friends of this legislation to look out for these amendments from those that profess to be "for Government reorganization, but—"

There is no deep, dark secret about this bill. It is a comparatively short, plain, and simple measure, with practically every objectionable feature, actual or imaginary, of the last reorganization bill eliminated. It is a great forward step in sane, constructive, economical, and progressive government. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DONDERO].

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, the question of reorganization of the Federal Government is again before us. This question held the attention of the Congress during April of 1938. This time it is before us in the form of a modified bill, H. R. 4425.

It is a modified bill in the sense that any plan of reorganization proposed by the President would not become a law if the Congress of the United States by concurrent resolution acted negatively within 60 days from the time such plan was submitted to the Congress.

Section 5 of the proposed measure contains this unusual proposal. It is one of the most subtle provisions ever included in a proposed piece of legislation that has come to my attention during my 6 years' service in the House of Representatives. To the most casual reader, it must be apparent that the plan would become a law if Congress did not act. It would also become a law unless both Houses of Congress concurred in disapproval. It would also become a law if one branch voted in the affirmative and the other branch of Congress voted in the negative. It must be obvious to every Member of this body who has been here during the last 4 years, that regardless of the unsound, extravagant, and wasteful nature of Gilbertsville Dam in the T. V. A., which the House has on at least four different occasions disapproved, that it was put back in the bill by the Senate and there it is today committing this Nation to an exepnditure of $112,000,000 for a dam that is not needed, for a project that will do more damage than good, and the American people will foot the bill for the mistake.

That is exactly the method provided in the pending bill to secure the adoption of any plan of reorganization that the President may submit. To say that it is subtle is a charitable expression.

Under this bill, if it becomes law, the President will submit a plan of reorganization. The House of Representatives may disapprove of it, as in the case of Gilbertsville Dam. It will go to the Senate, and the Senate can either act affirmatively or not act at all, and the plan will become law. No Member of this body will be deceived into thinking that any other plan or course will be followed if this proposed reorganization bill becomes the law of the land.

Not one Member of this body or of the committee of this House has told the membership of the House of Representatives why any reorganization plan under this measure should not take the same course as any other bill that is presented to it, namely, that it should receive the affirmative action of both Houses of Congress before it becomes the law of the land.

During the last 6 years the country has very justly applied the opprobrious name of "rubber stamp" to the Congress. A reason exists for that epithet. It has come because the representative branch of the Government has surrendered its functions to the Executive of the Nation. We have delegated our power and authority to the President. We have shifted our responsibility and direct duty to the American people to the executive branch of the Government, and it has made the laws. This bill calls for a further delegation of power and authority and a further surrender of our powers and abandonment of our duty to the people to the President of the United States.

No one claims this will effect any great economy in the conduct of the Government. The report of the Brookings Institution, one of the most reliable institutions of its kind in this or any other country, points out that this reorganization plan might accomplish some degree of efficiency. It would accomplish very little economy.

Possibilities of economy through mere structural reorganization of Federal administrative agencies are relatively minor in comparison with those which might be realized by the elimination and curtailment of activities, according to a study made public today by the Brookings Institution.

I quote from the Brookings report:

Savings large enough to play a really important part in bringing Government outgo down to the level of income can come only from elimination and curtailment of certain types of activities, a step which involves large issues of public policy.

The entire Budget for operation of administrative agencies, including the administration of all "emergency" extinities.

the entire Budget for operation of administrative agencies, including the administration of all "emergency" activities, amounted to $1,827,318,000 in the last fiscal year, which was approximately 17.65 percent of the total amount available for expenditures. The remaining $8,522,590,000 was appropriated for various functions and activities which administrative reorganization would not

Real economy to be effected in the running of the Government must come through a withdrawal or suspension of many wasteful and expensive activities in which the Government is now engaged. We may well take heed of the statement in the Brookings Institution report touching on this phase of the question. Listen:

The study, which was made by Dr. Lewis Meriam, chairman of the Institute for Government Research, and Dr. L. F. Schmecke-bier, points out that two procedures may be utilized in seeking these larger savings.

these larger savings.

One involves subjecting all present functions and activities to a rigorous, detailed pruning process, which involves examining the multitudinous activities of the executive agencies, abandoning those which are not regarded as essential and reducing others to the necessary minimum. Such a program means that beneficiaries of the National Government who are now receiving from it subsidies, grants, donations, loans, pensions, and special services, and even direct or indirect employment would find these aids curtailed or abandoned. curtailed or abandoned.

This bill should be amended by striking out section 5 and inserting in its place a section which will provide for the affirmative action on the part of both Houses of Congress before any plan for reorganization shall be considered and become law.

The minority report filed on this bill very justly included the statement, and I quote:

This bill is a device to allow the Executive to obtain legislation by indirection rather than by the usual and proper method of leg-islating.

[Applause.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. May].

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, in view of my opposition to the reorganization bill at the last session of Congress and my activity in opposition to that measure, I feel it is due to my colleagues here, to the people of my district, and to the people of the country at large that I should make some explanation of my position in support of this bill at this time.

It was a matter of deep regret to me during the last session of Congress to be put in the attitude of opposing what was supposed to be a desire of the administration to reorganize the Federal Government. At that time I was convinced that the bill we had under consideration-and I am no less convinced now-was entirely wrong in many particulars. bill we had under consideration at that time provided for the establishment of a new, unlimited department of government rather than a reduction of the number of agencies and bureaus. I have reference to that part of title II of the bill considered in the last session of Congress which proposed to set up a Department of Welfare. I am one of those Democrats, whether you call me a conservative or reactionary, or what not, who really believes that organized bureaucracy, financed and supported by the taxpayers' money, is after all a more dangerous enemy of real, genuine democracy than hostile armies. [Applause.]

In the bill of last session section 4 provided for the establishment of a Department of Welfare and the appointment of a secretary of welfare. I am quite sure if the bill had passed at that time most of us knew who would be secretary. In the same bill it was provided that under this secretary of welfare should be placed (1) public health, (2) sanitation, (3) protection of the consumer, (4) relief of unemployment, (5) relief of hardship and suffering caused by unemployment, (6) relief of the needy and distressed, (7) assistance and benefits to the aged, and (8) rehabilitation and assistance to the physically disabled.

In other words, we would have taken about 8 or 10 of the largest public welfare activities of the country and place them in one bureau, the operation of which would have required an appropriation of from four to six billion dollars a year.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAY. Not just now, please.

I thought then, as I think now, that this was placing too much power in the hands of one man. I can visualize that a man with four or five billion dollars to expend in desirable avenues and in laudible undertakings such as the building of school houses, the construction of highways, and the relief of the sick, the distressed, the aged, and the poor, might acquire unusual and extremely dangerous power in this country, in fact, enough power that he could destroy any candidate for any public office in any district in the United States whom he desired to destroy. I believed that was too much power for one man to wield in a free country, as old Andrew Jackson said to the president of the Bank of the United States over 100 years ago when the banker boasted he controlled 75,000 votes and would see that Jackson was defeated for reelection.

The bill that has been brought here today has been the subject of study for quite a long time. I wish to pay tribute to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cochran] and to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] for having done the very best job they could possibly do. Any committee that can bring to this House a bill that has in it but a single section that is really controversial has done a mag-

I am supporting the bill at this time largely on the provisions of subsection (1) of subsection (a) of section (1), which reads:

To reduce expenditures to the fullest extent consistent with the efficient operation of the Government.

I can recall that back yonder as far as 1930 when I had been first elected to Congress I was sitting by the radio one afternoon and heard a young gentleman in the State of New York making an inauguration speech accepting the office of Governor of that State. His name was Franklin D. Roosevelt. I said then that man sounded to me as if he would be a good Governor and would make a good President, so I wrote him a letter and asked him to be a candidate for President. I am not certain whether or not that was the inducement that induced him to run, but after he did become a candidate for President I read with a great deal of interest his speech at Pittsburgh and the Democratic platform of 1932 upon which he was a candidate and in which I believed, and which I today believe is the best political document that has ever been written by the Democratic Party since the days of Thomas Jefferson. He was then arguing with great power for the abolition at Washington of Government bureaus and economy in government.

In that platform we promised the American people a reduction in Government expenses and the abolition of unnecessary bureaus and agencies of government. We fixed a yardstick at that time of a 25-percent reduction in the cost of government. Of course, we did not anticipate then that a great depression would hit the country just as we were inaugurated into office, which it did, and that, of course, required temporary expansion of Government activities and the enlargement of bureaus to a large extent. Now we believe we have gone through at least the worst years of that depression, and I regard it as now being up to the Democratic Party on that pledge, as well as subsequent pledges to redeem its pledge to the American people by abolition of unnecessary bureaus and by reducing the cost of government at least 25 percent, and this will help us balance the Budget.

Today I am informed that we have on the Federal Government pay roll approximately 20,000,000 people receiving money from the Government. That is bureaucy run wild, that is extravagance magnified, that is unwisdom in the extreme, and I warn you that the people are deeply concerned about this whole matter.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAY. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas. Mr. REES of Kansas. The gentleman has just called our attention to the great increase in the number of bureaus and agencies that have come into being during the administration of the present occupant of the White House. Does the gentleman believe, in view of the fact that these agencies have been brought into being, they cannot be got rid of without this proposed legislation? Why not use the same authority to get them out of the way as was used to establish them, if you do not want them?

Mr. MAY. We could have let a number of them expire by limitation of the statute which created them, but I find from the record that when we undertook to do so the vote was practically unanimous on both sides of the House to leave them in existence. We find that when we undertake to bring out legislation on reorganization here and get it through the House we have never been able to do it. The continual creation of new bureaus and agencies proves the necessity for this legislation.

This bill, as a matter of fact, is not a bill setting up a reorganization plan. It is merely a bill directing the President to submit to the Congress his plan for reorganization, for the approval, or rather, the disapproval in its present form by the Congress, if it so desires, of whatever plan he may submit.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MAY. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. COX. I hope the gentleman will not adhere to the statement he has just made. This is not the President's bill. This does not call for a plan of the President. This is the action of the Congress. The plan will be the plan of the Congress, and it must be if the measure is to stand the test that will hereafter be made. This will be a plan of the Congress made by its agent in accordance with its positive

Mr. MAY. The gentleman from Georgia has apparently misunderstood my statement.

Mr. COX. I hope not.

instruction.

Mr. MAY. I did not say this was the President's bill and I do not say it now. I said this was simply a direction or request to the President to submit his plan to the Congress for approval or disapproval.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. COX. I must take issue with the gentleman on that statement. This is not a request, this is an instruction-

Mr. MAY. Well, call it a direction, if it suits you better. Mr. COX. And the President is empowered to exercise discretion because we cannot delegate to him a legislative function. It is true it has been referred to by the courts in one instance as a quasi-legislative act, but the courts have been uniform in holding that it is not within the competency of the Congress to delegate legislative power to another; but in this instance there is being done what was done in the tariff act and in a great many others, declaring as to what the condition is and as to how it must be treated, and laying down certain standards, setting up criteria, and selecting your agent that you want to do the job.

Mr. MAY. I cannot yield further because I do want to get clearly before the House that there is no difference between myself and the gentleman from Georgia on this bill. I simply said this was a direction to the President to submit a plan of reorganization to the House of Representatives and the Senate for either rejection or approval by those bodies after it comes here.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MAY. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. DONDERO. The gentleman referred to the bill as having only one controversial section in it, and I assume the gentleman refers to section 5.

Mr. MAY. Yes.

Mr. DONDERO. Does the gentleman know of any reason why this bill should not be amended to take the same course as any other bill before the House, and require affirmative action on the part of both branches of Congress rather than to remove practically all opposition to it by using a negative concurrent resolution as now provided?

Mr. MAY. I do not know of any reason why it should not be such as would require affirmative action by the Congress. and I will say to the gentleman from Michigan that I am very seriously considering the question of whether I shall vote for the provision which requires that the bill become law if the Congress does not act, or whether I shall vote for an amendment that will provide that the bill shall not become effective unless it is approved by the Congress. Whatever form the act may take, we must all realize that there must come a time, and that very quickly, when expenditures of Government, both State and Federal, must be greatly curtailed. Otherwise we may witness a complete collapse of our economic structure. We may face chaos as a people. To that I am sure all will agree. It is either a case of reduction of expenses or burdens of taxation beyond the endurance of our people.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish].

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, I feel the time has come for the Republican Party not merely to criticize the legislation that has been offered by the New Deal or by the Democratic Party but to point out where they differ with that legislation and to submit constructive legislation of their own. There is not a Republican who is not in favor of more efficiency, economy, and simplification in the administration of the Government. There are many of us who are opposed to the Cochran bill and to certain of its features and who prefer the Byrd bill as written to the pending measure.

Therefore I maintain it is the duty of the Republicans to point out why they oppose this particular measure, why they prefer the Byrd bill, and why they will not vote for the Cochran proposal. I hope the Byrd bill will be substituted by some Democrat offering it or by some Republican on a motion to recommit.

In the first place, why the great rush to jam through this particular measure? There have been no public hearings on it and only one committee meeting of a few hours, and then this Cochran bill is thrust at us and we are practically told to take the bill as it is written or oppose all reorganization measures.

I honestly do not believe the Members of the House have had an opportunity to study the bill at all. I do not believe my friend the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox] has studied the Cochran bill. I do not believe he has studied that provision that changes the rules of the House and emasculates certain of our rules and makes us do away with certain of the Senate rules and the Senate to do away with certain of the rules of the House—an utterly preposterous proposition.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. FISH. I yield.

Mr. COX. That section of the bill does not disturb me at all, because it is admitted that no attempt in that provision is made to tie the hands of either body in the making of its own rules. That simply governs the conduct of the two branches insofar as the consideration of this particular measure is concerned and in no other respect. The House might tomorrow or the day or the hour following the adoption of this bill amend the rule that is set up in the resolution.

Mr. FISH. Of course, we can undo anything we do, but what does it do? For the first time in anyone's memory the rules of the Senate and the rules of the House of Representatives are to be legislated and emasculated to suit the purposes of the Executive. Each body, since the inception of the Congress just 150 years ago, has adopted the rules for its own procedure without consulting the other body and never dreaming of consulting the Executive. Now, for the first time in all history, part 2 of the bill provides for the House changing the rules of the Senate or the Senate passing upon the rules of the House and the Executive to approve a veto of such changes. I would like to know what is going on. These are the facts.

Mr. COX. There is no special virtue in the approval of the President insofar as this rule is concerned.

Mr. FISH. There is no question about the facts, Mr. COX. It is simply a matter of the two Houses agreeing upon a rule by which they will act.

Mr. FISH. The House is changing the Senate rules and the Senate is changing our rules.

Mr. COX. We are simply saying what the rules shall be governing the two Houses in respect of the plan that the President might set up under this bill.

Mr. FISH. The reason the Republicans are opposed to surrendering any more power to the President of the United States, unless the Congress has final control over it, is the fact that we on this side have no confidence and no faith in the President. We believe he has an obsession and a passion for power, that he seeks to grab more and more power at every opportunity. We believe that he has had more power than any President of the United States, and that every time we have given him additional power he has failed to handle it properly, and as a result we have more unemployment and more deficits. We Republicans would like to take back some of the powers that we have already granted the President and restore representative government in the United States. [Applause.]

We favor the Byrd bill over the Cochran bill, and the reason is the fact that under that bill the Congress does not delegate, it does not surrender or abdicate any more of its powers to the President. It says to the President, you make these recommendations to reorganize the agencies of the Government, and after you have made these recommendations to the Congress, we will pass on them, and if we approve them they will be adopted. It is entirely different from the Cochran bill of surrendering our power and saying to the President, you go ahead and reorganize the executive agencies, and if we do not negative it it becomes the law automatically. In that way you reverse the whole legislative practice and put the cart before the horse.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. FISH. No; I cannot yield any more. We also oppose this bill because its provisions expire in 1941. It is not permanent legislation; it does not give the next incoming administration a chance to reorganize its bureaus and departments if it wants to, whether it happens to be Republican or Democratic. This is supposed to be a nonpartisan bill; it ought to be a permanent law, and instead of that it is written for President Roosevelt, and for Roosevelt alone, who probably is the real author of the bill. Furthermore, the Byrd bill does not provide for six administrative executives at $10,000 salaries, these so-called coordinators who would snoop around and find out how Democratic Members of Congress voted, in order to establish a blacklist and to purge more Democratic Members of Congress. For the sake of economy the Byrd bill strikes that all out and thereby saves several hundred thousand dollars annually, including their staffs and traveling expenses. Are we legislating for economy and efficiency, or are we legislating to create more bureaucracy, and to give the President more power? The Brookings Institution, a factfinding commission, a nonpartisan commission, supposed to be utterly impartial, says the President has the power anyhow under the Budget Control Act, that he can make these recommendations at the present time if he wishes. Furthermore, the Brookings Institution only yesterday stated that there will be no saving under this bill. Therefore, why jeopardize and further surrender and delegate away the powers of Congress? Why grant further power to the President? I hope some Democrat, someone who believes in constitutional government and in upholding our three separate and independent branches of government, someone who wants to protect the rights, prerogatives, and powers of the Congress, will offer the Byrd bill as an amendment, or on a motion to recommit to the Cochran bill, and if he does that, then I believe every Republican will support the Democratic motion. But if that is not done, most of the Republicans will vote against the Cochran bill, because we have no faith in the President, and we want to take back some of the power already surrendered by Congress instead of giving him additional power. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield now to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mason].

Mr. MASON. Mr. Chairman, I gladly take the time allotted to me to explain my attitude toward this bill and to definitely state my position upon it.

This bill reverses the orderly processes of lawmaking, by which the Congress makes the laws and the Executive only approves or vetoes. It really gives the power to the President to make laws and reserves to the Congress the veto power over the same. In this connection, I feel that someone should point out the fact that the veto power in the hands of the President, one person, one identity, one mind, is an altogether different thing than the veto power in the hands of a dual body, composed of two separate and distinct organizations, a divided identity or personality, a pair of Siamese twins, with differences of opinion, twins that often differ in opinion and want to do opposite things.

Regular bills become laws when a majority of each House approves them and the President signs them. This is the natural way, the proper way, the logical way, the normal way. The proponents of this bill want to depart from the normal way, the straight and narrow way, and institute into law an Executive order, made by one man, without the approval of the majority of the two branches of Congress.

I want to call your attention to the fact, and it is a fact, that many of our present-day troubles have come about because Congress turned over to the President powers that properly belong to the Congress. The sponsors of this bill have not learned anything by these mistakes and are saying, in effect, "Let's do it again." The opponents of this bill are saying, in effect: "We have made mistakes: we have departed from the proper way of doing things, the normal way; we shouldn't make the same mistakes again; we ought to know better by now; let's not give the President any more power, but rather let's pass a real reorganization bill, the Byrd bill, a bill that requires economy, that enforces reductions in Government expenditures, a bill that lops off instead of adding to, and a bill that requires the approval of the majority of each branch of Congress before any reorganization Executive order may go into effect."

I therefore propose that we strike out everything after the enacting clause in the bill before us, and substitute the provisions of the Byrd bill.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN].

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish] complains that the provisions of this bill are limited to expire in 1941. I presume if we were to extend it indefinitely he would support it, if he is sincere in his criticism.

He urges that some Democrat move to recommit the bill and substitute the Byrd bill when he knows that that prerogative rests with the Republican side.

There is one amendment, Mr. Chairman, I am going to offer to this bill, and that is to exempt the Rural Electrification Administration. I want it understood that I am not doing this out of any lack of confidence in the administration, but because I believe the amendment should be adopted. I am going to offer this amendment to exempt the Rural Electrification Administration just as the bill now exempts the General Accounting Office, the Federal Power Commission, the Bituminous Coal Commission, the National Labor Relations Board, and so forth. I am going to do that because I am intensely interested in the electrification of the farm homes of America. The Rural Electrification Administration is serving a wonderful purpose. It is doing the job with the least possible amount of overhead expenditures. If we want economy in all of the branches of the Government, we would do well to take a lesson from the Rural Electrification Administration.

If you will turn to page 860 of the Appendix of the RECORD you will see that I inserted the amount that has already been allotted by the Rural Electrification Administration to the farmers of the various States to build rural power lines to their homes. It amounts to $193,000,000 and provides for approximately 193,000 miles of rural line, serving more than 600,000 farms of 2,500,000 people. Nothing that has ever been done by any governmental department in the same length of time has meant so much to the farmers of America as has the work of this institution in taking to them light and life and hope and relief from drudgery, by providing for them the same conveniences that we have in the towns and in the cities throughout the country.

I have some maps here showing the amount that has been expended in the various States. Here is one of the State of Indiana. Those black spots indicate the lines that have been energized. The next one shows the lines under construction. The third one the lines that have been allotted. More than $11,000,000 have been allotted for rural electrification in Indiana.

That is doing more for the farmers of that State than anything else that has been done in your day and mine. That money is not wasted. It is encouraging individualism; it is not making Socialists, as some people contend. Nothing you can do will encourage individualism more than to make it possible for the farmer to live decently on his own land and in his own home.

Here is a map of the State of Iowa. If any of you gentlemen are dissatisfied with what the R. E. A. is doing in your own State, you should examine these maps and these figures. More than $13,000,000 have been allotted for rural electrification in the State of Iowa to build 13,000 miles of rural lines. Here is the State of Kansas and the State of

Mr. DONDERO. Have you got Michigan? Mr. RANKIN. Yes. Here is Michigan; more than $10,-000,000 have been allotted to that State.

Here is Minnesota: more than $14,000,000 have been allotted to Minnesota.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes; I yield.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Is the gentleman aware of the fact that in Michigan there was one plant where the Government loaned something like $150,000-

Mr. RANKIN. I understand that. I cannot go into the question of municipal plants at this time but will do so later. I am now discussing the question of rural electrification. I am asking the Members of the House, without regard to party, to join me in inserting an amendment that will exempt the Rural Electrification Administration from the provisions of Someone has said, "Oh, it may be they will not change the R. E. A. at all." But let us not leave it in a state of uncertainty. I have no selfish interest in this matter. Every county in the district I represent already has a rural-electrification program, and approximately half of them had it before the Rural Electrification Administration was created. My district is largely taken care of; but we are moving this program on and reaching out to get isolated homes and to get isolated communities, in order that we may build up farm life and encourage our people to go back there and stay and not crowd into the cities seeking relief rolls or W. P. A. rolls or fall into the bread line, as so many of them have done in the past.

So I am appealing to you not from the standpoint of partisanship. I have no partisan feeling in this matter. But I have a burning desire to see us electrify the farm homes of America as they are doing in other countries. Someone took issue with me the other day when I said that in Europe 90 percent of the farm homes in nearly every country are electrified. I went back and checked up, and I find that my statement is correct. In Sweden, in Norway, in Denmark, in France, in Germany, and in Italy 90 percent of the farm homes have electricity. In France and Germany, both, now they are making drives to make it 100 percent. In Holland and in Switzerland practically 100 percent of the farm homes have electricity. Even in far away Japan 90 percent of the farms have electricity.

Someone said last year that those were socialistic countries-old countries that were thickly populated. Yet in New Zealand, a new and sparsely settled country, 65 percent of the farm homes are electrified, while in the United States, with all we have done, less than 15 percent of the farms have electricity.

If you want prosperity, you might as well get this fixed in your mind. You will never restore normal conditions in this country until you restore normal prosperity among the farmers of this Nation. [Applause.] They are the backbone of the Nation. Prosperity will not leak down from the 10-story buildings on to the farmers of the country. It is going to have to come from the farmers themselves.

Out of those old run-down homes back there have come the great men and women of this Republic. Their children would like to go back, and we are asking them to go back. They want to avoid the bread lines and the W. P. A. rolls. Nothing in God's world that we can do would stimulate them more along that line or offer more encouragement to them or to the ones who are there now than to put electricity into every farm home of America at rates the people can afford to pay. That is what I am driving at.

I hope every Member of the House will join me in supporting my amendment. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi has expired.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. MOTT].

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, by its language this bill (H. R. 4425) is designated the reorganization bill of 1939. It is successor of the reorganization bill of 1938. I opposed the reorganization bill of 1938 for reasons which are well known to everyone in this House, for the same reasons that every other opponent of the bill opposed it, and for the same reasons that the country generally opposed it.

I oppose the present bill on exactly the same grounds as its 1938 predecessor because, in my opinion, there is no essential difference between the bill now before us and the bill upon the same subject which was recommitted in the last Congress.

It is true that there have been some changes in the bill which purport to be modifications of last year's bill, but careful study and analysis of the pending bill will show, I believe, that they are modifications in form only. They do not really change in any essential particular the bill we recommitted at the last session.

Those who opposed the reorganization bill of 1938 did so because they were convinced that the purpose of that bill was not reorganization of the executive agencies of the Government. To that no one objects, and no one ever has objected. Those who fought the 1938 bill did so because they were convinced that the real object of that bill was to enable the President to gain control of the independent agencies created by the Congress and to change them from independent agencies to executive agencies, and thus to concentrate more governmental authority in the hands of the Chief Executive.

In this conviction a majority of the Congress concurred, and so did the overwhelming majority of the people of the United States, and the reorganization bill of 1938 was defeated by recommittal in the House.

What was the principal objection to the 1938 bill? The objection was that under it the President was permitted to make law by Executive order—a thing forbidden to him under the Constitution. He was permitted to make any change he desired in the several agencies of the Government, including the General Accounting Office, the Civil Service Commission, and all of the other agencies. And when he made those changes by Executive order, that order became law unless the Congress should veto it by concurrent resolution of both House and Senate—a thing which everyone knows would be a practical impossibility.

The Congress defeated the 1938 bill because it did not choose to give to the President this unusual and extraordinary power. And the Congress particularly did not want to give to the President the power to reorganize or transform an independent agency into an executive agency.

Let me now call your attention to what seems to me to be the essential provisions of the bill before us, and let me undertake to show you why, in my opinion, the real purpose of this bill is to permit the President to so change and alter the character of the independent agencies that they will become instead the direct agencies of the President, responsible to him for their actions and dependent upon him for their existence.

If you will turn to the first section of the bill, in part I of title I, you will find this language:

SECTION 1. (a) The President shall investigate the organization of all executive agencies of the Government and shall determine what changes therein are necessary to accomplish the following purposes.

One of those enumerated purposes is "to increase the efficiency of operation of the Government to the fullest extent practicable within the revenues." There are four purposes enumerated altogether, and in submitting a reorganization plan the President may assign any one of them as the reason for sending a reorganization plan to Congress. This, then, is no restriction at all, because he may submit any plan he wants to and it will fit one or more of those enumerated purposes.

This bill, therefore, gives the President absolute authority to bring in any kind of reorganization scheme he may choose, and when he brings it in by that very action it virtually becomes law.

The only way it can be defeated is by a concurrent resolution of both Houses declaring that the Congress disproves of it; and, as has been already clearly brought out in the debate, this is a practical impossibility. Under this bill, requiring a concurrent resolution to prevent a plan of reorganization from going into effect, no plan submitted by the President would ever be vetoed. The result would be that the President could reorganize any agency in such a way as to control it completely.

There are some purported exceptions in this bill, and by virtue of the purported exceptions the sponsors claim the President could not interfere with the independence of some 16 independent agencies enumerated in the bill. These so-called exceptions are set forth in section 3. This section reads:

No reorganization plan under section 4 shall provide for the abolition or transfer of an executive department or all the functions thereof.

This, of course, would prevent the President from abolishing an entire department. He could, however, bring in a plan for the transfer or the abolition of nine-tenths of the functions of any department of the Government. And in that event the department for all practical purposes would be abolished. There is no question at all about that. The language is plain and admits of no other interpretation.

But the real joker of the whole bill, it seems to me, lies in this language which follows that which I have just read: No reorganization plan under section ${\bf 4}$ shall provide, in the case of the following executive agencies—for the transfer, consolidation, or abolition of the whole or any part of such agency or of its head.

Naming them-

In this section 16, independent agencies, including the General Accounting Office, are named, and to the casual reader the impression is given that those 16 agencies are exempted from the provisions of the bill. In this regard, however, the language is misleading. This so-called exemption section would, of course, prevent the President from transferring, consolidating, or abolishing these agencies, but it would not prohibit the President from doing anything else that he wanted to do with them, and it would not prevent him from doing anything in regard to them that he could do under the reorganization bill of 1938.

What was it the President wanted to do with these agencies under that 1938 bill? He wanted to change the character and responsibility of these independent agencies of the Government and make them agencies of the President instead, with their heads responsible to him and not to the Congress. He wanted to make the appointment of those at the head of these agencies appointments without term. He wanted to make the tenure of the men at the head of those departments and commissions subject to his will.

I ask now, and I here challenge anyone to answer this question: Aside from transferring, consolidating, or abolishing it, in what one of the 16 departments or agencies enumerated under section 3 of this bill cannot the President do exactly what he could have done to it under the reorganization bill of 1938 had that bill become law?

Let me take for example the General Accounting Office, which is purported to be exempt under this bill. There is nothing in the bill to prevent the President from making the Comptroller General a direct agent of the President. There is nothing to prevent him from making the tenure of that office, under a reorganization plan or order, subject to the will of the President, even though existing law provides an irremovable term of 15 years for the Comptroller General. The same is true of every other agency named in this bill. The President cannot transfer, consolidate, or abolish the head of an independent agency but he can change both his tenure, his independence, and his responsibility.

The authority for the President to make this reorganization is given in the sections which precede section 3 and the sections which follow it. This authority is unlimited and is not materially restricted by section 3. Again I ask the question, if there are those here who will say the President, under this bill, cannot do with these so-called independent agencies exactly what he could have done under the bill of 1938, except for transferring, consolidating, or abolishing them, I will yield some of my time for any Member on the other side to explain why the President cannot do it under the language of this bill.

There is no real difference between the two bills. If we pass this bill we will be taking the very step we refused to take when we recommitted the reorganization bill of 1938. To have passed that bill would, in the opinion of the majority of the House, have been a step in the wrong direction. To pass the pending bill will also be a step in the wrong direction. This bill delegates legislative powers to the President; it delegates to him lawmaking authority which he has no right to possess under the Constitution. We have already gone too far. It is time for the Congress now to recapture the jurisdiction it has already lost during the past 7 years and from now to function as the constitutional lawmaking body of the United States.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. KITCHENS].

Mr. KITCHENS. Mr. Chairman, I find after a short term in Congress that it is very difficult to please everybody, and some refuse to be pleased even when they are offered what they clamor for. I find that almost anything that is submitted here which has the President's name connected with it is always opposed by those on my left.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish] said he had no faith or confidence in the President of the United States. Millions and millions of the people of the United States do have confidence in him. I heard the same gentleman remark on the floor of this House recently that he had more faith in that old Negro up there in his State who calls himself Father Divine, and who claims to be a deity or the Divinity, than he does in the President of the United States. I have not been able to understand such a state of mind, but I yield to him his right to entertain his own views, secure his own information, and draw inspiration from wherever he chooses.

As I see this bill, every man who votes against it will vote against the reduction of the expenditures of this Government.

One or two Members on the Republican side stated that this question of reorganization was not in the campaign last year. I venture to say there is not a Member on the floor of this House who did not tell his people that he was in favor of reducing the expenses of this Government; that he was in favor of doing away with useless agencies, departments, commissions, and bureaus and duties that overlap each other; yet we have the spectacle on the floor of the House of the gentlemen on my left criticizing what? The expenditures of this Government, and then concentrating their efforts to prevent reduction. They know that the present administration took office at a time when the people of the United States were flat upon their backs, suffering as they never had endured before. It has taken a great many more people-auxiliary agencies, if you please-to assist them to rise from their utter collapse and desperate condition than ever before in the history of the country. New agencies necessarily were created, and the President has left nothing undone to give them help.

Mr. Chairman, the President and the people now want to do away with some of these useless, expensive agencies in the interest of efficiency and economy. Here is what is provided in the first section of this bill. We authorize, or rather request, the President to do what? To prepare and present a plan and transmit same to us for our consideration and approval, and the bill specifies the objects. The first one is to reduce expenditures to the fullest extent consistent with the efficient operation of the Government.

Who opposes that? No one but those on my left, so far as I have been able to find. They are demanding in one breath that we cut the expenditures of the Government; then, when the President of the United States asks for the authority to do it, they stand up here and fight, hamstring, handicap him, obstruct, and oppose him in every possible way.

I am reminded of the old fellow who was on the outs with his wife a little bit. He told a friend, "I am going home to lunch now. If lunch is not ready, I am going to raise hell with my wife. If it is ready, I am not going to eat a blamed bite."

That is the position they take upon this bill. Nothing satisfies them. In fact, the only policy or plan they have is to criticize, condemn, find fault, and oppose.

The second proposition is what? To increase the efficiency of the operations of the Government to the fullest extent practicable within the revenues. You gentlemen over here on the left now oppose that. Are you going back to your constituents and tell the people, "I opposed and tried to prevent a reduction of expenditures of government. I opposed the only real and reasonable means of bringing about a reduction of expenditures in the executive departments of the Government. I opposed the President in all his efforts to increase the efficiency of all the agencies which he has to employ to carry out the will of Congress and the people"?

The next provision of the bill is to group, coordinate, and consolidate executive agencies of the Government in the public interest as nearly as may be done according to major purposes. You oppose that.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. KITCHENS. Mr. Chairman, the next provision is to reduce the number of such agencies by consolidating those having similar functions, and so forth, for the efficient conduct of the Government. Are you going back to your constituents and tell them you fought the Democratic Party in Congress on that proposition, that you fought the President of the United States when he honestly in cooperation with the Congress sought authority to bring this about, subject to our control?

The next provision is as follows:

To eliminate overlapping and duplication of effort.

Every one of you who yote against this bill will vote against that. It will be in effect an affirmative statement that you favor the overlapping and duplication of these many agencies and bureaus. You stand up here from day to day and denounce expenditures, you put it in the papers, make propaganda, and say that this Government is full of bureaucracy, that we have too many agencies, too many commissions, too many bureaus, and too many departments, yet you decry and denounce the President when he seeks to improve, by consolidation, elimination, and coordination of such agencies of government, to enable the executive department of this Government to bring about reduction of expenses, consequent efficiency and economy. The President of the United States heads the executive department, a coequal department, one of the three great departments of this Government. He is responsible to the people of the United States. Are you going to further obstruct him in performing his executive duties? Are you going to handicap and hamstring him all the way through?

The gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish] a few moments ago made the statement that the time has now come when we should not only criticize but should offer something constructive. The people and Congress will wait in vain for anything constructive. You criticize every act that the President does or proposal he makes. You criticize everything the President has done. You misconstrue his every effort and misinterpret what he says. He has as great a responsibility as Congress. He has had one of the greatest responsibilities of any President who ever occupied the office.

Mr. VINCENT of Kentucky. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. KITCHENS. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.
Mr. VINCENT of Kentucky. With all the criticism, does not the Gallup poll show that the President's popularity has increased during the last 3 months? Mr. KITCHENS. I do not care what the Gallup poll shows. It is worth about as much as that paper over here. You know these polls cannot amount to very much. You know they tried to tell us how the people of the United States were going to vote in a Presidential election. I forget the name of the magazine that tried to make that forecast. I believe it was the now defunct Literary Digest. I do not care to rely upon the Gallup poll. I prefer to rely upon what I see, hear, observe, and know. I sit here day in and day out and I listen for something constructive. I find there is nothing in the minds of the members of the minority party in this House but criticism—an effort, plan, and concerted action to destroy; an effort to tie down, cripple, and humiliate the President of the United States, and fighting against the best interests of the great mass of people of the United States who demand relief, who demand economy, who demand a reduction in a lot of these bureaus. They are thinking in terms of the old deal. I hope that so long as I remain in this Congress I will not hear these gentlemen over here on my left criticize the bureaucracies again or charge extravagance in expenditures.

Mr. Chairman, the President has great responsibility in this country. These various agencies and departments, in great part, operate under him. May I say if I were President of the United States, I would tell this Congress and the Senate of the United States that I would run my departments? I would run the job placed by the people in my hands. I would demand that right; and if I did not get it from the Congress,

I would run the executive department of the United States regardless of any Congress and regardless of any clique or clan or anybody else in the United States that might attempt to thwart my efforts. I would do my duty under the Constitution. Yet over on this side they are trying desperately to hamstring him, handicap him, frustrate and embarrass him all along the line for political purposes. They refuse to let him do what he wants to do to efficiently coordinate and operate his own agencies. We hold the purse strings. This Congress holds the purse strings of the United States. We should cooperate in every way possible for economy and efficiency.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KITCHENS. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.
Mr. COX. I trust the gentleman will not take the position the President is seeking to dominate the situation that we have before us today. The President is not in the picture, except that we have brought him into it.

Mr. KITCHENS. The gentleman expresses it correctly. The President of the United States wants to carry out his part under the Constitution and his obligation to the people. This Congress needs his help. He is willing to give it, and this bill furnishes the most expedient remedy. He wants to consolidate these bureaus so that they will work more efficiently. He wants to economize. He wants to save and help all the people of the United States in every way possible. Let it not be forgotten that this Nation was sick unto death when the people placed the President at our head.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute. Mr. Chairman, I desire to make a suggestion in line with the argument made by the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. Mott]. He made the statement that this is the same sort of measure as was before us last year.

Who killed cock robin last year? This little group of 80 over here? Oh, no. The hardest question we know how to answer or to prove is when a kitten becomes a cat. This bill is a kitten of the same breed. We cannot possibly know how fast it may grow, in another body, and when it will become a cat. Certainly it was a wildcat last year and so acknowledged by the majority. Please do not blame the minority for what you did. We disclaim any particular importance in the action last year.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DITTER].

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, to the American people there are three terms that are synonymous—"court packing," "reorganization," and "purge." All three of these terms are distasteful to Democrats. The new dealers know that these three terms meant the doom of the New Deal. The term "purge" brings back to us a memory of last year's reorganization bill. I wish to recall to the minds of the men on this side of the aisle the name of an outstanding Democrat, an independent Democrat, a fearless Democrat, an able Democrat, a Democrat who knew what he believed and had the courage of his convictions. I wish to recall to your mind the name of John O'Connor, of New York. [Applause.] And I want to remind you that John O'Connor is not in the House today because he had the moral courage to oppose the reorganization bill, and as a result he was purged.

These three terms, "court packing," "reorganization," and

These three terms, "court packing," "reorganization," and "purge" meant but one thing, and that was power—power in the President, power to control the courts, power to hog-tie the legislative body, and, lastly, power to command his party. This bill means more power. Let me read just a word or two from the majority report. I read:

The President is given power.

Another sentence-

He is given power.

Another sentence-

He is given power.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Will the gentleman yield at that point?

Mr. DITTER. And still another sentence—

The President is given power.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Chairman, I asked, Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, I refuse to yield. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. DITTER. The doctrine of the separation of powers should be more jealously guarded today than ever. Upon this doctrine the whole structure of our system of government depends. Without such separation our democratic processes, and the rights of the individual citizen which are dependent on them, would be threatened with the same calamitous consequences as the people have suffered in other countries where the might of a man reigns supreme. I submit, Mr. Chairman, the proposal before us transfers powers, delegates powers from the legislative to the executive branch of the Government, and instead of safeguarding the powers which the Constitution has conferred upon this body it countenances their surrender to the President. A purely legislative function, yes, a legislative duty, is delegated to the executive branch of the Government with only a pretense of protection against the exercise of arbitrary authority. In the light of past performances, with the Courtpacking proposal, with the discredited reorganization bill, with the pitiless purge, with these before us, so vividly before us that we still blink at their brazenness, what is our responsibility? Have not our suspicions been aroused? Can the Democrats help but be apprehensive? The purge was the assumption of power—power, more power, the very thing that is sought in this bill. Have you already forgotten the purge? Are we not charged with the exercise of caution in dealing with this problem of power? What better guide can we have for the course of future conduct than an honest appraisal of past performances? The child that has been burned stays away from the fire. Two philosophies of government are at war with each other. The one delegates power, the other limits or restrains power. The one surrenders liberties, the other safeguards them.

All of us know that the reorganization policies of the present administration are closely related to the recommendations of the President's Committee on Administrative Management. There was little doubt left in the mind of anyone as to what the recommendations of that committee contemplated. In a nutshell the findings were that economy and efficiency could only come by increasing Executive power, even though such increases were contrary to the limitations and separations, prescribed by the Constitution. It projected a plan of Executive management for the country completely at variance with the letter and the spirit of our fundamental law, regardless entirely of the inevitable consequences of such a plan on the rights of the people. Efficiency was put in the saddle, the rights of the people could take care of themselves as best they could. But the people rejected the plan emphatically in November, and that action should be our mandate today.

· Again, we should reflect upon the emergency powers which were granted to the President. To all intents and purposes the emergency still exists—the powers are, to use the words of Justice Cardozo, still, "unconfined and vagrant." And still more power is sought.

Last Saturday here in the House a rather outstanding event took place. It is generally conceded that the Chief Justice of the United States made an outstanding contribution to the cause of good government and to the perpetuation of democratic processes. It seems to me we might quote a word or two of the Chief Justice as he solemnly advised not only the Congress but the executive branch of the Government and the country as well last week in these words:

Seeking through the very limitation of power the promotion of the wise use of power.

Further

If our checks and balances sometimes prevent the speedy action which is thought desirable, they also assure in the long run a more deliberate judgment.

And again:

Only by wisdom and restraint in our own day that we can make that system last.

Those words are words of wisdom. They urge restraint. They suggest caution. They counsel us to be careful. They emphasize the value of limitations of power. They warn against excesses of power. They should be heeded today.

There is but one intention in this present bill. That is the delegation of power which the Congress seems to feel it cannot exercise itself. The general impression is that the Congress is powerless to do the job it is asking the President to do. The impression prevails that the Congress, because of pressure groups, because of the influence of certain blocs, cannot eliminate needless and useless agencies of the Government. By this bill we ask the President to do that which we are afraid to do ourselves. We are going to turn over to the President the power to eliminate and consolidate and reorganize these needless and useless agencies because we want to hide behind the White House. If this job is to be done, it should be done by the Congress.

The pretended purposes of this bill are economy and efficiency. The best way to decide whether that is likely to follow is to look at the past record. I recall the quotation:

By their fruits ye shall know them.

I wonder what the fruits of the New Deal have been in the matter of economies in government. What has the present administration done in order to effectuate these purposes?

May I recall to the men who served here a year ago that the President of the United States in his message to the Congress deplored, at least by intimation, the fact that he did not see how he could curtail or eliminate any function of Government and effect savings. I quote from his speech:

To many who have pleaded with me for an immediate balancing of the Budget by a sharp curtailment or even elimination of Government functions, I have asked this question, "What present expenditure would you reduce or eliminate?" and the inevitable answer has been, "That is not my business."

The suggestion is certainly given there by the President that he knows no way of providing any economies. As these complainants have come, as these men from all parts of the country have come urging economy, the President has said in so many words, "I do not know the answer to the question, I do not know how it can be done. You tell me how we can provide these economies."

If on January 3, 1938, the President did not know any ways by which these economies could be effected, how has he acquired the knowledge since then? Where there is a will there is a way.

The record of the present administration has been written. Let it stand as it is. It has been an administration of profligacy. It has been an administration of extravagance. It has been an administration of political wastefulness. We are convinced that the American people know that the leopard does not change its spots. The administration will continue to be a spending outfit. It will continue to be an administration which believes the only way prosperity can be brought to this country is by the profligate, wasteful, and extravagant disbursement of public funds.

I submit, Mr. Chairman, there are avenues open by which the executive branch of the Government could be operated efficiently and at the same time substantial savings effected. I recommend them to the majority. They will appeal to the country much more than this idle gesture. The country will know you mean business. I suggest that you have a real regard for civil-service qualifications, and insist that the multitude of new Federal employees that you have taken on since you came into power shall qualify on the basis of ability. I suggest that merit rather than political worth should determine the qualifications of Federal appointees. Lastly, and most important, I suggest that the sinecures that you have created be eliminated and that the Public Treasury be spared the expense of their maintenance. These will be real endeavors toward economy, not artificial gestures.

The record of the Republican Party stands as it has always stood, for an honest, an economical, and an efficient administration. We challenge the leadership of the House to bring in a bill providing that this Congress itself shall eliminate those agencies that are needless and useless. We, on the Republican side, will support such legislation. It will be a credit to you and a benefit to the country. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. PFEIFER].

Mr. PFEIFER. Mr. Chairman, the previous speaker has used three terms, one court packing, the other reorganization, and the third purge, as being distasteful. I agree with him on court packing, I also agree with him on purge, but not on reorganization.

Last year I voted against the reorganization bill for several reasons when it came before this House, and one reason particularly was the creation of a new department, the Department of Public Welfare. The head of that department was to be given entirely too much power and was to be given functions which were essentially medical in character.

I am for reorganization and so is the gentleman who spoke before me. I know the Members of this House favor reorganization, the only difference being in the form or manner in which it is to be introduced.

Reorganization is not a new thing. One hundred and fifty years ago, when the Government was formed, the War Department took care of the Navy as well as the Army. Within 10 years after that Department was formed, it was divided into the Army and the Navy Departments. Likewise, 90 years ago the Department of the Interior was created, which took care of agriculture, and within 12 years after that time the Department of Agriculture was formed. So you see, reorganization is not a new thing.

We know there is a conglomeration of civil-administrative agencies scattered throughout the various departments, which require unification and simplification. Economy is not the only thing that has to be taken into consideration in the reorganization of any department. The main thing, and let this be known to the Republican Members, is efficiency, and that we all look for. The people of this country as well as you and I are anxious for reorganization provided it is going to benefit the people. I never shudder at reorganization, I welcome reorganization. I welcome constructive criticism at all times. As I stated before, I was opposed to the bill of last year, but this bill that is now under discussion I am in favor of because it is the foundation of what is to come, and why kick before you know what is coming. Let us take care of those things when they present themselves.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PFEIFER. Yes.

Mr. MOTT. First, let me ask the gentleman whether in his opinion, except for the prohibitions and exemptions set out in the bill, in his opinion the President's power in reorganization is unlimited.

Mr. PFEIFER. The President's power is unlimited, that I admit.

Mr. MOTT. Now, will the gentleman tell me anything in the language of this bill to prevent the President from sending in here a reorganization bill which will make an executive agency out of all of the independent agencies as well as the agency of Congress, and I have in mind particularly the Comptroller General's office.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there? Mr. PFEIFER. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. MOTT. Will the gentleman answer my question? Mr. COX. I wish the gentleman to yield to me.

Mr. PFEIFER. I yield to the gentleman for a brief question or an answer to the gentleman if he so desires.

Mr. COX. The check upon the power of the President is set out in the bill. The President would not have the right to depart from the instructions that are set forth in the bill.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. MOTT. Yes; will the gentleman yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. PFEIFER. I yield.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. MOTT. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox] has ceased his questioning of the speaker, so I have no further use of my parliamentary inquiry, but if the gentleman will continue his answer to my question I will appreciate it very much and I think everybody else will.

Mr. COX. That is not a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. PFEIFER. The President has unlimited power, but the Congress has a check on it, and that is all that is essential here in this House.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 1 minute.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PFEIFER. Yes.

Mr. MOTT. Then if I understand the gentleman correctly, unless the Congress should veto the reorganization plan, the President, under this bill or under any reorganization plan he may send in, would have authority to change every independent agency of the Government to an executive agency and also would have the power to change the agency of the Congress, the Comptroller General's office, to an executive agency. Is not that right?

Mr. PFEIFER. Yes; that is right.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. PFEIFER. Yes; I yield to my distinguished friend. Mr. COCHRAN. The bill specifically provides that he cannot touch the Comptroller General's office at all.

Mr. MOTT. There is no such provision in this bill.

Mr. COCHRAN. The bill provides that he cannot touch the General Accounting Office.

Mr. MOTT. There is no such thing in the bill.

Mr. COCHRAN. Then the gentleman has not read the hill

Mr. MOTT. The gentleman stated it, and so did the gentleman who has now charge of the floor, and that gentleman gave it as his opinion that under this bill the President may send in a reorganization program which may change the General Accounting Office to an agency of the President.

Mr. COCHRAN. If the gentleman will read paragraph (b) on page 3, he will find that the bill specifically exempts that.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MICHENER].

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, believing thoroughly in economy, reduction of the expense of government, and efficiency in government, I have had great concern about the much-publicized reorganization of the Government. After the memorable contest in this body less than a year ago it is regrettable that a bill of this importance, dealing with this very controversial question, should be brought in for consideration without hearings, with only 21/2 hours' consideration by the committee, and without the country having information as to what it is all about.

On tomorrow, however, we shall be compelled to vote "yes" or "no"; that is, we will have to take it or leave it. Possibly pressure enough can be brought to bear by the administration to jam the bill through the House, but I am confident that the bill, as drafted, will never become a law.

This bill consists of: Title I-Reorganization; title II-Budgetary control; title III-Administrative assistants.

Title II is not controversial.

Title III has nothing to do with reorganization of the Government, other than that it adds to the expense of Government in authorizing the President to appoint six additional presidential secretaries, at a salary of $10,000 per annum each. In addition, these secretaries must be implemented; that is, there will be quarters, stenographers, clerks, messengers, and all the things that go with six newly created officials of the Government.

Title I is divided into two parts:

Part 1 directs the President to make certain investigations looking toward the reorganization of the Government, and to report his recommendations to the Congress. He is specifically directed not to consider in any plan of reorganization certain executive agencies and departments enumerated in

Now, much stress throughout this debate has been placed upon the vast power granted to the President, and, to that extent, the surrender of power by the Congress. It seems to me that we are overlooking the fact that part 1 of this bill gives the President no power which he does not already have. Under the Constitution, it is not only the President's privilege, but his duty, to report to the Congress on the state of the Union, and to make recommendations for needful legislation.

President Roosevelt has demonstrated time and again that he thoroughly understands this provision of the Constitution. I think we all remember that in the last Congress he not only recommended to the Congress the reorganization of the judiciary, but he submitted his plan and went so far as to accompany his message and his recommendation with the specific bill putting his plan into effect. That bill, commonly known as the court-packing bill, is fresh in the minds of all of us, and possibly would be the law today if the bill we are now considering had been the law of the land at the time the court-packing bill was considered by the Congress. This is a patent illustration of the fact that the President is already clothed with sufficient authority to permit him to submit to Congress any specific plans of reorganization which he feels will be for the common good.

Again, the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921 goes further, and sets up an agency of the Government to assist the President in determining what, if any, consolidations or reorganizations might be effected that would be beneficial to the taxpayers. That law provides in part as follows:

The Budget Bureau, when directed by the President, shall make a detailed study of the departments and establishments for the purpose of enabling the President to determine what charges (with a view to securing greater economy and efficiency in the conduct of the public service) should be made.

And so forth. As has been pointed out in the debate, there are no limitations in that law. The Budget Bureau is the agency set up to make this study. The President is directed to use the service of this agency whenever he desires, and for 6 long years he has had this opportunity. It seems to me that it is idle to talk about giving the President additional power, so far as his making proper recommendations to the Congress is concerned. The pending bill, exempting as it does 16 agencies upon which the President cannot operate, is a limitation rather than an extension of power. If the President really wants to reorganize the Government, why does he not accept the opportunity now available? It cannot be charged that he has no information as to where consolidations, eliminations, and overlapping agencies might be abolished or correlated. Senator Byrn, of Virginia, recently made an investigation of this whole subject, and among other things said:

Some of these agencies fill very definite needs. Others overlap. Some have outlived their usefulness or have been superseded. There are glaring cases of duplicated effort. Where the Government was complex before, it frequently is found to be confusing now. To point out 50 Federal agency legal divisions in Washington alone is enough to describe the Federal jungle.

There have been at least 29 agencies concerned with lending Government funds, according to reports taken from Government records.

records.

There have been at least three agencies concerned with insuring deposits and loans.

There have been at least 34 agencies concerned with the acquisition of land.

There have been at least 16 agencies concerned with wildlife preservation. There have been at least 10 agencies concerned with Government construction. There have been at least nine agencies concerned with credit and finance.

There have been at least a dozen agencies concerned with home and community planning.

There have been at least 10 agencies concerned with materials of construction.

of construction.

There are more than two score personnel officers for the Government listed in Washington offices alone.

There are more than 100 information and publications offices in Federal agencies at Washington.

There are more than 100 Federal agency libraries in Washington besides the Library of Congress.

The Federal Government operates an average of one motor vehicle for every 1,200 people in the United States, and they travel enough miles every year to traverse nearly every highway in the world

The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] pointed out that in addition, we have 28 agencies of this Government handling welfare matters, 40 agencies handling forestry matters, 4 agencies dealing with examination of banks, and 65 agencies gathering statistics for the Federal Government.

Now we know that all these agencies referred to by Senator Byrd and Representative Warren exist, and I doubt not but if I had the time I could dig up a number more. In this connection, let me repeat that at this good hour, there are more than 190 principal bureaus and divisions in the 10 executive departments of the Government; 58 independent establishments, bureaus, authorities, commissions, and what not, exclusive of at least a dozen interdepartmental committees and various governmental groups, making a grand total of more than 270.

By the act of 1933 the President was directed, or given authority, if you like that phrase better, to effect economies and bring about efficiency through reorganization. That specific direction or authority expired in 1935, yet, with the exception of not to exceed 27 minor changes, nothing has been done. Rather, the number of these agencies has increased more than 50 percent during the present administration.

There are many who believe that the present administration desires to revamp the whole Government, concentrating more power in the Executive, and that the purpose of this legislation is to bring about that result. Personally, I know that if the President really wants reorganization for the sake of economy and efficiency and will submit his proposals to Congress at once, he has the assurance that not only the Congress but the country will be much interested in early enactment of any legislation that will effect economy and, incidentally, efficiency. At the same time, let him be assured that the country, and, I believe, the Congress, is absolutely opposed to lodging more discretion and power in the Chief Executive.

In part 2 is found the insidious part of this proposal. Here an effort is made to rewrite the rules of procedure in the House of Representatives and in the Senate, reversing the ordinary processes of legislation. I think everybody understands that legislation under the Constitution must be passed by the House, by the Senate, and approved by the President, or passed by two-thirds of the House and Senate over the President's veto. If the President submits any plan for reorganization of the departments and agencies of the Government to the Congress, under existing law, as was done in the court-packing bill, his recommendations will not become effective unless a majority of both the House and Senate so vote. That is as it should be.

Under part 2 of this title the President could perfect the reorganization of the departments to suit his fancy, submit his statement as to what he had done, and if either the House or Senate does not disagree to his action within a period of 60 days, his plan would be the law of the land. If either House failed to act within the 60-day period, presto! the President's plan is the law, even though the other House has rejected it. This part of the bill is artfully and subtlely drawn. Its real import can only be measured by those parliamentarians expert in the rules of the House and Senate. Part 2 is the heart of the bill. As has been evidenced by the debate thus far, the parliamentarians and the lawyers themselves do not agree. For my part I have no hesitancy in asserting that those familiar with parliamentary procedure, filibuster, and the intricacies of piloting legislation through the Congress will have no difficulty in preventing action by either the House or the Senate within the 60-day period. We all know what has been accomplished by filibuster. United States would be a member of the League of Nations had it not been for the filibuster in the Senate. The antilynching bill would have been embodied in the law a long time ago had it not been for the filibuster in the Senate. If action on these measures can be delayed, not only for months but for years, what sacred thing is there about a reorganization bill that would make it impossible to delay action for 60 days?

Much has been said, and more will be said when this bill is being read for amendment, as to the constitutionality of part 2 of the bill. If it requires the joint action of the Congress and the President to make a law, it would seem perfectly clear that it should require the joint action of the Congress and the President to unmake or repeal the law. It is what the statute accomplishes, rather than what we say about it, that determines what is legislation. Why should not the Congress be permitted to take affirmative action, approving or disapproving any plan of reorganization submitted by the President? Why should you attempt to accomplish by indirection and circumlocution what you cannot accomplish directly?

The gentleman from Georgia, Judge Cox, has devoted considerable time to a discussion of this aspect of this bill. The gentleman is a good lawyer, but I can hardly follow him in his effort to make the North Carolina tobacco case, decided by the Supreme Court, the authority for this proposal. It seems to me that in the judge's argument he meets himself coming back and that his reasoning is enmeshed in his own words.

The Department of Justice held in 1932 that a resolution of but one House, disagreeing to a plan of reorganization proposed by the President, violated constitutional provisions. It has been conceded here that constitutionally there is no difference between this concurrent resolution action and the action of but one House. Therefore it would seem that the ingenious device set up in this bill, the purpose of which is to make it appear that the Congress has an assured right of veto on Presidential action, is unreal and without guaranty.

There is no assurance that this bill will result in any economy. When the President's reorganization bill, which was defeated in the last Congress, was up for consideration it was not contended that economy would be effected. It was claimed that the measure would bring about efficiency. The same statements are made about the present bill. There has been little in the debate concerning economy, excepting a hope for economy. In view of the past performances of the present administration I cannot get excited about any professions of economy and thrift coming from that source. Neither can I get excited about any promised efficiency.

To summarize, I am 100 percent for any legal reorganization legislation that will effect economy and promote efficiency. I have no reason to believe that the measure before us will accomplish either of these things.

I am 100 percent opposed to any bill that makes it possible for the President to reorganize the Government as he may desire, without the affirmative consent of the Congress. The sole purpose of this bill is to give the President such authority.

Therefore, I shall vote against this bill unless these objectionable features are removed. I shall be pleased to vote for the Byrd bill, if it is possible from a parliamentary standpoint to offer that bill as a substitute for the bill we are now considering.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield now to the gentleman from California [Mr. Thomas F. Ford].

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Mr. Chairman, I have listened with keen interest to the gentlemen on the minority side in their vain attempt to avoid appearing inconsistent in their opposition to the reorganization bill of 1939—H. R. 4425.

This opposition seems to me to be particularly inconsistent with the minority's insistence on economy and efficiency in government, particularly with reference to their crocodile tears over the vast number of bureaus that now exist.

Gentlemen, if you are sincere and really want economy and efficiency, here is your golden opportunity. Will you take advantage of it? You will not.

Most of the elder statesmen on the minority side voted for a much more drastic reorganization bill which was designed to give to former President Hoover almost unlimited power to reorganize, coordinate, consolidate, and abolish bureaus, agencies, and even departments. The present measure is merely a mild beginning—a first, but necessary, step in the carrying out of a platform promise that both party platforms for years have pledged to accomplish if its candidates were elected.

With these votes on previous reorganization bills staring them in the face, with the speeches, in which they solemnly proclaimed that they favored a reorganization bill, but not this or that bill because it would abolish this or reorganize that.

Now, these same gentlemen are face to face with a bill that if compared, title by title, section by section, paragraph by paragraph, with bills that they so loudly contended for. Will they vote for it? They will not.

But, my good friends on the minority, when you vote "no" on the reorganization bill of 1939, you stand convicted of, if not hypocrisy, at least of blatant and inexcusable and unexplainable inconsistency.

A reorganization of the Government is necessary if the Government is to be efficiently and economically administered.

That, Mr. Chairman, is why I am going to vote for the reorganization bill of 1939.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Hook].

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, some of my Republican friends who have confessed that they are truly rubber stamps by admitting that the voting on the Republican side will be "mass voting" cast at the order or the whim of those who shaped the destiny of the special interests have mentioned that the American people spoke last fall. They seem to think that by the election of a handful of Republicans that a mandate was issued to vote against this bill. Yes, the American people spoke last fall. They spoke in no uncertain terms and elected to the Congress of the United States an overwhelming majority of Democrats. The people of this Nation believe in democracy and the principles of the Democratic Party because it is the party of the people. Those who lay aside all prejudices and think in the interest of America and democracy have faith in the President of the United States and the Democratic leaders.

Yes; the voters of this Nation spoke last fall in the face of misrepresentation of issues and tremendous sums of money. They returned to Congress a clean-cut Democratic majority. This Congress, by virtue of that overwhelming majority, owes a duty to the people and to the Government in the interest of democracy to make a change in government organization that will bring about a reduction in cost of governmental agencies. In the interest of efficiency and good government we must authorize the President to submit such a plan as will result in grouping and consolidation of executive agencies of the Government as will effectuate and bring about such saving and efficiency.

Yes; Mr. Chairman, 71 new Republican Members were sent here last fall, not to tear down as their leaders want them to do, but to join in constructive legislation for the best interests of this Nation. Seventy-one new Members of that side of the House promised everything and more than the New Deal has to offer. Oh, yes; they outpromised the Democrats. I can hear them now, saying "I promise you that I will vote to break down bureaucracy in Washington and cut down the cost of government." Yes; I can hear them saying "We will not take away the agencies that have saved you from destruction, but will make them more effective. I promise you that the Republican Party will be for efficiency in government." I note, however, that the Republican side of the House is voting en masse to stop any organization that will bring about efficiency and economy in the administration of the executive branch of this Government, hoping and praying that there will be enough conservative Democrats who will join with them in their march toward destruction.

Yes; a large majority of the newly elected Republicans outpromised their Democratic opponents.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. HOOK. No. I do not think the gentleman could add anything to this discussion. We must ever progress and go forward. History shows that progress has always been made under protest. When we go back into that history we find that those who loaned Robert Fulton money for his steamboat project stipulated that their names be withheld for fear of ridicule were it known that they supported anything so foolhardy. There are certain Members on that side of the aisle who, when they oppose this bill, protest against progress. They are a little jittery about the progress that will be made under the provisions of the present bill. I am wondering whether they believe that reorganization is foolhardy, as was the steam engine. Each one of the major political parties' platforms since the early 1900's have contained a plank pledging a reorganization of the executive agencies of the Government.

Now the Republicans say "Let the Congress do it." What foolishness. May I ask my Republican friends: Why did you shirk that responsibility when the Republicans were in charge of the Congress?

It was a part and parcel of your Republican platform. You did not do it when you were in control. Either you could not do it or you did not want to do it. So, therefore, the Democrats are now submitting to you in the interest of the tax-payers and in the interest of good government a program whereby reorganization can be accomplished. But it is the same old story. You claim that you believe in reorganization, but you do not believe in the method by which it is to be accomplished. When he have passed this reorganization bill, you will find that the progress it will make will be just as farreaching as the progress that was made from the days of Robert Fulton down to this present day in development of the steam engine.

Do you who seem to fear progress know that widespread sentiment against printing was expressed by Governor Berkeley, of Virginia, in 1670, when he said?—

I thank God there are no free schools nor printing, for learning has brought disobedience and heresy into the world, and printing has divulged them.

Are you afraid, as he was afraid at that time, that if the reorganization bill passes this House the fallacies of the past will be divulged?

I notice also that the editor of the Springfield Republican at one time refused an invitation to ride in an early automobile, claiming it was incompatible with the dignity of his position. Are you in this day and age going to follow that line of thought on the reorganization bill? Do you feel that it is incompatible with your dignity as Republicans to follow the suggestions of the President of the United States when he offers constructive legislation? I hope not. I hope that you Republicans will join up with progress and vote for this bill in its present form without amendments.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. HINSHAW].

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Chairman, I would like to address a question to either the author of the bill, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Warren], or the chairman of the committee, Mr. Cochran. The Constitution says that "every order, resolution, or vote to which the concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives may be necessary—except on a question of adjournment—shall be presented to the President of the United States; and before the same shall take effect shall be approved by him, or being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two-thirds of the House of Representatives, according to the rules and limitations prescribed in the case of a bill."

In Jefferson's Manual, page 37, it says that-

Although the requirement of the Constitution seems specific, the practice of Congress has been to present to the President for approval only such concurrent resolutions as are legislative in effect.

This bill provides that the President may transmit a plan of reorganization simultaneously to both Houses of Congress, and unless both Houses shall within 60 days pass a concurrent resolution stating in substance that the Congress does not favor the plan, it shall then take effect.

The question I want to ask is, suppose that under this bill the Congress of the United States passed a concurrent resolution disapproving the President's plan of reorganization, would it be necessary, if the President chose to veto that concurrent resolution, to pass it again over his veto by a two-thirds vote of the House and Senate?

Mr. WARREN. I wish to state to the gentleman from California that, of course, a concurrent resolution does not go to the President, and therefore there is no possible way by which he could veto it.

Mr. HINSHAW. The gentleman thinks that this concurrent resolution, then, would not be "legislative in effect"?

Mr. WARREN. Absolutely, I do not.

Mr. HINSHAW. That it would be final. Then you do not agree with the Constitution?

Mr. WARREN. A concurrent resolution never goes to the President. It is only a joint resolution that goes to the President.

Mr. HINSHAW. I am just reading the Constitution. It says "every order, resolution, or vote in which the concurrence of the House and Senate may be necessary."

Mr. WARREN. The gentleman is talking about one form of resolution and I am talking about another. A concurrent resolution, of course, does not go to the President. It is a concurrent resolution of the two Houses.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. WARREN. Let me also point out to the gentleman that when we pass a resolution submitting a constitutional amendment, of course that does not go to the President. It goes immediately to the States.

Mr. HINSHAW. That is a different proposition. That is not legislation.

Jefferson's Manual, in the sentence preceding the one I just quoted, says:

It has been settled conclusively that a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution should not be presented to the President for his approval.

Note that in this case it is a "joint resolution" that does not go to the President.

Mr. Chairman, I submit that there is a question whether or not this concurrent resolution would constitute a part of what is termed "continuing legislation," and therefore be subject to the veto power of the President under the Constitution. If it is-and apparently it would take a decision by the Supreme Court to determine that it was not—then the President by exercising the veto power could require a two-thirds vote of both Houses to prevent the reorganization plan submitted from taking effect.

I have asked this question of eminent lawyers on this side of the House and they are in doubt. I asked the eminent gentleman from North Carolina and immediately he answers that the concurrent resolution would not go to the President. but would be final.

Mr. Chairman, I favor reorganization of the executive agencies in order to simplify our Government and save money for the taxpayers, but I do not want to see some plan shoved through by this or any other President or by this or any other Congress that would make a dictatorship possible in this country.

If I am correct in the premise of my question—and there is a serious doubt on both sides of it, but if I am correct—then under this bill such a plan could be put into effect over the heads of two-thirds of this House. I would like an authoritative answer to my question, and that is said with very great respect for the splendid attainments of the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. MURDCCK].

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Mr. Chairman, by one line of reasoning I could bring myself to vote against this bill. I am reminded of a little story that I think is probably historically true. At least, the story refers to Germany years ago at the time of Frederick the Great. Students of history will recall that that was a period of religious controversy and intolerance. As I remember the story, some folks came to Frederick the Great one time and said, "Some of your subjects believe in predestination and election, and you ought to put a stop to that." This sovereign is said to have remarked, "If some of my loving subjects choose to be eternally damned, who am I to interfere?"

When I was at home, some of my Democratic constituency, large taxpayers, took me to task because I voted against recommittal of the reorganization bill last year. I explained to them that I thought there was urgent need of reorganization, and particularly of economy. Now, if I saw fit to follow this particular line of reasoning, which I do not, I might very well say to myself, "If large taxpayers object to any attempt to economize by an act of reorganization, why should I interpose objection?"

That, however, is not my line of reasoning.

As I have listened to the debate, especially that emanating on my left, I have thought many, many times how possible and perhaps natural but, after all, illogical fears arise when we are initiating something. This reminds me of the time when Patrick Henry was speaking in the Virginia Convention at the time of the adoption of the Constitution. That great leader said in substance this:

"As I read this document I see vast powers given to the President. He shall be Commander in Chief of the Army and the Navy. He will come at the head of the Army and crush all opposition. Your mace bearer cannot stop him. He will make himself absolute. Away with your President! He will become a king!"

Those gloomy predictions did not seem foolish to some men in 1787-88. However, Patrick Henry's fears were unfounded. Subsequent history has not shown that a great error was made in the formation and the adoption of the Constitution of the United States. We have heard today similar fears expressed on the Republican side of the aisle and lack of confidence in the present occupant of the White House. Are the fears of, barely possible but highly improbable, Presidential action in the future any more reasonable than those of Patrick Henry one and a half centuries ago? I think not.

We should look well to the future and guard our form of government, but I think it is properly guarded in this bill. It is true that last year I did not want to see the reorganization bill forced through the House with insufficient debate and voted against that attempt. We took about a week's time, as I recall it. That bill was thoroughly debated. One after another amendments were offered, and when the measure came before this House I voted against recommitting the

I feel that the pending measure accomplishes part of what the bill a year ago aimed to accomplish. I voted against a recommittal of the bill a year ago after it was fully amended by the House, after certain independent organizations had been exempted from the bill. I find those same organizations exempted in this bill, and I have the same inclination to vote today or tomorrow, whichever it shall be, as I did on the final action of the House on the bill last year.

Mr. Chairman, I find that as we made progress in political science we took away or diminished the powers of the cumbersome legislative bodies of our cities back yonder 25, 30, or 40 years ago, and we centralized power concerning the government of our cities in a smaller group of men because we found inefficiency in the larger group. The same tendency is shown in modernizing our State governments.

Time after time the question has been asked: Why does not Congress do this thing? This question has been answered, I think, by both logic and experience. Congress has the power to do it, but it is a complicated, technical matter for Congress to do, and Congress has not done it. We delegate to the President of the United States, or, in the words of the distinguished gentleman from Georgia, we direct the President of the United States in this bill to do certain things. Since he has more information and has available all sources of information, as well as having the executive responsibility, the President is in better position to suggest changes in administrative machinery than Congress could possibly do. Therefore I think it logical to do as this bill does and place the responsibility of studying the need for change and suggestions of change upon the President, leaving to Congress the final say in approving or disapproving all such suggestions.

Writers on political science contend that State governments may be improved by placing more power in the hands of the Governor and holding him strictly accountable for the exercise of that power. Administrative reform in a number of States has taken the direction of decreasing administrative boards and commissions and in giving the Governor relatively more power than he formerly had. This is done in the name of efficiency and businesslike procedure. Why should not the same be true of the executive department here at Washington?

Most of the argument that I have heard against this bill is Franklin D. Roosevelt. Some of the men who have been loudest in declaring that this measure is not a partisan matter have been most outspoken in making it a personal matter. It would almost seem that some who have been most vehement in their denunciation would be willing to vote for this bill if any other person were in the White House, be he Democrat or Republican. I not only do not share their attitude toward the President, but I do believe that were the President 10 times as unreliable and dangerous as they seem to think him to be that the welfare of the country is duly protected by the later provisions of this bill. I would not object to affirmative action instead of the negative action provided for in section 4, but I cannot see the need of it with the several later provisions that are included in the bill.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, may we be advised as to how the time stands?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri has 251/2 minutes remaining; the gentleman from New York has 32 minutes remaining.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. ENGEL].

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Chairman, some months ago there was a movement on foot to transfer the United States Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture, together with the control of 175,000,000 acres of United States forest lands, from the Department of Agriculture to the Department of the Interior. Should this bill become law, could the President, under the powers granted therein, effect that transfer of the United States Forestry Division from the Department of Agriculture to the Department of the Interior?

Mr. WARREN. Does the gentleman ask me that question? Mr. ENGEL. Either the gentleman from North Carolina or the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. WARREN. Yes; the President could do it if he wanted to.

Mr. ENGEL. Could the President change the name of the Department of the Interior to the Department of Conserva-

Mr. WARREN. No; indeed he could not. That is specifically prohibited; nor can the President set up any new departments.

Mr. ENGEL. But he could transfer the control of the 175,000,000 acres of United States forest lands and the United States Forest Service from the Department of Agriculture to the Department of the Interior?

Mr. WARREN. Yes.

Mr. ENGEL. And unless such action were disaffirmed by both Houses of Congress within 60 days after the transfer, the transfer would stand?

Mr. WARREN. That is correct. The gentleman can sit there and conjure up almost any theoretical case that he wants to.

Mr. ENGEL. I beg the gentleman's pardon. I am not conjuring up anything.

Mr. WARREN. I say that could happen.

Mr. ENGEL. I have been asking a question that is vital to thousands upon thousands of the American people interested in the Forest Service. I have 3,000,000 acres of forest land in my district. I believe we are entitled to know what might happen under the provisions of this bill. I object to the characterization that I am conjuring up questions. I have the right to ask questions.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 additional minutes to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ENGEL. I yield. Mr. DITTER. Would not this just intensify the difference that exists between Mr. Ickes and Mr. Wallace with reference to this proposed transfer?

Mr. ENGEL. I presume it would. Does the gentleman from North Carolina desire to make any further statement?

Mr. WARREN. I just want to tell the gentleman from Michigan that under this bill the President can transfer anything that is not specifically exempted. I cannot help from telling the gentleman that he himself was one of those who on August 13, 1937, voted for this bill containing that same power that he questions now, without any veto power whatsoever.

Mr. ENGEL. The 1937 bill was not the same as this bill, and in 1937 no one called attention to what power the President might have under the bill.

Mr. WARREN. Oh, an amendment was offered to exempt the Forest Service and was defeated by a 3-to-1 vote on this

Mr. ENGEL. Yes; and I voted for that amendment.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. ENGEL. I yield.

Mr. COCHRAN. I may say to the gentleman that at the present time there are 12 or 13 agencies of the Government handling public lands. The President can consolidate them into the Forest Service and put them in the Department of Agriculture under this bill.

Mr. ENGEL. In other words, the President could juggle them back and forth regardless of any opinions we might have, and the House or the Senate would be helpless unless Congress by a majority vote of both Houses disaffirmed the order within 60 days; unless that happened the order would

Mr. COCHRAN. The purpose of the bill is to consolidate these agencies that are doing the same class of work.

Mr. ENGEL. Why does not the President consolidate some of the 132 agencies which the Brookings Institute states he could consolidate now?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ENGEL. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Would the President have the authority to abolish the Navy Department and the War Department and consolidate it under Admiral Morgenthau who seems to be running those two Departments in the French airplane scandal?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of the time on this side to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, the majority side is pleased to yield 5 minutes additional to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the very distinguished and genial gentleman from Missouri for yielding me 5 additional minutes. I cherish for him a deep affection and a high regard. I wish that the spirit that has been manifest in him might have tempered the entire debate on this bill. May I say to our brethren sitting over on the Democratic side of the aisle that there has been no disposition on the part of those on the minority side to make this a partisan issue. There is nothing partisan about economy any more than there is about a broken leg. There is nothing more partisan about increased efficiency in government than there is about a case of appendicitis, and we do not yield to you on that side in respect to our desire to effect efficiency and economy in this tremendous and rambling structure that we call the Government of the United States.

Unfortunately some partisanship has crept into the debate. It comes about in some measure, I may say, by extreme and sometimes untempered statements that are thoughtlessly made. I thought the remarks of our good friend the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Warren], yesterday with respect to my two colleagues on the committee, the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber], and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gifford], were ill becoming and a bit unseemly; but we do not hold that against the gentleman from North Carolina.

May I say to him and to everybody who heard those remarks yesterday that the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gifford] first served 7 years in the Massachusetts Legislature and he has been in the Congress for 18 years. He has been serving the public with distinction for a quarter of a century, and you do not fool a solid constituency of the great Bay State of Massachusetts unless you have something on the ball. [Applause.] You cannot laugh that off.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber] has been a member of the bar of the State of New York for 35 years. He is the ranking minority member on the Appropriations Committee of this House. He is an indefatigable worker. Everybody knows that. He has been here going on 17 years. He has not been able to fool the people up in the great State of New York. He is here because they recognize substance and ability, which is the answer to any splenetic statements that might be made.

With reference to the gentleman from North Carolina, may I say that I like him like a brother? He is a brilliant lawyer. He is a great constitutionalist and is one of the great and able statesmen of this House. He ranks with the great men who have come from North Carolina to sit in this legislative body. So I shall indulge charity as a virtue rather than industry and say that I feel that the gentleman from North Carolina did not mean exactly the statements he made in derogation of my colleague from New York and my colleague from Massachusetts.

Mr. Chairman, perhaps we had some cause for feeling a bit offended and ill-tempered on our side. After all, this bill is here after one meeting of the Special Committee on Government Organization. We met last Thursday afternoon in the room of the Committee on Accounts. We arrived there at 1:30 and finished our deliberations at 4 o'clock, at which time the bill was reported. No one will stand in his place and deny that. The bill received 2½ hours of profound consideration.

We asked for hearings and this was denied. We suggested some things in the course of the committee session that probably should have been clarified. One, for instance, in connection with this bill is that section which provides that when an agency is transferred all the laws that are applicable shall be applicable when it is transferred to some other agency. I raised this question: Agency A is under civil service. Under this bill it is transferred and consolidated with agency B, which is not under civil service. Now, what happens to the personnel? Is their civil-service status expunged or is it not? No later than this afternoon Mr. Beeman and Mr. O'Brien, both very talented members of the Legislative Reference staff, stated they had not found the answer to the question. Do you not think we ought to know before we extend this authority, because it is rather important?

So, because of this summary treatment we had a right, perhaps, to feel just a little bit curt in our observations.

Getting back for a moment to the statements made with reference to this bill and particularly to the long statement made by the gentleman from North Carolina, I am afraid he is a good deal like the lawyer from Tennessee. This lawyer stated, "When the facts are against me, I argue the law. When the law is against me, I argue about the facts. When both the facts and law are against me, I raise hell generally."

I think the gentleman from North Carolina sort of raised hell generally on this bill yesterday without quite going to the heart of the thing. [Laughter and applause.] Mr. Chairman, I think we can isolate the truth of this matter by propounding this query: Why is the bill here? We can start with that broad question and ascertain what we want to know.

In the first place, it has been intimated this is a "must" bill, which makes no difference to me. I have voted for lots of "must" bills in the last 6 years. Lots of my colleagues have voted for "must" bills during that same time. We do not care whether it is a "must" bill or not. We are concerned with "merit" and not with "must."

The statement is made that this bill is here in order to promote efficiency. If you will examine the dissertation by the Brookings Institution, which was released only yesterday, you will find that out of the fiscal Budget for 1938, aggregating eight and one-half billion dollars, in their estimation, approximately 18 percent is devoted to administrative expenditures, which would be slightly in excess of $1,800,000,000. If they cut 25 percent, under this bill, that might amount to three or four hundred million dollars. But how much is it so far as the national deficit is concerned? I suggest that the Members look at the mail-order catalog of 1,100 pages known as the official Budget of the United States.

There you will find that the deficit this year will be $4,000,000,000, and the expected deficit in 1940 will be in the neighborhood of $4,000,000,000. So when they talk about economy, well, it will be only a nominal economy at best, and that in itself is not the moving reason the bill is here.

Is it here because of efficiency? Let me say to you, and particularly you on the majority side, do you not know that the President has complete control over some 78 assorted agencies of government today? Thirteen of them came into being by Executive order. Seven of them came into being by a letter or by approval of the President. This includes the Electric Home and Farm Authority. This includes the Export-Import Bank. It includes other similar agencies. If you want efficiency, why have we not had a demonstration of it before now? Out of the 133 agencies of government today that are sought to be affected by the provisions of this bill, the President without a single line of legislative authority can consolidate, transfer, coordinate, or abolish 78 agencies. They have been in existence 4, 5, and 6 years. Why has there not been a demonstration? Why should we be persuaded now, after all these years of splurging, that you are now so zealous for efficiency?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Not now.

Why do we wait until now to show what the fruits of reorganization may be when the Chief Magistrate of this Nation has that authority today? You cannot say to us that because of the efficiency involved this measure must be passed. You say to us it is to reduce the agencies of government. The President by a stroke of the pen can put out of business more than 70 agencies today. Why has he not done it? Since he has not done it, do not come to us at this late hour and say, "Oh, it is in the interest of reducing the agencies of government." He has had a chance without being given any more authority and he has failed to do so. You cannot with good grace insist at this late hour, with Federal agencies sprawling through the land, with present talk of raising the debt limit from $45,000,000,000 to $55,000,000,000, and with Federal agencies manifold multiplied, that these are the reasons for this measure.

No, Mr. Chairman, there must be some other reason. Now I ask this question, Is this authority needed? Oh, do not think so. In all the dissertations made on this bill

I do not think so. In all the dissertations made on this bill by my genial and beloved friend the gentleman from Missouri, the chairman of this committee, and by the very talented gentleman from North Carolina, which you will find in this morning's Record, there was no single allusion to the authority that is carried in the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921. Let us see what this particular provision does. It is permanent law. It has been on the books for 18 years. This is the language of section 209 of that act, which was discussed by Mr. Taber on yesterday. Listen carefully:

The Budget Bureau, when directed by the President, shall make a detailed study of the departments and establishments from the purpose of enabling the President to determine what changes (with a view to securing greater economy and efficiency in the conduct of the public service) should be made—in (1) the existing organization, activities, and methods of business of such departments or establishments; (2) the appropriations therefor; (3) the assignment of particular activities to particular services; or (4) the regrouping of services. The result of such study shall be embodied in a report or reports to the President, who may transmit to the Congress such report or reports, or any part thereof, with his recommendations on the matters covered thereby.

Let us take a look at that authority and see precisely what it does. Has the President directed that kind of a study? No. Ask anyone who is familiar with the appropriations, and you will find that no such detailed study has been authorized except-

Mr. COCHRAN rose.

Mr. DIRKSEN. If the gentleman will wait I will get to except such limited undertaking as has thus far been made by the Budget Bureau, as indicated before the Appropriations Committee in connection with the 1940 Treasury appropriation bill.

Does it contain all the needed authority? Well, let us The bill pending before us today will prohibit the transfer or the abolition or consolidation of executive departments. The President can, under the 1921 act, recommend the entire annihilation of every Cabinet department. You can go infinitely further. There are really no exceptions or exemptions in the Budgetary Act of 1921. The bill before us today excepts 16 agencies, upon which the President must not lay a hand. In the act of 1921 there is no exception, no exemption, and that authority would go as far as the Aurora Borealis on the north and Little Antarctica on the south. It is infinitely broader than the authority contained in the bill before us at the present time. It calls for efficiency, it calls for economy, it calls for all those things, and if it has more authority as permanent law, than that contained in the pending bill, then I repeat my question which is the premise for these observations: Why is this bill here today?

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield with pleasure. Mr. COCHRAN. I believe the gentleman will find the answer in the last sentence of the law itself, if he will read it.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I read it, and I will get to that portion of it because that is precisely where we hit off today. It is not partisan, it is not extreme, it is not sectional, it is not ill-tempered. We come to the "how" of doing this thing.

We can dismiss many of the abortive speeches that were made this afternoon to the effect that if we do not go along with this bill we are against economy. That is sheer poppycock, nonsense, and balderdash, and everybody knows it. We are interested in how this shall be done, and you know as well as I do that we firmly and patriotically believe we are making a mistake in the pending bill if we seek to do it in the fashion you suggest.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I cannot yield.

The gentleman from Missouri gave us the answer yesterday. When the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KEEFE] talked about incompetence and about fear of doing the job, the gentleman from Missouri said that was exactly the answer, better than he himself could express it. I say to the gentleman from Missouri and to everybody, particularly after we review and recite and emphasize the democratic processes and the forces of democracy through which the sunlight ought to shine in, are we going to stand before the world and confess our lack of intestinal fortitude before the departmental personnel of this country, and put our tails between our legs and say, "Oh, we will let the President do it under a bogus procedure where we hand him particular grants of legislative authority"?

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield, with pleasure.

Mr. COCHRAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin is the one that gave the answer.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr.

Mr. COCHRAN. And he asked the question, but I told him his own answer was better than anyone's, and the fact of the matter is that the Congress has, during all these years, done just exactly what the gentleman from Wisconsin said yesterday, and this applies to both sides of the aisle.

Mr. DIRKSEN. And we will get to that in just a moment. You see, when reorganization starts under this bill, it will come quietly; it will sneak up on a division or agency, like a thief in the night. No one shall know, and then comes the day for the coup de grace, when this little orphan stepchild of a reorganization proposal is suddenly deposited on the doorstep of Congress. Nobody has got wise during all that time, but when it is put upon the doorstep of this body, the President will say, "Gentlemen of the Congress, there is the little child, now it is up to you to disavow it." Then what happens? When we undertake to do the job, then, of course, it becomes necessary for Congress to shoulder the burden of proof under the negative proposal that is carried in this bill. We will have to disavow it in this House and then we must go to the Senate and have it disavowed. No matter how objectionable a reorganization proposal might be and no matter how great a mixture of good and bad, it becomes law until disapproved and when it comes to disapproval, we must fight from the bottom up in order to contrive its disapproval. What a tragic business that would be.

Now, when they bring that up, I want to allude to the Hoover proposal of 1932. Did it require both Houses? Ah, no; and no one will stand in his place and contend so. It required disavowal by only one House of the Congress, and in addition thereto, you could reject so much of it as you wanted and accept so much of it as you wanted. So they cite the name of Hoover and the Hoover proposal as if that has anything to do with the bill that is before us now. The fact is that the Democratic Congress of 1932 took precious care that with a Republican Senate and a Democratic House, that disapproval of only one House was necessary to throw the President's reorganization proposals into the ashcan.

It was also contended that they have inserted in this bill the requirement that both the Senate and the House of Representatives shall spurn this reorganization child, otherwise it shall become an effective statutory child, and they say they did this because the Attorney General, under the Hoover administration, ruled that one House was not enough.

I have gone through all the debates on that old legislative appropriation bill in 1932 and I cannot find that the question was raised in the debates. It came up afterward, but what justification is there for seeking to impose this kind of a measure upon the country and the Congress at the present time? So they are seeking here to do this quietly, to do it secretly, and then to place the onus upon the Congress and let us wrestle with it wheresoever and whensoever we please. Once this authority is granted it is gone. Only by action of both House and Senate in disapproval the most heinous kind of reorganization bill that human ingenuity might contrive can we recover that authority. My colleagues, are you ready to sell your own Congress down the river in that summary fashion? I am certain that you are not.

Now, there is another important thing in this bill, and make no mistake about this. You can alter statutory law by executive flat under this bill and I will prove it.

Last year the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce created the Civil Aeronautics Authority and I know my distinguished friend from Illinois [Mr. Keller] is very much interested in that authority. To make sure that there would be independent investigation of all airplane accidents, they created within the heart of this authority the Air Safety Board. It is independent, but may I say to you and say to everybody who has an interest in the development of aeronautics, the President can abolish the Air Safety Board under the provisions of this bill, and we will have one deuce of a time restoring that independence that is so necessary and so vital, in my judgment, to the orderly development of aviation. There is an example of how the President, with a stroke of the pen could undo the most careful and painstaking work of the Congress.

The other day we had a deficiency appropriation bill here and an amendment was offered from the floor to make certain that the $800,000 to be expended by the Wage-Hour Division would be expended not by Mrs. Perkins, but by the Administrator. Who offered that amendment? My friend from Missouri, the chairman of this committee, offered that amendment, and when the matter was before the House, this is what he said, at page 2103 of the RECORD, and he was addressing himself to the House:

I am asking that this man, who is responsible to the Congress or the conduct of that office, have charge of the appropriations we vote to run that office.

And now, John, when we pass this bill-if we do-in spite of all your solicitude about Mrs. Perkins and Elmer Andrews, the President can take Mr. Andrews and just rub him out and let Mrs. Perkins spend all the dough, and all your solicitude will have been in vain under this bill. Do you want that to happen? Well, if you do not, I think you ought to be very careful as to whether you vote for all the provisions that are contained in the present bill.

Mr. COCHRAN. I want anything to happen in connection with the reorganization of the Government that will increase efficiency in the Government and simplify procedure and bring about such reductions in expenditures as may be possible.

Mr. DIRKSEN. And the President has that power under the Budgetary Act of 1921. Why does he not bring us a recommendation? We have been waiting for it for years. Why does he not bring that law up here or a proposal under an Executive order and say, "There it is—take it or leave it—disavow it or approve it." Since that historic day in March of 1933 when he took office, there has been no dearth of messages and proposals from the White House to the Congress. Since that historic day, he has by the nod of approval and by Executive order created scores of new agencies which today flourish in the garden of the New Deal. He is the author and finisher. He is the creator. He can give and he can take away. Having proven his creative genius in this direction, why can he not send us an occasional message under the authority of the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921 and recommend that an occasional agency be rubbed out? Why does he not exercise the authority which he now holds over 78 agencies of government and fashion a pleasing bit of economy and efficiency? We are waiting.

In all the time that I have been here, and that is contemporaneous with the great man in the White House, there has been no such proposal come to the Congress of the United States. That is the answer to it.

Mr. COCHRAN. And since the enactment of the Budget and Accounting Act, we have had several Republican Presidents.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Now you want us to believe there is a change of heart, but let us see how far this change of heart has gone. You have been shricking in the wilderness for economy. Look at title III of this bill. While we are talking about economy we see that the President shall have authority to appoint six additional administration assistants at $10,000 per year each. So while we are talking about economy we are creating six new jobs at a cost of $60,000 per year. Is there any consistency about that kind of representation in this bill?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mr. TABER. Is the gentleman familiar with the fact that under the administration of Calvin Coolidge and the administration of Warren Harding, thousands and thousands of useless jobs and bureaus were gotten rid of by the Budget?

Mr. COCHRAN. How many thousands?

Mr. TABER. Many thousands.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Is it not true under this bill that the employment agency now under the Department of Labor could be transferred to the Social Security, for instance? I know every veteran in the country with whom I have talked, or had any contact, and veterans' organizations, is bitterly opposed to that. They feel that it belongs to the Department of Labor where labor can find a job for people.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I have a very happy suggestion. My good friend, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN] stated this afternoon that he is going to offer an amendment to exempt the Rural Electrification Administration. That will make No. 17. If somebody will exempt the Forestry Service, that will make 18, and then if we can find about 112 more Members of Congress who will undertake to pick out some other agency and exempt that, we will have exempted them all, and there will be no need for the bill. But the very fact that you have 16 or 17 exceptions indicates that you have no faith in the bill. If you have faith in it, why do you not wipe out the National Labor Relations Board, or the Federal Communications Commission and the Coal Commission and the Coast Guard and other agencies? Have you not any faith in your President? In effect, you say that you will trust the President with your watch but not with the Civil Service Commission. You say that you will let him hold your wallet but do not trust him with the Army engineers. What kind of a faith is it that you have been so gustily protesting? Do you have to make exceptions and hamstring him? Why not give us a bill without exceptions, and see what the result will be? But you have not any faith in him and that is why you want to hog-tie him by legislative proposals and exceptions. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to my friend. Mr. COCHRAN. The gentleman picks out those he would like to have eliminated. Why does he not ever pick out some he wants in there, like the Veterans' Bureau and other organizations? The gentleman would not vote to take them

Mr. DIRKSEN. Put them all in the motion, and I will vote for it.

Mr. COCHRAN. And the gentleman knows very well, if we did that, on the final roll call the bill would be defeated. and we are not going to do that for you.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, there is one thing that the gentlemen cannot say to me. They cannot shout in the wilderness and say, "Remember the 13th of August 1937-you voted for it; you voted for a far more drastic bill." Gentlemen, I did not vote for that bill. Oh, no, the record is still clean; but why do you not strike them all out and show faith with the Congress, and say that you have faith in the justice and in the capacity and in the general equitable principles of the gentleman in the White House, and let him do the job. Oh, no, no; there is nothing like that. You trust him as far as it pleases you, and then chide us for being against the President to cover up your own sins. Oh, ye of little faith.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. No: let me continue now. I hope one of the members of this Reorganization Committee—I hope one of the three, Mr. TABER, Mr. GIFFORD, or myself-will offer as a substitute when we read this bill tomorrow the bill introduced in the Senate by Senator BYRD, known as Senate 1706. There are 50 or 60 copies here for the Members. That bill is far more to my kidney than the one before us at the present time. It starts out in great fashion. It has a preamble. It says that the Congress hereby declares that a serious emergency exists.

You want this bill because there is an emergency. You have been shouting at us all of the time about economy and efficiency and drastic reorganization. If you are not hypocritical about it, you would have no objection to writing that preamble in the bill that an emergency exists and that there is imperative need for economy everywhere. There is another thing in the Byrd bill. It is to eliminate waste. That ought to be in this bill. He has got it in his bill. That makes it a better bill.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

vield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. In a moment. In addition, he carries exceptions in his bill, so that it is not different in that respect. Substantially the same agencies are exempted from reorganization, and that, of course, will appeal to those majority Members who have faith in the President, but not quite enough faith to trust him with the whole job of reorganization.

It says there shall be no continuation of the emergency agencies by virtue of the reorganization plan. Are you willing to go along with that or do you want to continue all of these emergency agencies in power? I like that statement in the Byrd bill. He provides that there shall be no new agencies created. If you are honest about economy and efficiency you will go along with that provision. He provides that there shall be no numerical increase in the agencies over what exist today. If you are fair about this thing you will go along with that provision in the Byrd bill.

Finally, it puts it on an affirmative basis. In other words, when a proposal to reorganize comes up action starts 1 hour after the 20 calendar days after its receipt by Congress. We take it or leave it. We throw it into the ash can or we approve it, but it cannot become effective by reason of failure or neglect or refusal of either branch of this Government to act. Is that not infinitely better?

In that connection how skillfully the majority report was drawn. They point to this Supreme Court decision to show that it is perfectly legal for something to happen under a contingency. In other words, unless two-thirds of the tobacco planters in North Carolina fail to register their protest, certain tobacco quotas shall become effective, but how did that law get out of this House? How did it get out of this Congress? Was it by a negative vote? Certainly not. Did it get into the statutes automatically because of a failure or refusal on the part of Congress to act. Certainly not. It is law today because of affirmative action by the Congress. I am not interested in the incidence of that legislation. I am interested in protecting the integrity and procedure of the Congress of the United States. Not even the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] has the temerity to stand here and say that because of failure on the part of the Congress to act we placed some kind of a quota upon the tobacco farmers of North Carolina.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. In the event the Byrd bill should be substituted, would the gentleman vote for it?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes, sir. [Applause.] Make no mistake about it. I will vote for it. [Applause.]

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. MAY. I am wondering about section 5 of this bill, whether or not if a plan were sent back to the House of Representatives by the President, the House would be put in the attitude of a litigant who held the burden of proof in a court case, instead of in the position of a defendent who did not have to offer any proof at all.

Mr. DIRKSEN. The gentleman is right.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. DIRKSEN. Let me allude to one more thing. This, gentlemen, is very important. In the Byrd bill there is a provision that when the President submits a reorganization proposal it shall be accompanied by a detailed statement showing the increase or decrease in expenditures. What is the language of the House bill? It reads, "if the President deems it advisable." Oh! Courtesy from the legislative branch to the executive branch. But you do not save any dough with that kind of courtesy. When he sends us a reorganization proposal I want to know whether it will cost more or cost less. That is in the Byrd bill. That is why we should substitute the Byrd bill. I will go along with the gentleman, and I say that very advisedly to all of my good friends and colleagues on the Democratic side of the aisle. I will offer it tomorrow because it is affirmative, because it may really establish some economies without bartering away the legislative authority and power of the Congress.

I yield now to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Keller]. Mr. KELLER. How many others on your side will do that?

Mr. DIRKSEN. All of them. [Applause.]

Mr. KELLER. Of course, that answers it. Mr. DIRKSEN. And the Byrd bill can get through the Senate. So I say to you if you really want reorganization, if you want to go along with a good affirmative bill and still preserve the prerogatives and procedure and integrity of the House, then you can join us as we offer the Byrd bill as a substitute for the bill that is now pending.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. HOOK. Has the gentleman conferred with Senator Byrn to determine whether or not he is opposed to this present bill, or whether he is offering that bill to try to spite the President of the United States? [Laughter.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. The gentleman ought not reflect upon a great statesman from the great State of Virginia. I never would have done it, I am sure. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Luplow].

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Chairman, I have asked for these 2 minutes in order that I may propound an inquiry to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN].

I look upon this bill, Mr. Chairman, with mixed emotions. I think the Government ought to be reorganized. I think there is a great field for service in rearranging activities so as to eliminate overlapping and waste now so glaringly in evidence; but I do not want to see, either directly or indirectly, any way left open for the establishment of any new governmental departments, because my experience on the Appropriations Committee tells me that when a governmental department is established it opens a pipe line straight into the United States Treasury.

The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] said a while ago that under this bill no new departments could be established. I know he means it, because he is a man of truth and honor. The part of the bill that relates to the abolishing and transfer of executive departments is contained in subsection (a) of section 3. It says:

No reorganization plan under section 4 shall provide

(a) For the abolition or transfer of an executive department or all the functions thereof—

I am asking the gentleman from North Carolina whether, for the purpose of clarification and to effectuate the identical purpose which he states is the object of the bill, he would be willing to accept an amendment I contemplate offering which would insert after the word "thereof" and before the semicolon, in line 4, on page 3, the following language:

Or for the establishment of any new executive department.

This would make it absolutely clear to everybody in this House that there is no intention of establishing any new executive department. It would relieve the bill altogether of its ambiguity in respect to the determination of Congress that no new departments shall be created, and I feel it would improve the character of the bill in the opinion of many Members of the House.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, as has previously been stated, this bill specifically provides that no new department of the Government may be created. In order absolutely to clarify that, if there is any possible doubt, I will say that we will very gladly accept the amendment to be proposed by the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. LUDLOW. The gentleman assures me he will accept the amendment.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. LUDLOW. Yes.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Under the present bill, would the President have power to transfer the functions of a temporary agency, whose life would expire according to the terms of the act which created it, to a permanent agency or department, and thus continue indefinitely the function of the expiring agency?

Mr. WARREN. Yes; he would have a right to transfer a function

Mr. ROBERTSON. And give permanent life to a temporary function in that way?

Mr. WARREN. The function would die when the agency

Mr. ROBERTSON. That is what I wanted to make clear. The Byrd bill contains a special paragraph that would not keep alive a temporary agency.

Mr. WARREN. He could not, of course, do it beyond the expiration of the law.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, may I ask how much time I have remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri has 18½ minutes remaining.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 7 minutes to the

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 7 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCormack].

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I was very much interested in listening to the reply of my distinguished friend, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN], when I asked him if he would vote for the passage of the Byrd bill. I expected, naturally, the answer he gave, because the Byrd bill, with the exception of the 20-day provision, contains nothing but existing law. I have the greatest respect for the Senator from Virginia, and anything I say is under no condition to be construed as criticism of him; but his bill, with the exception I have stated, as I see it, carries into effect nothing but existing law. The President now has the power, but you and I as practical men know that if the President sends up recommendations with reference to a reorganization, whether the President is Franklin Roosevelt, former President Hoover, the late President Coolidge, or the late President Harding, because of bureaucratic influence that exists, the Congress would not pass the necessary enabling resolution that would carry into effect the reorganization recommendations of any President.

This debate has brought out some very interesting indications not only to you and me, but to the American people. Last fall we had an election, and the Republican Party in this House made some substantial increases. I respect every Member, old and new; but most of those increases, I submit, as one analyzes the votes, were due to local conditions. [Laughter.] Oh, you can laugh, you can laugh. In Massachusetts they did not discuss a national issue. We know in Massachusetts what the reason was. In Connecticut no national issues were discussed. The results in Connecticut were due to local conditions. The same is true of Rhode Island and of Pennsylvania in the main.

Mr. KELLER. And in Illinois.

Mr. McCORMACK. Illinois, Ohio, and Michigan. There local conditions contributed. I cannot speak about the other States because I have no knowledge upon which to base an abiding opinion.

What I say is no way derogatory and is not intended in derogation of any new Republican Member, but I have seen since the first of the year the older members of the Republican Party engaging in "the work-up," as we call it—and we have all participated in bodies, social, fraternal, or otherwise, where "the work-up" was engaged in, "the working up" of new Members to bring about, as the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Ditter] said a few days ago in the press, "mass voting on the part of the Republican Members." What have we seen? Speaking now to the Democratic side. We have heard the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gifford] say:

I do not trust the President of the United States.

If I did not know the gentleman as well as I do I would say it was a message of hatred. We have heard the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Lambertson] say:

The man in the White House is not the man to reorganize the Government.

If I did not know the gentleman I would say it was a message of hatred. We have heard the gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish] say:

The Republican Party has no faith or confidence in the President.

If I did not know the gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish] I would say, "A message of hatred." We have heard others assert they had no faith in the President of the United States. What a message from the minority party—I do not say all the members of it, but for the minority party, as such, to send to the people of the United States.

The minority party has been doing nothing but chastising ever since Congress met. We Democrats have sat here in a tolerant mood listening to them, listening to their remarks, remarks which constituted insults not only to the President as an individual, but to the President and to the office of the President of the United States. I have never said an unkind word yet about the President of my country, and I served under the late Calvin Coolidge for several months, and I served during the 4 years that former President Hoover was in the White House.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCormack. My time is so limited I cannot yield. I have nothing but respect for former President Hoover. As far as I can remember I voted for every program and every bill he recommended to enable him to try and put his program into effect. But I would never say under any conditions, even the most emotional imaginable, that I have not got faith in the President of the United States, any President of the United States, and never would I have said that or even thought that while former President Hoover or the late President Calvin Coolidge was President of the United States.

Oh, yes; "anybody else," they say, and "we would vote for this bill." That is the message to decent thinking Americans, that the minority party has no constructive program, that the minority party is not making constructive criticism which is one of its functions. Under no conditions should the minority party simply oppose; its duty is to go along on constructive legislation. The Republican Party has failed to perform this duty.

The minority party has no constructive program. Its program is sniping. That is the only way I can characterize it. They are simply engaging in sniping tactics. This small thing and that small thing.

Now, let us discuss the bill. The bill eliminates practically all of the provisions that were objectionable to some Members last year. Practically the entire press of the United States is unanimous in support of the passage of reorganization legislation. The press of the United States—Republican, Democratic, and Independent—as a result of the introduction of this bill, have all, with as great unanimity as possible, approved the bill and approved editorially its passage.

Mr. Chairman, I submit that the opposition to this bill is not sincere. I submit that what the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Warren] said is correct—that the Republican Party would oppose any bill recommended by the President. They are not against reorganization. They are against President Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Beam].

Mr. BEAM. Mr. Chairman, in the closing period of this debate, we sometimes give vent to our feelings, commingled with sentiment and affection, as it were, and also in the excitement of the hour and the tenseness of the moment we unwarrantedly and unintentionally sometimes speak in harsh and pungent tones. This has prevailed throughout the Chamber during the course of the debate on the pending bill. I assure my colleague from Illinois [Mr. Dirksen] the sentiments and imputations of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] were not meant to impugn the noble motives of the two distinguished and able gentlemen Mr. GIFFORD, of Massachusetts, and Mr. Taber, of New York, who have served so effectively and well upon this committee. I may say that during their service, since the organization of the committee, they have contributed their thoughts, their beliefs, their sentiments, and the philosophy which they preach and practice, but I also want to say to my fellow Democrats here today that that philosophy has been the dogma of the Republican Party and we have not received much succor or support when any Democratic thoughts or principles were written or incorporated in the pronouncement of this contemplated legislation.

The distinguished gentleman from Illinois, during the course of his discussion, proposed the interrogatory "Why is this bill here?" when he states as a matter of fact the present budgetary law enacted in 1921 adequately clothed the President of the United States with power sufficient to put into force and effect the functions he requests and which we are now trying to enact into the law of the land. The only answer I can make to the gentleman from Illinois and to my distinguished colleagues on the left of the aisle is, that from 1921 to 1932 no affirmative action was taken by the Republican Presidents who so nobly, patriotically, and loyally, as the gentleman stated, served their country during that period. Not one affirmative action was taken under the blanket control or power which my colleague from Illinois so forcibly stated the present Chief Executive of the Nation is adequately empowered.

But, Members of the House, contrary to the logic or reason of the gentleman, we find President Hoover, in a special message to Congress, requested a delegation of power to organize the Federal Government. The House of Representatives at that time had a Democratic majority, but, notwithstanding that fact, a Democratic Speaker, the present Vice President of the United States, and a Democratic committee, brought out the bill and conferred upon Mr. Hoover greater powers than any peacetime President ever enjoyed since the founding of the Republic. We were not motivated or prompted by partisan motives, but animated with a desire to do all in our power to combat the devastating and devitalizing effects of the depression for the welfare of humanity and the security of the country. But, as the gentleman from North Carolina pointed out, when we were about to write President Hoover's recommendations into the basic law of this Nation, his then Director of the Budget, Colonel Roop, appeared before the committee and stated: "Those plans will not work, and if you take my advice you will reject them."

Mr. Chairman, those are the facts in the case and when all the verbiage, the temper of the moment is passed, we come down to the basic principle of whether or not we want to write into law now the pronouncements of economy which the gentlemen on the left of the aisle have preached so loudly and vociferously not only here in Congress but throughout the country since Franklin D. Roosevelt became President of the United States.

Mr. Chairman, something was said about the silence of the press at the present time relative to the pending measure. We cannot very well forget that in 1938 there was a national political campaign throughout America in which the gentlemen on the left of the aisle were active participants. We very well remember how the press of the Nation during the time this proposed legislation was before the House publicized and characterized the measure as a "dictator's bill" and unsparingly and severely criticized and condemned all who supported the bill as "arch betrayers of the country," saying that we abdicated the rights of the Congress of the United States and violated our oaths as Congressmen.

What is the fact today? There is not a newspaper in the Nation today that opposes this bill. There is not a reasonable, reputable string of newspapers from one side of this country to the other that comes out and tells you not to support the pending measure. You have received no direct communication from the folks at home telling you not to vote for the bill. In making this statement, I want to refer to the remarks made by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KEEFEl yesterday, in which he stated that those who voted for this bill were defeated because of the stand they took on the reorganization proposal.

I want to caution him that I was just advised by the very able and distinguished chairman of the committee [Mr. COCHRAN] that the following Members from the great and illustrious State of Wisconsin, Messrs. Amlie, Sauthoff, Withrow, Boileau, Schneider, and others, all voted against the reorganization bill at the last session, and, parenthetically and as paradoxical as it seems, were left at home. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, this is not a partisan measure. It greatly transcends partisan politics. We have made great strides in the development of our country in the 150 years since the formation of the First Congress.

No one could have listened to the eloquent and scholarly speech of our learned Speaker, or the sound and logical arguments of Chief Justice Hughes, of the Supreme Court, or the far-reaching, effective, and inspiring address of the President of the United States, without feeling a sense of pride in the great advances we have made from those formation days in New York 150 years ago.

The operation of government has become greatly enlarged and enhanced since that time. It logically follows that with this great advancement necessary changes and circumstances must be encountered in our various departments to effectively meet the conditions as now prevail.

Questions which confront us today are vastly different than those which engaged our attention in days gone by. Every Member of the House knows there are governmental agencies which have been in operation since the World War which have outlived their usefulness. Today they perform no necessary governmental function and must be terminated either by failing to appropriate adequate funds for them or by legislative enactments which will dispose of them.

Mr. Chairman, if we are interested in economy, if we are serious in putting into effect the economies so earnestly advocated by the minority Members from 1932 up to the present time, then I call upon the distinguished Republican Members of the House to join with us in enacting this bill into law to bring about their desired and often requested economy program. This is a time when economy must be practiced in government. We must serve notice to the American businessmen that we have placed our own house in order. We must give the business of the Nation some effective assurance, not of governmental impediments but of governmental cooperation. To the end and purpose of once more starting the wheels of industry upon a sound basis, so that we can reduce our relief rolls and again return the vast army of the unemployed to private industry.

If the passage of the reorganization bill accomplished nothing more than this, I respectfully commend it for the serious consideration of every Member of the House.

The declaration of policy and philosophy enunciated in the following sentences commends this bill for passage to anyone who is animated with a real desire of public service.

- (1) To reduce expenditures to the fullest extent consistent with the efficient operation of the Government;
 (2) To increase the efficiency of the operations of the Government to the fullest extent practicable within the revenues;
- (3) To group, coordinate, and consolidate executive agencies of the Government, as nearly as may be, according to major purposes;
 (4) To reduce the number of such agencies by consolidating those having similar functions under a single head and to abolish such agencies or such functions thereof as may not be necessary for the efficient conduct of the Government; and
 (5) To eliminate overlapping and duplication of effort.
 - (5) To eliminate overlapping and duplication of effort.

In the course of the debate some mention was made of the pending Byrd bill, introduced in the Senate. Personally, at the present time I know nothing about the contents of that proposal, but I do know that the most effective argument that has been made on the floor of the House in support of this bill was made by the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina on yesterday when he enumerated some of the agencies which the distinguished and learned Senator from Virginia called to the attention of the country and which for the sake of the RECORD I am again repeating:

There have been at least 29 agencies concerned with lending Government funds, according to reports taken from Government

There have been at least three agencies concerned with insuring deposits and loans.

There have been at least 34 agencies concerned with the acquisition of land. There have been at least 16 agencies concerned with wildlife preservation.

There have been at least 10 agencies concerned with Government construction. There have been at least nine agencies concerned with credit

There have been at least a dozen agencies concerned with home and community planning.

There have been at least 10 agencies concerned with materials of construction.

There are more than twoscore personnel officers for the Government listed in Washington offices alone.

There are more than 100 information and publication offices in Federal agencies in Washington.

There are more than 100 Federal agency libraries in Washington besides the Library of Congress.

The Federal Government operates an average of one motor vehicle for every 1,200 people in the United States, and they travel enough miles every year to traverse nearly every highway in the

This in itself is an argument more convincing than anyone could utter here today as to why this proposed reorganization plan should be written into law in order to effectuate and to obtain these much-needed reforms.

In the closing hours of this debate I was a little chagrined when the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DITTER] stated that under the present administration there has been a profligate and wasteful expenditure of money.

How fleeting is time and how quick is the human mind to forget the great catastrophe which engulfed our entire nation in 1933 when President Franklin D. Roosevelt assumed control of our National Government. Impoverished and hungry people clamored at the very doors of the Capitol for food and sustenance. What might have happened had we failed to alleviate their suffering I sometimes shudder to contemplate.

By speedy legislative enactment we passed the necessary relief measures. We saved their homes and their farms. We guaranteed their bank deposits. We initiated a program of public works. We passed measures pertaining to the social well-being and security of our people. We instilled into the hearts and breasts of our citizens a new hope and confidence in the integrity of our Government.

Irrespective of your political affiliations, my fellow colleagues, do you believe those actions come within the category characterized by the gentleman from Pennsylvania as profligate and wasteful expenditures of the people's money?

Mr. Chairman, by the passage of this proposed legislation we have an opportunity to take a forward step in the accomplishment of a much-desired and much-cherished hope.

The Nation awaits our answer today. I appeal to you to adopt this measure on the grounds of national expediency and national economy.

I have confidence in the high purpose and noble spirit which has always imbued and animated the Members of this distinguished and august body. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired. All time has expired. The Clerk will read. The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "Reorganization Act of 1939."

TITLE I-REORGANIZATION

PART I

SECTION 1. (a) The President shall investigate the organization of all executive agencies of the Government and shall determine what changes therein are necessary to accomplish the following

(1) To reduce expenditures to the fullest extent consistent with the efficient operation of the Government;
(2) To increase the efficiency of the operations of the Government to the fullest extent practicable within the revenues;
(3) To group, coordinate, and consolidate executive agencies of the Government, as nearly as may be, according to major purposes;
(4) To reduce the number of such agencies by consolidating those having similar functions under a single head, and to abolish such agencies or such functions thereof as may not be necessary for the efficient conduct of the Government; and
(5) To eliminate overlapping and duplication of effort.

(5) To eliminate overlapping and duplication of effort.
(b) The Congress declares that the purposes specified in subsection (a) may be accomplished in great measure by proceeding immediately under the provisions of this title, and can be accomplished more speedily thereby than by the enactment of specific legislation.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. McCormack, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 4425) to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, and for other purposes, had come to no resolution thereon.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, its Chief Clerk, announced that the Senate agrees to the amendment of the House to a bill of the Senate of the following title:

S. 660. An act to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, to provide for the reapportionment of cotton acreage allotments not planted by farmers entitled

The message also announced that the Senate disagrees to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 13 to the bill (H. R. 2868) entitled "An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for other purposes"; it still further insists upon its amendments numbered 13 and 23 to the said bill, disagreed to by the House; requests a still further conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. Adams, Mr. Glass, Mr. McKellar, Mr. HAYDEN, Mr. BYRNES, Mr. HALE, and Mr. Townsend to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

INDEPENDENT OFFICES APPROPRIATION BILL, 1940

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 3743) making appropriations for the Executive Office and sundry independent executive bureaus, boards, commissions, and offices for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments, further insist on the disagreement to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference requested.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 3743, further insist on the disagreement to the Senate amendment, and agree to the conference requested. Is there objection?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, merely for the purpose of addressing a question to the chairman, may I ask if the amendment relating to the reenlistment allowance is still in disagreement?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Nothing has been done on this since it was acted on in the House, I may say to the gentleman. I understand the Senate has further insisted on its amendment.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The gentleman's request is that the House further insist on its disagreement to the Senate amendment?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. That the House further insist on its disagreement, which throws the amendment back into conference again and makes it come back here for a

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. WOODRUM of Virginia, Johnson of Oklahoma, FITZPATRICK, Houston, Starnes, Wigglesworth, Dirksen, and Case of South Dakota.

FIRST DEFICIENCY BILL, 1940

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 2868) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for other purposes, further insist on the disagreement of the House to the amendments of the Senate and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 2868) further insist on the disagreement of the House to the amendments of the Senate and agree to the conference asked by the Senate. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. Taylor of Colorado, Woodrum of Virginia, Cannon of Missouri, Ludlow, McMillan, Snyder, O'Neal, Johnson of West Virginia, Taber, Wigglesworth, Lambertson, and DITTER.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend the remarks I made this afternoon.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Chair may state to the gentleman from Illinois that by unanimous consent heretofore granted, all Members are entitled to 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their own remarks on the pending bill.

IMMIGRATION, DEPORTATION, NATURALIZATION, AND EXPATRIATION

Mr. COLMER, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following privileged report for printing in the RECORD under the rule:

House Resolution 115

Resolved, That the Committee on Immigration and Naturaliza-Resolved, That the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization be, and it hereby is, authorized and directed (1) to make a study of all existing statutes, Executive orders, rules, regulations, instructions, and general orders which relate to immigration, deportation, naturalization, and expatriation; (2) to make a study of dual nationality in the United States; (3) to investigate the unlawful entry and smuggling of aliens into the United States and effective methods and laws to overcome this problem; (4) to conduct other necessary studies as may be helpful to Congress in establishing new legislative policies on immigration, deportation, naturalization, and expatriation; and (5) to study all other questions in relation to the foregoing that may aid Congress in any necessary remedial legislation and in the creation of separate codes of law relating to immigration, deportation, naturalization, and expatriation.

or law relating to immigration, deportation, naturalization, and expatriation.

The said committee, or any subcommittee thereof, is hereby authorized to request and secure, for the purposes of this resolution, the cooperation of, the production of records and rules and regulations of, and the assistance of such personnel under the Secretary of Labor, the Secretary of State, and the Attorney General, and the services, bureaus, or offices under their respective jurisdiction, as may be deemed necessary by the committee.

The said committee shall report to the House and there shall be filed by, or in behalf of, such committee and to be deemed as parts of such committee report four bills proposing a comprehensive codification of all existing statutes, Executive orders, rules, regulations, instructions, and general orders (with such repeals, amendments, enlargements, and other changes deemed necessary by the committee) relating to each of four general subjects as follows: One bill to propose an immigration code, one bill to propose a deportation code, one bill to propose a naturalization code, and one bill to propose an expatriation code. Such bills shall provide for such proper legislative coordination as the committee may deem necessary for effective administration of the four proposed codes by the executive officers charged with the duty of enforcing the law. enforcing the law.

For the purposes of this resolution, the said committee or any subcommittee thereof is hereby authorized to sit and act at such times and places within the United States, whether the House is sitting or has recessed or has adjourned, to hold such hearings, to require the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books or papers or documents or vouchers by subpena or otherwise, to take such testimony and records, as it deems necessary. Subpenas shall be issued under the signature of the Speaker of the House at the request of the chair-man of the committee and shall be served by the Sergeant at Arms of the House or by such person or persons as may be designated by him. The chairman of the committee or any member of the committee may administer oaths to witnesses. Every person who, having been summoned as a witness by authority of said special committee or any subcommittee thereof, or having been required to produce necessary books or papers or documents or vouchers by authority of said special committee or any subcommittee thereof, willfully makes default, or who, having appeared, refuses to answer any question pertinent to the study and investigation heretofore authorized, or who fails to produce such books or papers, or documents or vouchers as required by subpenas, shall be held to the penalties provided in section 102 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. C., title 2, sec. 192), as amended. 192), as amended.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker; I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD in two particulars, first, by including a communication sent by the President to the National Aviation Forum, and, also, to include as an extension of my remarks an editorial from this afternoon's Washington Evening Star with respect to a permanent publicworks program.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the requests of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a statement of Hon. J. M. ELIZALDE, Resident Commissioner of the Philippines.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, earlier in the session I asked and secured permission to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include a communication by a number of economists. Due to pressure of work, I was unable to prepare the matter, and I now renew the request.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Idaho? There was no objection.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include a brief epistle from a constituent, Ray N. Davis.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection. Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD on the question of the New Deal aviation scandal, and to include therein brief extracts from documentary records.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. HANCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a brief quotation from a recent message by Governor Lehman to the New York State Legislature.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an article written by Mr. Fred H. Clausen, on Six Years of Job Insurance in Wisconsin, which appears in Nation's Business

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. BRADLEY of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD on the bill (H. R. 4425).

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. GORE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by including a brief resolution from the Legislature of Tennessee.
The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record on the reorganization bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and to include therein an address delivered by the Republican minority leader, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Martin], on the Republican Viewpoint over the National Broadcasting Co. National Radio Forum on March 6.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Thursday next, after the disposition of business on the Speaker's table and the legislative program of the day, I be permitted to address the House for 20 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

WILLIAM BROWNRIGG

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Speaker, on February 22 the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Hoffman] addressed the House and criticized the Attorney General in regard to the appointment of a personnel director. He used this language:

Mr. Murphy poses—and it is a pose—as a friend of the civil service. In that connection let me here quote what was said in the Times-Herald this morning by George Reilly, on the spoils system.

He then inserted an article in the Record by Mr. Reilly criticizing the appointment of Mr. William Brownrigg as Personnel Director of the Department of Justice. The article intimates that the appointment of Mr. Brownrigg was not in accordance with the civil-service law and procedure. The facts ought to be known to the House, and that is the purpose of my statement here this afternoon.

Under date of August 15, 1938, the United States Civil Service Commission announced an examination for Director of Personnel. This was given noncompetitively to those already in the Federal service and was given competitively to those not in the Federal service.

One of those taking the open competitive examination was Mr. William Brownrigg, of Lansing, Mich., who obtained a rating of 93.40 for the position of Director of Personnel. Based upon his experience and qualifications, Mr. Brownrigg attained a rating of No. 1 on the open competitive register and was certified by the Civil Service Commission to the Department of Justice on February 21, 1939.

Mr. Brownrigg was born in Michigan and graduated from the University of Michigan in 1917. He served as an enlisted man and an officer in the United States Army from 1917 to 1919, including service in the A. E. F. He has been engaged in personnel administration and related duties for a large period of the time since 1920. From 1931 to 1937 he was in charge of the staff of the State Personnel Board of the State of California in connection with the administration of the merit system, his position being chief of division of personnel and organization.

From 1937 to 1939 he has been State personnel director of the State of Michigan, installing and administering a State civil-service system in the State of Michigan government. Mr. Brownrigg has taken an active leadership in public personnel activities for many years.

Mr. Speaker, I am not personally acquainted with the Attorney General, but he needs no defense at my hands. The fact is that in making this appointment he not only followed the rules and regulations and the law relating to the appointment but he selected the No. 1 eligible on the list, who happened to be Mr. Brownrigg, of the State of Michigan. I think it ill becomes a Member of this House, because he personally dislikes an official of the Government, to misstate the facts in regard to an appointment, as was done in this case. He should have ascertained the facts before making such a charge. I am putting the facts into the Record in order to show that the Attorney General followed the law and the regulations and selected a man who in my judgment is eminently qualified for the position and will, I am quite sure, fill it to the satisfaction of all concerned.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and to include therein a joint memorial, No. 3, from the Legislature of Wyoming, having to do with two oil bills that amend the Federal Oil Leasing Act of 1920.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HORTON. Also, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to include a joint memorial from the State of Wyoming, memorializing the Congress of the United States to consider means for protecting the livestock industry which is seriously threatened by the importation of meat and meat products.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HORTON. Also, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include an editorial that appeared in the News and Courier of Charleston, S. C., entitled "In These Six Years," an editorial by a southern gentleman, giving his impression of these things that have taken place during the last 6 years. I find it very instructive, and I think it may well be worth including in the Record.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wyoming?

There was no objection.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION REFERRED

A concurrent resolution of the Senate of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S. Con. Res. 3. Concurrent resolution authorizing the Temporary National Economic Committee of the Congress to have printed for its use additional copies of all parts of its hearings held in connection with a complete study and investigation with respect to the concentration of economic power in, and financial control over, the production and distribution of goods and services; to the Committee on Printing.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, March 8, 1939, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON RIVERS AND HARBORS

The Committee on Rivers and Harbors will meet Wednesday, March 8, 1939, at 10:30 a.m., to continue hearings on H. R. 3222 and H. R. 3223, bills for the completion of the construction of the Atlantic-Gulf Ship Canal across Florida.

COMMITTEE ON IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization in room 445 of the House Office Building at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday, March 8, 1939, for the public consideration of H. R. 4100 and H. R. 4646, and on private bills H. R. 4353, H. R. 4354, H. R. 4357, and H. R. 4358.

COMMITTEE ON INDIAN AFFAIRS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Indian Affairs on Wednesday, March 8, 1939, at 10:30 a. m., for the consideration of H. R. 4535, H. R. 3367, H. R. 4403, and H. R. 4679.

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Foreign Affairs Wednesday, March 8, 1939, at 11 a.m., in the committee rooms, Capitol, for the consideration of the following: H. Res. 107—requesting the President to furnish the House of Representatives data in regard to seizure of certain American property in Mexico.

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at 10 a.m. Wednesday, March 8, 1939. Business to be considered: Railroad rate differentials.

COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries will hold public hearings in room 219, House Office Building, Washington, D. C., at 10 a. m. Thursday, March 9, 1939, on the bill (H. R. 4307) to extend the provisions of the Shipping Act, 1916, and the Intercoastal Shipping Act, 1933, to all common carriers by water in interstate commerce, and for other purposes.

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries will hold public hearings in room 219, House Office Building, Washington, D. C., at 10 a. m., on the bills and dates listed below:

Tuesday, March 14, 1939:

H. R. 180, H. R. 202, construction of a Nicaraguan Canal; H. R. 201, additional facilities for Panama Canal; H. R. 2667, construction of a Mexican Canal.

In listing the bills to be heard on March 14, 1939, House Joint Resolution 112 (Tinkham), to create a commission to study and report on the feasibility of constructing the Mexican Canal, was inadvertently omitted from the notice.

This is to advise all interested parties that House Joint Resolution 112 will be considered at that time with the following bills: H. R. 180 (IZAC), relative to the construction of a Nicaraguan Canal; H. R. 202 (BLAND), relative to the construction of a Nicaraguan Canal; H. R. 201 (BLAND), need for additional lock facilities at Panama; H. R. 2667 (TINK-HAM), relative to the construction of a Mexican Canal.

Tuesday, March 21, 1939:

H. R. 137, H. R. 980, H. R. 1674, relating to annuities for Panama Canal construction force.

Thursday, March 23, 1939:

H. R. 141, H. R. 142, H. R. 1819, miscellaneous Panama Canal bills.

Tuesday, March 28, 1939:

H. R. 197, relating to the clearance of vessels; H. R. 199, relating to the allotment of wages by seamen; H. R. 200, relating to foreign towboats towing between American ports; H. R. 1780, relating to penalties on certain undocumented vessels and cargoes engaging in the coastwise trade or the fisheries; H. R. 1782, relating to change of masters of vessels. Wednesday, March 29, 1939:

H. R. 198, relating to the measurement of vessels; and H. R. 132, authorizing the use of condemned Government vessels for breakwater purposes.

Tuesday, April 4, 1939:

H. R. 3209, making it a misdemeanor to stow away on vessels; H. R. 3398, regarding the down payment of construction of new vessels; H. R. 3935, relating to the discharge of seamen. Wednesday, April 5, 1939:

H. R. 3052, uniform insignia for Naval Reserve radio operators.

COMMITTEE ON THE PUBLIC LANDS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on the Public Lands on Wednesday, March 15, 1939, at 10 a. m., in room 328, House Office Building, to consider H. R. 3794, to establish John Muir-Kings Canyon National Park, Calif., to transfer thereto the lands now included in the General Grant National Park, and for other purposes.

There will be a meeting of the Committee on the Public Lands on Thursday, March 23, 1939, at 10 a.m., in room 328, House Office Building, to consider H. R. 3759, to authorize a National Mississippi River Parkway and matters relating thereto.

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

Beginning at 10 a.m. on Wednesday, March 22, 1939, there will be a hearing held before the Subcommittee No. 4 of the Committee on the Judiciary on House Joint Resolution 176, declaring the conservation of petroleum deposits underlying submerged lands adjacent to and along the coast of California, below low-water mark and under the territorial waters of the United States of America, essential for national defense, maintenance of the Navy, and regulation and protection of interstate and foreign commerce; reserving the same as a naval petroleum reserve, subject to any superior vested right, title, or interest; and authorizing appropriate judicial proceedings to assert, ascertain, establish, and maintain the right and interest of the United States of America in such reserve and to eject trespassers.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV a letter from the Secretary of the Navy, transmitting the draft of a proposed bill to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to grant to the city of San Diego for street purposes two parcels of land situate in the city of San Diego and State of California, was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs (H. Doc. 496).

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. BLAND: Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. H.R. 4246. A bill to authorize necessary facilities for the Coast Guard in the interest of national defense and the performance of its maritime police functions; without amendment (Rept. No. 125). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 126. Report on the disposition of records in the Federal Housing Administration. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 127. Report on the disposition of records in the United States Fuel Administration. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 128. Report on the disposition of records in the United States Maritime Commission. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 129. Report on the disposition of records of the census of partial employment, unemployment, and occupations. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 130. Report on the disposition of records in the Veterans' Administration. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 131. Report on the disposition of records in the Department of Agriculture. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 132. Report on the disposition of records of the Panama Canal. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 133. Report on the disposition of records in the Department of the Interior. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 134. Report on the disposition of records in the Department of State. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report 135. Report of the disposition of records in the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 136. Report on the disposition of records of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 137. Report on the disposition of records in the Civil Service Commission. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 138. Report on the disposition of records in the Tennessee Valley Authority. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 139. Report on the disposition of records in the Smithsonian Institution. Ordered to he printed

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 140. Report on the disposition of records in the War Department. Ordered to be

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 141. Report on the disposition of records in the Navy Department. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 142. Report on the disposition of records in the Federal Trade Commission. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 143. Report on the disposition of records in the Department of Labor. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 144. Report on the disposition of records in the Post Office Department in the custody of National Archives. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 145. Report on the disposition of records in the Farm Credit Administration. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 146. Report on the disposition of records in the Works Progress Administration. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 147. Report on the disposition of records in the Department of Commerce. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIOTT: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. House Report No. 148. Report on the disposition of records in the Post Office Department. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona: Committee on Indian Affairs. S. 876. An Act to authorize the purchase of certain lands for the Apache Tribe of the Mescalero Reservation, N. Mex.; without amendment (Rept. No. 149). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma: Committee on Indian Affairs, S. 1477. An act to repeal section 9 of the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L. 450), as amended; without amendment (Rept. No. 150). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. CURTIS: Committee on Indian Affairs. H. R. 2971. A bill for the relief of certain Indians of the Winnebago Agency; without amendment (Rept. No. 151). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. CARTWRIGHT: Committee on Indian Affairs. H. R. 3703. A bill to provide for conveying to the United States the land, buildings, and improvements comprising the Choctaw and Chickasaw Sanatorium and General Hospital; with amendment (Rept. No. 152). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma: Committee on Indian Affairs. H. R. 4117. A bill to provide for the payment of attorney's fees from Osage tribal funds; with amendment (Rept. No. 153). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. BLOOM: Committee on Foreign Affairs. S. 1523. An act to authorize the payment of burial expenses and expenses in connection with last illness and death of native employees who die while serving in offices abroad of executive departments of the United States Government; without amendment (Rept. No. 154). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. CROSSER: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 1661. A bill granting the consent of Congress to the city of Youngstown, Ohio, to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Mahoning River at or near Marshall Street, Youngstown, Ohio; without amendment (Rept. No. 155). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. CROSSER: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 1962. A bill granting the consent of Congress to the city of Youngstown, Ohio, to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Mahoning River at or near Cedar Street, Youngstown, Ohio; without amendment (Rept. No. 156). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. BOREN: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 2192. A bill to extend the time for commencing and completing bridges across Cross Bayou, Twelve Mile Bayou, and Caddo Lake in Caddo Parish, La.; with amendment (Rept. No. 157). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. CROSSER: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 2635. A bill granting the consent of Congress to Westmoreland County in the State of Pennsylvania to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway intercounty bridge and approaches across the Allegheny River, connecting Valley Camp in Westmoreland County and East Deer Township in Allegheny County, to connect State Highway Routes Nos. 28 and 56; without amendment (Rept. No. 158). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. WADSWORTH: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 2661. A bill to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the St. Lawrence River at or near Ogdensburg, N. Y.; with amendment (Rept. No. 159). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. COLMER: Committee on Rules. House resolution 115. Resolution authorizing the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization to make a thorough study of need for revision and separate codifications of laws relating to immigration, deportation, naturalization, and expatriation; without amendment (Rept. No. 160). Referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. LESINSKI: Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. H. R. 4025. A bill for the relief of John Barbu; without amendment (Rept. No. 124). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

Under clause 2 of rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of the following bills, which were referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 3342) granting a pension to Lindsay Powers; Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 4062) for the relief of Clarendon Davis; Committee on Claims discharged, and referred to the Committee on War Claims.

A bill (H. R. 4063) to authorize the payment of adjusted-compensation benefits to the estate of Lula Brimm Horne; Committee on Claims discharged, and referred to the Committee on War Claims.

A bill (H. R. 4123) for the relief of Capt. Charles E. Gerlach; Committee on Claims discharged, and referred to the Committee on War Claims.

A bill (H. R. 4257) for the relief of the estate of Bartholomew Lawler; Committee on Claims discharged, and referred to the Committee on War Claims.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. COLE of New York:

H.R. 4820 (by request). A bill to amend section 22 of an act entitled "An act to provide for the fifteenth and subsequent decennial censuses and to provide for apportionment of Representatives in Congress," approved June 18, 1929; to the Committee on the Census.

By Mr. LEAVY:

H. R. 4821. A bill to provide for the reopening of certain lands in the Colville Indian Reservation, in the State of Washington, to entry under the mineral-land laws; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. LESINSKI:

H. R. 4822. A bill to provide for the acquisition by the United States of the Grosse Ile Airport; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. DICKSTEIN:

H.R. 4823. A bill to eliminate the requirement for production of a separate manifest of Chinese passengers, and to amend other laws in accordance therewith; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. CLARK:

H. R. 4824. A bill to authorize a preliminary examination and survey of the Lumber River and its tributaries in the States of North Carolina and South Carolina for flood control, for run-off and water-flow retardation, and for soilerosion prevention; to the Committee on Flood Control.

By Mr. DINGELL:

H. R. 4825. A bill to provide for the payment to any person employed in the Postal Service as a special-delivery messenger, during the fiscal years 1933, 1934, or 1935, of the amount by which the fees of such person were reduced pursuant to the economy legislation; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. HANCOCK:

H. R. 4826. A bill to prohibit United States district attorneys and marshals, and their assistants, from the private practice of the law; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LEA:

H.R. 4827. A bill to amend the Interstate Commerce Act by adding a new part III, to be known as the Forwarding Carrier Act; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. SUMNERS of Texas:

H. R. 4828. A bill to amend the law limiting the operation of statutes of limitations in certain cases; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. TREADWAY:

H.R. 4829. A bill to authorize the construction of flood-control works on the Hoosic River, N. Y., Vt., and Mass.; to the Committee on Flood Control.

By Mr. COCHRAN:

H.R. 4830. A bill to amend the act approved April 27, 1937, entitled "An act to simplify accounting"; to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

By Mr. MURRAY:

H.R. 4831. A bill authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to pay salaries and expenses of the chairman, secretary, and interpreter of the Menominee General Council, members of the Menominee Advisory Council, and official delegates of the Menominee Tribe; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. CLASON:

H. R. 4832. A bill for the protection of the bald eagle; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. COLMER:

H. R. 4833. A bill to revise the method of determining the payments to be made by the United States to the several States with respect to conservation lands subject to the jurisdiction of the Department of Agriculture; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. BUCK:

H. R. 4834. A bill to amend the Social Security Act with respect to the meaning of the term "agricultural labor"; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. JONES of Texas:

H. R. 4835. A bill to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended; to the Committee on Agriculture.

H. R. 4836. A bill to amend section 12 of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. FULMER:

H. Con. Res. 11. Concurrent resolution continuing the Special Joint Committee on Forestry; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. SCHULTE:

H. Res. 115. Resolution authorizing the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization to make a thorough study of need for revision and separate codifications of laws relating to immigration, deportation, naturalization, and expatriation; to the Committee on Rules.

MEMORIALS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, memorials were presented and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Montana, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their Senate Joint Memorial No. 14, with reference to enacting silicosis compensation laws; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BREWSTER:

H.R. 4837. A bill for the relief of Amanda R. Nadeau; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CLUETT:

H.R. 4838. A bill granting a pension to Helen I. Velie; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. D'ALESANDRO:

H. R. 4839. A bill granting a pension to Lucy Pierce; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DEMPSEY:

H. R. 4840. A bill for the relief of William C. Wood; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HAVENNER:

H. R. 4841. A bill granting the retired pay and allowances commensurate with the rank and grade of lieutenant colonel to Edmund Sears Sayer, United States Marine Corps, retired; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland:

H. R. 4842. A bill for the relief of Katie Goldberg and Jesse Fine, trustees under the last will and testament of Morris Goldberg, deceased; to the Committee on Claims.

H. R. 4843. A bill to confer jurisdiction on the Court of Claims of the United States to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of John L. Alcock; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. MURDOCK of Utah:

H. R. 4844. A bill for the relief of Royal Terry, Chris Larsen, Joe Pargis, and S. L. Hinckley; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. PETERSON of Florida:

H. R. 4845. A bill for the relief of Harriet T. Johnston; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. SOMERS of New York:

H. R. 4846. A bill for the relief of John Buturuga and Norah Buturuga; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. TALLE:

H. R. 4847. A bill for the relief of Leland J. Belding; to the Committee on Claims.

H. R. 4848. A bill granting an increase of pension to Maggie B. Gunsalus; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WADSWORTH:

H. R. 4849. A bill granting a pension to Mary E. Allen; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WOODRUFF of Michigan:

H. R. 4850. A bill for the relief of Thomas J. Haffey; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

1590. By Mr. ALLEN of Louisiana: Petition of sundry citizens of Winn Parish, La., urging the passage of House bill 1816, providing a direct Federal old-age pension of $30 per month, beginning at the age of 60; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1591. By Mr. BURCH: Petition of Fred W. Greene, W. L. Benazzi, W. T. Petty, George W. Cole, and numerous other citizens, of Danville, Va., petitioning the Congress, for as long as we shall adhere to the general policy as enunciated in the act of August 31, 1935, to retain on our statute books the further and corollary principle enunciated in the act of May 1, 1937, extending the original act to include civil as well as international conflicts and urging that Congress launch an investigation of those leftist groups which are sponsoring propaganda favoring lifting of the embargo on arms to "red" Spain; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1592. By Mr. CASE of South Dakota: Petition urging consideration of Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 10, relating to the distribution of food commodities by Federal relief agencies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1593. By Mr. FISH: Petition signed by Rev. Walter C. McClurkin, of Walden, N. Y., and 35 other citizens of Orange County, N. Y., in favor of the passage of legislation which will stop the advertising, by press and radio, of alcoholic beverages for sale; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

1594. Also, petition signed by Rev. Philip Goertz, pastor, Garden Memorial Presbyterian Church, of Washington, D. C., and 37 members and friends of his congregation, protesting the passage of House bill 101, which would include church employees under the provisions of the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1595. By Mr. GERLACH: Petitions of sundry citizens of Bucks County, Pa., urging retention on the statute books of the Neutrality Act of May 1, 1937, and extension of the act to include civil as well as international conflicts; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1596. By Mr. GUYER of Kansas: Petition of citizens of Allen County, Kans., urging the enactment of legislation prohibiting the sale of raw materials capable of being used as munitions of war to aggressor nations, and particularly to Japan; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1597. By Mr. HART: Petition of the First Baptist Church, Union City, N. J., opposing amendment to the Social Security Act so as to include religious bodies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1598. Also, petition of the session and the board of trustees of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, of Jersey City, N. J., opposing amendment to the Social Security Act to include religious bodies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1599. By Mr. HAVENNER: Petition of the Board of Supervisors of the City and County of San Francisco, expressing opposition to the proposal now before the Congress to tax municipal bonds; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1600. By Mr. JENKINS of Ohio: Petition by 1,000 subscribers of the Meigs United Telephone Co. of Meigs County, Ohio, requesting Congress to vote for the passage of House bill 3842, an amendment to the Fair Labor Standards Act, to exempt telephone exchanges of 1,000 subscribers or less; to the Committee on Labor.

1601. By Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON: Petition of Rev. Herman G. McCoy, pastor, Central Presbyterian Church, Waxahachie, Tex., opposing the amending of the Social Security Act so as to include disabled and retired ministers; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1602. By Mr. JOHNSON of Illinois: Petition of 150 endorsers of House bill 11, from the Fourteenth Illinois District, urging enactment of this measure; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1603. By Mr. MICHAEL J. KENNEDY: Memorial of the New York State Board of Housing, urging support of a bill to amend the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, to the effect that there be enacted by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States a law that the United States Housing Authority be authorized to issue and sell its obligations in an amount not to exceed $800,000,000 in addition to the amount of such obligations heretofore authorized by the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, and to enter into contracts which provide for annual contributions aggregating not more than $45,000,000 per annum in addition to the contracts heretofore authorized by the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

1604. By Mr. SCHIFFLER: Petition of Rev. George Mc-Pherson Hunter, First Presbyterian Church, Mannington, W. Va., urging that ministers be excluded from the provisions of the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means 1605. By Mr. KEOGH: Petition of Washington Irving Schools, Tarrytown, N. Y., concerning the Federal aid education bill; to the Committee on Education.

1606. Also, petition of the united telephone organizations, New York City, concerning the Social Security Act and the benefits derived from their own pension system; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1607. Also, petition of Pikeville city schools, Pikeville, Ky., concerning House bill 3517 and Senate bill 1305; to the Committee on Education.

1608. By Mr. LAMBERTSON: Petition of Mrs. Mary E. Vogan and 51 other Atchison citizens, urging the President of the United States and Congress, in accordance with the principle of the good neighbor and in the interests of the people of the United States, to bring an end to the traffic which is compelling us to be a partner in the destruction of the Chinese people; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1609. Also, petition of Harry F. Boyer and 56 other letter carriers, of Topeka, Kans., requesting passage of House bill 3812, eliminating Saturday from annual vacation and sick leave; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

1610. Also, petition of F. W. Arnold and 21 other members of the First Presbyterian Church, of Vermillion, Kans., urging nonpassage of the bill introduced to cancel the amendments to the Social Security Act which exclude persons employed in the service of nonprofit organizations, religious, charitable, and educational; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1611. Also, petition of Owen Russell and 29 other members of the First Presbyterian Church, of Axtell, Kans., urging nonpassage of the bill introduced to cancel the amendments to the Social Security Act which exclude persons employed in the service of nonprofit organizations, religious, charitable, and educational; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1612. By Mr. LANDIS: Petition of certain citizens of Vincennes, Ind., protesting the sale of munitions to Japan during the invasion of China; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1613. By Mr. PIERCE of Oregon: Petition of the Oregon State Legislature, urging consideration of Senate Joint Memorial 1, favoring Senate ratification of reciprocal-trade agreements; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1614. By Mr. PITTENGER: Petition of Ida Torseth, of Virginia, Minn., president and sponsor of the National Old Age Retirement Grant Association, together with sundry accompanying documents; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1615. By Mr. POLK: Petition of the Church of Christ in Christian Union, of Portsmouth, Ohio, signed by its pastor, Rev. Lester C. Benner, and 26 members, opposing the recommendation of the Social Security Advisory Council that religious bodies of our country be no longer exempt from taxation for old-age pensions and unemployment compensation; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1616. By Mr. ROUTZOHN: Petition of the Farmers' Freedom League of America, seeking repeal of the Compulsory Crop Control Act of 1938 and the banning of importation of farm products to the United States; to the Committee on Agriculture.

1617. Also, petition of 2,008 residents of the United States Veterans' Administration facility at Dayton, Ohio, praying for adequate and equitable compensation for disabled veterans of the World War; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1618. By Mr. SABATH: Petition of the Sixty-first General Assembly of the State of Illinois, urging the playing of the annual football contest for the season 1939 between the teams of the Army and Navy cadets to be held in the city of Chicago; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

1619. By Mr. SANDAGER: Memorial of the Lincoln Social Club, advocating the erection of a veterans' hospital in Rhode Island; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

1620. By Mr. SECCOMBE: Petition of G. M. Whetstone, of Minerva, Ohio, and other railroad engineers and firemen of that community, urging the enactment of legislation limiting the mileage of railroad engineers and firemen to 2,600 miles per month; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

1621. Also, petition of employees of Berger Division, Republic Steel Corporation, Canton, Ohio, commending Congressman Seccombe upon his proposal to introduce legislation prohibiting the employment of married couples in Government activities; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

SENATE

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 8, 1939

The Chaplain, Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O God, who art the Source of being, the Light of all that is true, the Strength of all that is good, and the Glory of all that is lovely: Speak to us now as we turn aside from the ceaseless fret of life; stay time's busy shuttle for a moment, that we may watch the pattern it is weaving, and learn something of the mysteries of being as we hush our wandering thoughts.

Lead us by Thy love into fuller light and to more glorious life, for we are tired of twilight, falsehood, and the easy way. Help us to emulate the perfect life that Jesus lived beneath the Syrian sky, that, with helping hands outstretched to bless in time of need and glowing hearts attuned to His most holy purpose, we, at the close of day, may find rest unto our souls through the mercy of Him whose yoke we have taken upon us and in whose name we pray. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. Barkley, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Tuesday, March 7, 1939, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Calloway, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House insisted upon its amendment to Senate amendment No. 13 to the bill (H. R. 2868) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for other purposes; that the House further insisted upon its disagreement to Senate amendment No. 23 to the bill, agreed to the further conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. Taylor of Colorado, Mr. Woodrum of Virginia, Mr. Cannon of Missouri, Mr. Ludlow, Mr. Thomas S. McMillan, Mr. Snyder, Mr. O'Neal, Mr. Johnson of West Virginia, Mr. Taber, Mr. Wig-GLESWORTH, Mr. LAMBERTSON, and Mr. DITTER were appointed managers on the part of the House at the further conference.

The message also announced that the House further insisted upon its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate Nos. 17 and 18 to the bill (H. R. 3743) making appropriations for the Executive Office and sundry independent executive bureaus, boards, commissions, and offices, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes, agreed to the further conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia, Mr. Johnson of Oklahoma, Mr. Fitz-patrick, Mr. Houston, Mr. Starnes of Alabama, Mr. Wigglesworth, Mr. Dirksen, and Mr. Case of South Dakota were appointed managers on the part of the House at the further conference.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I do not wish to upset the routine, but I am very anxious to get the floor before the Senate begins the consideration of the calendar so that I may make a few short remarks on the activities of the United States Housing Authority.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will take cognizance of the Senator's desire.

PETITION

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the Northern California Public Health Association at Sacramento, Calif., favoring an appropriation of $5,000,000 for the United States Public Health Service, fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, for investigation and control of venereal diseases as authorized in the act of May 24, 1938, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the Chair state the situation, as he is trying to protect the Senator from Maryland. The Senator from Maryland has asked unanimous consent that he may address the Senate at this time. Is there objection?

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, will the Chair recognize the assistant "whip," the Senator from Indiana—

The VICE PRESIDENT. Just a moment. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Maryland that he may address the Senate at this time? The Chair hears none.

Mr. LEWIS and Mr. MINTON addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will recognize any Senator to whom the Senator from Maryland may yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LEWIS. The assistant "whip" desires to suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. MINTON. Will the Senator from Maryland yield in order that I may suggest the absence of a quorum?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield for the purpose of the Senator suggesting the absence of a quorum.

Mr. MINTON. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Danaher	La Follette	Reed
Andrews	Davis	Lee	Reynolds
Ashurst	Donahey	Lewis	Russell
Austin	Ellender	Lodge	Schwartz
Bailey	Frazier	Logan	Schwellenbach
Bankhead	George	Lucas	Sheppard
Barbour	Gerry	Lundeen	Shipstead
Barkley	Gibson	McCarran	Smathers
Bilbo	Gillette	McKellar	Smith
Bone	Glass	McNary	Taft
Borah	Green	Maloney	Thomas, Okla.
Bridges	Guffey	Mead	Thomas, Utah
Brown	Gurney	Miller	Tobey
Bulow	Harrison	Minton	Townsend
Burke	Hatch	Murray	Truman
Byrd	Hayden	Neely	Tydings
Byrnes	Herring	Norris	Van Nuys
Capper	Hill	Nye	Wagner
Caraway	Holman	O'Mahoney	Walsh
Connally	King	Radcliffe	A SECTION OF THE PARTY OF THE P
Chavez Clark, Idaho Clark, Mo.	Hughes Johnson, Calif. Johnson, Colo.	Overton Pepper Pittman	Wheeler White Wiley

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from California [Mr. Downey] and the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Holt] are detained from the Senate because of illness.

The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Stewart] is absent on important public business.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Ninety-one Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

UNITED STATES HOUSING AUTHORITY

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, in 1937 the Congress passed and the President approved an act to create the United States Housing Authority. It became the law of the land on September 1, 1937.

The purpose of this act was declared in its title, as follows:

To provide financial assistance to the States and political subdivisions thereof for the elimination of unsafe and insanitary housing conditions, for the eradication of slums, for the provision of decent, safe, and sanitary dwellings for families of low income, and for the reduction of unemployment and the stimulation of business activity, to create a United States Housing Authority, and for other purposes.

In sum, the purposes of the act were declared to be, first, the eradication of slums and unsafe and insanitary housing conditions; second, replacing these undesirable human habitations by modern apartment buildings. These two worthy objectives were to be obtained by "financial assistance to the States and political subdivisions thereof" from the Treasury of the United States.

It is safe to assume that there is not a person in America who is not in thorough sympathy with the fine and humanitarian aims set forth in this law. It sounds both impressive and progressive. The elimination of disreputable dwellings, of unsafe and insanitary apartment houses, the tearing down of slums and replacing them with suitable living quarters for the people of the country is very appealing.

With such worthy objectives it was easy to attract popular support for this project, particularly when, as stated in the act, there was to be a "reduction of unemployment and the stimulation of business activity" at one and the same time.

The method by which all this was to be accomplished was not closely scrutinized. The law itself was drawn to confer wide powers upon the United States Housing Authority, which was the agency created in the law to do the job.

In effect Congress said, "We authorize the United States Housing Authority to eliminate the slums in the big cities of the Nation, and to build in their places safe, sanitary, and substantial houses." The means and methods of doing this were sketchily defined; and thus the United States Housing Authority was pretty much left to its own means and methods to accomplish the desired result.

Those who read the act at the time it was pending before Congress noted that it covered 13½ closely printed pages; and it seemed apparent to many at the time it was enacted into law that few Members of Congress really knew just how all of this was to be done.

Having declared that Congress wanted slums eliminated, having declared that Congress wanted unsafe and insanitary dwellings torn down, having indicated that Congress wanted new, safe, and livable houses to take the place of the unsightly and disreputable structures for human habitation, Congress provided $500,000,000 to do the job, and then left it up to the United States Housing Authority to work out the details.

In the 18 months since the act became effective, the United States Housing Authority has been engaged in this work. We have its latest report, issued on December 22, 1938, just 2 months ago. We can now begin to see the method followed by the United States Housing Authority in doing its work

I pass over the fact that Congress did not define the policy which was to actuate the United States Housing Authority in its endeavors. This, in my judgment, was a serious and unpardonable error. In reality, we conferred our own legislative power upon the United States Housing Authority; for the act was drawn so broadly that almost any plan which the United States Housing Authority thought feasible could be employed by it to eradicate the slums.

As I see it, as the act is now written and as it is now being administered, the Government of the United States of America has launched upon the greatest scheme of state socialism it has ever entered into. It seems to me to be on the Russian model. While undoubtedly accomplishing some of the objectives set forth in the act, it is creating disadvantages and burdens for the remaining poorly housed of the Nation to an extent almost unbelievable.

Up to the present time the far-reaching consequences of the United States Housing Act are comprehended by very few. Like many other recent acts of the Congress with noble declared objectives, at the time of its enactment there was little opposition to the method proposed. Now, after it has had its trial, more and more persons are beginning to question the wisdom of the method employed.

Do the people of America know, for example, that the families now living in the slums or in unsafe and insanitary houses are to be rehoused in new, modern, high-priced apartment buildings which cost more per family unit than the average house of the average American family?

Do the people of America know that those who will live in these new Government-financed houses will be exempt, in whole or in part, from their proportionate share of local taxation?

Do the people of America know that a part of the rent of those who will live in these Government-financed houses which supplant slums is to be paid by the Government of the United States under contract for a period of 60 years in the future?

Do the people of the United States know that in essence these houses are to be built by the Government of the United States and given to the cities of America free of any construction costs whatsoever, together with an additional sum of money, so that the city will really make a profit by accepting this free gift from the National Government?

Of course, the people of America do not know this. Indeed, it is my belief that many Members of Congress do not know it, and that, if all did know it, both the people and the Congress would demand that the act be redrawn and its entire philosophy changed.

Now let me resort to facts to prove my contentions, to point out what is now going on in the United States Housing Authority.

The United States Housing Authority, as you will recall, was empowered to borrow $500,000,000 in the name of the United States Government, and then to "lend" this sum to States and cities of the United States for the purpose of tearing down unsafe and insanitary houses and slums, and rebuilding in their stead substantial, safe, and sanitary houses, the lowest-income groups in any community to be given first preference in occupying these new quarters.

So far, 141 apartment houses in 22 States of the Nation, the District of Columbia, and Hawaii have been contracted for and are being constructed under the United States Housing Authority. The total cost of these 141 apartment houses, which will provide living quarters for 64,431 families, will be $356,695,341, or an average cost per apartment house of $2,529,045. This gives us an average cost of $5,520 for each family unit in these new apartment houses supplanting the slums.

According to another agency of our Government, whose activities are wholly confined to insuring private homes—that is, the Federal Housing Administration—the average cost of the average American home lived in by the average American family today is $5,384.

Thus, the families who will occupy the new apartment houses replacing the slums, and built at Federal Government expense, will live in apartments which cost $136 more than does the average house occupied by the average American family today.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Glass in the chair). Does the Senator from Maryland yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes; I yield.

Mr. KING. I am not sure that I properly understood one of the observations of the Senator. Is $2,000,000 plus the cost of each apartment house?

Mr. TYDINGS. The average cost per apartment house is $2.529.045.

Mr. KING. I want to say that that is a most extravagant price.

Mr. TYDINGS. If the Senator will bear with me, that is only a start of the extravagance, and, in my judgment, the most wasteful method that can be conceived of doing what might be a very forthright thing to do.

Moreover, by the contracts entered into between the United States Housing Authority and the cities of America, these new apartment houses supplanting the slums and, consequently, the families that will live in them, are to be exempted in whole or in part from local taxation.

But that is not all. The United States Housing Authority—and that means the Government of the United States—has made contracts with each of the cities where this work is under way, providing that a part of the rent of each family residing in the apartment houses which supplant the slums is to be paid out of the Treasury of the United States. These are all facts, and they are very salient facts.

Why, you may ask, does the Government propose to pay a part of the rent of each family occupying these apartments? Because of the high cost of the buildings—a cost not originally contemplated—it is impossible to obtain sufficient rental from the low-income groups to make the buildings self-liquidating, or even self-supporting. If a rental were charged sufficient to amortize the high cost of the apartment building, it would be very far beyond the means of this low-income group to pay.

Thus, in sum, we have the following spectacle: First, in the new apartment houses supplanting the slums, the families housed therein will be living in quarters which cost more to build than does the average American home. Second, these families will be exempt, in whole or in part, from their proportionate share of local taxation. Third, these families are to have a large part of their rent paid by the Federal Government for a period of 60 years in the future.

Let me refer further to the report, issued December 22, 1938, wherein the United States Housing Authority, referring to its contracts with the cities where the apartment houses are to be constructed, states it has guaranteed to pay to these cities, for a period of 60 years, the sum of $13,864,364 each year. In exchange for this money, the municipalities are to exempt in whole or in part the Government apartment houses from all or a large part of all local taxes. Further, the municipalities are to charge the occupants of the new apartment houses, not rentals on an ordinary rental basis, which would retire the cost of constructing the apartments, but a rental far below such a figure.

Note that the rents to be paid by the United States Government over the 60-year period on these 141 projects will amount to $831,861,840, according to the figures of the United States Housing Authority report. This is approximately two and one-half times the original cost of erecting these apartment houses. In other words, according to the contracts the Housing Authority has already made, and taking their own figures, the annual rent subsidies over a period of 60 years will take from the Federal Treasury two and a half times as much as the apartment houses cost to build in the first instance.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Is there any interest on the amount of money figured in that statement?

Mr. TYDINGS. I think I will come to that in my remarks later, but I will answer the question now. The Federal Government, first of all, lends to the cities 90 percent of the cost of these apartment houses. The cities are to pay that back annually; but the Federal Government gives to the cities each year a rent subsidy not only sufficient to pay back the annual amount due plus interest but also to pay off the local contribution and to leave a sum of money over as profit. Does that answer the Senator's question?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Yes.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. Did the Senator state that the average citizens of the United States, the average home owners and taxpayers, are building houses for the low-income group which are better than the house in which they themselves live, and then as taxpayers they are to pay a substantial part of the rent of the houses which they build?

Mr. TYDINGS. It is even worse than that, for Mr. Stewart McDonald's organization, which is the Federal Housing Authority, shows that the average house in America today which is insured by that agency of the Government costs less than the house which is being built by the United States Housing Authority. Furthermore, these houses which are better than the average of all the American homes are to be exempt, in whole or in part, from all local taxation, and for 60 years in the future the occupants of such houses are to have a part of their rent paid by the Treasury of the United States under contracts already entered into.

Mr. ADAMS. If I may ask another question, what is the mechanics by which the houses so built are exempted from local taxation?

Mr. TYDINGS. At the time the city comes to the United States Housing Authority and says, "We desire to clear our slums and build some up-to-date houses to take their places," the Housing Authority compels the city to make what are called local contributions, which usually take the form of exempting the property from taxation.

Mr. ADAMS. The title is vested in the city or in some municipal organization?

Mr. TYDINGS. The United States Housing Authority in the city, in Denver, St. Louis, Lexington, Ky., or wherever the houses are built.

Mr. ADAMS. Then the title is in some quasi-public corporation?

Mr. TYDINGS. Absolutely. In effect we are actually giving all the money to build these houses because we give the cities each year more than the cities have obligated themselves to pay back to the Federal Treasury, so that they not only have sufficient to meet all their annual payments to the Treasury but, in addition, have enough left over to take care of their own local part and a profit besides.

In other words, I have pointed out, from Mr. Straus' own figures, that the cost of these 141 houses is three-hundred-and-fifty-six-million-and-some-odd-thousand dollars, but the rent subsidy on the same houses is eight hundred and some million dollars, which is two and a half times as much as the completed houses cost to build in the first instance.

I am taking every figure I utter about each one of the projects from this very voluminous report [exhibiting] issued by the United States Housing Authority on the 22d of December last year, which was 60 days ago, approximately.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. BYRD. What is the average cost per unit?

Mr. TYDINGS. Per family unit?

Mr. BYRD. Per family unit.

Mr. TYDINGS. I will give the Senator that figure. Let me quote it exactly. The average cost per family unit is $5,520, and the average cost of the average American home built without any Government assistance is $5,384. So that it costs the United States Housing Authority to build these houses for the low-income group approximately $180 more than the home in which an average American family lives today.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. KING. And the average American family not only owns the bricks, and the mortar, and the roof, constituting the home, but the ground upon which it is built, plus, in most instances, a plot of ground constituting the garden.

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes; and the average American family living in such a home as the Senator describes pays its full share of the local taxes, and does not have any of its rent contributed from the Federal Treasury at all, whereas those who live in the slum-clearance houses will have part of the contract paid for 60 years in the future, and will be exempt in whole or in part from local taxation.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. LOGAN. There is one point the Senator makes which I do not understand clearly; namely, that the houses which he is discussing are exempt from local taxation, State, county, and city taxation. Has the Senator made a study of that sufficient to enable him to advise what the power is in the city to exempt from taxation? In my State, I may say, I know there is a provision in its constitution that all property shall be subject to taxation. That cannot be waived by the United States Government, by the city, or by any other government.

Mr. TYDINGS. Let me look at the report for the Senator's State. Of course, the laws vary in different communities. There might in some be prohibitions which would not apply in the others.

Mr. LOGAN. That is true.

Mr. TYDINGS. In the Senator's State there are five projects under way, one in Covington, one in Frankfort, one in Lexington, and two in Louisville.

Mr. LOGAN. And now one in Paducah.

Mr. TYDINGS. Under the head of "Local Annual Contributions" I find the following for the State of Kentucky:

Note 10.—Local annual contributions are maximum amounts computed on the proposed development cost plus the margin of safety one-tenth for possible overruns. Local annual contributions are required by law to be at least 20 percent of Federal annual contributions. In all cases, the local annual contributions provided in contracts are much in excess of this minimum, averaging 65 percent of the above projects. Local annual contributions represent the value of exemptions from local taxes less payments in lieu of taxes, if any.

It may be that in order to get around the law of the Senator's State prohibiting any property from being exempt, the municipality of Louisville, for instance, may take from the other taxpayers a sufficient sum of money and hand it over to the Federal Government to be the equivalent of an exemption of the particular house which the Government is building.

Mr. LOGAN. That might be true, but in my State the only property exempt from taxation is written into the constitution of the State itself.

Mr. TYDINGS. Let me read again the last sentence from what I just read:

Local annual contributions represent the value of exemptions from local taxes less payments in lieu of taxes, if any.

So payments could be made by the city from the general treasury in lieu of exemption of taxes to the Housing Authority, so that they could hand the money back.

Mr. LOGAN. I think that must be what is done.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is the way it is being done, but the net result is, either by direct or indirect action, that the houses are exempt in whole or in part from local taxation.

Now let me refer to the report issued December 22, 1938, wherein the United States Housing Authority, referring to its contracts with the cities where the apartment houses are to be constructed, states it has guaranteed to pay to these cities for 60 years in the future the sum of $13,864,364 each year.

In exchange for this money, the municipalities are to exempt in whole or in part the Government apartment houses from all or a large part of all local taxes. Further, the municipalities are to charge the occupants of the new apartment houses, not rentals on an ordinary rental basis, which would retire the cost of constructing the apartments, but rentals far below such a figure, and insufficient to pay off the cost of the building. The rent subsidy to be paid by the United States Government over the 60-year period on the 141 projects to which I have referred, will amount to $831,-861,840, but the original cost was only $356,000,000, and therefore the Federal Government is going to give back to the municipalities two and one-half times what the original buildings cost.

I hope I make that clear.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I did not wish to interrupt earlier the Senator's very interesting argument and statement; but, as I understand, the advantages he refers to go not only to municipalities but to certain selected individuals. It is perfectly obvious that the Government of the United States will not be able to afford living quarters to everyone in the lower-income brackets, or even to everyone in the average-income brackets, without bankrupting the Government. Who makes the selection of the individuals who are to enjoy those Government subsidies?

Mr. TYDINGS. I shall answer the Senator in this way: First of all to take care of the 8,000,000 who are underhoused would cost $45,000,000,000. That is what it would cost to carry out this program, just the net construction cost, without any rent subsidies. It would add $45,000,000,000 more to the national debt.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Who makes the selections out of the many of the few families who are going to enjoy these privileges? That is what I should like to ascertain.

Mr. TYDINGS. The selections are made by the local housing authority, such as the St. Louis Housing Authority or the Baltimore Housing Authority. The houses are supposed to go to the lowest-income group in the community, but it has been proven in many cases that political influence dictates who shall be the occupants rather than their economic status.

Mr. WAGNER. Where was the political influence used to which the Senator referred?

Mr. TYDINGS. Permit me to read a chart, and then I will let the Senator draw his own conclusion. The chart I exhibit is a suppressed chart. I have one of the four copies which are outside the United States Housing Authority. I have the letter written by the Secretary asking that it be locked up, as it contained much information which they thought ought not to be circularized at this time, and the charts were all gathered up and locked up in the office safe.

This is the chart [exhibiting]. These figures cover the houses which were built by P. W. A. before the Housing Authority was created, such as Greenbelt and other places throughout the country. They, too, were built for the low-income group. The chart shows what income groups occupy the houses.

For example, about 100 families making around $500 a year live in these houses [indicating].

Three hundred and seventy-five families making $650 a year live in these houses.

Seven hundred and seventy-five families making $1,000 a year live in these houses

One thousand two hundred and sixty families making $850 a year live in these houses.

One thousand nine hundred families making $975 a year live in these houses.

Two thousand one hundred families making $1,150 a year live in these houses.

Three thousand two hundred families making more than $1,200 a year and less than $1,300 a year live in these houses.

One thousand seven hundred families making more than $1,320 and less than $1,440 a year live in these houses.

One thousand four hundred families making more than $1,440 a year and less than $1,560 live in these houses.

Five hundred families making more than $1,600 a year and less than $1,800 a year live in these houses.

Five hundred families making more than $1,800 and less than $1,920 a year live in these houses.

Two hundred families making more than $1,920 and less than $2,240 live in these houses.

One hundred families making between $2,000 and $2,160 a year live in these houses.

Fifty families making between $2,160 and $2,280 a year live in these houses.

And 25 families making $2,400 a year live in these houses. These houses were to be built for families making $60, $70, and $80 per month, or $720, $840, and $960 a year. It is only fair to say that at the time these houses were constructed there was no particular designated limitation or direct authorization to that effect contained in the law. The houses in question were constructed before the United States Housing Authority was created. I mention it, however, merely to show that families making $2,400 a year find their way into these Government houses built for the very poor, that families making $1,800 a year found their way into these houses, and notwithstanding that many of them are built near large and congested cities, fairly well-to-do families live in them

Senators, so long as that point has been raised, let us get down to hard facts. If an apartment costs $5,540, which is the average cost of one of these family units constructed under the United States Housing Authority programs, how much rent would have to be received a year in order that the apartment could carry itself? Remember, by their own statement it costs an average of $5,540 per family unit. In general real-estate practice one would have to get a return of 10 percent, which would be $554 a year. If a 10-percent return is required, how can a man making $60 a month, or $720 a year, afford to pay on an apartment rent which amounts to $554 a year, and leaves him about 50 cents a day to feed and clothe his wife and children?

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. The Senator made a statement to the effect that in 60 years it would cost the United States two and a half times the original cost.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is correct.

Mr. WALSH. Before proceeding to other aspects of this question, will the Senator amplify that? Will he state just what he means?

Mr. TYDINGS. I will explain that to the Senator.

Mr. WALSH. In connection with what the Senator just said, will he show for the RECORD whether all the families he referred to receiving various incomes, as set forth by the Senator, were given a subsidy?

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes; they all received it. This report will be placed in the RECORD. Since I read the report I have added the entire cost of the apartment houses which are being built. The calculation showed that about $351,000,000 would be spent to build these 141 apartment houses. Then I added the annual Federal subsidy for each year, and the figures showed that the annual Federal subsidy was over $13,000,000 a year. By multiplying the annual subsidy by 60 years, which is the time the subsidy contract would run, it amounts to eight-hundred-and-some-odd million dollars; and as the houses cost only three-hundred-and-some-odd million dollars to build, it is obvious that the rent subsidy over a 60year period is two and one-half times the initial cost of the buildings in the first instance.

Mr. WALSH. I thank the Senator. The Senator is very probably making the distinction which everyone must have in mind in connection with the housing problem, which is that it was first undertaken by a bureau in the Interior Department before we passed the United States Housing Authority Act.

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. The housing projects under the Department of the Interior were undertaken without any congressional authority whatever.

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. And there was some doubt about the constitutional authority. The President allocated a large sum of money for the building of houses on the theory that it would give employment to craftsmen in the building trades. Am I correct in that statement?

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. Will the Senator agree that no one now claims that those undertakings had any definite or special relationship or association with slum clearance, as the average citizen thinks in terms of slum clearance, which means housing people who live in slums?

Mr. TYDINGS. That is correct.

Mr. WALSH. That the people who went in to occupy and who are now occupying these places, in order to become tenants, had to have an income which was sufficient to pay the rent the Government fixed; and the rent, because of the high cost of building, was such that the ordinary workingman could not pay it even after we passed legislation reducing the rents to be levied by charging off 40 percent of the capital cost. Am I correct in that statement?

Mr. TYDINGS. That statement is substantially correct. except that it was shown that the average cost of some of these houses-that is, the cost of house and grounds and everything that went into it-was around $15,000 per family unit. But, of course, they are occupied by people with incomes of $1,800 to $2,000 a year, in some cases, so what the Federal Government did was simply to disregard the initial cost and get as much rent as it could, which was away below the income necessary to carry the cost any further.

Mr. WALSH and Mr. CLARK of Missouri addressed the Chair.

Mr. TYDINGS. I should like to state to both Senators that in my remarks later on many of the points which are being discussed will be taken up in detail.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. So we are in the position of already being committed to pay for 60 years a subsidy to a limited number of families.

Mr. TYDINGS. To some 64,431 families.

Mr. WALSH. I should like to have the Senator point out to us what change, if any, has taken place in the granting of the subsidy and the class of persons to whom it is being granted under the Housing Act.

Mr. TYDINGS. I think I shall answer many such questions as I go along.

Mr. WALSH. I thank the Senator.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LEE in the chair). Does the Senator from Maryland yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. TYDINGS. Will the Senator let me proceed for a few minutes? I feel that as I break down the figures I shall probably clarify what up to now has been a general statement.

Mr. WAGNER. If the Senator will bear with me, there is one distinction, that I am not sure was clearly made, between the method of paying subsidies under the United States Housing Authority and the subsidy which was provided for the houses to which the Senator from Massachusetts referred, which were built under the National Recovery Act. In those cases no annual subsidies are provided.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is correct.
Mr. WAGNER. The Senator understands that.

Mr. TYDINGS. I tried to make that clear.
Mr. WAGNER. They were not built under any regulations provided by Congress.

Mr. TYDINGS. No. The chart I read shows the old houses, not the new houses built under the United States Housing Authority. I cited the illustration simply to show what had taken place in the past. Many of the houses are not yet occupied. They are in course of construction. However, I am pointing out the danger of what has happened in the past. Families of relatively high income desire to get into the houses, and the whole point of the program will be missed if that is permitted in the future. I have not yet charged the United States Housing Authority with such

Mr. WAGNER. This is not the first time the Senator has opposed the program of social service under the Housing Act. The Senator recognizes a great distinction between the houses built under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the

Mr. TYDINGS. I have so stated four or five times, Mr. President. I have just stated that there was no restriction in connection with the houses used in the illustration.

Mr. WAGNER. Exactly.

Mr. TYDINGS. And that so far the Federal Housing Authority has not completed houses in any great number as to which such a thing could be done. However, I wish to say to the Senator that I never felt more secure than I do today in my opposition to the proposal which the Senator sponsored. I have already proved that the living quarters being built under the program cost more per family unit than does the average home now occupied by the average American family. I have already proved by the figures of the Housing Authority itself that the rent subsidy of over 60 years will cost two and a half times as much as the original cost of the building. I have already proved that all the other poor people in America will have to contribute extra taxes to take the place of the taxes which are excused to the few poor people who live in these buildings, and that those in the houses will be living on a plane far beyond that of the average American family.

I shall go further into detail. If the Senator had accepted some of the protecting amendments which were offered on the floor of the Senate, we should not today be in such a sorry state, and there would not have been the extravagant waste of money which I am trying to bring out, in the hope that the present Congress will correct the legislation before it pours $800,000,000 more, which is requested of this Congress, down the same rat hole.

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator insists that he has established certain facts. He is an advocate on his side. I find no fault with that; but I shall study the figures of the Senator. Mr. TYDINGS. I intend to put them in the Record.

Mr. WAGNER. At a later time, perhaps, I shall make some observations, after I have had an opportunity to study the figures.

Mr. TYDINGS. The rent subsidy to be paid by the United States Government over a 60-year period on these 141 projects will amount to $831,861,840, according to figures from the United States Housing Authority report. This is approximately two and one-half times the original entire cost of erecting these apartment houses.

Here is a significant figure, and I hope I may have the attention of the Senator from New York, for the figure is absolutely startling. If we divide the total rent subsidy by the number of families occupying these apartment houses, we find that the result is $12,910 for each family. Moreover, this is actual money paid out of the Treasury of the United States. This means, on an average, a rent subsidy of $215 per year for 60 years for every family living in the Government apartments; $215 in rent is to come out of the Treasury of the United States each year for 60 years to pay a part of the rent of 64,000 families who are in a preferred class and who live in better quarters than does the average American and who at the same time are exempt, in whole or in part, from other taxation.

It will be recalled that under the terms of the original act the United States Housing Authority was to lend 90 percent of the cost of the project to the municipalities. The other 10 percent was to be put up by the municipality itself, to complete the sum necessary to finance the entire construction of the new apartment houses.

However, as has been pointed out, the annual contribution made by the United States Housing Authority to each municipality is sufficient in itself to repay the entire loan to the Federal Government, as well as to pay off all the local contribution at one and the same time and still leave the municipality with a profit.

In effect, these transactions amount to the Federal Government furnishing the apartment houses to the various cities of the country free of any cost whatever, for the United States Housing Authority gives the city each year, in the form of a rent subsidy, a sum larger than the debt which the city owes the United States Housing Authority for that year.

In other words, the Government of the United States is now providing free homes for 64,431 families in the United States—homes, mark you, which are exempt in whole or in part from local taxation; homes which cost more than the average home in America; and homes for which the Federal Government agrees to pay each family residing therein $215 a year for 60 years toward any rental which the municipalities may charge the occupants.

Let us take a concrete case. In Maryland eight of these projects are under way, five of which will replace slum dwellings, one in part slum dwellings, and two will be built on vacant land. Many of the dwellings do not replace slums at all. A large percentage of them do not take the place of slums at all. In many cases they are built on vacant land. In Maryland, out of six, two are built entirely on vacant land, and three-quarters of the land occupied by a third is vacant.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?
Mr. TYDINGS. I would rather continue at this point, and then I will yield to the Senator. I will not cut him off.
I wish to make the argument before I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. The question has to do with what the Senator has just stated.

Mr. TYDINGS. I will give the Senator an opportunity. The proposed cost of the eight houses in Maryland will be $24,523,400. Of this amount, the United States Housing Authority has loaned $22,069,000 to the municipalities where the houses are to be built, and $2,701,000 is to be put up by the local municipalities, which sum includes certain preliminary administration costs not a part of the construction cost itself.

Keep in mind that these eight houses in Maryland have an outside cost of $24,523,400.

The $22,069,000 put up by the Federal Government is, of course, loaned to the municipalities, and is to be repaid by them. However, the Federal Government has made a contract to give these municipalities the sum of $944,112 a year, and in 60 years this annual contribution will amount to $56,646,720. Thus, in 60 years the Federal Government will furnish to the cities in Maryland about two and one-half times the amount of money which the cities in Maryland have borrowed from the Federal Government to build the houses in the first instance.

That figure applies, in general, to every State in the Union. I have taken the figures for my own State from the report issued December 22 to show that the Federal Government is giving to Baltimore and to Annapolis each year more money than the city of Baltimore or the city of Annapolis owes the Federal Government. Over a period of 60 years the Federal Government will give those cities two and a half times what the buildings in the two cities cost. The same thing is true of every other State in which this policy is in effect. In other words, the Federal Government will give to the cities of Maryland not only enough to repay the loan granted them but also to pay all the local contribution toward the maintenance of these houses, and still leave in the hands of the cities a cash sum for other purposes. This is the plan followed in all the other States of the Nation.

The conclusion is inescapable. In Maryland, at public expense, eight apartment houses are to be built, which, in effect, will be paid for entirely by the Government of the United States and not at all by anybody else. When built, these houses will become the property of the cities, and each of these family units will cost more to build than does the house occupied by the average American family today. Thus, in effect, the Government is building free homes for the people of the Nation, for that is what it amounts to, when the contracts are analyzed. The city, in effect, will make no contribution worthy of the name to the cost of these houses, and the Federal Government is borrowing the money and increasing the national debt in order to accomplish the building of these homes.

These apartment houses being exempted in whole or in part from local taxation, those who build their own homes or who live in rented houses must, perforce, pay more taxes than their just share in order to make up the taxes from which the families living in these new apartment houses are excused.

Thus the Government builds a finer house than the average American family lives in, free of any cost to the cities wherein they are built, and then insists that all the other people of America be taxed more to pay the taxes which those who live in the Government apartment slum-replacing houses are excused from paying.

Of course, in these calculations I have not included the interest which all the taxpayers of America must pay on the $500,000,000 which the United States Housing Authority lends to the municipalities, for the United States Housing Authority must borrow this money before it can lend it, and all American taxpayers must pay the interest thereon.

Let me revert again to the annual rent subsidies on the 141 projects under way which the United States Housing Authority has contracted to pay to the various municipalities for 60 years in the future, amounting to $13,864,364 a year, or $831,861,840 for 60 years—about two and a half times the original cost of the projects.

Astounding as are these figures, which show the present status of the rent subsidy matter, this is only the beginning. Last June, Mr. Straus, the United States Housing Authority Administrator, appeared before the Senate Appropriations Committee in connection with appropriations for the United States Housing Authority. I wish to quote briefly from the testimony by Mr. Straus at that hearing:

Senator Typings. Have you any estimates of what will be the ultimate outlay for rent subsidies without including interest on outlay; straight outlay itself, on your 60-year subsidy contracts?

Mr. Straus. Senator, that question is one, of course, which is always asked and I do not know whether any country in the world ever has been able to answer it and certainly I cannot tell you that I have the answer. The British budget today has an amount in it for subsidy exactly parallel to ours. Their scheme is parallel to ours, and they have an item in it in the amount of $85,000,000.

On the basis of population, their population is about a third

On the basis of population, their population is about a third of ours, it would be about $250,000,000 for annual subsidies. We have in this bill today about $20,000,000—

That is, when they got the first subsidy-and we are talking about $35,000,000, you know, and that is the best answer I can give you.

So we have entered upon a policy which, according to the Housing Administrator himself, will eventually entail the expenditure of $250,000,000 a year for each year for 60 years in the future in order to pay a part of the rent of people who live in better homes than the average American lives in and who are exempt in whole or in part from local taxation. That is the problem; and it is all done in the interest of helping the deserving poor. I am going to show, in a few moments, how the poor have been looked after, not by the Federal Government but by private housing. The figures showing the comparison, as they do, of the waste of money as between Government building and real, substantial building costs of private planning, are startling.

Thus, we have it from Mr. Straus himself, the present U. S. H. A. Administrator, that eventually these annual rent subsidies, instead of being $13,000,000 a year, as is now the case, will reach a quarter of a billion dollars a year and will, it is likely, run every year for 60 years in the future. So, in 60 years, approximately $15,000,000,000 will go for rent subsidies.

When the program of the U.S. H. A. is finally carried out, 1,150,000 families in the United States will be having a part of their rent paid each year for 60 years, at the rate of $215 per family per year, out of the United States Treasury.

To state the same thing differently, 1 out of every 30 families in America will be living in houses built by the Government and presented to municipalities free of any cost to them, which houses will cost more per family unit than the average American dwelling house. Moreover they will not only be living in better houses than does the average American family but they will have a part of their rent paid by the Government. And, thirdly, notwithstanding these two advantages, they are to be exempt from their proportionate share of local taxation in whole or in part.

Of course, rent payers in privately owned dwellings pay their proportionate share of local taxes indirectly, as the owner includes this item in the rental charge. As the Government apartment buildings are to be exempted from taxes, those renting the apartments will not be paying their share of local taxation.

These Government apartment houses, even though municipally owned, are not like other city property, such as courthouses, city halls, fire houses, and the like. They perform no such civic functions, but are purely dwelling property, which has always constituted a principal source of tax revenues for a city. Thus the municipality will be deprived of revenues which it should justly receive from such property.

As at present only about one-fourth of our national revenue is derived from corporate and individual income taxes and the remainder of our national revenue comes from the masses of the people, it is not farfetched to say that the vast remainder of the working people of America are to be taxed to provide homes for the 1,150,000 families who will live in homes better than the average American occupies. The remaining workers will be contributing from their own earnings to the Federal Government so that the Government may have the money with which to pay a part of the rent of the 1,150,000 families living in these better-than-average homes.

In striking contrast to this venture in state socialism, which is really the plan now being followed by the United States Housing Authority under the act, is the story of housing as it is being carried on under private supervision in Fort Wayne, Ind. In that city private capital is providing new, modern houses for people of low income, without any rent subsidies, without exemption from local taxes, and without borrowed money from the Federal Treasury.

There private capital set out to meet the housing shortage and to provide better living quarters for the people of that community, attacking the problem in a practical manner.

The designers of the Fort Wayne house began with the basic fact that 4,935 families in that city had never had any bathing facilities, that 2,642 families had never had anything better than outdoor privies, and 890 families had never enjoyed running water in their homes.

Starting with these facts, they undertook to design a house which would be safe and sanitary and infinitely better than the wretched shacks in which these families lived, but which would not necessarily measure up in cost to conventional American middle-class standards. The designers proceeded on the assumption that high-priced fixtures, such as sunken bathtubs, silent flushing seats, and heliotrope paper, indirect lighting, and the like, were not necessary in providing good houses with modern conveniences, which might be rented at a low figure.

Many of the people it was proposed to rehouse had had to carry their water in buckets from a communal pump. Other of their living conditions were deplorable. The aim of the designers was to produce a house with the modern essentials of sanitation, comfort, and convenience, but, in order to hold the cost down so that the rent necessary would not be beyond the means of the new occupants to pay, all frills were omitted.

The result was a house with two bedrooms, a combined living room and kitchen, and a bathroom. The combined living room and kitchen was larger than the average middleclass living room-easier to keep clean and generally more satisfactory than two small rooms. All the houses built were immediately occupied as soon as they were constructed, and there were 600 applications on file for more houses at the time of my inquiry. The over-all cost of this house is less than $900.

Perhaps, in their effort to meet the minimum, the designers in Fort Wayne went too far in the low-cost direction. I am not maintaining that the United States Housing Authority should build houses costing $900 per family unit; but there is a striking dissimilarity between the $900 outlay of private capital, and the houses so produced, and the $5,520 which the United States Housing Authority says is the average cost of a family unit in its new Government apartment houses.

Perhaps somewhere between these two figures is the reasonable and correct mean. The United States Housing Authority apartment houses are supposed to be built for the lowest possible income earners of the country, said on the floor of the Senate by the sponsors of the bill to be families making $60, $70, and $80 a month.

I venture to say that if the designers who put up the $900 house in Fort Wayne were given $2,500, which is nearly three times the cost of their house, they could produce a thoroughly presentable, durable, and comfortable house containing a living room and kitchen, two bedrooms, bath, front and back porch, to be built on a separate lot of ground, properly landscaped, which would surpass in all-around utility, space, and appearance the $5,520 family units being built by the United States Housing Authority.

LXXXIV-154

In other words, if out in Fort Wayne a result like that which I have described can be produced for $900, I venture to say that for $2,500 a house can be built vastly superior to the $5,520 per family unit being built under the U.S. H. A.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Lucas in the chair). Does the Senator from Maryland yield to the Senator from New

Mr. TYDINGS. I do. Mr. WAGNER. Were the Fort Wayne houses constructed by W. P. A. workers?

Mr. TYDINGS. No. Mr. WAGNER. The

The Senator is sure about that?

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes: at least, I inquired, and the answer was "no," unless I have been misinformed. Even so, we have relief programs all over the United States.

Mr. WAGNER. Under the act which we passed last year we provided that the workers shall receive the prevailing rate of wage, and there is a difference between the wage of W. P. A. workers in the smaller communities and the prevailing wage which Congress insists shall be paid under last year's act.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is correct.
Mr. WAGNER. Incidentally, I am in favor of that provision. I do not know whether the Senator from Maryland is or not.

Mr. TYDINGS. I have in my office a picture of the $900 house which private capital is building in Fort Wayne on a large scale. I find that it is neat and attractive in appearance, that it stands on a separate plot of ground, that it has shrubbery around it, and that it is really more of an individual home than is likely to be provided in one of the Government apartment houses. Indeed, in comparing the floor plan with that of the Government house, there is very little difference in the arrangement.

I have not seen the Fort Wayne houses; only the pictures of them. It may be that their construction is not as substantial as it should be; but I return to the argument: There is a great difference between the $900 cost of the Fort Wayne house and the $5,520 per family unit of the United States Housing Authority building.

If the cost of the United States Housing Authority family units could be reduced to one-half the present figures—that is, $2,755 per family unit—then, instead of taking care of 64,000 families, we could take care of 128,000 families for the same money; and even then we would be paying three times as much per family unit as the Fort Wayne house costs, built by private capital.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. HOLMAN. The Senator has been talking about average costs. Is he prepared to say what the maximum costs are?

Mr. TYDINGS. I am coming to that subject in a minute. Mr. HOLMAN. There is a maximum, is there?

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes; that is on the next page of my manuscript, I believe.

Then it would not be necessary to provide rent subsidies, or to exempt such houses from local taxation, as is the case in the $5,520 units now being constructed by the United States Housing Authority. Moreover, if the Fort Wayne plan were followed, these families would have the benefits of fresh air and open spaces and some beauty around them. But, even so, the Federal Government should not, regardless of the cost, provide that such houses be exempt from local taxation; and the Federal Government should not specify that it will pay a part of the rent of the occupants for 60 years in the future, as is now the case.

In that connection, I will remark that that has been the policy adopted by Sweden, which has quit trying to build a large number of houses in the big cities and has moved the population out to surrounding areas where each family has a home and a little bit of ground; and that is true of the general housing plans all over the world. Governments are getting away from rent subsidies. They have given them up in Sweden. They are giving them up in other countries. They are trying to build a substantial and a good house, on such a plan that the Government can then substantially withdraw from the field and let the family go alone.

The cost of building a family unit in these new Government constructed houses varies, of course, in each State. In New York State, one new apartment house is costing $6,562 per family unit. In the city of Washington, right here in the Capital City, another of these Government-constructed apartment houses, wherein will be housed 246 families, will cost $6,142 per family unit. These figures are far above the cost of the average house in which the average American today lives, whether he built it, or owns it himself, or rents it.

Keep in mind the fact that these apartment houses, costing $6,100 and $6,500 per family unit, are, under the law, to be occupied by families with $60, $70, and $80 a month income, or annual incomes of $720, $840, and $960.

Houses built by private capital, costing $6,100 or $6,500. must necessarily be rented for 10 percent of the entire construction cost—that is, for $610 or $650 a year, respectivelyto cover amortization of the cost, taxes, interest, repairs, insurance, upkeep, and so forth.

If a family making $70 a month, or $840 a year, is required to pay $650 a year for rent, that leaves only $190 out of the annual family income, or about 50 cents a day, to clothe and feed the family and pay the other expenses. Certainly no family making $840 a year can afford to pay for rent and shelter more than one-third of its income, or about $280. and have enough left over for the bare necessities of life. But how can one of these families pay the rent of an apartment which costs $6,500 to build? It just cannot be done. Consequently, the National Government will contribute an average of $215 a year each year for 60 years indirectly to these families to pay a part of the rent and will require the cities to exempt these families in whole or in part from local taxation.

It therefore seems apparent that the first thing Congress should do is to reenact the law governing the slum-clearance or rehousing program, so as to bottom the outlay per family on more of a self-sustaining basis. I am of the opinion that a good, adequate, and healthful house below the present average U. S. H. A. cost of $5,520 per family unit is not difficult to obtain.

If this is done, it will not be necessary for the cities to exempt such homes in whole or in part from local taxation; it will not be necessary for the Federal Government to pay a part of the rent each year for 60 years for those who live in such homes; and for the same amount of money that Congress appropriates, twice as many homes can be built, which will lift the slum dwellers out of ramshackle and unsafe buildings and place them in sanitary and decent living

To appropriate more money on the present plan outlined by the law as now administered is to waste hundreds of millions of dollars in building costs and commit the Federal Government for 60 years to an annual bill which will eventually reach a quarter of a million dollars annually in rent subsidies and which will only take care of a small percentage of the poorly housed families, because the money is being used to build homes which cost more than those of the average American family.

I note in the city of Baltimore, as in other cities, that the average cost per family unit of one Government apartment house under construction is $6,354. That is away above the cost of the average home which the average citizen of Baltimore lives in today; and so it is in other cities. Yet the average family renting or owning a home built by private capital pays directly or indirectly its full share of the taxes and receives from the Federal Government no annual sum to pay a part of its rent. Consequently, such a family must take from its earnings an additional sum, first, for Federal taxes for these rent subsidies, and, second, to make up the local taxes which occupants of the new Government houses are excused from paying in whole or in part.

When you drive north, and enter the city of Baltimore to go out toward Philadelphia and New York, it is necessary to cross almost the entire middle of the city; and if you drive through that route of 3 or 4 miles you will pass houses not 5 percent of which cost $6,300. In other words, in Baltimore City we are building, for people of the lowest possible income, houses which cost more per family unit than 90 percent of the houses in Baltimore City cost; and the people who live in these Government-constructed houses are to be exempt in whole or in part from local taxation, and are to have an average of $215 per family per year paid as a part of their rent for 60 years in the future.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Maryland yield to the Senator from Massachusetts? Mr. TYDINGS. I do.

Mr. WALSH. Does the figure for Baltimore, which the Senator is giving, include the land as well as the houses? Mr. TYDINGS. Yes; I am taking the outside figure; but, as a general rule, land is not a large part of these costs.

Is not that astounding? The other day I sent a telegram to the Real Estate Board of Baltimore City and asked them if they could tell me the cost of the average home in Baltimore. Why, Mr. President, not more than 10 percent of the people of Baltimore live in such a high-priced establishment as a $6,500 home. Most of the homes cost $1,500 or $2,000 or $2,500. Baltimore, you will recall, is a city of homes, not of apartment houses. There are long rows of houses. Under these plans we are building family units costing $6,500 for the low-income groups in Baltimore City, when perhaps the cost of the average home in Baltimore today is less than $3,000 per family unit. Can you believe it? And then, besides, we are committing the Government to paying a part of the rent of those families for 60 years in the future.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Maryland yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator no doubt is familiar, too, with the construction done under the Resettlement Administra-

Mr. TYDINGS. I referred to that a moment ago.

Mr. BYRD. In Tugwelltown, as I recall, in the Senator's own State, the average unit cost is about $16,000. In Hightstown, N. J., the average unit cost for a dwelling is $21,000. Mr. WAGNER. Will the Senator yield at that point?

I know he does not want to make an inaccurate statement?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield. Mr. WAGNER. In the law there is a provision that at the end of each 10 years there is to be a reexamination of the amount of the subsidy that is agreed to be paid, to determine whether the economic situation has changed, whether the dwellers can afford to pay more, and other facts, so that it is not strictly accurate to say that for a period of 60 years we are to be required to pay these subsidies to which the Senator refers. There may be a modification. I think the examination under the law is required after the first 10 years, and then every 5 years thereafter. The Senator is familiar with that provision, I think.

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes; but permit me to point out to the Senator that when the bill was pending on this floor the bill provided that the United States Housing Authority was to make contracts for a period of 20 years but not more than 60 years, and the Senator now speaking asked in the debate, I do not remember whether it was the Senator from New York or some other sponsor of the bill who was interrogated, whether the contracts were to be made on a 20-year basis or a 60-year basis. We were told, as the record of the debate will show, that they were to be made on the basis of 20 years or less. I asked Mr. Straus the direct question, "Have you made 60-year contracts for each of these houses?" And Mr. Straus answered in the affirmative in all cases.

It may be true that he will have the right of revision in 10 years; but does the Senator think that, with these houses spread in every State in the Union, as they will be, when the reports come in from the thousands of families who live in them and from the municipal authorities, the Government is going to take any step which will be tantamount to abrogation of any contract in whole or in part?

If they can be revised, who knows that they will not be revised upward instead of downward? Certainly, from the extravagance of the administration up to date, as I think I have proven by their own figures pretty conclusively, we would be very great optimists if we presumed they were going to be revised downward.

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator has asked me a question. I have a little more confidence in public officials than the Senator has.

Mr. TYDINGS. I have not much in this particular activity.

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator is making these general state-

Mr. TYDINGS. I am not making a general statement. The Senator from New York is making a general statement. I am taking their own figures to substantiate every remark I have made.

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator says that is extravagance.

Mr. TYDINGS. Does the Senator think that $6,300 as the cost of a slum-cleared family dwelling in Baltimore City, which is above the cost of 90 percent of the homes which the people over there occupy, which is to be exempt, in whole or in part, from local taxation, and to have a rent subsidy for 60 years in the future of $215 a family, is economical?

Mr. WAGNER. I would say offhand it is not economical; but I want to have all the facts, and therefore, if the Senator will permit me, after he is through I should like to examine his figures.

Mr. TYDINGS. I am going to put them in the RECORD.

Mr. WAGNER. And then perhaps at a later date, after I have had a chance to study them, I may attempt to answer them, either to show there was not the extravagance—and I am quite confident there was not any extravagance-or concede what the Senator has said to be true.

Mr. TYDINGS. I shall put the figures in the RECORD, and I think the Senator will find, when he examines them, that I have taken the very figures from Mr. Straus' own department, issued on December 22, 1938, to substantiate every remark I have made on this floor. The adding-machine figures for all the columns are here, and unless the adding machine is out of order, I would pretty near bank on its accuracy.

Mr. WAGNER. I have heard from the localities which have had to do with the United States Housing Authority that their administration has been very efficient and very economical. That is a mere general statement. If I cannot justify it after I study the Senator's speech, I will concede the Senator to be correct; but my opinion is to the contrary.

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator would be wise to buttress his observations with facts, as I am doing, before he even attempts to debate the question.

Mr. WAGNER. I think I always try to sustain my position with facts. We may disagree as to the application of the facts.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator from Maryland yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I vield.

Mr. KING. I was interested in the question as to whether or not there was any chance for one of the occupants of these houses to obtain title. Suppose through some good fortune the occupants were able to purchase a home, one of these four-room homes in an apartment house. Could he do so?

Mr. TYDINGS. As I understand, he could not. They are owned by the municipality. I believe that question has been raised, but unless guarantees are given of such a nature as to be prohibitive, title cannot pass. According to my information, no title has passed up to date.

Mr. KING. Then we are not providing opportunities for families to acquire homes. They have to be renters for 60

Mr. TYDINGS. That is correct. I say without fear of successful contradiction that if houses such as I have described can be built in Fort Wayne, Ind., for $900, and the Federal Government is spending $5,520 per family unit to build houses for similar purposes, this glaring discrepancy in itself is enough to prove conclusively to any reasonable man that the sum spent per family unit by the Federal Government, or under its direction, is a wasteful and extravagant expenditure, depriving other families in similar circumstances from receiving equal treatment, because of these high prohibitive costs; to say nothing of excusing families from paying their proportionate share of local taxation, and giving them an annual rent subsidy from the Treasury of the United States for 60 years in the future.

Sweden long ago abandoned the rent subsidy as impractical, and it has been modified in other foreign countries, in the light of experience. We in the United States might profit by their experience.

Incidentally, as to the houses in Great Britain, the plans of which are somewhat similar to ours, though not directly parallel, as Mr. Straus testified, I find on examination I have not the exact figure, but they cost about $2,800 per family

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, if the Senator is addressing himself to me, in drafting the legislation I took absolutely the same system of financing that Great Britain and the Scandinavian countries are using. I went over to those countries at my own expense and studied the situation.

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator means that he put no limitations in his law. There are no limitations as to the amount of subsidy, there are no limitations as to the cost, there are no limitations in the Senator's measure. He practically left the top wide open. We tried to put limitations in the bill on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. WAGNER. There is a limitation as to the cost per room.

Mr. TYDINGS. What is the limitation?

Mr. WAGNER. A thousand dollars per room.

Mr. WALSH. The Senator means per unit, does he not? Mr. WAGNER. Yes; and a limitation of $4,000 per family unit.

Mr. TYDINGS. It was the intention of Congress that none of these family units should cost more than $5,000, and I have already shown that the average cost per family unit in all these apartment houses is $5,520, and some of them run to nearly $6,500.

Mr. WAGNER. If the Senator has been accurately in-

Mr. TYDINGS. There is no limitation on the rent subsidy. It is not provided whether it shall be 10 percent of the cost per year or not over 5 percent, or 1 percent.

Mr. WAGNER. But there is a very clear definition.

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes; a definition through which you could drive the whole United States Army and not even know where they had been.

Mr. WAGNER. It is much more restricted than the laws in these other countries.

Mr. TYDINGS. I should like to conclude. I have been talking a long time.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for just one question?

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes; for just a question.

Mr. REYNOLDS. The Senator stated that the per-unit cost was $5,520. I wonder whether the Senator knows what proportion of that was administrative cost.

Mr. TYDINGS. I shall be glad to hand the Senator the table, which shows the cost in each State and for each project. The administrative cost is not so large; it is substantial, but not large. The Senator can find it in one of the six columns in the report.

The United States Housing Authority is asking for $800,000,000 more to be spent along the same lines as those I have indicated. Let me say to the Senator from North Dakota and to other Senators that this money is not being used to rehabilitate the poor people who live in the country districts. I can drive through the countryside of Maryland and show the Senator houses in a much worse state than are many of the houses in the city which are being removed. This program seems to be confined almost entirely to the big cities of the country. No effort is made under this law to raise the standard of living of the agricultural worker, who makes a very small income, as a general rule, and whose house is not always sanitary, and who does not have electric lights and does not have bath tubs and does not have many of the other conveniences which are enjoyed by city people.

If Congress appropriates the $800,000,000 sought, in the light of the facts, much of it is going to be wasted and many families which could be provided for will be denied better living conditions, which could be obtained under a more economical administration.

Before more money is appropriated, a ceiling on ultimate costs should be fixed in the present Housing Act, a ceiling which will permit the spreading of the benefits of the rehousing policy to thousands of families who otherwise will be denied better living conditions. Such a policy will be fairer to those who live in privately constructed dwellings and will save the Treasury of the United States, over a 60-year period, from ten to fifteen billions of dollars in rent subsidies, which, of course, must be provided by taxes on all the people.

When these houses are finally built and the occupants move in, there is going to be a tremendous protest against the plan now being followed, a protest that is not without justification. If we are wise, therefore, before appropriating more money for housing, we should insist that these new houses should not cost more than $3,000 a family unit, and that the waiver of local taxation of the occupants therein be discontinued, in which case the annual rent subsidy from the Treasury of the United States will not be necessary.

The present program needs drastic and immediate revision, particularly in view of the mounting national debt, the annual recurring deficits, the millions of poorly housed families which under present circumstances are penalized to make their contribution for annual rent subsidies, on the one hand, and on the other, denied living conditions equal to those who will be fortunate enough to occupy these expensive Government houses.

When this law was before Congress some of us attempted to point out the possibilities and probabilities which are now realities. It is not yet too late to save billions of dollars to the Treasury of the United States, without denying to a single worthy family the opportunity to live in quarters better than those they are now occupying.

Considering the $900 family unit cost in Fort Wayne and the $5,520 family unit cost under the slum-clearance program, who is there to say that the problem of rehousing the low-income groups cannot be speeded up, widely extended, and conducted henceforth on more enduring and economical lines?

Further to postpone a full examination of the problem is in my judgment to invite the destruction of the housing program through the disgust and condemnation of the people of the country when the full meaning of what is taking place becomes known.

In substantiation of my remarks, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have published in the Record, as a part of and immediately following what I have said, the table prepared by the United States Housing Authority, released on December 22, 1938, which shows the location of each project, its development number, the Presidential list number, the date approved by the President, the number of new family dwellings, whether built on slum or vacant sites, the proposed cost per family unit of land, nondwelling facilities, net construction cost, equipment, architect's and overhead cost, and the total cost; the proposed entire cost of the project, the amount of Federal loan, the amount of local capital participation, the annual Federal contribution, the annual local contribution, and the proposed shelter rent per room per month to be charged.

From these figures it will at once be seen that the rent to be charged is far below that necessary to carry these expensive living quarters, and the reason for the annual rent subsidy and exemption from local taxes will at once appear.

From these figures also it will be apparent, in my judgment, that houses on a more economical basis can be built which will eliminate the very objections to which I have alluded.

That should be one of the immediate tasks of the present Congress before more hundreds of millions of dollars are spent in such an extravagant manner, which millions, incidentally, we do not have and which we are borrowing, while committing ourselves at the same time to an annual outlay on these houses, which will run into billions of dollars before the rent subsidy contracts expire.

In Sweden, in Holland, in Belgium, in Great Britain, and in some other countries plans something like this have been adopted. The program is an experiment in our own country. If we really want to avoid just criticism, the Housing Authority itself ought to come before Congress and suggest aments which will restore the confidence of the Congress and the country in the program as we contemplated it would work out when it was adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Lucas in the chair). Without objection, the tables referred to by the Senator from Maryland will be printed in the Record at this point.

The tables are as follows:

							Propo	sed cost pe	r family dw	relling				e seed
Location of project		Presi-	Date ap-	Num- ber of				Dw	relling facili	ties		Proposed		Local	Federal	Local	Proposed shelter
	Development No.	dential list No.	proved of by Presi- dent	new family dwell- ings	Slum or va- cant site	Land 12	Non- dwelling facili- ties ³	Net con- struc- tion 4	Equip- ment, archi- tects, and over- head ³	Total	Total	cost, entire project	Federal loan ⁶	capital participa- tion 7	annual contribu- tion 8 9	annual contribu- tion 10	rent per room per monthu u
labama (3)				1, 258								$6, 087, 071	$5, 477, 000	$671, 110	$234, 338	$95, 864
Birmingham	Ala. 1-1	3	June 2, 1938	860	Vacant	1 $454	$742	$3, 287	$462	$3,749	$4, 945	4, 253, 071	3, 828, 000	467, 110	⁸ 163, 743	59, 869	11 $4. 25
Mobile	Ala. 2-1 Ala. 2-2	} 5	Sept. 7, 1938	{ 100 298	Slum	1 167 1 632	862 835	3, 005 2, 705	496 462	3, 501 3, 167	4, 530 4, 634	453, 000 1, 381, 000					11 3. 75 11 3. 75
Total				398								1, 834, 000	1, 649, 000	204, 000	8 70, 595	35, 995
alifornia (6)				1, 477								7, 675, 000	6, 905, 000	846, 000	295, 365	186, 770
Los Angeles County	Calif. 2-1 Calif. 2-2	} 9	Dec. 7, 1938	{ 250 253	Vacantdo	1 298 1 76	1, 450 1, 678	2, 808 2, 807	592 593	3, 400 3, 400	5, 148 5, 154	1, 287, 000 1, 304, 000					12 4. 25 12 4. 25
Total				503								2, 591, 000	2, 331, 000	286, 000	$ 99,715	56, 535
Oakland Do	Calif. 3-1 Calif. 3-2	} 5	Sept. 7,1938	{ 400 156	Slumdo	1 1, 490 1 1, 090	599 599	2, 733 2, 733	470 469	3, 203 3, 202	5, 292 4, 891	2, 117, 000 763, 000					11 4. 25 11 4. 25
Total				556								2, 880, 000	2, 591, 000	318, 000	$ 110, 845	80, 442
San Francisco	Calif. 1-1 Calif. 1-2	} 10	Dec. 14, 1938	{ 118 300	Vacant 10 percent slum.	2 672 2 361	664 1, 460	2, 791 3, 020	602 585	3, 393 3, 605	4, 729 5, 426	558, 000 1, 646, 000					12 4. 00 12 4. 00
Total				418								2, 204, 000	1, 983, 000	242, 000	* 84, 805	49, 793
istrict of Columbia (4)	11111111111			1, 257								7, 336, 000	6, 600, 000	812,000	282, 415	141, 208
Washington Do Do	D. C. 1-1 D. C. 1-2 D. C. 1-3 D. C. 1-4	} 8	Nov. 28, 1938	282 246 428 301	Vacant Slumdo Vacant	1 171 1 1, 936 1 1, 623 1 160	1, 400 556 774 1, 249	3, 413 3, 125 3, 178 3, 451	587 525 523 602	4, 000 3, 650 3, 701 4, 053	5, 571 6, 142 6, 098 5, 462	1, 571, 000 1, 511, 000 2, 610, 000 1, 644, 000					11 3. 75 11 3. 75 11 3. 75 11 3. 75
Total				1, 257								7, 336, 000	6, 600, 000	812, 000	$ 282, 415	141, 208
lorida (6)				1, 212								5, 680, 858	5, 113, 000	626, 000	226, 267	185, 017
Jacksonville Orlando	Fla. 1-1 Fla. 4-1	2 9	Apr. 19, 1938 Dec. 7, 1938	224 156	Vacant	1 266 2 147	994 712	(13) 2, 128	(13) 640	3, 833 2, 768	5, 093 3, 627	1, 140, 625 609, 000	1, 027. 000 548, 000	- 125,000 67,000	8 43, 925 8 23, 415	25, 170 12, 759	11 3. 82 12 3. 25
Pensacola	Fla. 6-1 Fla. 6-2	} 7	Nov. 3, 1938	{ 120 120	25 percent slum.	1 813 1 362	759 798	3, 112 3, 001	508 422	3, 620 3, 423	5, 192 4, 583	623, 000 550, 000					11 3. 50 11 3. 00
Total	Fla. 2-1	4	July 16, 1938	240 242	20 percent	1 321	737	2, 910	433	3, 343	4, 401	1, 173, 000 1, 065, 000	1, 055, 000 959, 000	130, 000 117, 000	8 45, 150 9 43, 931	56, 968 33, 164	11 4. 00
Tampa	Fla. 3-1	4	do	350	slum. 51 percent slum	1 758	580	3, 076	424	3, 500	4, 838	1, 693, 233	1, 524, 000	187, 000	9 69, 846	56, 956	11 3. 75
eorgia (10)				3, 888								19, 638, 200	17, 672, 000	2, 165, 000	755, 965	440, 983
Atlanta	Ga. 6-1 Ga. 6-2 Ga. 6-3 Ga. 6-4	9	Dec. 7, 1938	602 604 634 598	Slumdododododododododo	2 552 2 438 2 530 2 601	719 743 655 632	2, 926 2, 694 2, 784 2, 729	697 585 698 643	3, 623 3, 279 3, 482 3, 372	4, 894 4, 460 4, 667 4, 605	3, 340, 000 3, 054, 000 3, 410, 000 3, 154, 000					12 3. 25 12 3. 00 12 3. 25 12 3. 00
Total		1	Mark To	2, 438								12, 958, 000	11, 661, 000	1, 429, 000	* 498, 855	265, 105
Augusta	Ga. 1-1 Ga. 1-2	} 2	Apr. 19, 1938	{ 167 168	Vacant	1 101 1 54	803 706	(13)	(12)	3, 645 3, 773	4, 549 4, 533	759, 800 761, 400	11, 001, 000	1, 120, 000	100,000	200, 100	11 3. 62
Total	Ga. 1-2			335							4, 003	1, 521, 200	1, 369, 000	167, 000	8 58, 555	40, 900	11 3, 3;
Columbus	Ga. 4-1 Ga. 4-2	} 10	Dec. 14, 1938	{ 166 284	Slumdo	2 368 2 180	784 603	2, 646 2, 510	617 615	3, 263 3, 125	4, 415 3, 908	857, 000 1, 210, 000					12 3. 00 15 2. 50
Total				450				 -	l			2, 067, 000	1, 860, 000	228, 000	* 79, 555	43, 641

Savannah: Contract No. 1	Ga. 2-1	6	Oct. 21, 1938	164	10 percent	1 615	837	2, 881	594	3, 475	4, 927	808, 000	727, 000	89,000	*31, 080	24, 244	11 3, 50
Contract No. 2	Ga. 2-2	10	Dec. 14, 1938	501	Slum	2 344	596	2, 401	622	3, 023	3, 963	2, 284, 000	2, 055, 000	252, 000	8 87, 920	67, 093	12 3, 00
Hawaii (1)				220								1, 125, 000	1, 012, 000	124, 000	43, 295	21, 702
Honolulu	T. H. 1-1	6	Oct. 21, 1938	220	Vacant	1 756	794	2, 893	671	3, 564	5, 114	1, 125, 000	1, 012, 000	124,000	8 43, 295	21,702	11 3. 50
Illinois (2)				2, 248								12, 481, 100	11, 233, 000	1, 372, 000	488, 313	371, 311
Chicago	Ill. 2-1 Ill. 3-1	6	Oct. 21, 1938 July 16, 1938	1, 708 540	Slumdo	1 602 1 910	757 580	3, 821 3, 330	463 445	4, 284 3, 775	5, 643 5, 265	9, 638, 000 2, 843, 100	8, 674, 000 2, 559, 000	1,060,000 312,000	* 371, 035 * 117, 278	339, 904 31, 407	11 4. 50 11 4. 25
Indiana (5)				846								3, 779, 000	3, 399, 000	417,000	145, 390	87, 069
Anderson	Ind. 6-1 Ind. 4-1 Ind. 7-1 Ind. 5-1 Ind. 2-1	6 7 5 7 5	Oct. 21, 1938 Nov. 3, 1938 Sept. 7, 1938 Nov. 3, 1938 Sept. 7, 1938	203 111 175 274 83	Slum Vacant do Slum Vacant	1 651 1 231 1 175 1 664 1 136	662 805 571 751 743	3, 076 2, 828 2, 815 2, 772 3, 078	429 415 468 441 296	3, 505 3, 243 3, 283 3, 213 3, 374	4, 818 4, 279 4, 029 4, 628 4, 253	978, 000 475, 000 705, 000 1, 268, 000 353, 000	880, 000 427, 000 634, 000 1, 141, 000 317, 000	107, 000 53, 000 78, 000 139, 000 40, 000	$ 37, 625 $ 18, 270 $ 27, 125 $ 48, 790 $ 13, 580	20, 814 5, 356 14, 967 34, 432 11, 500	11 3. 50 11 3. 25 11 3. 00 11 3. 25 11 2. 75
Kentucky (6)				2, 330								12, 926, 000	11, 632, 000	1, 423, 025	510, 388	274, 466
Covington	Ку. 2-1 Ку. 2-2	} 5	Sept. 7, 1938	{ 263 168	Vacant	1 304 1 1, 441	899 440	3, 038 3, 194	451 467	3, 489 3, 661	4, 692 5, 542	1, 234, 000 931, 000					11 3. 75 11 3. 75
Total Frankfort Lexington	Ку. 3-1 Ку. 4-2	10 10	Dec. 14, 1938	431 91 206	Vacant 40 percent	2 163 2 169	845 811	2, 676 3, 012	569 571	3, 245 3, 583	4, 253 4, 563	2, 165, 000 387, 000 990, 000	1, 947, 000 348, 000 891, 000	240, 000 43, 000 109, 000	* 83, 335 * 14, 875 * 38, 115	40, 452 6, 269 27, 443	12 2. 75 12 3. 25
Louisville (contract	Ку. 1-1	2	Apr. 19, 1938	814	slum. Slum	11,525	637	(13)	(13)	3, 656	5, 818	4, 734, 000	4, 261, 000	520, 150	⁶ 182, 250	89,000	11 4. 00
No. 1). Louisville (contract No. 2).	Ку. 1-2	4	July 16, 1938	788	do	11,602	644	3, 272	384	3, 656	5, 902	4, 650, 000	4, 185, 000	510, 875	* 191, 813	111, 302	11 3. 75
Louisiana (6)				4, 606								28, 125, 700	25, 311, 000	3, 097, 000	1, 082, 795	835, 211
New Orleans: Contract No. 1 Do	La. 1-1 La. 1-2			741 656	Slum	1 1, 518 1 2, 032	913 957	(18)	(13)	4, 109 3, 871	6, 540 6, 860	4, 845, 700 4, 500, 000					11 4 10 11 3, 70
Total		1	Mar. 17, 1938	1, 397								9, 345, 700	8, 411, 000	1,028,000	$ 359, 800	218, 343
Contract No. 2	La. 1-3 La. 1-5			916 903	Slumdo	1 1, 403 1 1, 031	696 966	3, 386 3, 357	587 584	3, 973 3, 941	6, 072 5, 938	5, 562, 000 5, 362, 000					11 4.00 11 3.50
Total		5	Sept. 7, 1938	1,819			100					10, 924, 000	9, 830, 000	1, 204, 000	8 420, 560	406, 483
Contract No. 3	La. 1-7			644	3 percent	2 542	1, 112	3, 365	658	4, 023	5, 677	3, 686, 000					12 3. 25
Do	La. 1-8			746	slum. 65 percent slum.	1 283	1, 108	3, 337	635	3, 972	5, 363	4, 170, 000					12 3. 25
Total		10	Dec. 14, 1938	1, 390								7, 856, 000	7, 070, 000	865, 000	* 302, 435	210, 385
Maryland (8)				4, 244								24, 523, 400	22, 069, 000	2, 701, 000	944, 112	662, 049
Annapolis	Md. 1-1	5	Sept. 7, 1938	100	25 percent slum.	1 1, 210	590	3, 096	424	3, 520	5, 320	532, 000	478, 000	60, 000	⁸ 20, 475	10, 960	11 4. 00
Baltimore	Md. 2-3	3 } 5	June 2, 1938 Sept. 7, 1938	692 878 810 258 404 600 502	Slumdo	1 1, 150 1 1, 757 1 1, 602 1 1, 281 1 1, 243 1 110 1 333	631 617 583 623 680 804 871	3, 565 3, 565 3, 565 3, 565 3, 565 3, 313 3, 311	415 415 415 415 415 658 660	3, 980 3, 980 3, 980 3, 980 3, 980 3, 971 3, 971	5, 761 6, 354 6, 165 5, 884 5, 903 4, 885 5, 175	3, 986, 500 5, 578, 900 4, 993, 800 1, 518, 200 2, 385, 000 2, 931, 000 2, 598, 000					(13) (13) (13) (13) (13) (14, 00) 11 4, 00
Total	,			4, 144								23, 991, 400	21, 591, 000	2, 641, 000	8 923, 637	651, 089	114.00
Massachusetts (6)				3, 610								21, 745, 000	19, 567, 000	2, 397, 000	837, 095	946, 595
Boston Do Do	Mass. 2-1 Mass. 2-2 Mass. 2-3 Mass. 2-4	} ;	Nov. 3, 1938	1,017 672 1,092 342	Slumdodododo	1 $1, 422 1 1, 194 1 1, 161 1 1, 231	$574 644 646 654	$3,610 3,709 3,613 3,502	$504 536 508 555	$4, 114 4, 245 4, 121 4, 057	$6, 110 6, 083 5, 928 5, 942	6, 214, 000 4, 088, 000 6, 473, 000 2, 032, 000					11 4, 25 11 4, 25 11 4, 25 11 4, 00
Total Cambridge Holyoke	Mass. 3-1 Mass. 5-1	10 10	Dec. 14, 1938	3, 123 328 159	Slumdo	2 627 2 389	641 829	3, 305 3, 344	691 637	3, 996 3, 981	5, 264 5, 199	18, 807, 000 2, 017, 000 921, 000	16, 924, 000 1, 815, 000 828, 000	2, 072, 000 222, 000 103, 000	8 724, 010 8 77, 630 8 35, 455	829, 904 87, 881 28, 810	12 4. 00 12 3. 50

Bee footnotes at end of table.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

			Date approved of by President	Number of new family dwellings	Slum or va- cant site		Propo	sed cost per	r family dw	velling	- 24	119		200 V	4-116		West St
2170	Donator	Presi-				Land 12		Dw	elling facili	ties		Proposed		Local	Federal	Local	Proposed shelter rent per room per monthii is
Location of project	Develop- ment No.	dential list No.					Non-dwelling facilities 3	Net con- struc- tion 4	Equipment, archi- tects, and over- head ⁵	Total	Total	cost, entire project	Federal loan ⁶	capital participa- tion?	annual contribu- tion * *	annual contribu- tion 10
Michigan (4)				3, 193								$18, 404, 511	$16, 564, 000	$2, 025, 000	$715, 624	$453, 143
Detroit: Contract No. 1 Do	Mich. 1-1 Mich. 1-2 Mich. 1-4	} 8	June 2, 1938	248 355 2,150	Slum Vacant	1 710 1 412 1 176	590 959 1, 122	4, 177 4, 081 4, 069	373 365 365	4, 550 4, 446 4, 434	5, 850 5, 817 5, 732	1, 450, 818 2, 064, 948 12, 325, 234					(13) (13) (13)
Total Contract No. 2	Mich. 1-5	4	July 16, 1938	2, 753 440	Vacant	1 310	1,070	3, 951	495	4, 446	5, 826	15, 841, 000 2, 563, 511	14, 257, 000 2, 307, 000	1, 743, 000 282, 000	609, 879 105, 745	390, 404 62, 739	11 4. 2
Nebraska (1)				522								2, 492, 000	2, 243, 000	274,000	102, 795	70, 805
Omaha	Nebr. 1-1	4	July 16, 1938	522	75 percent slum.	1 560	714	3, 100	400	3, 500	4, 774	2, 492, 000	2, 243, 000	274, 000	102, 795	70, 805	11 4. 0
New Jersey (2)				2, 834								15, 764, 000	14, 185, 000	1, 738, 000	606, 795	660, 958
Asbury Park Elizabeth	N. J. 7-1 N. J. 3-1	9 5	Dec. 7, 1938 Sept. 7, 1938	126 423	Slum 20 percent slum.	1 472 1 572	523 888	3, 200 2, 339	586 506	3, 786 3, 845	4, 781 5, 305	750, 000 2, 244, 000	675, 000 2, 019, 000	83, 000 248, 000	$ 28, 875 $ 86, 380	22, 568 38, 553	19 4. 0
Newark	N. J. 2-1 N. J. 2-2	6	Oct. 21, 1938	444	Vacant 20 percent	1 1, 289 1 1, 173	799 563	3, 261 3, 485	365 379	3, 626 3, 864	5, 664 5, 600	2, 515, 000 1, 344, 000					11 5. 0 11 5. 0
Do	N. J. 2-5 N. J. 2-6	} 5	Sept. 7, 1938	463 465	slum. Slum. Vacant	1 1, 385 1 631	757 1, 004	3, 461 8, 334	380 371	3, 841 3, 705	5, 983 5, 340	2, 770, 000 2, 483, 000					11 5. 0 11 5. 0
Total North Bergen	N. Y. 4-1	6	Oct. 21, 1938	1, 612 170	Slum	1 1, 014	902	3, 190	535	3, 725	5, 641	9, 112, 000 959, 000	8, 199, 000 863, 000	1, 005, 000 105, 000	$ 350, 770 $ 36, 890	451, 371 52, 799	ii 8, 0
Trenton	N. J. 5-1 N. J. 5-2	} 7	Nov. 8, 1938	{ 123 380	50 percent	1 814 1 887	703 545	3, 048 3, 280	720 680	3, 768 3, 960	5, 285 5, 392	650, 000 2, 049, 000					11 4.5
Total				503								2, 699, 000	2, 429, 000	297, 000	103, 880	95, 667
New York (2)				9, 744								60, 691, 351	54, 620, 000	6, 678, 298	2, 336, 615	1, 681, 210
Buffalo: Contract No. 1	N. Y. 2-1	3	June 2, 1938	696	25 percent	1 958	667	3,706	485	4, 191	5, 816	4, 047, 651	3, 643, 000	445, 298	8 155, 835	140, 619	11 3. 7
Contract No. 2 Contract No. 3	N. Y. 2-2 N. Y. 2-3	5 7	Sept. 7, 1938 Nov. 3, 1938	172 771	slum. Slumdo	1 1, 020 1 954	433 424	3, 309 3, 605	546 725	3, 855 4, 330	5, 308 5, 708	913, 000 4, 401, 000	821, 000 3, 960, 000	101, 000 485, 000	$ 35, 140 $ 169, 435	28, 781 140, 915	11 4.0
New York: Contract No. 1 Do	N. Y. 5-1	} 2	Apr. 19, 1938	2,643	53 percent slum. 8 percent slum.	1 795 1 1, 074	841 878	(13)	(13)	4, 642	6, 278 6, 562	16, 592, 800 16, 740, 200					n 5, 1
Contract No. 2 Syracuse Utica. Yonkers	N. Y. 5-3 N. Y. 1-1 N. Y. 6-1 N. Y. 3-1	10 1 5 5	Dec. 14, 1938 Mar. 17, 1938 Sept. 7, 1938	5, 194 1, 476 678 212 545	Slum do Vacant Slum	1 965 1 1, 938 1 150 1 1, 430	492 703 877 638	3, 396 (13) 3, 224 3, 512	623 (13) 466 488	4,019 3,800 3,690 4,000	5, 476 6, 441 4, 717 6, 068	33, 333, 000 9, 323, 000 4, 366, 700 1, 000, 000 8, 307, 000	30, 000, 000 8, 390, 000 3, 930, 000 900, 000 2, 976, 000	3, 666, 000 1, 026, 000 481, 000 110, 000 364, 000	* 1, 283, 310 * 358, 925 * 168, 175 * 38, 500 * 127, 295	810, 000 282, 418 114, 269 33, 478 130, 730	19 5. 0 11 4. 1 11 4. 2 11 4. 5
North Carolina (2)	100000000000000000000000000000000000000		34	252								1, 285, 000	1, 155, 000	143, 000	49, 455	31, 075
Wilmington	N. C. 1-1	7	Nov. 3, 1938	116	25 percent slum. 70 percent	1 469	737 646	3, 001 2, 945	724 697	3, 725 8, 642	4, 931 5, 243	572, 000 713, 000					11 3. 5
Total		1	Des Silver	252	slum.			2, 510			0, 220	1, 285, 000	1, 155, 000	143, 000	49, 455	31, 075

Ohio (12)					890								30, 651, 330	27, 584, 000	8, 375, 500	1, 193, 081	558, 727
Cincinnati		5	Sept.	7, 1938	{ 750 750	Vacantdo	1 399 1 138	1, 134 1, 250	3, 407 3, 407	393 393	3, 800 3, 800	5, 333 5, 188	4, 000, 000 3, 891, 000					11 4. 50 11 4. 50
Total					1,500								7, 891, 000	7, 101, 000	869,000	⁸ 303, 800	151, 241
Cleveland	- Ohio 3-1		200		554	75 percent slum.	1 1, 161	704	3, 655	437	4, 092	5, 957	3, 300, 000					(13)
Do	Ohio 3-2	3	June	2, 1938	627 623	Slum Vacant	1 1, 260 1 265	446 762	3, 646 3, 729	437 445	4, 083 4, 174	5, 789 5, 201	3, 630, 000 3, 240, 000					(18)
Total	Ohio 1-1	3	June	2, 1938	1,804 456	Slum	1 892	593	2, 761	353	3, 114	4, 599	10, 170, 000 2, 097, 330	9, 153, 000 1, 888, 000	1, 119, 000 230, 000	8 391, 545 8 80, 747	237, 444 30, 315	11 4. 28 11 4. 28
Dayton	Ohio 5-1}	4	July	16, 1938	{ 400 200	Vacantdo	1 272 1 248	920 1,005	3, 235 3, 216	413 431	3, 648 3, 647	4, 840 4, 900	1, 936, 000 980, 000					11 4. 2
Total	THE RESERVE OF THE PARTY OF THE	34 M		-22-2222	600								2, 916, 000	2, 624, 000	322,000	120, 285	40, 544
Warren	Ohio 8-1	10	Dec.	16, 1938 14, 1938	380 224 600	Vacantdo	1303 1113 1617	905 999 769	3, 185 3, 060 (¹³)	415 743 (15)	3, 600 3, 803 3, 864	4, 808 4, 915 5, 250	1, 827, 000 1, 101, 000	2, 624, 000 1, 644, 000 990, 000	202, 000 122, 000	* 75, 364 * 42, 385 * 121, 275	28, 638 15, 598 89, 917	11 4. 50 12 4. 00 11 4. 20
Zanesville	The same of the same of the	9	EST OF	7, 1938	326	slum. 30 percent	:109	795	2,908	570	3, 478	4, 382	3, 150, 000 1, 499, 000	2, 835, 000 1, 849, 000	346, 500 165, 000	* 57, 680	15, 030	11 317
Pennsylvania (9)		- 5	200.	,, 2000	7, 113	slum.							41, 046, 511	36, 939, 000	4, 518, 233	1, 626, 434	619, 727	-
Allentown	The state of the s	3	Tune	2 1938	322	Vacant	1 172	1, 133	3. 258	428	3 686	4 901			177, 000		20, 110	11 3. 71
Chester	Pa. 7-1	5	Sept.	2, 1938 7, 1938	396	50 percent slum.	1 787	1, 133 955	3, 258 3, 282	428 443	3, 686 3, 725	4, 991 5, 467	1, 607, 000 2, 165, 000	1, 446, 000 1, 948, 000	239, 000	8 61, 870 8 83, 335	56, 929	11 4. 00
Philadelphia	Pa. 2-1		Turke	10 1020	620	10 percent	1 593	943	3, 465	449	3,914	5, 450	3, 378, 700					11 4. 50
Do	Pa. 2-2		July	16, 1938	1,000	Vacant	1 259	975 671	3, 591 3, 450	459 445	4,050	5, 284 5, 978	5, 283, 800 8, 136, 011					11 4. 50
Total					2, 981								16, 798, 511	15, 118, 000	1, 848, 833	9 692, 938	251, 731
Pittsburgh: Contract No. 1	Pa. 1-1)		100	Market 1	(825	30 percent	1 541	1, 451	3, 598	402	4,000	5,992	4, 943, 000					(18)
Do	Mar Topology	3	June	2, 1938	431	slum. 40 percent slum.	1 834	1, 194	3, 491	404	3, 895	5, 923	2, 553, 000					(13)
Total Contract No. 2			196.1	III, ESE	1, 256 1, 758								7, 496, 000 10, 975, 000	6, 746, 000 9, 877, 000	824, 400	* 288, 596 * 422, 520	98, 620 130, 101	11 4. 25
Reading	Pa. 9-1	6	Oct. Dec.	21, 1938 14, 1938	400	Vacant	1 708 1 155	1,655 1,032	3, 468 3, 119	412 707	3,880 3,826	6, 243 5, 013	2,005,000	1,804,000	1, 208, 000 221, 000	8 77, 175	62, 236	11 4. 50 12 4. 00
South Carolina (6) Charleston:					906								4, 628, 900	4, 164, 000	511,000	178, 146	102, 693
Contract No. 1 Do	S. C. 1-1	1	Mar.	. 17, 1938	{ 126 90	Slum Vacant	1 1, 375 1 261	819 909	(18) (18)	(13)	3, 366 3, 600	5, 560 4, 770	700, 400 429, 500					11 4.00
Total					216								1, 129, 900	1, 017, 000	125, 000	8 43, 501	20, 800
Contract No. 2 Do		10	Dec.	14, 1938	{ 162 128	Slumdo	2 344 2 455	721 577	2, 595 2, 505	471 466	3, 066 2, 971	4, 131	774, 000 667, 000					13 3.00
Total			THE STATE OF		290								1, 441, 000	1, 296, 000	159,000	$ 55, 440	29, 719
Columbia	S. C. 2-1	6	Oct.	21, 1938	{ 200 200	Slumdo	1 604 1 678	879 857	3, 191 2, 977	556 548	3, 747 3, 525	5, 230 5, 060	1, 046, 000 1, 012, 000					11 3, 78
Total					400		- 018	801	2, 511	020	8, 020	3,000	2, 058, 000	1, 851, 000	227, 000	* 79, 205	52, 174	3. 0
rennessee (5)					2, 238	act to the	0.00						11, 453, 771	10, 307, 000	1, 262, 800	448, 578	270, 727
Chattanooga	1 10001 1 0 0 2	6	Oct.	21, 1938	496	Slum	1 970	685	2, 907	507	3, 414	5, 069	2, 514, 000	2, 262, 000	277, 000	$ 96, 775	44, 277	11 3. 50
Knoxville		4	July	16, 1938	{ 244 320	Vacant	1 88	1, 384 869	2, 991 2, 991	509 509	3, 500 3, 500	4, 972 4, 901	1, 213, 295 1, 568, 476					11 3.76
Total					564		- 002		2,001		0,000	4,001	2, 781, 771	2, 504, 000	306, 800	9 114, 748	106, 263
Memphis	Tenn. 1-1	7	Nov.	8, 1938	{ 478	Slum	1 985 1 980	752 914	2,819 2,750	620	3, 439 3, 369	5, 176 5, 263	2, 474, 000					11 3. 50
Total			Section 1		1, 178	do	- 880	914	2,750	619	8,809	0, 203	6, 158, 000	$5, 541, 000	$679,000	* $237, 055	$120, 187	11 3. 25
Pexas (13)	A STATE OF THE PARTY OF THE				3, 306								13, 171, 138	11, 851, 000	1, 448, 500	524, 118	349, 811
Austin	Tex. 1-1				86	Slum	1 672	610	(13)	(13)	2,750	4, 032 3, 762	CONTRACTOR NAMED IN					11 2, 84
Do	Tex. 1-3	1	Mar.	17, 1938	l 40	Vacantdo	1 308 1 256	1, 103 881	(13) (13) (13)	(13) (13) (13)	2,750 2,351 2,414	3, 762 3, 551	346, 719 225, 710 142, 043					11 2. 66 11 2. 70
Total					186								714, 472	643, 000	78, 500	8 27, 507	9, 984

See footnotes at end of table.

			100		14		Propo	sed cost pe	r family dv	velling		227
		Presi-	Date ap-	Number of new family dwell- ings	Slum or va- cant site	Land 12		Dw	relling facili	ties		Proposed		Local	Federal	Local	Proposed shelter
Location of project	Develop- ment No.	dential list No.	proved of by Presi- dent				Non-dwelling facilities 3	Net con- struc- tion 4	Equipment, architects, and overhead $	Total	Total	cost, entire project	Federal loan 6	capital participa- tion ?	annual contribu- tion 8 9	annual contribu- tion 10	rent per room per monthii ii
Texas—Continued. Brownsville	Tex. 7-1	6	Oct. 21, 1938	148	Slum	1 $419	$784	$2,437	$374	$2,811	$4, 014	$594,000	$534,000	$66,000	s $22, 855	$24,006	11 $2.00
Corpus Christi	Tex. 8-1	-1		85	33-percent	1 370	678	2, 376	258	2, 634	3, 682	313, 000					11 3. 25
Do	Tex. 8-2 Tex. 8-3	-	Sept. 7,1938	112 45	slum. Slumdo	1 273 1 1, 075	833 856	2, 415 2, 360	265 265	2, 680 2, 625	3, 786 4, 556	424, 000 205, 000					11 3. 00 11 3. 00
Total	Tex. 3-1	5	Sept. 7,1938	242 318	Slum	1 902	457	2, 552	319	2, 871	4, 230	942, 000 1, 345, 000	846, 000 1, 210, 000	105, 000 148, 000	8 36, 225 8 51, 765	30, 222 50, 210	11 2. 75
Fort Worth		} 4	July 16, 1938	{ 252 250	do	1 665 1 439	841 729	2, 959 2, 682	341 318	3, 300 3, 000	4, 806 4, 168	1, 211, 199 1, 042, 087					11 3. 00 11 2. 75
Total				502								2, 253, 286	2, 028, 000	247, 000	9 92, 948	68, 311
Houston Do	hazar established	1 9	Dec. 7, 1938	{ 332 328	20-percent slum. Slum.	² 280 ² 514	894 789	2, 735 2, 723	642 613	3, 377 3, 336	4, 551 4, 639	1, 558, 000 1, 778, 000					12 2.75 12 2.75
San Antonio Vermont (1)	Tex. 6-1	4	July 16, 1938	660 1, 250 101	Slum	1 509	290	2, 200	190	2, 390	3, 189	3, 336, 000 3, 986, 380 485, 000	-3, 002, 000 3, 588, 000 436, 000	366, 000 438, 000 54, 000	8 128, 380 9 164, 438 18, 655	80, 255 86, 823 12, 792	11 2.00
Burlington	Vt. 1-1	- 9	Dec. 7, 1938	101	Vacant	² 133	808	3, 198	663	3, 861	4, 802	485, 000	436, 000	54, 000	⁸ 18, 655	12, 792	12 3. 75
West Virginia (6)	18 13 7	-		1, 156								5, 499, 500	4, 948, 000	607,000	218, 330	81, 594
Charleston	W. Va. 1-1. W. Va. 1-2.	-} 4	July 16, 1938	{ 366 138	Slum Vacant	1 754 1 480	484 597	3, 200 3, 200	400 400	3, 600 3, 600	4, 838 4, 677	1, 771, 252 645, 248					11 4.00 11 4.00
Total				504								2, 416, 500	2, 175, 000	266, 000	9 99, 680	31, 126
Huntington Do	W Va 4-9	5	Sept. 7, 1938	80 136 284	Slumdo Vacant	1 890 1 386 1 120	677 580 860	3, 215 3, 160 3, 100	481 470 462	3, 696 3, 630 3, 562	5, 263 4, 596 4, 542	421,000 625,000 1,290,000					11 3, 50 11 3, 50 11 3, 50
Total				500	ļ							2, 336, 000	2, 101, 000	259,000	8 89, 915	38, 535
Parkersburg	W. Va. 5-1.	- 6	Oct. 21, 1938	152	Vacant	1 436	759	3, 114	605	3, 719	4, 914	747, 000	672,000	82,000	⁸ 28, 735	11, 933	11 3. 75
Grand total		-	·	64, 451	(14)	(16)	(14)	(14)	(14)	(14)	(14)	356, 695, 341	320, 986, 000	39, 286, 466	13, 864, 364	9, 141, 507

¹ Includes cost of land to be purchased, value of land to be donated, expenses of acquiring land, demolition and clearing, and the local authority's administrative and carrying charges applicable to these items.

² Includes cost of land to be purchased (excluding cost of existing structures), value of land to be donated, expenses of acquiring land, and the local authority's administrative and carrying charges applicable to these statistics.)

† Includes construction cost of dwellings. (This is comparable to and comprises the same items as residential construction costs compiled by Bureau of Labor Statistics, and comprises the same items as building permit statistics.)

Includes dwelling equipment (such as ranges, refrigerators, screens, etc.), and the local authority's overhead, carrying, and architectural charges applicable to dwelling construction and equipment.

Federal loans are provided in contracts at 90 percent of proposed cost. These amounts, as shown above, may later, at the option of the U.S. Housing Authority, be increased by one-tenth in the form of supplemental loans in case of possible overruns. In no event may Federal loans exceed 90 percent of actual cost.

Local capital participation is provided in contracts to include 10 percent of both the proposed cost and the margin of safety of one-tenth for possible overruns. Because of the inclusion of local margin of safety, the total of the amounts shown as "Federal loan" and as "Local capital participation" exceeds "Proposed cost entire propert" by 1 percent project" by 1 percent.

⁴ Federal annual contributions are provided in contracts of 3½ percent of proposed cost plus margin of safety one-tenth for possible overruns. In no event may Federal Annual contributions exceed 3½ percent of actual

Federal annual contributions are provided in contracts at 3¾ percent of proposed cost plus margin of safety of one-tenth for possible overruns. In no event may Federal annual contributions exceed 3¾ percent of actual ¹⁰ Local annual contributions are maximum amounts computed on the proposed development cost plus the margin of safety of one-tenth for possible overruns. Local annual contributions are required by law to be at least 20 percent of Federal annual contributions. In all cases, the local annual contributions provided in conracts are much in excess of this minimum, averaging 65 percent in the above projects. Local annual contributions represent the value of exemptions from local taxes less payments in lieu of taxes, if any.

"Shelter rent per room per month includes water. Additional charge will be made for heat, gas, and electricity when furnished by project.

11 Shelter rent per room per month includes no utility services. Additional charge will be made for water, heat, gas, and electricity when furnished by project.

12 Amounts not yet available.
13 Amounts not yet available.
14 85 loan contracts; 140 developments; 73 cities and 2 counties in 22 States, the District of Columbia, and Prepared in Budgets and Statistical Section, Division of Finance and Accounts:

³ Includes construction cost of site improvements and nondwelling buildings, spaces and equipment; pre-occupancy charges, and the local authority's administrative, carrying, and architectural charges applicable to these items.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President-

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. McNARY. The meeting of the Senate today followed an adjournment. Unanimous consent was given the Senator from Maryland [Mr. Typings] to discuss a matter of great importance. He has now concluded his discussion. We are in the morning hour. Routine morning business is now pending. I ask for the regular order.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. McNARY. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. I have asked the Senator to yield to permit me to make a statement. Of course, I would not want to have the Senate or the country think that the statement made by the distinguished Senator from Maryland is to go unchallenged. We heard a great deal of the argument presented by the Senator when the bill was originally under consideration. After discussion, the bill was passed by a vote of 64 in favor, to 12, I think, against.

Mr. President, personally I do not think any program has received such widespread public approval as the Slum Clearance Act and the activities under it. Thirty-eight States are now taking advantage of the cooperative system by which the Federal Government makes loans and provides a subsidy, without which these low-income families could never be rehoused. Without the subsidy the slums would continue to exist, with all the attendant misery and the hardships, and would constitute a breeding place for disease and crime.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WAGNER. I yield.

Mr. FRAZIER. How many States did the Senator say took advantage of the Housing Act?

Mr. WAGNER. Thirty-eight. Mr. FRAZIER. Twenty States are shown as taking advantage of it, on the list the Senator from Maryland intro-

Mr. TYDINGS. I think 22 States. Mr. WAGNER. I am not certain about that figure. The reason I wish to defer any further statement with reference to the matter is because I desire to examine the figures which have been presented by the Senator from Maryland, and at a very early date I hope I may be able to answer the Senator, or agree with him, if I find that the information he received is accurate.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WAGNER. I yield. Mr. TYDINGS. If the Senator finds that the rent subsidies over 60 years are going to be more than two and a half times the original cost of the buildings, if the Senator finds that the average cost per family unit is $5,520, which is more than the average cost of the family home in America; in other words, if the Senator finds that my statements are accurate, will he join or will he take the lead in revamping the act so that these large expenditures may be reduced?

Mr. WAGNER. As to what amendments I may suggest, I would rather leave that until I have had a chance to examine the figures. Let me say that the amount of the subsidy is not the most important thing to me. The important thing is the social benefit and the economic benefit which we are bringing about by clearing the slums. Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator should be fair there. I understand-

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I do not wish to be dis-

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator has been generous, and I do not wish to indulge upon his generosity any further at this

Mr. McNARY. The hour of 2 o'clock is approaching, and the Senate should proceed to the business of the morning

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator permit one further statement?

Mr. McNARY. I yield. Mr. WAGNER. The Senator from Maryland said some of these houses were built for the low-income group without any slum clearance. If that is so, it has been done in violation of the law, because the law specifically provides that for every unit constructed to house the slum dweller a unit of slum property must be demolished. That provision is in the law and it is absolutely mandatory. It happens some-times that the house is not built upon the site of the slum, but the slum must be cleared, and the number of units built must not exceed the units of slum dwellings which are cleared.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator from New York yield?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I have the floor.

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator has been more than courteous. I shall not trespass further.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Oregon for yielding to me so that I could make the statement I have made.

Mr. McNARY. We are approaching the hour of 2 o'clock. I call for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order is called

Mr. KING. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold that suggestion for a moment?

Mr. KING. Yes.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I introduce a private bill, and wish to make a brief statement in connection therewith.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, in view of the impending expiration of the morning hour, I shall object. I do not think any extended remarks ought to be made in connection with the introduction of bills. We have only 2 hours in which to transact morning business. The 2-hour period has almost expired. I do not wish to be discourteous to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. REYNOLDS. It will take me just a moment to make my statement. I hope the Senator from Missouri will not object.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, we ought to proceed with the regular order. There will be ample opportunity during the remainder of the session for the Senator from North Carolina to introduce the bill and make an explanation of it.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, let me suggest that the Senator withhold the introduction of his bill until morning business shall have been completed, at which time he will have an opportunity to introduce his bill and make an explanation thereof.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Very well.

ADDITIONAL PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The presentation of petitions and memorials is in order.

Mr. CAPPER presented the memorial of Rev. Paul E. Johnson, pastor, and members of the First Baptist Church of Junction City, Kans., remonstrating against inclusion of religious bodies under the operation of the social-security system, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented petitions, numerously signed, of sundry citizens of Topeka and vicinity, in the State of Kansas, praying that the United States adhere to a general policy of neutrality, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Ottawa. Kans., praying for the adoption of a policy of nonparticipation in aggression and discontinuance of the shipment of war supplies to Japan for use in operations in China, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Walnut. Kans., praying that the United States adhere to the general policy of neutrality as enunciated in existing law and extend the law to include civil as well as international conflicts, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. CLARK of Missouri, from the Committee on Interoceanic Canals, to which were referred the following bill and joint resolution, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 1215. A bill to amend the Canal Zone Code (Rept. No.

S. J. Res. 70. Joint resolution providing for the participation of the United States in the celebration of the twentyfifth anniversary of the opening of the Panama Canal (Rept. No. 146).

Mr. SMITH, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to which was referred the bill (S. 1098) to amend section 12 of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, by authorizing advances for crop insurance, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 147) thereon.

Mr. PITTMAN, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 950) to exempt all vessels of the United States of less than 200 tons gross registered tonnage from the provisions of the Officers' Competency Certificates Convention, 1936 (being International Labor Conference Treaty, Convention No. 53, adopted by the International Labor Conference at Geneva in 1936), reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 148) thereon.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. BILBO:

S. 1724. A bill for the relief of J. C. Watts; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

S. 1725. A bill relating to the acquisition of the site for the post-office building to be constructed in Poplarville, Miss.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. By Mr. McKELLAR:

S. 1726. A bill to provide time credits for substitutes in the pneumatic-tube service:

S. 1727. A bill limiting working hours of pneumatic-tubesystem employees to 8 in 10 hours a day;

S. 1728. A bill to provide a differential in pay for night work by pneumatic-tube-system employees in the Postal Service; and

S. 1729. A bill to extend the provisions of the 40-hour law to pneumatic-tube-system employees in the Postal Service; to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

By Mr. TOWNSEND:

S. 1730. A bill to amend the civil-service law to permit certain employees of the legislative branch of the Government to be transferred to positions under the competitive classified civil service; to the Committee on Civil Service.

By Mr. CAPPER:

S. 1731. A bill granting an increase of pension to Frances Coffman (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. NEELY:

S. 1732. A bill granting a pension to Luther R. Drum:

S. 1733. A bill granting an increase of pension to Eddie L.

S. 1734. A bill granting an increase of pension to Sarah Roush; to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 1735. A bill for the relief of Auguste C. Loiseau; and S. 1736. A bill for the relief of the heirs of James H. Hardesty; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. TOBEY:

S. 1737. A bill granting a pension to Eliza Manzer; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HILL:

S. 1738. A bill authorizing the establishment and operation of a military aircraft engineering center to determine production costs of military aircraft, and for other purposes of national defense; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

(Mr. Wagner introduced Senate bill 1739, which was referred to the Special Committee to Investigate Unemployment and Relief and appears under a separate heading.)

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

S. 1740. A bill to promote business and economic research in the United States by establishing and maintaining, in connection with State university schools of business administration, research stations to cooperate with the Department of Commerce; to the Committee on Commerce.

S. 1741. A bill to exempt fraternal beneficiary societies from the tax on employers under the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. LOGAN:

S. 1742. A bill for the relief of Isaac Rosenbaum & Sons, Inc., of Louisville, Ky.; to the Committee on Claims.

(Mr. Logan also introduced Senate bill 1743, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency, and appears under a separate heading.)

(Mr. REYNOLDS introduced Senate bill 1744, which was referred to the Committee on Claims, and appears under a separate heading.)

(Mr. Lewis introduced Senate bill 1745, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and appears under a separate heading.)

By Mr. NEELY:

S. 1746. A bill granting a pension to Unoca Ferguson; to the Committee on Pensions.

(Mr. Sheppard introduced Senate Joint Resolution 88, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and appears under a separate heading.)

PLANNED PROGRAM OF PUBLIC WORKS-FEDERAL EMPLOYMENT STABILIZATION BOARD

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I introduce a bill which really proposes the reenactment of a law which I sponsored in 1931, which was passed by the Congress and signed by President Hoover. It provided for the planning of public works 6 years in advance, so that the Government would have a planned program under which public construction could be accelerated when a depression was approaching and when economic conditions showed the likelihood of the coming of unemployment, and then public-works construction could be retarded as conditions improved, so that our public-works program might fit in with our general program for an economic balance.

I ask that the bill be printed in the RECORD together with a statement and referred to the Special Committee to Investigate Unemployment and Relief because that matter is now under consideration by that committee. I hope the committee will give it serious and favorable consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill introduced by the Senator from New York will be received and referred as indicated by him, and, without objection, printed in the RECORD with the statement referred to.

The bill (S. 1739) to provide for the advance planning and regulated construction of public works, to promote the sound investment of public funds, to diminish unemployment during periods of business depression, to conserve national resources, to create a Federal Employment Stabilization Board, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Special Committee to Investigate Unemployment and Relief, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "Employ-ment Stabilization Act of 1939."

FEDERAL EMPLOYMENT STABILIZATION BOARD

SEC. 2. (a) There is hereby established a board to be known as the Federal Employment Stabilization Board, composed of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Commerce, the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of War, the Secretary of Labor, and three other members from widely separated sections of the United States, to be appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Secretary of the Interior shall serve as chairman of the Board. The appointive members of the Board shall be compensated at the rate of $50 per day for time spent in attending and traveling to and from appointive members of the Board shall be compensated at the rate of $50 per day for time spent in attending and traveling to and from Board meetings, or in otherwise exercising the functions of the Board, plus actual expenses incurred in such travel: Provided, That in no case shall such a member be entitled to receive compensation for more than 30 days' services in any 2 consecutive months.

(b) The Board is authorized to appoint, in accordance with the civil-service laws, a director and such experts and clerical and other assistants, and to make such expenditures (including expenditures for personal services and rent at the seat of government and elsewhere, for law books, books of reference, and periodicals) as may be necessary for the administration of this act, and as may be provided for by Congress from time to time. The compensation of the director and such experts and clerical and other assistants shall be fixed in accordance with the Classification Act of 1923, as amended. The director and his staff may be domiciled in and attached to one of the executive departments. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated annually such sum as may be necessary for the expenses of the Board.

ADVANCE PLANNING

SEC. 3. (a) It shall be the duty of the Board to consult and cooperate with the construction agencies of the United States, the planning and construction agencies of the various States and municipalities thereof, and with any other public or private planning or research agencies or institutions, in the preparation of advance plans of public construction.

plans of public construction.

(b) Each head of a department or independent establishment of the United States having jurisdiction over a construction agency shall direct such agency to prepare and present to the Board a 6-year advance plan with estimates showing projects allotted to each year. Each construction agency shall keep its 6-year plan up to date by an annual revision of the plans and estimates for the unexpired years and by annually extending the plan and estimates for an additional year.

(c) The Board shall report to the President at least quarterly, and at such other times as it believes necessary, concerning the

and at such other times as it believes necessary, concerning the trend of employment and business activity and the existence or approach of periods of business depression and unemployment in the United States or in any substantial area thereof. In addition to such interim reports, the Board shall submit a progress report to the President and to Congress at least once each year.

ACCELERATION OF EMERGENCY CONSTRUCTION

SEC. 4. In order to promote the sound investment of public funds, to diminish unemployment, and stabilize productive enterprise during periods of economic depression, and to foster speedy, efficient, and economical construction during such periods, the President may direct the construction agencies of the United States to accelerate during such periods, to such extent as may be practicable, the commencement or completion of all planned construction within their control struction within their control.

NATIONAL RESOURCES

SEC. 5. (a) The Board is authorized and directed to investigate,

SEC. 5. (a) The Board is authorized and directed to investigate, examine, study, analyze, assemble, coordinate, and at suitable intervals to review and revise basic information and materials appropriate to the formulation of plans or planning policies for the conservation, development, and utilization of the natural resources of the United States and the several States.

(b) Upon the organization of the Board, the National Resources Committee, created by Executive Order No. 7065, dated June 7, 1935, shall cease to exist and stand dissolved, and all functions, records, and property thereof shall be transferred to the Board, together with the unexpended balance of all funds made available for expenditure by the National Resources Committee, such funds to be used by the Board in the administration of this act. All existing obligations of the National Resources Committee shall be assumed by the Board. The personnel of the National Resources existing obligations of the National Resources assumed by the Board. The personnel of the National Resources Committee shall be transferred to the Board without change in classification or compensation, but such transfer shall not be construed to give such personnel a permanent or civil-service status.

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 6. When used in this act—

(a) The term "Board" means the Federal Employment Stabilization Board established by section 2 of this act;
(b) The term "United States," when used in a geographical sense, includes the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia:

(c) The term "construction agencies" shall include all agencies of the United States engaged in public construction, or in making loans or grants of funds, or in furnishing materials, labor, or other leans or grants of funds, or in furnishing materials, labor, or other assistance for public or private construction, and shall include the executive departments and such temporary and permanent independent establishments as may be designated by the President from time to time, including but not limited to the following: Civil Aeronautics Authority, Civilian Conservation Corps, District of Columbia, Electric Home and Farm Authority, Farm Security Administration, Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works, Federal Housing Administration, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Rural Electrification Administration, Tennessee Valley Authority, United States Maritime Commission, Veterans' Administration, Works Progress Administration.

(d) The term "construction" shall include repairs and alterations and the manufacture of equipment and the purchase of such tions and the manufacture of equipment and the purchase of such materials, supplies, and equipment as may be necessary or incidental thereto.

The statement presented by Mr. WAGNER is as follows:

STATEMENT RELATIVE TO THE BILL TO REESTABLISH THE FEDERAL EMPLOYMENT STABILIZATION BOARD

The bill I have just introduced would implement the permanent policies approved by Congress in the Employment Stabilization Act of 1931, which I sponsored, for the advance planning of public works on a 6-year basis. That early legislation, though still on the statute books, became virtually a dead letter with the abolition of the Federal Employment Stabilization Board in March 1934. The 6-year program which the Board had prepared, in the words of 1936 report of the National Resources Committee, "proved enormously valuable in the quick development of Federal projects at the outset of the work of the Public Works Administration, but the organization of the board in the midst of the depression period had prevented full use and development of its possibilities."

By re-creating machinery for public-works planning, the proposed bill would promote the most economical expenditure of public funds in periods of business depression, for the purpose of diminishing unemployment and stabilizing productive enterprise.

The new Federal Employment Stabilization Board is established as a permanent Federal agency, composed of six Cabinet members and three other persons from widely separated parts of the country, appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Secretary of the Interior would serve as chairman of the board. Its director and staff are authorized to be domiciled in and attached to one of the executive departments; consequently the board's functions could be correlated with those of any permanent public-works department or agency which hereany permanent public-works department or agency which hereafter may be created.

The board is authorized to consult and cooperate in the prepara-tion of advance plans of construction with agencies of the Federal tion of advance plans of construction with agencies of the Federal Government, temporary and permanent, engaged in, or financing or otherwise aiding, construction activities throughout the country, as well as with the planning and construction agencies of the States and other public or private planning or research organizations. The heads of the various Federal departments or independent agencies having such construction functions are required to prepare and present to the board 6-year advance plans, and to keep the plans up to date by annual revisions. The board, in turn, is directed to keep in constant touch with the volume of private and public construction, the index of employment and other pertinent information, and to apprise the President, through frequent reports, of the trend of employment and business activity and the existence or approach of business depressions in various parts of the United States. the United States.

The board would act only in an advisory capacity; the bill does not appropriate or authorize the appropriation of any construction funds. However, upon the basis of information made available by the board, the Federal Government, with such additional and prompt congressional action as may be necessary, would be enabled to launch or accelerate an effective public-works program to take up the slack in private enterprise, with a minimum of delay and economic waste and with a maximum effectiveness in mitigating the downward sween of the hustpass crefe the downward sweep of the business cycle.

The board is also authorized to investigate and study basic information and material appropriate to the formulation of plans and planning policies for the conservation and development of the public resources of the United States and the several States. This function, together with that of advance planning of public works, would give permanence to the present operations of the National Passaures Committee Resources Committee.

In recent times there has been a growing realization that unemployment is a more or less permanent problem, requiring the formulation of long-range policies and the creation of long-range administrative programs. The round-table discussion on "the effects of Government spending upon private enterprise," just published by Fortune magazine, disclosed support by thoughtful citizens in every field of national endeavor for a planned public-works program such as that here proposed. At this time, therefore, when the conviction which led me to sponsor this legislation in 1928 is widely held throughout the country, and when a permanent public-works program is under consideration, I believe it opportune to take steps toward reestablishing a national public-works planning agency. In recent times there has been a growing realization that unem-

CREDIT FACILITIES FOR SMALL BUSINESS

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, I introduce a bill to provide more adequate credit facilities for independent small business, and for other purposes. I ask to have printed, together with the bill, as a part of my remarks, a statement which I have prepared, also a summary of the bill which has been prepared by the sponsors of it, and also an article by Walter Lippmann entitled "Small Enterprise and Economic Independence Are the Bulwarks of Democracy." I ask unanimous consent to have this matter printed in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill introduced by the Senator from Kentucky will be received and appropriately referred and the bill and the papers referred to by him will, without objection, be printed in the RECORD.

The bill (S. 1743) to provide more adequate credit facilities for independent small business, to encourage the return of private capital to commercial investment channels, to discourage monopoly, and restore opportunity for the individual, was read twice by its title, referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That as used in this act:
(1) The term "independent small business" means any lawful business which is independently and locally owned and controlled, or a majority of the stock of which is locally owned and controlled, and which is not engaged in production in more than one State and does not own, control, or operate distribution units in more than one State.

(2) The term "Board" means the Federal Investment Bank Board, created under authority of this act, (3) The term "bank" means a Federal investment bank estab-lished by the Board under authority of this act.

(4) The term "district" shall mean a Federal investment bank district created under authority of this act

(4) The term "district" shall mean a rederal investment bank district created under authority of this act.
(5) The term "directors" means the board of directors of a bank, appointed pursuant to the provisions of this act.
(6) The term "association" means a local investment association of independent small-business men, organized under the provisions of section 10 of this act and pursuant to rules and regulations prescribed by the Board.

(7) The term "corporation" means the Federal Investment Insurance Corporation created under authority of this act.

(8) The term "insured association" means a Federal Investment

Association whose accounts are insured under this act.

(9) The term "insured member" means an individual, partnership, association, or corporation which holds an insured account.

(10) The term "insured account" means a share, certificate, or deposit account of a type approved by the Federal Investment Insurance Corporation which is held by an insured member in an insured association and which is insured under the provisions of

(11) the term "default" means an adjudication or other official determination of a court of competent jurisdiction or other public authority pursuant to which a conservator, receiver, or other legal custodian is appointed for an insured association for the purpose of liquidation.

of liquidation.

Sec. 2. For the purposes of this act there shall be a Board known as the Federal Investment Bank Board, which shall consist of three citizens of the United States appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. The President shall designate one of the members to serve for a term of 1 year, one for 2 years, and one for 3 years from the date of the enactment hereof, and thereafter the term of each member shall be 3 years from the date of the expiration of the term for which his predecessor was appointed. Not more than two members of the Board shall be members of the same political party, and all of the members of the Board shall be selected with due regard for the intent of Congress to establish an agency primarily for the benefit of independent small business: Provided, That the first vacancy on the Board constituted as hereinbefore provided shall be filled by the President from a list of three men recommended by the banks and the next vacancy shall be similarly filled upon the recommendation of a majority of the associations. Thereafter the Board shall consist of one member representing the banks, one the associations, and one selected by the President without regard to the foregoing, representing the public. Appropriate rules and regulations under which the recommendations herein provided for may be made shall be prescribed by the Board. Each member shall devote his entire time to the business of the Board. Before entering upon his duties each of the members shall take an oath faithfully to discharge the duties of his office. The President shall be authorized to remove any member of the Board and, as hereinbefore provided, to appoint his successor. Whenever a vacancy shall occur among the members of the Board the person appointed to fill such members shall hold office for the unexpired portion of the term of the member whose place he is selected to fill. Each of such members shall hold office for the unexpired portion of the term of the members shall be performed by some SEC. 2. For the purposes of this act there shall be a Board known of his office shall be performed by some one of the other members, to be designated as acting chairman by the chairman in such order as he may determine. The Board shall supervise the banks and the Federal Investment Insurance Corporation created by this act; shall perform the other duties specifically prescribed by this act; and shall have power to adopt, amend, and require the observance of such rules, regulations, and orders as shall be necessary from time to time for carrying out the purposes of the provisions of this act. The Board shall have power to suspend or remove any director, officer, employee, or agent of any bank or of the Corporation, the cause of such suspension or removal to be communicated in writing forthwith to such director, officer, employee, or agent.

SEC. 3. (a) There is hereby appropriated the sum of not in excess of $200,000 for salaries, travel and subsistence expenses, rents, printing and binding, furniture and equipment, law books, books of reference, periodicals, newspapers, maps, contract stenographic reporting service, telephone and telegraph service, and all other necessary expense of the Board, together with expenses preliminary to the organization and establishment of the banks created hereunder, until the close of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940.

(b) The Board shall have power to levy semiannually upon the of his office shall be performed by some one of the other members, the close of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940.

(b) The Board shall have power to levy semiannually upon the banks, and they shall pay, on such equitable basis as the Board shall determine, an assessment sufficient in its judgment to provide for the payment of its estimated expenses for the half year succeeding the levying of each such assessment beginning with July 1, 1940: Provided, That the aggregate assessment for any one year shall not exceed $300,000. All expenses of the Board incurred in carrying out the provisions of this act, as determined by it, beginning on the 1st of July 1940, shall be paid from the proceeds of such assessment, and if any deficiency shall occur in such fund at any time between such semiannual assessment, the Board shall have power, subject to the foregoing limitation upon the aggregate amount, to make an immediate assessment against the banks to cover such deficiency on the diate assessment against the banks to cover such deficiency on the same basis as the original assessment. If any surplus shall remain from any assessment after the expiration of the semiannual period for which it is levied, such surplus may be deducted from the next following assessment.

SEC. 4. The Board shall have power to select, employ, and fix the SEC. 4. The Board shall have power to select, employ, and fix the compensation for such officers, employees, attorneys, and agents as shall be necessary for the performance of its duties under this act without regard to the provisions of other laws applicable to the employment or compensation of officers, employees, attorneys, and agents of the United States. No such officer, employee, attorney, or agent shall be paid compensation at a rate in excess of the rate provided in the case of members of the Board. The Board shall be entitled to free use of the United States mails for its official business entitled to free use of the United States mails for its official business in the same manner as the executive departments of the Government, and shall determine its necessary expenditures under this act and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed, and paid. Sec. 5. The Board shall from time to time, at least twice annually, require examinations and reports of conditions of all banks in such form as the Board shall prescribe and shall furnish periodically statements based upon the reports of the banks to the Board. The Board shall annually make a full report of its operations to the Congress. For the purposes of this act, examiners appointed by the Board shall be subject to the same requirements, responsibilities, and penalties as are applicable to examiners under the National Banking Act and the Federal Reserve Act, and shall have, in the exercise of functions under this act, the same powers and privileges

Banking Act and the Federal Reserve Act, and shall have, in the exercise of functions under this act, the same powers and privileges as are vested in such examiners by law.

SEC. 6. As soon as practicable after the enactment of this act, the Board shall divide the continental United States, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii into not less than 12 districts. Such districts shall be apportioned with due regard to the convenience and due course of business to be served by the banks and may be identical with the existing districts of the Federal Reserve System. The districts thus created may be readjusted and new districts may from time to time be created by the Board, but not to exceed 20 in all. Such districts shall be known as Federal Investment Bank districts and may be designated by number. As soon as practicable after the enactment hereof, the Board shall establish, in each district, a Federal Investment Bank at such city as may be designated by the Board. The title of each bank shall include the name of the city at which it is established. established.

established.

SEC. 7. (a) As soon as practicable after the enactment of this act, the Board, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall determine the minimum capital of each bank, which shall be not less than $5,000,000. The Board shall, as soon as practicable thereafter, open books in each district established hereunder for subscription by financial institutions and the public to the minimum capital stock of the bank of the district.

(b) The capital stock of each bank shall be divided into shares of a par value of $100 each. The minimum capital stock shall be sold at par. Stock issued thereafter shall be at such price not less than par as may be fixed by the Board.

than par as may be fixed by the Board.

(c) Stock subscriptions other than by the United States shall be paid for in cash and shall be paid for at the time of application therefor

therefor.

(d) Thirty days after books have been opened for subscription by financial institutions, business associations, and the public to the minimum stock of each bank as provided in subsection (a) of this section 7, the Secretary of the Treasury shall, from time to time, when called upon by the Board, subscribe, on behalf of the United States, for all or such part of the minimum capital stock of each bank not subscribed by public subscription, as may be determined by the Board. Payments for stock subscriptions by the Secretary of the Treasury shall be subject to call in whole or in part by the Board, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, at such time or times as may be deemed advisable.

(e) All capital stock of any bank shall share in dividend distributions without preference.

(f) The capital stock of any bank shall make in divident distributions without preference.

(f) The capital of each of the banks shall, upon recommendation of the Board, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, be increased to an aggregate amount not in excess of $10,000,000. Upon any such increase in the capital of a bank, the Board shocks for subscription to such increased stock by financial upon any such increase in the capital of a bank, the Board shall open books for subscription to such increased stock by financial institutions, business associations, and the public in the manner provided in subsection (a) of this section 7. The Secretary of the Treasury shall subscribe, on behalf of the United States, for such part of the increased capital stock of each bank as is not subscribed for by the public and others within 90 days after books have been opened for stock subscriptions as provided in this subsection (f) not in excess of the aggregate amount of $10,000,000 for any one bank.

(g) The Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, is further amended by adding at the end of section 2 thereof the following new paragraph:

following new paragraph:

"In order to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to make payments upon the stock of Federal Investment Banks subscribed for by him in accordance with the Federal Investment Bank Act, the sum of $120,000,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary for such purpose, is hereby allocated and made available to the Secretary of the Treasury out of the capital and/or surplus and/or the proceeds of notes, debentures, bonds, and other obligations issued by the Corporation. For the purposes of this paragraph the Corporation shall issue such notes, bonds, debentures, and other obligations as may be necessary."

SEC. 8. (a) The management of each bank shall be vested in a

SEC. 8. (a) The management of each bank shall be vested in a board of five directors all of whom shall be citizens of the United States and bona fide residents of the district in which such bank is located. The directors shall be appointed by the Board and shall be chosen with due regard to the proper representation of independent small business: Provided, That so long as the United States is a stockholder in a bank, one director of such bank shall be named by the Board upon the recommendation and shall serve with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided further, That after the first 3 years from the date of enactment of this act, vacancies (other than that of the Treasury representative) on the board of any bank shall be filled, under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Board, from persons recommended by the associations until each such board of directors shall consist of a majority representing such associations. The term of office of two of such directors shall be 1 year, two 2 years, and one 3 years from the date of the enactment of this act. Each of such directors in succession to the directors first appointed shall be appointed for a succession to the directors first appointed shall be appointed for a 3-year term. Whenever a vacancy shall occur among the directors the person appointed to fill such vacancy shall hold office for the unexpired portion of the term of the director whose place he is selected to fill.

(b) The board shall designate one of the directors of each bank to be chairman, and one to be vice chairman, of the board of directors of such bank.

(c) Each bank may pay its directors reasonable compensation for the time required of them, and their necessary expenses, in the performance of their duties in accordance with the resolutions adopted by such directors, subject to the approval of the Board.

(d) Each bank shall be confined in operation, insofar as furnishing capital and credit to business is concerned, to the district in which it is located.

which it is located.

which it is located.

SEC. 9. (a) A primary function of the banks shall be to discount paper emanating from the associations. Any association shall be entitled to apply to the bank in its district for advances and each bank may make advances to member associations within its district up to 90 percent of the unpaid face value of the paper tendered by such associations for discount. Such advances shall be secured by the pledge or assignment to the bank of all of the underlying collateral or other security taken by the association as security for the loan or loans represented by such paper and in respect of which an application for an advance is made. Any association applying for an advance shall enter into a primary and unconditional obligation to pay off all advances, together with interest and any unpaid costs and expenses in connection therewith, according to the terms under which they were made. Subject to the foregoing, advances shall be made by the banks to solvent associations upon such terms, at such rate or rates of interest not to exceed — percent per annum, and under such rules and regulations as the Board may prescribe.

(b) With due regard to the sound credit standing of the bank,

(b) With due regard to the sound credit standing of the bank, and under such rules and regulations as the Board may prescribe, each of such banks may make loans direct as provided for in section 11 of this act.

(c) Upon authorization by the Board, each of such banks may rediscount the discounted paper of any other Federal investment bank at rates of interest to be fixed by the Board.

bank at rates of interest to be fixed by the Board.

SEC. 10. (a) In order to encourage the return of private capital to commercial investment channels, promote thrift, and provide additional locally administered credit facilities for independent small enterprise, the Board is authorized, under such rules and regulations as it may prescribe, to provide for the organization, incorporation, examination, operation, and regulation of local associations to be known as Federal Investment Associations, and to issue charters therefor, giving consideration to the general pattern and practices of the Federal Savings and Loan Associations organized under the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, as amended.

(b) Such associations shall raise their capital only in the form of payments on such shares as are authorized in their charter, which shares may be retired as is therein provided. No deposits shall be accepted and no certificates of indebtedness shall be issued except for such borrowed money as may be authorized by regulations of the Board.

(c) With due regard to the sound credit standing of the as ciation, and when credit of the type applied for is not otherwise available through the usual local commercial banking channels, available through the usual local commercial banking channels, each such association may make, renew, or extend amortized loans for business purposes upon such terms and conditions, and upon such security as the management of such association may determine; provided, that no such association may make loans to borrowers residing or having their place of business at a distance greater than 50 miles from the association's home office; and provided further, that the indebtedness owing by any one borrower to any one or more associations shall not exceed $100,000. All such loans shall be made at a total cost to the borrower, including interest, service, and all other charges, of not to exceed — percent per annum upon the unpaid principal amount of such loan outstanding and in respect of which such interest and/or other charges are payable. charges are payable.

charges are payable.

(d) The Board shall have full power to provide in the rules and regulations herein authorized for the reorganization, consolidation, merger, or liquidation of such associations, including the power to appoint a conservator or a receiver to take charge of the affairs of any such association, and to require an equitable readjustment of the capital structure of the same, and to release any such association from such control and permit its further operation.

(e) No charter shall be granted except to persons of good character and responsibility, nor unless in the judgment of the Board a necessity exists for such an institution in the community to be served, nor unless there is a reasonable probability of its usefulness

(f) Each such association, upon its incorporation, shall become automatically a member of the Federal Investment Bank of the district in which it is located, or, if convenience shall require and the Board approved, shall become a member of a Federal Investment Bank of an adjoining district. Such associations shall qualify for such membership in the manner provided in the Federal Investment Bank act with respect to other members.

(g) Any portion of the assets of such associations may be invested in obligations of the United States or the stock or bonds of a Federal Investment Bank.

Investment Bank.

(g) Any portion of the assets of such associations may be invested in obligations of the United States or the stock or bonds of a Federal Investment Bank.

(h) The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized, on behalf of the United States, to subscribe for preferred shares in such associations which shall be preferred as to the assets of the association and which shall be entitled to a dividend, if earned, after payment of expenses and provision for reasonable reserves to the same extent as other shareholders. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to subscribe for such preferred shares upon the request of the Board; but the subscription by him to the shares of any one association shall not exceed $100,000, and no such subscription shall be called for unless in the judgment of the Board the funds are necessary to provide adequate local credit facilities for independent small business. Payment on such shares may be called from time to time by the association, subject to the approval of the Board and the Secretary of the Treasury; but the amount paid in by the Secretary of the Treasury; but the amount paid in by the Secretary of the Treasury shall not at any time exceed four times the aggregate amount of shares held by all other shareholders, and the aggregate amount of shares held by all other shareholders. To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to make such subscriptions when called, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $60,000,000, to be immediately available and to remain available until expended. Each such association shall issue receipts for such payments by the Secretary of the Treasury in such form as may be approved by the Board, and such receipts shall be evidence of the interest of the United States in such preferred shares to the extent of the amount so paid. Each such association shall make provision for the retirement of its preferred shares held by the Secretary of the Treasury shall be retired at par bef institutions.

(j) When designated for that purpose by the Secretary of the Treasury and Federal Investment Association may be employed as fiscal agent of the Government under such regulations as may be prescribed by said Secretary and shall perform all such reasonable duties as fiscal agent of the Government as may be required of it. Any Federal Investment Association or any Federal Investment Bank may act as agent for any other instrumentality of the United States when designated for that purpose by such instrumentality of the United States. United States

United States.

SEC. 11. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Board, any bank, trust company, savings bank, investment banking house, investment trust, finance company, or other financial institution organized and existing under the laws of any State or of the United States may become a nonborrowing member of a Federal Investment Bank and as such may find, investigate, and recommend loans to the bank and when such loans are approved may enter into an arrangement with the bank (1) to participate in the making of such loan; and/or (2) to service such loan and make collections thereon; and (3) charge a reasonable fee for such services rendered, but not to exceed three-fourths of 1 percent per annum when the member institution's only service has consisted of finding, investigating, and recommending the loan to the bank: Provided, That only one service charge shall become due or be payable until the amount of the loan, including principal and interest, shall have been repaid in full.

the loan, including principal and interest, shall have been repaid in full.

SEC. 12. The directors of each bank shall, in accordance with such rules and regulations as the Board may prescribe, make and file with the Board at the earliest practicable date after the establishment of such bank, an organization certificate which shall contain such information as the Board may require. Upon the making and filing of such organization certificate with the Board, and upon the approval of same by the Board, such bank shall become, as of the date of the approval by the Board of its organization certificate, a body corporate, and as such and in its name as designated by the Board it shall have power to adopt, alter, and use a corporate seal; to make contracts; to lease and hold such real estate as may be necessary or convenient for the transaction of its business, but no bank building shall be bought or erected to house any such bank nor shall any such bank make any lease for such purpose which has a term of more than 10 years; to sue and be sued, to complain, and to defend, in any court of competent jurisdiction, State or Federal; to select, employ, and fix the compensation of such officers, employees, attorneys, and agents as shall be necessary for the transaction of its business, subject to the approval of the Board; to define their duties, require bonds of them, and fix the penalties thereof, and to dismiss at pleasure such officers, employees, attorneys, and agents; and, by its board of directors, to prescribe, amend, and repeal bylaws, rules, and regulations governing the manner in which its affairs may be administered. The president of any bank may also be a member of the board of directors thereof, but no other officer, employee, attorney, or agent of such bank, who receives compensation, may be a member of the board of directors. Each such bank shall have all such incidental powers, not inconsistent with the provisions of this act, as are customary and usual in corporations generally.

SEC. 13. The Board, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may authorize the banks to issue, subject to such rules and regulations as the Board may prescribe, notes, debentures, bonds, or other such consolidated obligations to mature not more than 10 years from their respective dates of issue, to be redeemable at the option of the issuing banks before maturity in such manner as may be stipulated in such obligations, and to bear such rate or rates of interest as may be determined by the Board. The Board may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, authorize the banks to sell on a discount basis short-term obligations, payable at maturity without interest; provided, that the aggregate of all obligations issued by the banks and outstanding authorize the banks to sell on a discount basis short-term obligations, payable at maturity without interest; provided, that the aggregate of all obligations issued by the banks and outstanding at any time under this section shall not exceed 12 times the aggregate amount of the subscribed capital stock of the issuing banks. Such obligations may be offered for sale at such price or prices as the Board may determine with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. The Secretary of the Treasury, in his discretion, is authorized to purchase any obligations of any bank or banks issued or to be issued hereunder, and for such purposes there is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated the amount or amounts necessary for such purposes. wise appropriated the amount or amounts necessary for such purchases. The Secretary of the Treasury may, at any time, sell any of the obligations of the banks acquired by him under this section. of the obligations of the banks acquired by him under this section. All redemptions, purchases, and sales by the Secretary of the Treasury of obligations of the banks shall be treated as public-debt transactions of the United States. The Secretary of the Treasury, at the request of the Board, is authorized to market for the banks their notes, debentures, bonds, and other such obligations, using therefor all the facilities of the Treasury Department now authorized by law for the marketing of obligations of the United States. The proceeds of the obligations of the banks so marketed shall be deposited in the same manner as proceeds derived from the sale of obligations of the United States, and the amount thereof shall be credited to the issuing banks on the books of the Treasury. of the Treasury. SEC. 14. Any amount thereof shall be credited to the issuing banks on the books of the Treasury.

SEC. 14. Any and all notes, debentures, bonds, or other such obligations issued by any bank shall be exempt both as to principal and interest from all taxation (except surtaxes, estate, inheritance, and gift taxes) now or hereafter imposed by the United States, by any Territory, dependency, or possession thereof, or by any State, county, municipality, or local taxing authority. Each bank, including its franchise, its capital, reserves, and surplus, its advances, and its income and dividends shall be exempt from all taxation now or hereafter imposed by the United States, by any Territory, dependency, or possession thereof, or by any State, county, municipality, or local taxing authority; except that any real property of the bank shall be subject to State, Territorial, county, municipal, or local taxation to the same extent according to its value as other real property is taxed. The notes, debentures, and bonds issued by any bank, with unearned coupons attached, shall be accepted at par by any bank in payment of or as a credit against the obligations of any debtor of any bank. The Board shall have full power to adjust equities between the banks.

SEC. 15. Obligations of the banks issued with the approval of the Board under this act shall be lawful investments, and may be accepted as security, for all fiduciary, trust, and public funds the investment or deposit of which shall be under the authority or control of the United States or any officer or officers thereof. The Federal Reserve banks are authorized to act as depositaries, custodians, and/or fiscal agents for the banks in the general performance of their powers under this act.

SEC. 16. In order that the banks may be supplied with such forms of notes, debentures, bonds, or other such obligations as they may need for issuance under this act, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to prepare such forms as shall be suitable and approved by the Board, to be held in the Trea they may need for issuance under this act, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to prepare such forms as shall be suitable and approved by the Board, to be held in the Treasury subject to delivery, upon order of the Board. The engraved plates, dies, bed pieces, and so forth, executed in connection therewith shall remain in the custody of the Secretary of the Treasury. The respective banks shall reimburse the Secretary of the Treasury for any expenses incurred in the preparation, custody, and delivery of such notes, debentures, bonds, or other obligations.

SEC. 17. (a) In order to enable the Board to carry out the provisions of this act, the Treasury Department, the Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Reserve banks, and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation are hereby authorized, under such conditions as they may prescribe, to make available to the Board in confidence, for its use and the use of any Federal Investment Bank, such reports, records, or other information as may be available, relating to the condition of institutions with respect to which any such Federal Investment Bank has had or contemplates having transactions under this act or relating to persons whose obligations are offered to or held by any Federal Investment Bank, and to make, through their examiners or other employees, for the confidential use of the Board or any Federal Investment Bank, examinations of such institutions.

(b) Every association which shall apply for advances under this act shall, as a condition precedent thereto, consent to such examination as the bank or the Board may require for the purposes of this act and/or that reports of examinations by constituted author-ities may be furnished by such authorities to the bank or the Board upon request therefor.

SEC. 18. (a) There is hereby created a Federal Investment Insurance Corporation (hereinafter referred to as the "Corporation"), which shall insure the accounts of associations eligible for insurwhich shall insure the accounts of associations eligible for insurance as hereinafter provided, and shall be under the direction of a board of trustees, to be composed of three members and operated by it under such bylaws, rules, and regulations as it may prescribe for carrying out the purposes of this title. The members of the Federal Investment Bank Board shall constitute the board of trustees of the Corporation and shall serve as such without additional compensation. The principal office of the Corporation shall be in the District of Columbia compensation. The prince

(b) The Corporation shall have a capital stock of $100,000,000, which shall be divided into shares of $100 each. The total amount of such capital stock shall be subscribed for by the Reconstruction of such capital stock shall be subscribed for by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which is hereby authorized and directed to subscribe for such stock and make payment therefor in funds of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The Corporation shall issue to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation receipts for payment for or on account of such stock, which shall serve as evidence of the ownership thereof, and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation shall be entitled to the payment of dividends on such stock out of net earnings at a rate equal to the interest rate on such bonds, which dividends shall be cumulative.

(c) Upon the date of enactment of this act, the Corporation shall become a body corporate, and shall be an instrumentality of the United States, and as such shall have power—

(1) To adopt and use a corporate seal.

(2) To have succession until dissolved by act of Congress.

(3) To make contracts.

(4) To sue and be sued, complain and defend, in any court of

(2) To have succession until dissolved by act of Congress.
(3) To make contracts.
(4) To sue and be sued, complain and defend, in any court of law or equity, State or Federal.
(5) To appoint and to fix the compensation, by its board of trustees, of such officers, employees, attorneys, or agents, as shall be necessary for the performance of its duties under this act, without regard to the provisions of any other laws relating to the employment or compensation of officers or employees of the United States. Nothing in this act or any other provision of law shall be construed to prevent the appointment and compensation of any officer, attorney, or employee of the Corporation, of any officer, attorney, or employee of any board, corporation, commission, establishment, executive department, or instrumentality of the Government. The Corporation, with the consent of any board, corporation, commission, establishment, executive department, or instrumentality of the Government, including any field service thereof, may avail itself of the use of information, services, and facilities thereof in carrying out the provisions of this act.

(d) For the purposes of this act, the Corporation shall have power to borrow money and, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to issue notes, bonds, debentures, or other such obligations upon such terms and conditions as the board of trustees may determine. Moneys of the Corporation not required for current operations shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States, or upon the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, in any Federal Reserve bank, or shall be invested in obligations of, or guaranteed as to principal and interest by, the United States. When designated for that purpose by the Secretary of the Treasury.

any Federal Reserve bank, or shall be invested in obligations of, or guaranteed as to principal and interest by, the United States. When designated for that purpose by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Corporation shall be a depositary of public money under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, and may also be employed as fiscal agent of the United States, and it shall perform all such reasonable duties as depositary of public money and fiscal agent as may be required of it.

(e) All notes, bonds, debentures, or other such obligations issued by the Corporation shall be exempt, both as to principal and interest, from all taxation (except surfaxes, estate, inheritance, and gift by the Corporation shall be exempt, both as to principal and interest, from all taxation (except surtaxes, estate, inheritance, and gift taxes) now or hereafter imposed by the United States, by any Territory, dependency, or possession thereof, or by any State, county, municipality, or local taxing authority. The Corporation, including its franchise, capital, reserves, surplus, and income, shall be exempt from all taxation now or hereafter imposed by the United States, by any Territory, dependency, or possession thereof, or by any State, county, municipality, or local taxing authority, except that any real property of the Corporation shall be subject to State, Territorial, county, municipal, or local taxation to the same extent according to its value as other real property is taxed.

its value as other real property is taxed.

(f) The Corporation shall make an annual report of its operations to the Congress as soon as practicable after the 1st day of January to the Congress as soon as practicable after the 1st day of January in each year.

(g) No individual, association, partnership, or corporation shall use the words "Federal Investment Insurance Corporation," or all combination of any of these words which would have the effect of leading the public in general to believe there was any connection actually not existing between such individual, association, partnership, or corporation and the Federal Investment Insurance Corporation, as the name under which he or it shall hereafter do business. No individual, association, partnership, or corporation shall advertise or otherwise represent falsely by any device whatsoever that his or its accounts are insured or in anywise guaranteed by the Federal Investment Insurance Corporation, or by the Government of the United States, or by any instrumentality thereof; and no insured member shall advertise or otherwise represent falsely by any device whatsoever the extent to which or the manner in which its accounts are insured by the Federal Investment Insurance Corporation.

ment of the United States, or by any instrumentality thereof; and no insured member shalls advertise or otherwise represent falsely by any device whatsoever the extent to which or the manner in which its accounts are insured by the Federal Investment Insurance Corporation. Every individual, partnership, association, or corporation violating this subsection shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding $1,000, or by imprisonment not exceeding 1 year, or both.

SEC. 19. (a) It shall be the duty of the Corporation to insure the accounts of all Federal Investment Associations. Application for such insurance shall be made immediately by each Federal Investment Association. Such applications shall be in such form as the Corporation shall prescribe, and shall contain an agreement (1) to pay the reasonable cost of such examinations as the Corporation shall deem necessary in connection with such insurance, and (2) if the insurance is granted, to permit and pay the cost of such examinations as in the judgment of the Corporation may from time to time be necessary for its protection and the protection of other insured associations, to permit the Corporation to have access to any information or report with respect to any examination made by any public regulatory authority and to furnish any additional information with respect thereto as the Corporation may require, and to pay the premium charges for insurance hereinafter provided. Each applicant for such insurance shall also file with its application an agreement that during the period that the insurance is in force it will not make any loans beyond 50 miles from its principal office; will not, after it becomes an insured association, issue securities which guarantee a definite return or which have a definite maturity except with the specific approval of the Corporation, or issue any securities the form of which has not been approved by the Corporation; will not carry on any sales plan or practices, or any advertising, in violation of regulations to be made by the Corporatio reserves, or the payment of any dividends if any losses are chargeable to such reserves.

(b) The Corporation shall reject the application of any applicant if it finds that the capital of the applicant is impaired or that its financial policies or management are unsafe; and the Corporation may reject the application of any applicant if it finds that the character of the management of the applicant or its lending policy is inconsistent with sound practices or with the purposes of this title. Upon the approval of any application for insurance the Corporation shall notify the applicant, and upon the payment of the initial premium charge for such insurance, as provided in section 18, the Corporation shall issue to the applicant a certificate stating that it has become an insured association. In considering applications for such insurance the Corporation shall give full consideration to all factors in connection with the financial condition of applicants and insured associations, and shall have power to make such adjustments in their financial statements as the Corporation finds to be necessary.

finds to be necessary.

(c) Any applicant which applies for insurance under this act after the first year of the operation of the corporation, shall pay an admission fee based upon the reserve fund of the applicant which, in the judgment of the Corporation, is an equitable contribution.

which, in the judgment of the Corporation, is an equitable contribution.

Sec. 20. (a) Each association whose application for insurance is approved by the Corporation shall pay to the Corporation, in such manner as it shall prescribe, a premium charge for such insurance equal to one-fourth of 1 percent of the total amount of all accounts of the insured members of such associations plus any creditor obligations of such association. Such premium shall be paid at the time the certificate is issued by the Corporation under section 17, and thereafter annually until a reserve fund has been established by the Corporation equal to 5 percent of all insured accounts and creditor obligations of all insured associations; except that under regulations prescribed by the Corporation such premium charge may be paid semiannually. If at any time such reserve fund falls below such 5 percent, the payment of such annual premium charge for insurance shall be resumed and shall be continued until the reserve is brought back to such 5 percent. For the purposes of this subsection, the amount in all accounts of insured members and the amount of creditor obligations of any association may be determined from adjusted statements made within 1 year prior to the approval of the application of such associations for insurance, or in such other manner as the Corporation may by regulations or regulations prescribe. associations for insurance, or in such other manner as the Corpora-tion may by rules and regulations prescribe.

(b) The Corporation is further authorized to assess against each insured association additional premiums for insurance until the amount of such premiums equals the amount of all losses and expenses of the Corporation; except that the total amount so assessed in any one year against any such association shall not exceed one-fourth of 1 percent of the total amount of the accounts of its insured members and its creditor obligations.

SEC. 21. (a) Each association whose application for insurance under this act is approved by the Corporation shall be entitled to insurance up to the full withdrawal or repurchasable value of the accounts of each of its members and investors (including individuals, partnerships, associations, and corporations) holding withdrawable or repurchasable shares, investment certificates, or deposits in such association except that no member or investor of any such association shall be insured for an aggregate amount in excess of $5,000.

(b) In the event of a default by any insured association the Corporation shall promptly determine the insured members thereof and the amount of their insured accounts, and shall make thereof and the amount of their insured accounts, and shall make available to each of them, after notice by mail at his last-known address as shown by the books of the insured association, and upon surrender and transfer to the Corporation of his insured account, either (1) a new insured account in an insured association not in default, in an amount equal to the insured account so transferred, or (2) at the option of the insured member, the amount of his account which is insured under this section, as follows: Not to exceed 10 percent in cash and 50 percent of the remainder within 1 year, and the balance within 3 years from the date of such default, in negotiable noninterest-bearing debentures of the Corporation. The Corporation shall furnish to all insured associations a certificate stating that the insurance of accounts in such association is to be paid in the manner described in this subsection.

SEC. 22. (a) In order to facilitate the liquidation of insured associations, the Corporation is authorized (1) to contract with any insured association with respect to the making available of insured accounts to the insured members of any insured association in default, or (2) to provide for the organization of a new Federal investment association for such purpose subject to the approval of the Federal Investment Bank Board.

(b) In the event that a Federal investment association is in the Federal Investment Bank Board.

(b) In the event that a Federal investment association is in default, the Corporation shall be appointed as conservator or receiver and is authorized as such (1) to take over the assets of and operate such association, (2) to take such action as may be necessary to put it in a sound and solvent condition, (3) to merge it with another insured association; (4) to organize a new Federal Investment Association to take over its assets; or (5) to proceed to liquidate its assets in an orderly manner, whichever shall appear to be to the best interests of the insured members of the association in default; and in any event the Corporation shall pay the insurance as provided in section 19 and all valid credit obligations of such association. The net proceeds which may arise from the orderly liquidation of the assets of any such association, after reimbursement of the Corporation of all amounts paid by it for such insurance, shall be distributed pro rata among the shareholders of the association.

(c) In connection with the liquidation of insured associations in

(c) In connection with the liquidation of insured associations in

(c) In connection with the liquidation of insured associations in default, the Corporation shall have power to carry on the business of and to collect all obligations to the insured associations, to settle, compromise, or release claims in favor of or against the insured associations, and to do all other things that may be necessary in connection therewith, subject only to the regulation of the court or other public authority having jurisdiction over the matter.

(d) The Corporation shall make an annual report to the Congress of the operation by it of insured associations in default and shall keep a complete record of the administration by it of the assets of such insured associations which shall be subject to inspection by any officer of any such insured association is operated under the laws of any State, Territory, or possession of the United States, or of the District of Columbia, such annual report shall also be filed with the public authority which has jurisdiction over the insured association.

Sec. 23. (a) Any association which is insured under the provision of this act may, upon not less than 90 days' written notice to the Corporation, terminate its status as an insured association upon a majority vote of its shareholders entitled to vote, or upon a majority vote of its shareholders entitled to vote, or upon to the Corporation, terminate its status as an insured association upon a majority vote of its shareholders entitled to vote, or upon a majority vote of its board of directors or other similar governing body which is authorized to act for the association. Thereupon its status as an insured association shall immediately cease and all rights of its insured members to insurance under this act shall immediately terminate; but the obligation of the association to pay the premium charges for insurance shall continue for a period of 3 years after the detect of such termination.

pay the premium charges for insurance shall continue for a period of 3 years after the date of such termination.

(b) The Corporation shall have power to terminate the insured status of any insured association at any time, after 90 days' notice in writing, for violation of any provision of this act, or of any rule or regulation made thereunder, or of any agreement made pursuant to section 18. In the event the insured status of any insured association is so terminated it shall be unlawful thereafter for it to advertise or represent itself as an insured association, but the insured accounts of its members existing on the date of such termination shall continue as such for a period of 5 years thereafter, and the association shall be required to continue the payment of the premium charge for insurance during such 5-year period.

period.

SEC. 24. (a) Whoever makes any statement knowing it to be false, or whoever willfully overvalues any security, for the purpose of obtaining for himself or for any applicant any loan, or extension thereof by renewal, deferment of action, or otherwise, or the acceptance, release, or substitution of security therefor, or for the purpose of influencing in any way the action of any association or bank, or for the purpose of obtaining money, property, or anything of value, under this act, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 2 years or both years, or both.

(b) Whoever (1) falsely makes, forges, or counterfeits any note, debenture, bond, or other obligation, or ccupon, in imitation of or purporting to be a note, debenture, bond, or other obligation, or coupon, issued by any bank; or (2) passes, utters, or publishes, or attempts to pass, utter, or publish, any false, forged, or counterfeited note, debenture, bond, or other obligation, or coupon, purporting to have been issued by any bank, knowing the same to be false, forged, or counterfeited; or (3) falsely alters any note, debenture, bond, or other obligation, or coupon, issued or purporting to have been issued by any bank; or (4) passes, utters, or publishes, or attempts to pass, utter, or publish, as true any falsely altered or spurious note, debenture, bond, or other obligation, or coupon, issued or purporting to have been issued by any bank, knowing the same to be falsely altered or spurious; or any person who willfully violates any other provision of this act shall be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

(c) Whoever, being connected in any capacity with any association or bank, (1) embezzles, abstracts, purloins, or willfully misapplies any moneys, funds, securities, or other things of value, whether belonging to it or pledged or otherwise entrusted to it; or (2) with intent to defraud any association or bank, or to deceive any officers, auditors, or examiner of the Board or any association any officers, auditors, or examiner of the Board or any association or bank, makes any false entry in any book, report, or statement of or to the Board or any association or bank, or, without being duly authorized, draws any order or issues, puts forth, or assigns any note, debenture, bond, or other obligation, or draft, bill of exchange, mortgage, judgment, or decree thereof; or (3) with intent to defraud participates, shares, receives directly or indirectly any money, profit, property, or benefit through any transaction, loan, commission, contract, or any other act of the Board or any association or bank; or (4) gives any unauthorized information concerning any sion, contract, or any other act of the Board or any association or bank; or (4) gives any unauthorized information concerning any future action or plan of the Board or any association or bank which might affect the value of securities, or, having such knowledge, invests or speculates, directly or indirectly, in the securities or property of any individual, association, partnership, or corporation receiving loans or other assistance from any association or bank, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

Sec. 25. The right to alter amend or repeal this act is hereby

SEC. 25. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved. If any clause, sentence, paragraph, or part of this act shall for any reason be adjudged by any court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, such judgment shall not affect, impair, or invalidate the remainder of this act, but shall be confined in its operation to the clause, sentence, paragraph, or part thereof directly involved in the controversy in which such judgment shall have

SEC. 26. This act may be cited as the "Federal Investment Bank Act of 1939."

The matter presented by Mr. Logan, in connection with the bill, is as follows:

STATEMENT OF SENATOR LOGAN

Mr. President, we are concerned for the preservation of democracy in America against the inroads of the "isms." This concern has manifested itself in unprecedented peacetime appropriations for our armed defense forces, in appropriations for the investigation and exposure of subversive elements working to overthrow our form of government, and in a state of mind on the part of the general public bordering upon alarm.

Mr. President, I approve of the President's program for strength-Mr. President, I approve of the President's program for strengthening the national armed defense. But there is another aspect of defense that is equally important. We all know that so long as America is prosperous we need not be concerned over the inroads of alien ideologies within our borders. These despotic forms of government, which give to their masses a very slight and temporary degree of economic security in exchange for the permanent appropriation of their liberties and their desire to remain at peace, obtain their footholds and thrive only in an atmosphere of chronic depression. depression.

Within the broad framework of our democratic form of government we have sought to safeguard our institutions and strengthen our internal structure through programs of assistance and adjustment which enable us to cope more effectively with present-day needs and conditions.

We have a program for agriculture.

We have a program for labor.

We have a program for labor.

We have a program for the home owner.

We have done much that has directly benefited big business.

But, Mr. President, with all that we have done, we have done little or nothing for the small-business man. This is particularly regrettable, not only because small business—which in the aggregate employs more people and pays more taxes than any other economic group—is sorely in need of assistance, but also because the small business men and women comprise the bulk of that middle class of our population, which has often and rightfully been termed "the backbone of America." There you will find the type of men and women who in years past were the pioneers of prosperity in this country, and who today stand as a bulwark against the inroads of the "isms."

Mr. President, I have just introduced a bill which would provide additional and more liberal credit facilities for little business. The measure is sponsored by the American Federation of Little Business, a national nonpartisan association of independent small-business men. It is modeled closely after the Federal Home Loan Bank, Federal savings and loan system, which has proven an outstanding success in its field.

This measure, if incorporated into law, will not be a burden upon the public purse. It does not call for establishment of a costly or competitive agency. It provides an avenue for investment of private capital as well as a source of greatly needed credit, and it should cost the taxpayers nothing. I submit that it is worthy of the attention and support of every Member of this Congress size of loans).

[American Federation of Little Business, Washington, D. C.1 SUMMARY OF PROPOSED INVESTMENT BANK ACT

1. The bill is designed to provide permanent intermediate credit facilities for independent small business ($100,000 limitation on size of loans).

2. The proposed structure is closely patterned after the existing home loan bank—Federal Savings and Loan Association system. At the top is a three-man board, appointed by the President and charged with general supervision over the banks, the associations, and the insurance corporation. The 12 regional investment banks provided for are intended to serve primarily as reservoirs for the discount paper emanating from the local investment associations, although they may make loans direct under certain circumstances. The local investment associations constitute the broad base of the system and are authorized to make loans generally for business purposes (including character loans) when credit of the type applied for is not otherwise available through the usual local commercial banking channels. Thus the passing upon credit risks and the extension of credit is made a function of local management, although the board and the banks keep in close touch through examinations. examinations examinations.

3. It is proposed that the capital be provided as follows:

(a) The capital stock of the regional investment banks: To be subscribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, the money (up to a total of $120,000,000) to be provided by R. F. C.

(b) The capital of the local investment associations: To be provided by local investors and the Secretary of the Treasury ($60,000,000 appropriated for this purpose—par. (h) of sec. 10), the latter being authorized to subscribe for preferred shares at a 4 to 1 ratio (to common capital) up to $100,000 for each local association. The common-stock subscriptions are protected by insurance up to $5,000 in the case of each such investment.

(c) The capital stock of the Insurance Corporation ($100,000,-000): to be subscribed by R. F. C.

4. The intent is to provide a decentralized intermediate credit system in which local management and responsibility and some local money will be combined with Federal regulation and Federal money. After 5 years the preferred-stock investment of the Secretary of the Treasury in the local associations is to be progressively retired.

sively retired.

5. The total lending capacity of the system depends upon many factors, such as the number and capitalization of the local associations. The banks are authorized to issue their consolidated debentures in the ratio of 12 to 1 of capital. Such debentures are generally tax-exempt, but are not guaranteed by the Government.

ernment.

6. The proposed method of insurance, mechanics thereof, etc., are practically identical with those provided in connection with the home loan bank—Federal Savings and Loan Association system and program.

7. The bill is sponsored by the American Federation of Little Business, an independent, nonpartisan, and Nation-wide organiza-tion of independent, small-business men. The active support of all Members of Congress, without regard to party affiliation, is cordially invited.

Speaking of Liberty—Small Enterprise and Economic Independ-ence are the Bulwarks of Democracy

(By Walter Lippmann)

(By Walter Lippmann)

Paris, July 15.

We live in a time when great masses of civilized men have either voluntarily surrendered their personal liberties or at least have submitted without serious protest or resistance to the destruction of their liberties. It is important that we should understand the causes. This is not too difficult. For while a library of books might profitably be written on the subject, one fundamental aspect of the question at least is clear enough to anyone who passes back and forth between the totalitarian and the free nations of Europe.

It is that the peoples who have lost their civil rights had previously lost or had never obtained the means of economic independence for individuals, families, and local communities. It is very clear, I think, that the masses who have fallen under the spell of demagogic dictators and their terroristic bands were recruited from individuals who had no property, no savings, and either no job at all or a job which which they could not feel sure of holding. They were in the exact sense of the term proletarians, even if they happened to be earning fairly high salaries at the moment, for they had no reserves to fall back upon. They could not afford to lose their jobs. They could not afford, therefore, to speak their minds or to take any risks—to be in any real sense of the word "individual" citizens. They had to be servile or they starved. Wherever a dictatorship has been set up in Europe, the mass of individuals had already become so insecure that they no longer dared to exercise the legal liberties that the demogog was attacking.

MAN SHOULD BE ABLE TO CHANGE HIS JOB

MAN SHOULD BE ABLE TO CHANGE HIS JOB To have economic independence a man must be in a position to leave one job and go to another; he must have enough savings of some kind to exist for a considerable time without accepting the first job offered. Thus, the peasant, for all his poverty and the exploitation which he suffers, is relatively to his own needs still the freest man in central Europe. The fact that he can exist by his own labor on his own piece of land gives him an independence which every dictatorial regime, except the Russian perhaps, has been forced they make the property of the superior of t which every dictatorial regime, except the Russian perhaps, has been forced to respect.

But the industrial worker who has a choice between working in one factory and not working at all, the white-collar intellectuals who compete savagely for the relatively few private positions and for posts in the bureaucracy—these are the people who live too precariously to exercise their liberties or to defend them. They have no savings. They have only their labor to sell, and there are very few buyers of their labor. Therefore they have only the choice of truckling to the powerful or of perishing heroically but miserably. Men like these, having none of the substance of liberty themselves, have scant respect for any law or any form of civil right.

Men like these, having none of the substance of liberty themselves, have scant respect for any law or any form of civil right.

The reason the love of liberty, as we understand it in America, is so strong in France is undoubtedly, it seems to me, that France still is a country where the great mass of the people have their own farms, their own shops, their own little business enterprises, and some savings for a rainy day and an emergency. This is the solid foundation of French liberty. The French electorate, except perhaps in a few industrial centers, is not a frightened crowd but a collection of independent families stubbornly attracted to their farms shops, homes and bank accounts.

farms, shops, homes, and bank accounts.

THEY ARE NOT EASY TO TERRORIZE

They are not easy to terrorize, because they have reserves for their independence. They have resistance to mass propaganda because they have so much independence as individuals. And that is why they have such a dread of infiation, which would destroy their individual savings, and such a dislike of monopoly and the concentrating of big business, which would make them the hirelings of a single master.

The more I see of Europe the more deeply convinced do I become that the preservation of freedom in America, or anywhere else, depends upon maintaining and restoring for the great majority of individuals the economic means to remain independent inof individuals the economic means to remain independent in-dividuals. The greatest evil of the modern world is the reduction of the people to a proletarian level by destroying their savings, by depriving the helpless employees of a private monopoly or of Government monopoly. At that point they are no longer citizens. They are a mob. For when the people lose this sense of their separate and individual security, they cease to be in-dividuals. They are absorbed into a mass. Their liberties are already lost and they are a frightened crowd ready for a master.

THE OBJECTIVE IS CLEAR

The Objective Is Clear

Though the actual measures to be taken are debatable, the objective for a free government is, I think, clear. It should use its authority to enable the independent farmer, the small and moderate-sized enterprise, the small saver, to survive. It should use its authority to see that large enterprise is no larger than technology requires, depriving big business of corporate privileges and other forms of legal and economic advantage which make it bigger than on economic grounds it needs to be. A resolute democracy should favor the dispersion of industry rather than its concentration, and it should favor the rise in as many communities as possible of different kinds of enterprise rather than a high degree of specialization on some one product.

For unless the means of independence are widely distributed among the people themselves, no real resistance is possible to the advance of tyranny. The experience of Europe shows clearly that when a nation becomes proletarian, the result is not, as the Communists taught, a dictatorship by the proletariat but a dictatorship over the proletariat.

REPEAL OF NEUTRALITY ACTS

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I introduce a bill concerning which I wish to make some allusions shortly. The measure deals with the matter of the repeal of the neutrality laws. I ask that the bill may be printed in the RECORD and appropriately referred.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill of the Senator from Illinois will be received and properly referred, and, without objection, printed in the RECORD.

The bill (S. 1745) to repeal the specific acts known as neutrality laws passed in the years 1935, 1936, 1937, and 1938, and to reestablish the doctrine of the United States that neutrality in all foreign conflicts is the policy of the United States and to be enforced according to such regulations as the Executive, in charge of the national defense of the country and the protection of our citizens, from time to time will be called upon to apply, was read twice by its title, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the acts of Congress designated as neutrality statutes of the dates of the years of 1935, 1936, 1937, and 1938, and the amendments and additions thereto be each hereby

SEC. 2. That the policy of neutrality of the United States of America as concerns conflicts in foreign lands that bear no relation to the United States, of interest to its citizens or defense to its Nation is to be executed from time to time by appropriate Executive orders by the President of the United States and enforced in such branches of the Government as shall be directed.

SEC. 3. That the regulations for the enforcement of neutrality in the different forms of political subjects are to be carried out by such provisions and orders, and substitute orders, as from time to time will be called for by the needs of the United States and the proper defense of the interests of its people.

All acts and parts of acts in conflict with this act are hereby repealed

Mr. LEWIS subsequently said: Mr. President, I should like to make a brief explanation preliminary to an address which on a later occasion I wish to make to the Senate. am informed by Senators that they are very much interested in certain bills on the calendar, and I will not at this time consume such moments as I otherwise would in carrying out my original intention.

This morning I introduced a bill looking to the repeal of the acts of Congress designated as the neutrality laws. The bill which I tendered this morning is in fulfillment of an object I have had for some time. I am told by other Senators on the floor that either they have tendered bills involving something of the nature incorporated in my measure or such is their intent.

Mr. President, it is only fair to say at the outset that when this particular bill to which we refer now as the act of 1938. preceded by the bills of 1937 and one of 1936, was before the Committee on Foreign Relations I opposed it, though unsuccessfully, before the committee. I also opposed it on the floor without success.

I now point out what I assumed to point out then, sir, that if neutrality in the affairs and conflicts of other lands in which we are not concerned is the policy of our country, then the execution of that neutrality should be left to the wisdom and patriotism of those who, under our theory of government, are in control of our foreign policy. Instead of by an act of Congress attempting to prescribe in what way neutrality should be executed and what form it should take. wherein it should be circumscribed or relaxed, it is my object, sir, to have established the enforcement of neutrality by regulation through the President, as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, and according to the conditions and circumstances which may surround particular events.

To have an act of Congress assume to define the observance of neutrality in a specific manner and then to make it possible for a foreign country directly to act in such manner as that it may avoid the law, or to permit events which may transpire wholly to overcome the law impresses me as lacking in wisdom and detrimental to the best interests of America. There should be such elasticity in enforcing neutrality provisions through the regulations of those in power that they could be easily and readily changed in order to meet the attitude of any other land making a change adverse to the United States. Looking to the protection of this country and the preservation of our people the authority and right to enforce neutrality along the lines of justice should be in the hands and in the power of those who execute our foreign policy.

I say, sir, that it is my purpose to press this subject further and more in detail in an address to this honorable body when I will not interfere with the passing of bills in which Senators are interested; and the notice I now give is that I shall, in coming days, if possible, address the Senate more fully in support of the measure I have introduced.

EXEMPTION FROM TAXATION OF HOMESTEADS TO THE VALUE OF $5,000

Mr. SHEPPARD. I introduce a joint resolution and I desire to make a few comments on it. Before doing so, I will ask that it be printed entire in the RECORD, and properly referred.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The joint resolution of the Senator from Texas will be received and appropriately referred. and, without objection, it will be printed in the RECORD.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 88) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States providing for tax exemption of certain homesteads was read twice by its title, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That the following article is hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States:

"ARTICLE

"Section 1. The homestead of any head of a family, male or female, or of any citizen having one or more persons dependent on him or her for support, shall be exempted from taxation up to $5,000 of its value when occupied by its owner or by his or her dependents as a homestead, excepting only the tax required to pay State, county, municipal, and district bonded debt applicable to such homesteads and outstanding at the date of ratification of this article.

"Sec. 2. The Congress and the States shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, the joint resolution introduced by me proposes to amend the Federal Constitution so that homesteads up to the value of $5,000 may be exempted from taxation. I introduced this measure for the first time in the last Congress toward the end of which it was reported favorably to the Senate Judiciary Committee by a subcommittee of that committee. Sufficient time did not remain to press it further before final adjournment. It was Senate Joint Resolution 220 in the last Congress.

The exemption, bringing permanent safety to family savings invested in homesteads, would encourage individual ambition, industry, and thrift. We recognized the desirability of such encouragement by insuring $5,000 of individual savings, deposited in banks against loss, and by exempting small individual incomes from the income tax.

The steady advancement of the homestead tax exemption movement in State after State, unsupported by organization of any kind, and opposed as a rule by large property interests which fear homestead exemption may increase their taxes, affords strong proof that the great majority of all who own homesteads, and all who would like to own them but for fear of losing them for taxes, desire the adoption of homestead tax exemption as a national policy.

All of us who believe in private property as the indispensable foundation of our free institutions-including, I take it for granted, all Members of the Congress—ought to be able to see that the bedrock of that foundation is the freehold homestead. We ought to be glad to give it the same measure of protection that has been given an equal amount of individual or family savings deposited in banks. We ought to realize that until this shall be done homestead ownership will continue to decay, as it has been doing for many years past; especially and most dangerously in the farming regions.

This homestead tax exemption amendment is the only proposal now before the Congress for an abatement of taxes. Submission of the amendment by the Seventy-sixth Congress. in my judgment, would profoundly gratify a great majority of the American people.

Against the menace of our free institutions by foreign dictatorships nothing else can so effectually defend us as the encouragement of freehold homestead ownership certain to follow submission and ratification of this amendment.

A home-owning citizenship is the best guaranty of the institutions of freedom.

This measure will aid in anchoring the citizen to the home. AMENDMENT OF AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT-WHEAT AND COTTON

Mr. LEE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 1405) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, for the purpose of regulating interstate and foreign commerce in wheat and cotton, and providing for the orderly marketing of such commodities at fair prices in interstate and foreign commerce, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed.

ACQUISITION OF COTTON FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE-AMENDMENTS Mr. BILBO submitted amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 572) to provide for the common defense by acquiring stocks of strategic and critical raw materials, concentrates, and alloys essential to the needs of industry for the manufacture of supplies for the armed forces and the civilian population in time of a national emergency, and for other purposes, which were ordered to lie on the table, to be printed, and to be printed in the RECORD, as

On page 5, line 6, after the word "under", insert the following: "the preceding provisions of."

At the end of the bill insert the following new section:
"Szc. 8. (a) The Commodity Credit Corporation is authorized and directed to acquire title to (1) any cotton from the 1934 crop remaining as security for loans made or arranged for by the Corporation and (2) such cotton from the 1937 to 1938 crops remaining as security for loans made or arranged for by the Corporation and (2) such cotton from the 1937 to 1938 crops remaining poration and (2) such cotton from the 1937 to 1938 crops remaining as security for loans made or arranged for by the Corporation as will, when added to the cotton of the 1934 crop held or acquired by the Corporation, make a total of 7,000,000 bales. No such cotton shall, without the consent of the owner thereof, be acquired prior to the maturity date of the loan secured by it or in a manner inconsistent with the provisions of the loan agreement executed in connection with such loan. The Commodity Credit Corporation, to the extent necessary to the provisions of in connection with such loan. The Commodity Credit Corporation, to the extent necessary in order to carry out the provisions of this section, shall assume and discharge all or any part of the obligations, including accrued interest and carrying charges, of the borrower with respect to any cotton held as security for a loan made or arranged for by the Corporation.

"(b) The Commodity Credit Corporation shall transfer title to any cotton of the 1934 crop held by it and any cotton acquired by it under the provisions of subsection (a) of this section to the Secretary of War. The Secretary of War shall take possession of such cotton and shall store it in warehouses located on military reservations and at such other places as he may deem proper. Such cotton cotton and shall store it in warehouses located on mintary reserva-tions and at such other places as he may deem proper. Such cotton shall be retained in storage by the Secretary for the purpose of maintaining a reserve supply adequate to meet the needs of the United States in the event of war or other national emergency which might require the United States to obtain large quantities which might require the United States to obtain large quantities of cotton.

"(c) The Secretary of War is authorized to construct such warehouses and to employ such personnel as he may find to be necessary for the purpose of providing for the storage of any cotton acquired by him under the provisions of this section.

"(d) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary in order to enable the Secretary of War to carry out the provisions of subsections (b) and (c) of this section."

STUDY OF THE TELEGRAPH INDUSTRY

Mr. WHEELER submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 95), which was referred to the Committee on Interstate

Whereas the telegraph industry plays an important role in the economic life of the Nation and is an arm of the national defense:

Whereas the telegraph industry is in a precarious financial and mony and to make such expenditures as it deems advisable. The expenses of the committee, which shall not exceed ——, shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman.

ESTABLISHMENT OF DISTRICT-OWNED LIQUOR STORES

Mr. HERRING (by request) submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 96), which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia:

Resolved, That for the purpose of obtaining information necessary as a basis for legislation the Committee on the District of Columbia, as a whole or by subcommittee, is authorized and directed to conduct an investigation and study of the advisability of the elimination of the present class A liquor stores in the District of Columbia and the establishment of a sufficient number of liquor stores to be owned by the District of Columbia for the purpose of raising revenue for the support of the government of the District of Columbia. The committee shall report to the Senate as soon as practicable the results of its investigation, together with such recommendations for legislation as it deems desirable.

The committee is authorized to request and secure, for the pur-

The committee is authorized to request and secure, for the purposes of this resolution, such information and assistance from the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, or from officers or employees designated by the Commissioners, as may be deemed necessary by the committee.

For the purposes of this resolution the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, is authorized to sit and act during the present Congress at such times and places within the District of Columbia, whether or not the Senate is sitting, has recessed, or has adjourned; to hold such hearings; to require, by subpena or otherwise, the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents; and to take such testimony as it deems necessary. Subpenas may be issued under the signature of the chairman of the committee or any member designated by him and may be served by any person designated by such chairman or member. The chairman of the committee or any member thereof may administer oaths to witnesses.

ADRIEN ADELMAN

Mr. OVERTON submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 97), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate hereby is authorized and directed to pay from the contingent fund of the Senate to Adrien Adeiman, employed as professional consultant by the Committee on Manufactures investigating the desirability of establishing a National Economic Council under authority of Senate Resolution No. 114, Seventy-fourth Congress, the sum of $2,000 for services during the months of September, October, November, and December 1938, and an additional sum of $295 for per diem in lieu of subsistence, traveling expenses, and clerical assistance during the same period of time.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Calloway, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3791) to provide more effectively for the national defense by carrying out the recommendations of the President in his message of January 12, 1939, to the Congress, asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. May, Mr. Thomason, Mr. HARTER of Ohio, Mr. Andrews, and Mr. Short were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

THE NATIONAL DEFENSE

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I ask that a message from the House of Representatives be laid before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MILLER in the chair) laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3791) to provide more effectively for the national defense by carrying out the recommendations of the President in his message of Janury 12, 1939, to the Congress, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, it will be necessary for me to leave the city for a few days, and it will not be practicable for me to serve as one of the conferees. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the request of the House for a conference, and I ask that the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN], the two ranking members on the majority side, and the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Austin], the ranking member on the minority side, of the Military Affairs Committee, be appointed conferees on the part of the Senate on this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Texas that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the request of the House for a conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to: and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. Lewis, Mr. Logan, and Mr. Austin conferees on the part of the Senate.

PROHIBITION OF CERTAIN POLITICAL PRACTICES-ADDRESS BY SENATOR GUFFEY

IMr. MINTON asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record a radio address delivered by Senator Guffey on March 7, 1939, on the subject The Prohibition of Certain Political Practices, which appears in the Appendix.1

THE CALENDAR

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further routine business, the call of the calendar under rule VIII is next in order.

The clerk will state the first bill on the calendar.

RILL AND RESOLUTIONS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 326) for the payment of awards and appraisals heretofore made in favor of citizens of the United States in claims presented under the General Claims Convention of September 8, 1923, United States and Mexico, was announced as first in order.

Mr. KING. I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over. The resolution (S. Res. 58) providing that a calendar day's notice shall suffice in connection with suspension of a rule was announced as next in order.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I ask that the resolution be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be passed

The resolution (S. Res. 74) providing for a Committee on Civil Aviation was announced as next in order.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I ask that the resolution be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be passed

AUXILIARY VESSELS FOR THE NAVY

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 828) to permit the President to acquire and convert, as well as to construct, certain auxiliary vessels for the Navy, which had been reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs with an amendment to add a new section at the end of the bill, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1 of the act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of certain auxiliary vessels for the Navy," approved July 30, 1937 (50 Stat. 544), is hereby amended by inserting after the word "authorized," in the fifth line thereof, the words "to acquire and convert or," so that the said section the words "to acquire and convert or," so that the said section as amended will read as follows:

"That for the purpose of furnishing or replacing auxiliary vessels urgently necessary for the proper maintenance and operation of the Navy, the President of the United States is hereby authorized to acquire and convert or to undertake the construction of about 36,050 tons (light displacement tonnage) of such auxiliary vessels as follows, at a total cost for all vessels of not more than as 1010ws, at a total cost for all viscos $55,000,000;

"(a) One seaplane tender of about 8,300 tons;

"(b) One destroyer tender of about 9,000 tons;

"(c) One mine sweeper of about 600 tons;

"(a) One seaplane tender of about 0,300 tons;

"(b) One destroyer tender of about 9,000 tons;

"(c) One mine sweeper of about 9,000 tons;

"(d) One submarine tender of about 9,000 tons;

"(e) One fleet tug of about 1,150 tons; and

"(f) One oil tanker of about 8,000 tons."

Sec. 2. Sums heretofore or hereafter appropriated or made available for the commencement or for the construction and machinery, and armor, armament, and ammunition of auxiliary vessels for the Navy shall be held and considered to be available either for the acquisition and conversion or for the construction of such vessels.

Sec. 3. The act entitled "An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, and for other purposes" (50 Stat. 755), is hereby amended by deleting therefrom, at page 769, the words "and the cost of either shall not exceed the estimated cost thereof set forth on pages 524 and 525 of the hearings of the House Committee on Appropriations on the third deficiency appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1937": Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed as increasing the limit of the total cost of $50,000,000 imposed by the act of July 30, 1937, on the auxiliary vessels authorized therein.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, the Senator from Missouri

Mr. President, the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] and other Senators have asked that an explanation be made of this bill and the bill following it on the calendar. I think I can explain the purpose of the bill very briefly.

The purpose of Senate bill 828 is to permit the President to acquire and convert, as well as to construct, certain auxiliary vessels for the Navy. The bill was introduced at the request of the Navy Department. It does not authorize the acquisition or construction of any additional vessels for the Navy, and does not authorize any additional appropriations. Instead of constructing, the Navy in two instances, under existing law and authority, has acquired tankers known as naval auxiliaries. Two such tankers constructed and built by the Maritime Commission are now under the control of the Navy Department, and are being modernized for naval purposes by the Navy Department. It is necessary to change existing law in the case of one other tanker with respect to which the authority is limited to construction, in order to permit the Navy to do the same thing-not to do the constructing itself, but to acquire by purchase tankers built by the Maritime Commission.

The bill, therefore, is simply an amendment giving the Navy Department an opportunity to acquire as well as to construct. The money to construct is already appropriated. There will be a saving of about $1,500,000 by acquiring rather than constructing. No additional money is required. It is simply an amendment to the law, giving the Navy Department authority to do what it has done in other cases in which it has had general authority to acquire as well as to construct.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, let me say that the last time the calendar was called I asked for an explanation of the bill. I am completely satisfied with the explanation, and have no objection to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ALTERATIONS AND REPAIRS TO CERTAIN NAVAL VESSELS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 829) to authorize alterations and repairs to certain naval vessels, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs with an amendment, on page 1, line 9, after the numerals "$5,000,000," to strike out ": Provided further, That alterations and repairs to naval vessels authorized by this act shall be subject to the provisions of such treaty or treaties limiting naval armaments as may be in effect at the time such alterations and repairs are undertaken", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That for the purpose of modernizing the U.S.S. Argonaut, Narwhal, and Nautilus, alterations and repairs to such vessels are hereby authorized and expenditures therefor shall not be limited by the provisions of the act approved July 18, 1935 (49 Stat. 482; 5 U. S. C. 468a): Provided, That the total cost of such alterations and repairs shall not exceed $5,000,000.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, this bill permits the Navy to modernize three submarines which were built in 1930. The submarines have been found to be defective in their engine construction, and in order to make them of military value and use it is necessary to modernize and reconstruct them. Under general law, if the amount is not more than $450,000, the Navy can proceed to make repairs without coming to the Congress. Because of the amount being more than $450,000, congressional action is required to permit reconstruction of the three submarines, which are too valuable to scrap. Reconstruction will save the cost of building new ones. The cost will be about $1,800,000 for each one, or about $5,500,000 for the three.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. BARKLEY. I suggest the absence of a quorum. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Bulow	Ellender	Herring
Andrews	Burke	Frazier	Hill
Ashurst	Byrd	George	Holman
Austin	Byrnes	Gerry	Hughes
Bailey	Capper	Gibson	Johnson, Calif
Bankhead	Caraway	Gillette	Johnson, Colo.
Barbour	Chavez	Glass	King
Barkley	Clark, Idaho	Green	La Follette
Bilbo	Clark, Mo.	Guffey	Lee
Bone	Connally	Gurney	Lewis
Borah	Danaher	Harrison	Lodge
Bridges	Davis	Hatch	Logan
Brown	Donahey	Hayden	Lucas
THE THE DE		THE PERSON NAMED IN COLUMN TWO IS NOT THE OWNER.

28 62 000 00	TATTICK WILL IN	49 DAGE (9)	404 F. J. C. S. 140
Lundeen	Norris	Schwartz	Townsend
McCarran	Nye	Schwellenbach	Truman
McKellar	O'Mahoney	Sheppard	Tydings
McNary	Overton	Shipstead	Van Nuys
Maloney	Pepper	Smathers	Wagner
Mead	Pittman	Smith	Walsh
Miller	Radcliffe	Taft	Wheeler
Minton	Reed	Thomas, Okla.	White
Murray	Reynolds	Thomas, Utah	Wiley
Neely	Russell	Tobey	TOTAL STATE OF

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Ninety-one Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENT FOR REGULATION OF WHALING

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1045) to give effect to the International Agreement for the Regulation of Whaling, signed at London, June 8, 1937, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Foreign Relations with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 3 (a), on page 4, line 22, after the word "right", to insert "or young dolphin", so as to make the paragraph read:

SEC. 3. (a) Except as permitted by regulations made as here-inafter provided, it shall be unlawful to attempt to take, capture, or kill, or to hunt, take, capture, kill, possess, offer for sale, sell, offer to purchase, purchase, deliver for shipment, ship, cause to be shipped, deliver for transportation, transport, cause to be transported, carry or cause to be carried by any means whatever, receive for shipment, transportation or carriage, import or export at any time or in any manner, any right or young dolphin or gray whale, or any female baleen or sperm whale accompanied by a calf, or any calf, or to sell, purchase, ship, transport by any means whatever, import or export the products of any such whale, including oil, meat, bone, meal, or fertilizer.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 6, paragraph (c), page 9, line 1, after the word "violating", to insert "the convention or", so as to make the paragraph read:

vention or", so as to make the paragraph read:

(c) Any officer of the Coast Guard or Customs Service who shall find any vessel subject to the jurisdiction of the United States violating the convention or this act or any regulation promulgated pursuant thereto shall have authority to seize such vessel, and such vessel, including its tackle, apparel, furniture, cargo, and stores, may be forteited to the United States by proceedings in the proper United States district court. Any such officer also shall have power without warrant to arrest any person committing in his presence a violation of this act or any regulation promulgated pursuant thereto and to take such person for examination or trial before an officer or court of competent jurisdiction; and any such officer shall have power to execute any warrant or other process issued by an officer or court of competent jurisdiction for the enforcement of the provisions of the convention, this act, or any regulation promulgated pursuant thereto; and shall have authority, with a search warrant, to search any place on land.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 6, paragraph (d), page 10, line 1, after the words "provisions of", to insert 'the convention or", so as to make paragraph (d) read:

(d) All whales or parts or products thereof taken, processed, shipped, transported, carried, imported, or possessed contrary to the provisions of this act, or of any regulations promulgated pursuant thereto, shall be subject to seizure by any United States marshal, deputy marshal, or officer of the Coast Guard or Customs Service, and upon conviction of the offender, or upon judgment of a court of the United States that the same were taken, processed, shipped, transported, carried, imported, or possessed contrary to the provisions of the convention or this act, or any regulation promulgated pursuant thereto, such whales or parts or products thereof, or their value, may be forfeited to the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 13, page 11, line 21, to insert "Provided, That such repeal shall not operate in any way to abrogate, change, or diminish any rights now involved in pending litigation or cause of action accrued or accruing prior to the passage of this act under the provisions of existing law", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 13. The Whaling Treaty Act of May 1, 1936, 49 Stat. 1246 (U. S. C., Supp. III, title 16, secs. 901-915), is hereby repealed: Provided, That such repeal shall not operate in any way to abrogate, change, or diminish any rights now involved in pending litigation or cause of action accrued or accruing prior to the passage of this act under the provisions of existing law.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair announces that the morning hour has expired.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask unanimous consent that the call of the calendar may be continued.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will state the next bill on the calendar.

CONTROL OF STREAM POLLUTION

The bill (S. 685) to create a Division of Water Pollution Control in the United States Public Health Service, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I had hoped to secure action on this bill today, but I have conferred with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK], who has in the last few days introduced another bill on the same subject. He desires to have hearings before the committee on his bill. I have no desire to shut off anybody from hearings on a bill, and, without, in any way, affecting the status of the bill that is now on the calendar, I have agreed that if within the next few days hearings can be had by the Committee on Commerce on the bill of the Senator from Missouri, then, I shall not press for action on the pending bill.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, let me say to the Senator from Kentucky that I have no desire whatever to delay the consideration of legislation on the very important subject of the control of stream pollution. On the contrary, my very ardent desire is to expedite it in every way possible.

The Senator from Kentucky has introduced a bill which I assume is essentially the same as the bill passed at the last session of Congress and which was considered by the Commerce Committee. It so happens that, without any notice to committee members, the subject was to be taken up on the only day during the present session when it has been necessary for me to be absent from the Commerce Committee. A few days later, after a bill which I had in preparation was perfected. I introduced it.

It seems to me that the whole subject of stream pollution is so very important that the various measures proposed should all have consideration at the same time. Therefore, I requested the Senator from Kentucky not to press for the passage of his bill at this time, which I would necessarily have to oppose with every means in my power, within parliamentary limits, until there has been reasonable opportunity afforded for the consideration of my bill by the Commerce Committee.

I have not had oportunity as yet of conferring with the chairman of the Commerce Committee, but I am certain that there will be no objection in the committee to a hearing, which I have no desire to be unduly extensive, at the earliest possible moment. I assure the Senator from Kentucky that so soon as that consideration can be had in the Commerce Committee, and action taken on my bill by that committee. I will have no disposition whatever to object to going forward with the consideration of the whole subject in the

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, I am very much concerned about this bill, and my plight is to some extent the same as that of the Senator from Missouri. I was denied an opportunity of attending the particular meeting of the Commerce Committee to which he has referred. I, too, am anxious to go forward with this character of legislation. I do not know that it is in order, but I have a proposed amendment to the bill which has been introduced by the Senator from Kentucky, and, if it is in order, I should like to have it printed in the usual form, printed also in the RECORD and lie on the table for consideration in the event that the stream-pollution bill shall soon be considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment intended to be proposed by the Senator from Connecticut will be received, printed in the usual form, printed in the RECORD, and lie on the table.

The amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. MALONEY is as follows:

Amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. Maloney to the bill (S. 685) to create a Division of Water Pollution Control in the United States Public Health Service, and for other purposes, viz: On page 3, line 18, after "Sec. 3", insert "(a)"; and on page 3, after line 25, insert the following new subsection:

"(b) The Division, upon the request of any municipality, shall make a periodic test of the water at any bathing beach within the limits of such municipality and shall make a report to such municipality as promptly as possible with respect to the existence of water pollution at such bathing beach and shall make definite recommendations for the correction and elimination of any deleterious conditions which are found to exist." terious conditions which are found to exist."

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the status of this proposed legislation, as I have said heretofore, is as follows: In the last Congress I introduced a bill in the Senate and a Member of the House from Kentucky [Mr. Vinson] introduced a similar bill in the House. The House passed the Vinson bill. In the meantime, the then Senator from Connecticut, Mr. Lonergan, introduced a bill sponsored by the Izaak Walton League, with which we are all familiar, which is a sporting organization interested in recreation, fishing, shooting, and matters of that sort. The Vinson bill came to the Senate and was referred to the Committee on Commerce. The Lonergan bill and the bill introduced by the Senator from Missouri are practically the same and are sponsored by the same organization.

Hearings were had both in the House and the Senate committees on the proposed legislation. The House having passed the Vinson bill, the Senate committee reported that bill and, after long conferences and very earnest negotiations in the effort to arrive at a common basis which would result in some legislation, between the Senator from Connecticut, Mr. Lonergan, and myself, the bill passed the Senate with certain amendments.

The bill was then sent to conference and the conferees worked on it for weeks and weeks. Finally we got a bill upon which the then Senator from Connecticut, Mr. Lonergan, and I and others in the committee and in the Senate were able to agree upon. The bill passed the Congress, went to the White House, and was vetoed by the President on the ground that the provisions for appropriation to carry out the purposes of the act did not have to go through the Budget Bureau, and the President thought they ought to go through the Budget Bureau.

I introduced the bill again at the present session practically as written by the conferees eliminating the provision to which the President objected.

In view of the fact that committees of both the House and the Senate held hearings in the last Congress, and there is nothing new involved in the proposed legislation, the Committee on Commerce did not think it was necessary to hold additional hearings at the present session, and they reported, and there is now on the calendar, the bill which I introduced.

Last Friday, some days after the committee had reported the bill, the Senator from Missouri introduced his bill. I have no desire to cut off hearings or to deny to anybody the right to present a bill or to be heard upon it. I still entertain the views that I originally entertained, and I think the two Houses will concur in that view, that for the present it is impossible on this subject to pass legislation of a compulsory character, which resorts to injunctive process and prosecution in order to obtain the purification of streams. I think we have to make a beginning before we can arrive at the point where we can compel people to do anything under

In order that the Senator may have a hearing on his bill before the committee, I have no desire today to press the consideration of this measure; but I insist that the hearings shall not be delayed, that they shall be held just as soon as the committee is willing to hold them, and that following the hearings the committee shall take prompt action.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, so far as that is concerned, let me say to the Senator from Kentucky and the Senate that I am not in any position to make a commitment for the Commerce Committee. I am a member of the Commerce Committee, and I have said to the Senator from Kentucky that I have no particular desire to delay action on this matter. On the other hand, my desire is exactly the contrary; but when the Senator says he insists that the Commerce Committee do certain things and limit their hearings to a certain length, I say to the Senator from Kentucky that neither he nor I have a right to insist what the Commerce Committee shall do.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am not attempting to control the actions of the Commerce Committee. I am not even a member of it; but in view of the history of this legislation, I think it is certainly within the proprieties to insist that there shall be no undue delay. That is a matter which is wholly within the province of the Committee on Commerce. I have every reason to suppose, and I believe, that the chairman of the committee will arrange for an early hearing on the Senator's bill, in order to give the sponsor of the legislation a chance to be heard. What I had in mind was that I do not wish the subject to be indefinitely postponed or delayed or dragged out, as it was in the last Congress, so that we shall be unable to secure the passage of legislation until the last days of the session, and have the bill go to the President after the Congress has adjourned.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. So far as I am concerned, let me say that I am in favor of expediting the consideration of the subject in every possible way. I do not believe it has been expedited by the course which has been pursued here. For instance, while it was suggested that it is improper for the Senate to conduct hearings on the matter, the House committee has been going ahead and holding hearings on an identical measure. I am informed by the proponents of a drastic stream-pollution bill that they received very scant courtesy on the first day of the hearings in the House; that it seemed that nobody could be given a hearing before the committee other than persons who were industrialists interested in stream pollution, who were anxious to have a milder bill rather than a drastic bill to prevent stream pollution.

So far as I am concerned, I am willing to proceed at the first practicable moment; but I do not believe any purpose is to be served by trying to report a bill out of the Commerce Committee without hearings, and then to pass it through the Senate without the fullest and most extended debate.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, it has frequently happened in the Senate and in the House, as we all know, that when a committee has had hearings on a subject in one session of Congress it does not regard it necessary to go over the same ground again. I did not suggest that it was improper for the Senate committee to hold hearings. I did suggest that the committee did not feel that it was necessary. Neither I nor the committee could read the Senator's mind and know that 2 weeks or 10 days after they reported the bill which I introduced he was coming here with another bill. There is nothing irregular or improper in the course which the committee took.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I am not criticizing the committee in any degree, except that I do think it is unusual for a bill of this importance to be taken up without notice to members that it is to be taken up. The Senator from Connecticut and I, both members of the committee, were necessarily absent on other business and were not present. We are both very much interested in this measure. We had no opportunity to call up the committee and ask to have the bill postponed until we could be present. I see nothing whatever unreasonable in asking that this matter be passed over in the Senate for the present until there can be an opportunity for consideration of the whole subject in the Commerce Committee.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am in sympathy with that request. What I am interested in is giving the Senator and his associates a chance to be heard at an early date. I have no doubt the committee will arrange such a hearing; but in view of what occurred in the last Congress and the difficulty of arriving at an agreement on any measure at all, I urge, and even insist, that this matter be expedited and that there be no

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator. Mr. McNARY. I have only a word of comment. The able Senator from Missouri said he had no notice of the meeting. In the absence of the eminent chairman of the committee, the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Balley], I desire to say, in fairness to him, that notice was given to all the members of the committee. At least, I received a notice that the committee would consider the stream-pollution bill introduced by our leader, the Senator from Kentucky.

I make that statement only in view of the one which was made by the Senator from Missouri, because I am sure the Senator from North Carolina complied with the rule, and gave notice of the hearings.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I hope no Senator or anyone else will think I was accusing the chairman of the Commerce Committee of taking snap judgment. It was necessary for me to be absent from the city for a couple of days, and possibly the notice was given on the day before the meeting was called; but certainly no general notice was given that this measure was to be called up for consideration. I would not under any consideration be understood as suggesting or intimating or believing that the chairman of the committee, the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Balleyl, would ever, under any circustances, take advantage of any member of the committee or of anybody else.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not know what the custom is in the Committee on Commerce, but I am sure it is the same that it is in all other committees. When notices are sent out for a meeting, the notice contains a notation as to the bill which will be considered.

It is useless to discuss this matter further. The bill is going over for the time being. I hope the Senator from Missouri will cooperate, as he has assured me he will, and as I believe he will, to bring about at the very earliest date the hearing which he desires.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

COL. RICHARD C. PATTERSON

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 439) to confer the Distinguished Service Medal on Col. Richard C. Patterson, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President is hereby authorized to present a Distinguished Service Medal to Richard C. Patterson, colonel in the Military Intelligence Reserve Corps, for extraordinary achievements in connection with his services as administrative officer for the American Commission to Negotiate Peace as set out in letter addressed to The Adjutant General at Washington, D. C., on July 14, 1919, and signed by Robert Lansing, Henry White, and Tasker H. Bliss.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I shall not object to the consideration of this bill, because it happens that Colonel Patterson is a friend of mine, now rendering distinguished service as Assistant Secretary of Commerce. Before the bill passes, however, I wish to say that I hope it may never in the future be taken as a precedent for the decoration of a man in the military service for services having no connection whatever with the military service, performed entirely after the armistice, as a sort of liaison man in connection with the peace conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading. read the third time, and passed.

JOINT RESOLUTION AND BILL PASSED OVER

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 45) to amend the act of July 3, 1926, entitled "An act conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and render judgment in claims which the Crow Tribe of Indians may have against the United States, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, there are on the calendar a number of measures dealing with Indian claims. I have conferred with the chairman of the Indian Affairs Committee regarding them. I am seeking some additional information relative to a number of the claims; and I desire that they may be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator desires to have Senate Joint Resolution 45 passed over?

Mr. KING. I do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be passed over. The next measure on the calendar, Senate bill 863, will also be passed over.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I have no interest in these matters, but Senate bill 863 provides for the payment of attorneys' fees, and not for the presentation of a claim to the Court of Claims.

Mr. KING. I understand that; but I desire to make some inquiry concerning the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senate bill 863 will be passed

HARRY F. BAKER

The bill (S. 749) for the relief of Harry F. Baker was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States is hereby authorized and directed to credit the accounts of Harry F. Baker, of Rockland, Del., in the sum of $601.19, said amount representing payments made to Harry F. Baker for services rendered as postmaster while also holding an appointment with the Federal Housing Administration in contravention of the dual compensation statutes.

COHEN, GOLDMAN & CO., INC.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1374) for the relief of Cohen, Goldman & Co., Inc., which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment at the end of the bill to insert a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Cohen, Goldman & Co., Inc., the sum of $19,030.20, in full settlement of all claims against the Government growing out of contracts Nos. 1325, 1645, 2299, 3220, and 4519N, and contracts supplementary thereto, for the manufacture during 1917 and 1918 of overcoats and uniforms for the United States Army: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 783) to amend the act, as amended, entitled "An act to refer the claims of the Delaware Indians to the Court of Claims, with the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States," approved February 7, 1925, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, a number of measures have now been reached on the calendar which come within the classification to which I have referred.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senate bill 783 is one of them?

Mr. KING. Senate bill 783, Senate bill 784, Senate bill 790, Senate bill 1222, Senate bill 767, Senate bill 864, Senate bill 962, and Senate bill 498. That comprises the list for the moment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bills enumerated by the Senate from Utah with be passed over.

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, did the Senator from Utah object to the consideration of Senate bill 790?

Mr. KING. Yes, Mr. President; I objected to that bill. WAPATO SCHOOL DISTRICT 54, YAKIMA COUNTY, WASH.

The bill (S. 645) to provide funds for cooperation with Wapato School District No. 54, Yakima County, Wash., for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children of the Yakima Reservation was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, from any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $50,000 for the purpose of cooperating with Wapato School District No. 54, Yakima County, Wash., for extension and improvement of public-school buildings: Provided, That the expenditure of any moneys so appropriated shall be subject to the condition that the schools maintained by said district shall be available to all Indian children of the district on the same terms, except as to payment of tuition, as other children of said school district: Provided further, That such expenditures shall be subject to such further conditions as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 3790) relating to taxation of the compensation of public officers and employees was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over. The bill (S. 752) to amend section 78 of chapter 231, Thirty-sixth United States Statutes at Large (36 Stat. L., sec. 1109), relating to one judicial district to be known as the district of Idaho, and dividing it into four divisions to be known as the northern, central, southern, and eastern divisions, defining the territory embraced in said divisions, fixing the terms of district court for said divisions, requiring the clerk of the court to maintain an office in charge of himself or deputy at Coeur d'Alene City, Idaho; Moscow, Idaho; Boise City, Idaho; and Pocatello, Idaho; and to authorize the United States District Court for the District of Idaho, by rule or order, to make such changes in the description or names to conform to such changes of description or names of counties in said divisions as the Legislature of Idaho may hereafter make was announced as next in order.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I think some explanation should be made of this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

GEORGE A. ROGERS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 811) for the relief of George A. Rogers, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 1, line 6, to strike out "$436.90" and to insert "$278.90", and to insert a proviso at the end of the bill, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to George A. Rogers, of Bellingham, Wash., the sum of $278.90, in full satisfaction of his claim against the United States for expenses incurred as a result of an accident involving a Government truck operated in connection with the Civilian Conservation Corps, at the intersection of Maple and Jersey Streets, Bellingham, Wash., on March 27, 1938: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

IDA A. DEAVER

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 661) for the relief of Ida A. Deaver, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 1, line 6, to strike out "$109.17" and insert "$109.37"; on line 7, after the words "United States", to strike out the words "for the amount deposited in the Treasury of the United States because of the disallowances by the General Accounting Office of certain payments made to members of the Sac and Fox Tribe in Oklahoma, while he was superintendent and special disbursing agent of the Shawnee Agency at Shawnee, Okla.: Provided, That any funds accruing in the future to Noble Brown, Mabel Couteau, Horace Lasley, Harry G. Wakole, Ambrose Harrison, Thelma McCoy, or their estates shall be used to reimburse the United States for each pro rata share of the expenditure herein authorized" and to insert "for the amount deposited in the Treasury of the United States because of the disallowances by the General Accounting Office of certain payments made to members of the Sac and Fox Tribe in Oklahoma while he was superintendent and special disbursing agent of the Shawnee Agency at Shawnee, Okla.: Provided, That any funds accruing in the future to Noble Brown, Mabel Couteau, Horace Lasley, Harry G. Wakole, Ambrose Harrison, Thelma McCoy, or their estates shall be used to reimburse the United States for each pro rata share of the expenditure herein authorized: Provided further, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Ida A. Deaver, widow of Ira C. Deaver, the sum of $109.37 in full payment of all claims against the United States for the amount deposited in the Treasury of the United States because of the disallowances by the General Accounting Office of certain payments made to members of the Sac and Fox Tribe in Oklahoma while he was superintendent and special disbursing agent of the Shawnee Agency at Shawnee, Okla.: Provided, That any funds accruing in the future to Noble Brown, Mabel Couteau, Horace Lasley, Harry G. Wakole, Ambrose Harrison, Thelma McCoy, or their estates shall be used to reimburse the United States for each pro rata share of the expenditure herein authorized: Provided further, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PRISON-MADE GOODS

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 59) authorizing the Bureau of Labor Statistics to collect information as to amount and value of all goods produced in State and Federal prisons was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That for the purpose of furnishing information to the Congress regarding the amount of goods produced in State and Federal prisons the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor is authorized and directed to collect information concerning the amount and value of all goods produced in State and Federal prisons, showing separately the amount and value of goods produced under the State-use, State-account, contract, and piece-price systems.

For the purpose of making this study there is hereby authorized to be appropriated from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated the sum of $20,000. The Commissioner of Labor Statistics is directed to submit the report to the Congress on or before May 1, 1940.

FARM ACREAGE ALLOTMENTS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1363) to amend subsection (4) of subsection (c) of section 101 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, which had been reported from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert the following:

That subsection (4) of subsection (c) of section 101 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, which reads as follows:

"(4) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection, if, for any reason other than flood or drought, the acreage of wheat, cotton, corn, or rice planted on the farm is less than 80 percent of the farm acreage allotment for such commodity for the purpose of payment, such farm acreage allotment shall be 25 percent in excess of such planted acreage";

is hereby repealed.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I should like to have the able Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] explain the bill.

Mr. BANKHEAD. If the Senator will turn to the report contained in his file, he will find the section of the present law which the bill would repeal. I read the section for the convenience of the Senate:

(4) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection, if, for any reason other than flood or drought, the acreage of wheat, cotton, corn, or rice planted on the farm is less than 80 percent of the farm acreage allotment for such commodity for the purpose of payment, such farm acreage allotment shall be 25 percent in ss of such planted acreage.

No one has been able to explain just how that got into the act, but it resulted in a penalty in the payments to those who did not plant at least 80 percent of their allotments.

Mr. McNARY. Is the amendment similar to one offered by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. LEE] last week?

Mr. BANKHEAD. No; that is a different matter. This amendment is generally agreed to. I first offered it to cover cotton only, because I did not want to bring the other commodities in. No one wants the provision in the act. It merely compels the farmers to plant whether they want to or

Mr. McNARY. I agree with the philosophy of the amendment. What I wanted to know was whether it refers only to

Mr. BANKHEAD. It did.

Mr. McNARY. But now it refers to other commodities mentioned in the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

Mr. BANKHEAD. That was at the request of the representatives of the other commodities.

Mr. McNARY. They have requested that they be included? Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair suggests that the title be amended by striking out the word "amend" and substituting the word "repeal."

Mr. BANKHEAD. I ask that that amendment be made.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to repeal subsection (4) of subsection (c) of section 101 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938."

NEUTRALITY

Mr. KING. Mr. President, there has been considerable discussion concerning the so-called Neutrality Act, which was passed at the last session of Congress. I note by the press that even the administration is now opposed to the law and favors its repeal or modification.

At the last session of Congress, immediately after the enactment of the law—and I voted against the law—I introduced a bill providing for repeal of the Neutrality Act, but I could not secure favorable action from the committee to which it was referred.

Mr. McNARY. To what bill is the Senator referring? Mr. KING. To a bill to repeal the Neutrality Act.

Mr. McNARY. Is it on the calendar?

Mr. KING. Oh, no. Because I could see that the measure would perhaps result in international complications—at any rate, that it was not suitable in the situation—I introduced a bill on the 4th day of January for the repeal of the act. I understand that other bills have more recently been introduced to accomplish the same result, and I sincerely hope that the Committee on Foreign Relations will take up one of the bills before it and report a measure repealing the Neutrality

CROP INSURANCE

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of Senate bill 1098, a bill which I introduced for the purpose of permitting the Department of Agriculture to make advances for crop insurance in the drought-stricken areas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The CHIEF CLERK. To amend section 12 of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, by authorizing advances for crop insurance.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, it has been a policy on my part to object to the consideration of bills which have not been placed on the calendar and to ask that they go over for a day so that proper consideration and study can be given them. Of course, there are always exceptions to rules, in case of emergency, or where money is already appropriated and a policy is being carried out, and a law has been heretofore placed upon the statute books.

I should like to have an explanation of the bill and a statement of the reason why it is being called up at this time. It has not received consideration by the committee. Before I give consent I should like to know what is the general purpose and aim of the proposal.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, the bill is being called up at this particular time because if the farmers in the droughtstricken areas are to derive any benefit from the bill at all it will have to be passed at an early date. It provides that the Department of Agriculture may make advances for crop insurance. The Department says the measure will not cost the Government a 5-cent piece, and the Bureau of the Budget reports likewise. I will read the letter from the Department of Agriculture with reference to the measure.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I recall that when we had before us the A. A. A. Act the then Senator from Idaho, Mr. Pope, offered this insurance plan.

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct.
Mr. McNARY. Which I supported. I have always believed in crop insurance, and had a bill before the Senate for a good many years making provision for crop insurance. Was this an inadvertent omission from the bill we had before us?

Mr. WHEELER. I understand it was an inadvertent omission from the bill. It does not change the present law at all, except in permitting the Department to make loans in the drought-stricken areas for the payment of premiums. The Department says:

The amendment proposes to give authority for the making of advances to producers to be used in payment of the premiums on insurance taken with the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation. We understand that the advances are to be paid to the Corporation. for the account of the producer, and such advances would be limited to producers who are participating, or who agree to participate, in the agricultural conservation program. We understand also that such advances could be made prior to determination of the exact amount of the conservation payment and need not be considered as an advance against any particular payment but might be a charge against payments due the producer under any program administered by the Secretary of Agriculture. The proposed amendment would make the existing appropriation available for advances.

This amendment would greatly increase the effectiveness of the crop insurance program by providing a needed source of credit for farmers who have neither wheat nor cash available for the payment of premiums.

The Department favors enactment of the bill.

Upon reference of this matter to the Bureau of the Budget, as required by Budget Circular 344, the Acting Director thereof advised the Department of Agriculture under date of February 27, 1939, that "there would be no objection to the submission of such report to Congress, subject to the understanding that the Bureau of the Budget makes no commitment as to the relationship of this proposal to the program of the President, and, further, that the proposed amendment would not, per se, increase the total cost of the farm program beyond the $500,000,000 present authorization."

There will be no additional cost at all to the Governmen The bill was reported from the committee earlier today.

Mr. McNARY. The application of the measure is limited to the drought-stricken areas. It would extend credit to carry out the terms of the Crop Insurance Act?

Mr. WHEELER. That is the purpose of the bill.

Mr. McNARY. With that statement, I have no objection. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 12 of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, is amended by designating the existing provisions of said section 12 as subsection (a) and by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection (b): "The Secretary is authorized to make advances to producers for the purpose of assisting them to insure their crops with the Fed-eral Crop Insurance Corporation. The Secretary shall remit the amount of any such advances to a producer directly to such Corporation in payment of the premium on the insurance for which the producer has made application. Advances shall only be made to producers who are participating or who agree to participate in a program formulated pursuant to section 8. Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, the terms and conditions of such advances shall be fixed by the Secretary. The appropriation made in the Department of Agriculture Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1939, under the item entitled 'Conservation and Use of Agricultural Land Resources, Department of Agriculture,' shall be available during the fiscal year 1939 for advances authorized by this subsection."

JOE PIZL SR.

The bill (S. 810) for the relief of Joe Pizl, Sr., was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Joe Pizl, Sr., rural route, Antigo, Wis., the sum of $161.80, in full satisfaction of a judgment for damages to his automobile, including court costs and costs of transcript, secured October 4, 1937, in the Municipal Court of Langlade County, Wis., against Robert Hess, driver of a truck belonging to the Forest Service, which was being operated in connection with the Civilian Conservation Corps, said Government truck having collided on March 16, 1936, with a car owned by said Joe Pizl, Sr.: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 572) to provide for the common defense by acquiring stocks of strategic and critical raw materials, concentrates, and alloys essential to the needs of industry for the manufacture of supplies for the armed forces and the civilian population in time of a national emergency, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. FRAZIER. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

DECORATION OF CIVIL-SERVICE EMPLOYEES

The bill (S. 1582) to authorize the President to bestow a Meritorious Service Medal upon civil-service officers and employees of the United States, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over. The bill (S. 281) to amend further the Civil Service Retirement Act, approved May 29, 1930, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over. Mr. NEELY subsequently said: Mr. President, I was called from the floor for a moment, and during my absence the Senate passed over Senate bill 281, to amend further the Civil Service Retirement Act, approved May 29, 1930. May I inquire what the status of that bill now is?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill was passed over on objection of the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING].

Mr. NEELY. I give notice now that on the next calendar day I propose to make a vigorous effort to have that bill passed; and, if it cannot be taken up by unanimous consent or in the absence of objection, I shall under proper parliamentary provision move that the Senate proceed to its consideration.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1464) to extend the facilities of the United States Public Health Service to active officers of the Foreign Service of the United States was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

LOFTS & SON

The bill (S. 270) for the relief of Lofts & Son was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Lofts & Son, of Hood River,

Oreg., the sum of $33,500 in full satisfaction of all its claims against the United States for damages resulting from the loss of its sand and gravel plant at the mouth of the Hood River and its inability to further carry on the operations of removing sand and gravel on land now leased from the Oregon Lumber Co. because such land will be flooded by the backwaters of the Bonneville Dam: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with such claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with such claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

F. E. PERKINS

The bill (S. 1517) for the relief of F. E. Perkins was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $3,418.82, which sum of $3,418.82 shall be credited by the Secretary of the Treasury to the official trust-fund checking account of F. E. Perkins, symbol 89-463, former superintendent of the Shawnee Indian Agency, Shawnee, Okla., with the Treasurer of the United States, to cover a net shortage of trust and official funds, representing funds of individual Indians, $3,402.32, and fees collected pursuant to the act of February 14, 1920 (41 Stat. 415), as amended by the act of March 1, 1933 (47 Stat. 1417), $16.50, caused by the peculations of Joseph A. Pourier, former employee of that agency.

WORTH GALLAHER

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 793) for the relief of Worth Gallaher, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 2, line 2, after the word "have", to strike out "occurred" and to insert "been incurred", so as to make the bill read:

to insert "been incurred", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding the provisions and limitations of sections 15 to 20, both inclusive, of the act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes," approved September 7, 1916, as amended, and as limited by the act of February 15, 1934 (48 Stat. 351), the United States Employees' Compensation Commission be, and the same is hereby, authorized and directed to receive and consider, when filed, the claim of Worth Gallaher, of Knox County, Tenn., for disability alleged to have been incurred by him while enrolled in the Civilian Conservation Corps, Camp 1458, Gatlinburg, Tenn.: Provided, That claim hereunder shall be filed within 6 months after the approval of this act: Provided further, That no benefits shall accrue prior to the enactment of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ESTATE OF O. K. HIMLEY

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 421) for the relief of the estate of O. K. Himley, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment to add a proviso at the end of the bill, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the estate of O. K. Himley, late of Crawford County, Wis., the sum of $80 in full satisfaction of its claim against the United States for damages arising out of the loss of two cows belonging to such estate that were drowned on or about February 13, 1934, as a result of work done on the Himley farm, without permission of the owners, by employees of the Civil Works Administration in carrying out a Civil Works Administration in carrying out a Civil Works Administration in carrying out a Civil works Administration project: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Burke] reported the bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. I see that the bill involves only $80. I shall not ask that time be taken for an explanation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 902) to amend the act entitled "An act authorizing the temporary detail of United States employees, possessing special qualifications, to governments of American republics and the Philippines, and for other purposes," approved May 25, 1938, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like an explanation of the bill. As a matter of fact, we have so many employees in the State Department it seems to me there is no necessity for making further appointments. If we cannot have an explanation of the bill at the moment, I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over. The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 46) authorizing appropriation for expenses of a representative of the United States and of his assistants, and for one-half of the joint expenses of this Government and the Government of Mexico, in giving effect to the agreement of November 9-12, 1938, between the two Governments providing for the settlement of American claims for damages resulting from expropriations of agrarian properties since August 30, 1927, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like an explanation of the joint resolution merely because the Mexican Government in the past, and at present, has caused a great deal of trouble in the matter of damaging property and expropriating it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill was reported by the Senator from Texas [Mr. Connally].

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over. The bill (S. 95) to amend the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 22, 1920, as amended, to extend retirement to certain employees of certain Indian schools was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

CHESTER J. BABCOCK

The bill (S. 1357) for the relief of Chester J. Babcock was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding the provisions and limitations of section 6 of the Civil Service Retirement Act, approved May 29, 1930, the Civil Service Commission is authorized and directed to extend the benefits of such section to Chester J. Babcock, formerly an employee at the United States Naval Ammunition Depot, Iona Island, N. Y., in the same manner and to the same extent as if application had been made within 3 months after the effective date of such act of May 29, 1930. The application of the said Chester J. Babcock for the benefits of such act of May 29, 1930, shall be filed within 3 months from the date of the approval of this act.

PROHIBITION OF REPRODUCTION OF OFFICIAL BADGES AND OTHER INSIGNIA

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1281) to prohibit reproduction of official badges, identification cards, and other insignia, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1 of the act entitled "An act to prohibit the misuse of official insignia," approved on June 29, 1932 (47 Stat. 342; U. S. C., title 18, sec. 76a), be amended to read as follows:

follows:

"That hereafter the manufacture, sale, or possession of any badge, identification card, or other insignia, of the design prescribed by the head of any department or independent office of the United States for use by any officer or subordinate thereof, or of any colorable imitation thereof, or the photographing, printing, or in any other manner making or executing any engraving, photograph, print, or impression in the likeness of any such badge, identification card, or other insignia, or of any colorable imitation thereof, is prohibited, except when and as authorized under such regulations as may be prescribed by the head of the department or independent office of which such insignia indicates the wearer is an officer or subordinate."

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of that measure?

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, in reply to the inquiry of the able Senator from Missouri, I now read from a report of the Attorney General, dated February 7, 1939:

Existing law prohibits the unauthorized manufacture, sale, or possession of official badges, identification cards, or other insignia. It does not comprehend, however, the reproduction of photographs, engravings, or other likenesses of official badges in periodicals or other similar publications. Such reproductions are highly undesirable as they at times enable unauthorized persons to counterfeit such badges, etc. I have in mind more particularly the reproductions of the badges and identification cards of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which, in the interest of the public, must be safeguarded against counterfeiting by imposters and other unauthorized individuals.

With that end in view I recommend the enactment of the

With that end in view, I recommend the enactment of the enclosed proposed bill drafted in the Department of Justice, to extend the prohibitions contained in the above-mentioned statute to photographing, printing, or otherwise reproducing the likeness of any official badge or identification card or other insignia.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, let me say, if the Senator will permit, that I have no objection whatever to the bill. I am deeply in sympathy with the purposes sought to be achieved by the bill. The reason I asked for an explanation was that I was hopeful that the bill might go far enough to prevent the wearing of uniforms and the display of insignia of other nations, so as to prevent such situations as the recent disgraceful exhibition which took place in New York on the part of the German bund.

Mr. ASHURST. I thank the Senator from Missouri for his suggestion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN H. BARRY

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 827) for the relief of John H. Barry, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding the provisions of so much of section 6 of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, as provides that no claim for a disability retirement annuity under such section shall be allowed unless the application therefor is executed prior to the applicant's separation from the service or within 6 months thereafter, the Civil Service Commission is authorized and directed to (1) consider upon its merits the application for a disability retirement annuity under such section executed on November 5, 1937, by John H. Barry, formerly employed as a mail carrier at the Worcester, Mass., post office, and (2) award such annuity, if any, to said John H. Barry as he would be entitled to if timely application therefor had been made.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of that bill?

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, the bill was considered by the Committee on Civil Service, and, on behalf of the committee, I favorably reported the bill. John H. Barry was a letter carrier in the city of Worcester, Mass., and while serving in that capacity he was stricken with a mental disability and had to resign; and because of his mental condition he did not file his application for disability retirement in the required 6 months. He is in great need of assistance, and a letter from the Civil Service Commission recommends favorable action upon the bill. I think it is a most worthy measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 840) to amend and clarify the provisions of the act of June 15, 1936 (49 Stat. 1507), and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I wish to make an inquiry of the Senator from Texas [Mr. Sheppard]. There seems to be an unusual provision in the bill directing the Comptroller General to allow claims which he has heretofore disallowed; that is, we are now proposing to change the law so that in the future certain types of claims may be properly allowed. The provision reaches back and requires the allowance of claims which were legally and properly disallowed heretofore, without any limit as to the time or without any limit as to amount.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, let the bill go over until I can look into that phase of the matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

ADDITION OF LANDS TO SHENANDOAH NATIONAL PARK

The bill (S. 509) to add certain lands of the Front Royal Quartermaster Depot Military Reservation, Va., to the Shenandoah National Park, and for other purposes was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the following-described lands of the Front Royal Quartermaster Depot Military Reservation, Va., are hereby made a part of the Shenandoah National Park, subject to hereby made a part of the Shenandoah National Park, subject to all laws and regulations applicable thereto: Beginning at concrete monument numbered 10 in the boundary line of the Front Royal Remount Depot, and running thence along said boundary line, north 70 degrees 00 minutes west 3,465.0 feet to monument numbered 11, thence north 40 degrees 30 minutes west 1,881.0 feet to monument numbered 12, thence north 2 degrees 00 minutes west 792.0 feet to monument numbered 13, thence north 78 degrees 00 minutes west 792.0 feet to monument numbered 13, thence north 78 degrees 00 minutes west 792.0 feet to monument numbered 13, thence north 78 degrees 00 minutes west 792.0 feet to monument numbered 13, thence north 78 degrees 00 minutes west 792.0 feet to monument numbered 13, thence north 78 degrees 00 minutes west 792.0 feet to monument numbered 13, thence north 78 degrees 00 minutes west 792.0 feet to monument numbered 13, thence north 78 degrees 10 minutes west 792.0 feet to monument numbered 13, thence north 78 degrees 10 minutes west 792.0 feet 10 minutes 892.0 fee bered 11, thence north 40 degrees 30 minutes west 1,881.0 feet to monument numbered 12, thence north 2 degrees 00 minutes west 792.0 feet to monument numbered 13, thence north 78 degrees 00 minutes west 693.0 feet to monument numbered 14, thence south 1 degree 30 minutes west 379.5 feet to monument numbered 15, thence south 61 degrees 15 minutes west 2,244.0 feet to monument numbered 16, thence south 16 degrees 00 minutes east 2,640.0 feet to monument numbered 17, thence south 61 degrees 15 minutes west 3,333.0 feet to monument numbered 18, thence south 15 degrees 00 minutes east 646.8 feet to monument numbered 19, thence south 63 degrees 00 minutes west 627.0 feet to monument numbered 20, thence south 15 degrees 00 minutes west 1,254.0 feet to monument numbered 21, thence south 48 degrees 00 minutes east 3,267.0 feet to monument numbered 22, thence north 25 degrees 00 minutes west 1,551.0 feet to monument numbered 23, thence north 25 degrees 00 minutes west 1,551.0 feet to monument numbered 24, thence north 67 degrees 00 minutes east 1,716.0 feet to monument numbered 25, thence north 58 degrees 00 minutes east 2,862.75 feet to monument numbered 26, thence north 79 degrees 00 minutes east 2,377.15 feet to monument numbered 27, thence south 28 degrees 30 minutes west 338.25 feet to monument numbered 26 (offset 4 feet west), thence south 30 degrees 00 minutes west 462.0 feet to monument numbered 29 (offset 14 feet east), thence south 40 degrees 00 minutes west 396.0 feet to monument numbered 31 (offset 9.0 feet east), thence south 54 degrees 00 minutes west 132.0 feet to monument numbered 31 (offset 10.0 feet east), thence south 40 degrees 00 minutes west 429.0 feet to monument numbered 32 (offset 4 feet south), thence south 53 degrees 00 minutes west 264.0 feet to monument numbered 35 (offset 4 feet south), thence north 52 degrees 00 minutes west 165.0 feet to monument numbered 36 (offset 8.0 feet south), thence north 85 degrees 30 minutes east 1,023.0 feet to monument numbered 37 (offset 4 feet to monument numb thence north 52 degrees 00 minutes east 330.0 feet to monument numbered 41, thence along a proposed boundary line north 19 degrees 51 minutes east 1,684.5 feet to point A.1, thence north 52 degrees 20 minutes east 1,107.0 feet to point A.2, thence north 39 degrees 26 minutes east 717.5 feet to a point A.3, thence north 26 degrees 11 minutes east 1,978.0 feet to concrete monument numbered 10, the point of beginning, it being the intent of this act to add to the Shenandoah National Park all that portion of the Front Royal Quartermaster Depot Military Reservation lying west of a line between monuments numbered 41 and 10, as described by the last four courses of the above description. The tract as described contains an area 977½ acres, more or less.

DECORATION OF SGT. FRED W. STOCKHAM, DECEASED

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 2) providing for consideration of a recommendation for decoration of Sgt. Fred W. Stockham, deceased, which was read, as follows:

Whereas on the nights of June 13-14, 1918, at Belleau Woods, Fred W. Stockham, deceased, formerly a gunnery sergeant, United States Marine Corps, in action involving actual conflict with the enemy, distinguished himself conspicuously by gallantry and intreplicity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty; and

Whereas a citation citing said Fred W. Stockham for the extraordinary heroism displayed by him at such time was written but, through accident, was not published and is not recorded in the War Department; and

Whereas no decoration has been awarded to said Fred W. Stockham for the extraordinary heroism displayed by him at such time: Therefore be it

Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That any recommendation for decoration by the United States of America of Fred W. Stockham, deceased, formerly a gunnery sergeant, Ninety-sixth Company, Second Battalion,

Sixth Division, United States Marine Corps, shall be considered and acted upon in the same manner as such recommendation would have been considered and acted upon if it had been pending on May 26, 1928.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I understand that there has been an adverse report by the Department on the bill.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Utah that there was an adverse report from the War Department, based purely on technical grounds, to the effect that an act had been passed some time ago limiting the consideration of matters of decoration, and purely as a technical matter they objected. I can say to the Senator from Utah that the case is an extremely meritorious one. A veteran sergeant in the Marine Corps during the battle of Belleau Woods—I may say that he was serving in the battalion which was then commanded by General Holcomb. now Commandant of the Marine Corps-took off his gas mask and gave it to a younger soldier for the purpose of saving the younger soldier's life, but thereby losing his own.

I have a letter from the company commander saying that he had recommended the sergeant for citation, but that the company and battalion had been decimated in that engagement, and apparently the recommendation was lost.

While on technical grounds, Mr. President, there is an adverse recommendation from the War Department, I do not believe that a more meritorious case, a case justifying the suspending of the rules, and allowing the decoration in question to be issued in behalf of the deceased soldier, could possibly come before this body.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the joint resolution,

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

DOLORES P. DE WILLIAMSON

The bill (S. 511) for the relief of Dolores P. de Williamson was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Dolores P. de Williamson the sum of $3,500, in satisfaction of all claims against the United States on account of the death of her husband, Ernesto Williamson, a citizen of Panama, as a result of a collision on April 30, 1937, between a United States Army truck and an automobile in which he was riding, near Bejuco, Republic of Panama.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 454) for the relief of Ernest S. Frazier was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I think we should have an explanation of that bill. It is a remarkable bill which changes the record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill was reported by the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD].

Mr. SHEPPARD. In this case, after an investigation, the War Department changed the comment it had placed on the man's discharge, reflecting upon his character and physical condition, but they did not also change the incorrect record on which that discharge was based. In that incorrect record the Department said he was illiterate and degenerate, a comment which ought not to be placed against any man unless there is ample justification for it.

Mr. McKELLAR. It is very difficult for the Congress to undertake to change the records of the War Department.

Mr. SHEPPARD. The War Department changed its own records, in part.

Mr. McKELLAR. A similar bill passed Congress once before and the President vetoed it. It seems to me we ought not to pass another such bill and send it to the President.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I respectfully submit that the President was in error in vetoing the bill. The War Department had cleared the man's discharge, but did not clear the record on which was based the language in the discharge which it removed.

Mr. McKELLAR. I call the Senator's attention to the report on the first bill from the War Department:

For the reasons set forth in the foregoing, the War Department is strongly opposed to the enactment of the proposed legislation.

Thereafter that bill was vetoed. Now, in response to a Senator's request for the opinion of the Department on this bill the Secretary says:

After reconsideration of the entire matter, the War Department adheres to the view expressed in its previous report, quoted in the foregoing, and recommends that S. 454 be not enacted into law.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, after reconsideration of the entire matter, I ask the Senate, in its judgment and out of its own sense of justice, again to pass the bill. The record stated that the man was illiterate and degenerate. I know him personally, and I know that statement to be untrue. I know further that the War Department did make partial correction.

Let the bill go over until the Senator from Tennessee has had an opportunity to look into it further.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

ACCEPTANCE OF MEDALS, ORDERS, AND DECORATIONS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 510) to authorize certain officers and enlisted men of the United States Army to accept such medals, orders, and decorations as have been tendered them by foreign governments in appreciation of services rendered, which was read, as follows:

of services rendered, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the following-named officers and enlisted men of the United States Army are hereby authorized to accept such medals, orders, and decorations, as have been tendered them by foreign governments in appreciation of services rendered: Brig. Gen. Charles Burnett; Brig. Gen. Leigh C. Fairbank; Col. Lester D. Baker; Col. Albert Gilmor; Col. Martin C. Shallenberger; Col. Rodney H. Smith; Col. Edwin M. Watson; Col. F. Langley Whitley; Lt. Col. Edward M. Almond; Lt. Col. John E. Colley Lt. Col. John S. Coulter; Lt. Col. Louis A. Craig; Lt. Col. Howard C. Davidson; Lt. Col. John F. Davis; Lt. Col. Norman E. Fiske; Lt. Col. Henry B. Lewis; Lt. Col. John E. McMahon; Lt. Col. Burton Y. Read; Lt. Col. William E. Schmidt; Lt. Col. John Andrew Weeks; Lt. Col. Lawrence B. Weeks; Lt. Col. John S. Winslow; Maj. Charles Y. Banfill; Maj. Robert E. Cummings; Maj. Harold L. George; Maj. Samuel A. Greenwell; Maj. Gustav B. Guenther; Maj. Caleb V. Haynes; Maj. William D. Hohenthal; Maj. Vincent J. Meloy; Maj. Lawrence C. Mitchell; Maj. Wilton B. Persons; Maj. Lowell M. Riley; Maj. Horace B. Smith; Capt. Mark M. Boatner, Jr.; Capt. Malin Craig, Jr.; Capt. Townsend Griffiss; Capt. Alva L. Harvey; Capt. George Honnen; Capt. Ford J. Lauer; Capt. Carl B. McDaniel; Capt. Daniel J. Martin; Capt. William A. Matheny; Capt. Floyd L. Parks; Capt. George W. Read, Jr.; Capt. Harry McK. Roper; Capt. Thomas D. White; First Lt. William C. Bentley, Jr.; First Lt. John A. Cleveland, Jr.; First Lt. Richard S. Freeman; First Lt. Frederic E. Glantzberg; First Lt. Richard S. Freeman; First Lt. Edwin L. Tucker; First Lt. Torgils G. Wold; Second Lt. Edwin Nevin Howell; Second Lt. Lawrence A. Spilman; Second Lt. James H. Rothrock, Air Reserve (active); Master Sgt. Floyd B. Haney; Technical Sgt. Adolph Cattarius; Staff Sgt. Charles S. Guinn; Staff Sgt. Ralph W. Spencer; Staff Sgt. Henry L. West; Sgt. Frank B. Conner; Corp. John S. Gray; Corp. Clarence D. Lake; Corp. James E. Sands; Pvt.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, was this bill recommended by the War Department?

Mr. SHEPPARD. This is the usual bill authorizing the acceptance of medals and decorations.

Mr. McKELLAR. Was it recommended by the War Department?

Mr. SHEPPARD. It was recommended by the War Department.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RELIEF OF CERTAIN DISBURSING OFFICERS OF THE ARMY

The bill (S. 512) for the relief of certain disbursing officers of the Army of the United States and for the settlement of individual claims approved by the War Department was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of the following disbursing officers of the Army of the United States the amounts set opposite their names: Capt. Emmett J. Bean, Finance Department, $29.05; Lt. Col. Richard L. Cave, Finance Department, $180; Capt. Harold F. Chrisman,

Finance Department, $57.15; Lt. Col. Walter D. Dabney, Finance Department, $35.72; Maj. Henry M. Denning, Finance Department, $50.28; Lt. Col. Edwin F. Ely, Finance Department, $11; Lt. Col. Horace G. Foster, Finance Department, $55; First Lt. John R. Gilchrist, Finance Department, $55; First Lt. John R. Gilchrist, Finance Department, $610; Capt. Charles W. Hensey, Finance Department, $19.59; Maj. George F. MacDonald, Finance Department, $5; Maj. Arthur J. Perry, Finance Department, $26.28; Capt. Alexander H. Perwein, Infantry, $407.88; Capt. Leighton N. Smith, Finance Department, $14; said amounts being public funds for which they are accountable and which comprise minor errors in computation of pay and allowances due former members of the Civilian Conservation Corps, who are no longer enrolled in that corps, and which amounts have been disallowed by the Comptroller General of the United States: Provided, That no part of the amounts so credited shall be later charged against any individual other than the various payees.

SEC. 2. That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of Lt. Col. Richard L. Cave, Finance Department, the sum of $100, public funds for which he is accountable and which were paid to the Cox Fence Co. for construction work and disallowed by the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of Lt. Col. Richard L. Cave, Finance Department, the sum of $19.83, public funds for which he is accountable, and which has been disallowed by the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of Lt. Col. Edward T. Comegys, Finance Department, the sum of $19.83, public funds for which he is accountable, and which herpersents items disallowed by the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of Lt. Col. Edward T. Comegys, Finance Dep

SEC. 6. That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of Lt. Col. Edwin F. Ely, Finance Department, the sum of $10.50, public funds for which he is accountable, and which has been disallowed by the Comptroller General of the United States on account allowed by the Comptroller General of the United States on account of a payment made to a former enlisted man for flying pay.

SEC. 7. That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Maj. Malcolm V. Fortier, Infantry, the sum of $51.26 in full satisfaction of his claim against the United States for that amount which was paid by him for advertising for and in the interests of the United States, without the prior approval of the Secretary of War as required by Revised Statutes 3828 (44 U. S. C. 324).

SEC. 8. That payments heretofore made for hospital and medical expenses incident to the injury or disease of Reserve officers on

SEC. 8. That payments heretofore made for hospital and medical expenses incident to the injury or disease of Reserve officers on duty with the Civilian Conservation Corps, incurred while on leave of absence, are hereby ratified and validated, and the Comptroller General of the United States is hereby directed to allow credit in the accounts of disbursing officers of the Government for and on account of all such payments: Provided, That any amounts collected from any person on account of payments which are herein validated shall be refunded to such persons upon presentation of a claim therefor to the Comptroller General: Provided further, That the Comptroller General is authorized and directed to adjust, allow, and certify for payment all claims when approved by the Surgeon General of the Army for hospital and medical services heretofore furnished incident to the injury or disease of Reserve officers on duty with the Civilian Conservation Corps incurred while on leave of absence.

SEC. 9. That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of First Lt. John R. Gilchrist, Finance Department, the sum of $1.25, public funds for which he is accountable, which were paid by him to Dr. Dewey H. Walden, contract physician, for traveling expenses and disallowed by the Comptroller General of the United States.

States.

SEC. 10. That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of Capt. Charles W. Hensey, Finance Department, the sum of $7.63, public funds for which he is accountable, which sum has been disallowed by the Comptroller General of the United States on account of a payment made to an enlisted man: Provided, That no part of this amount shall be charged to any person other than the payee.

SEC. 11. That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of Capt. Charles W. Hensey, Finance Department, the sum of $7.45, public funds for which he is accountable, which sum has been disallowed by the Comptroller General of the United States on account of an overpayment made to a former member of a citizens' military training camp: Provided, That no part of this amount shall be charged to any person other than the payee.

SEC. 12. That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of Lt. Col. Eugene O. Hopkins, Finance Department, the sum of $28.63, public funds for which he is accountable, which were paid to a former soldier as additional pay as an expert gunner and disallowed by the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of Capt. Donald J. Leehey, Corps of Engineers, $5,100, representing part of an amount paid by him for rental of temporary office quarters, shop storage, wharf and dock at Eastport, Maine, for the fiscal year 1936, under lease with the MacNichol Packing Co., which amount has been disallowed by the Comptroller General of the United States: Provided, That the amounts so credited shall not be charged against any moneys otherwise due the payees.

SEC. 14. That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of Lt. Col. Montgomery T. Legg, Finance Department, the sum of $150, public funds for which he is accountable, and which were stolen from the office safe of his agent officer at Camp S-123, Corning, N. Y., on January 16, 1938.

SEC. 15. That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of Lt. Col. Montgomery T. Legg, Finance Department, the sum of $126, public money for which he is accountable, paid by him on a forged voucher.

and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of Lt. Col. Montgomery T. Legg, Finance Department, the sum of $126, public money for which he is accountable, paid by him on a forged voucher.

SEC. 16. That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of Lt. Col. Emmett C. Morton, Finance Department, the sum of $4.009.45, public funds for which he is accountable, and which were paid by him on fraudulent vouchers prepared by a trusted employee.

SEC. 17. That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of Maj. Arthur J. Perry, Finance Department, $2.38, public funds for which he is accountable, which were paid to a former enlisted man of the Army as pay and disallowed by the Comptroller General of the United States.

SEC. 18. That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of Maj. Arthur J. Perry, Finance Department, $12.85, public funds for which he is accountable, which were paid by him to First Lt. W. W. Hudgens, Infantry Reserve, for travel expenses, and which have been disallowed by the Comptroller General of the United States: Provided, That no part of this sum shall be charged to any person other than the payee.

SEC. 19. That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of Capt. Alexander H. Perwein, Infantry, $32.10, public funds for which he is accountable, which were paid to a former enlisted man of the Army as pay, and disallowed by the Comptroller General of the United States.

SEC. 20. That the Comptroller General be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of the United States.

SEC. 21. That the Comptroller General be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of Maj. Leonard H. Sims, Finance Department, the sum of $126.55, public funds f unknown.

SEC. 22. That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit in the accounts of Capt. Fiorre J. Stagliano, Finance Department, $1,035.42, public funds for which he is accountable and which were paid by him for the rental of passenger-carrying vehicles used by the Puerto Rican Hurricane Commission, and which amount has been disallowed by the Comptroller General of the United States.

RENJAMIN H. SOUTHERN

The bill (S. 339) for the relief of Benjamin H. Southern was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, and benefits upon persons honorably discharged from the United States Army, Benjamin H. Southern shall be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the United States Army on the 31st day of March 1919: Provided, That no bounty, back pay, pension, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

Mr. McKELLAR subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the vote by which Calendar No. 146, Senate bill 339, was passed, be reconsidered, and that the bill go over. I see that it is recommended against by the War Department, and I should like to look into it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the vote by which Senate bill 339 was passed is reconsidered, and the bill will be passed over.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1706) to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, and for other purposes, was announced as

Mr. BARKLEY. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

COOPERATIVE AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION WORK

The bill (S. 518) to provide for the further development of cooperative agricultural extension work was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to further develop the cooperative extension system as inaugurated under the act entitled "An act to provide for cooperative agricultural extension work between the agricultural colleges in the several States receiving the benefits of the act of Congress approved July 2, 1862, and all acts supplementary thereto, and the United States Department of Agriculture", approved May 8, 1914 (U. S. C., title 7, secs. 341–348), there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of paying the expenses of cooperative extension work in agriculture and home economics and the necessary printing and distribution of information in connection with the same, the sum of $500,000 annually. The sums appropriated pursuant to this act shall be allotted by the Secretary of Agriculture to the several States in such amounts as he may deem necessary, and shall be paid to the several States in the same manner and subject to the same conditions and limitations as the initial payments of $10,000 to each State appropriated under the act of May 8, 1914. The sums appropriated pursuant to this act shall be in addition to and not in substitution for sums appropriated under such act of May 8, 1914, as amended and supplemented, and sums otherwise appropriated for agricultural extension work.

STAR-ROUTE CONTRACTS

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 76) to authorize the Postmaster General to withhold the awarding of star-route contracts for a period of 60 days, which had been reported from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads with an amendment, on page 1, line 6, after the word "of", to strike out "sixty" and insert "forty-five", so as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved, etc., That the Postmaster General is authorized and directed to withhold the awarding of star-route contracts for which bids have been received in the third contract section for a period of 45 days after March 7, 1939.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like an explanation of the joint resolution.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, the only purpose of the joint resolution is to permit the Post Office Department to withhold the award of contracts to star-route carriers pending the consideration of other legislation now before the Congress. It allows the Department to withhold the award of those contracts for a period of 45 days, which will enable the Congress to act on the other legislation in the meantime.

Mr. KING. May I ask the Senator if the joint resolution is not retroactive, interfering with the obligations of the Government to contractors? I presume the Government asked for bids, and bids were submitted and contracts prepared. We now propose, after that course, to forbid the Department to enter into the contracts.

Mr. MURRAY. The joint resolution does not forbid the Department to enter into contracts. There will be merely a delay in awarding the contracts so as to give the Congress an opportunity to act on the legislation which is pending before it at this time.

Mr. KING. Why should we delay after we have asked for bids and bids have been submitted? Apparently the bids were satisfactory. Do we now propose to change the law and impose harsher terms?

Mr. HAYDEN. Now is the time, normally, for advertising

Mr. McKELLAR. For this particular area.

Mr. HAYDEN. For one-fourth of the United States, for the next fiscal year, beginning July 1. The advertisements normally would go out at this time. The effect of the joint resolution is to delay for 45 days advertising for bids. If Congress does not act on the legislation before it in the meantime, there will still remain ample time to advertise for bids and let the contracts; and the star-route business can go on just as usual.

Mr. KING. Then, the passage of the joint resolution will not mean the abrogation of any contracts?

Mr. HAYDEN. Not at all. It will merely delay advertising for bids.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "Joint resolution to authorize the Postmaster General to withhold the awarding of star-route contracts for a period of 45 days."

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 3537) to extend the facilities of the United States Public Health Service to active officers of the Foreign Service of the United States was announced as next in order.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over. RECOGNITION OF CIVILIAN SERVICES IN CONSTRUCTION OF PANAMA CANAL

The bill (S. 50) to provide for recognizing the services rendered by civilian officers and employees in the construction and establishment of the Panama Canal and the Canal Zone was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in recognition of their distinguished service in the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and government of the Panama Canal and the Canal Zone, the thanks of Congress are hereby extended to the civil, electrical, designing, mechanical, and municipal engineers, administrators, medical and surgical officers, scientists, lawyers, marine, dredging, operating, fiscal, and construction experts, and other persons, who rendered such service, but were not included in the recognition and benefits extended by the act of Congress approved March 4, 1915 (38 Stat. 1190). 1190).

SEC. 2. In further recognition of the exceptional character and conditions of such service, article 2 of chapter 6 of title 2 of the Canal Zone Code, as amended, is amended by adding at the end conditions of such service, article 2 of chapter 6 of title 2 of the Canal Zone Code, as amended, is amended by adding at the end of such article the following:

"108. Minimum annuity for employees serving in connection with the construction of the Panama Canal: Any officer or employee of the Panama Canal or the Panama Railroad Co. who served 3 or more years on the Isthmus of Panama in connection with the construction of the Panama Canal during the period from May 4, 1904, to March 31, 1914, both dates inclusive, and who has been, prior to the date of enactment of this section, or may be, on or after such date, retired from active duty under the provisions of this article, shall be paid an annuity in an amount not less than 2 percent of the average annual basic salary, pay, or compensation received by such officer or employee during any 5 consecutive years of allowable foreign tropical service rendered on the Isthmus of Panama, multiplied by the total number of years of such service, not exceeding 30. This section shall not operate to reduce the annuity allowable to any such officer or employee, or otherwise deprive him of any benefits allowable under this article or any other retirement act under which he has been or may be retired. Annuity allowable under this section to any officer or employee shall not become effective until such officer or employee reaches the compulsory retirement age prescribed in section 92 of this article, or is retired on account of disability under section 94 of this article, or is retired under section, have been retired and have attained the compulsory retirement age, or have been retired an account of disability under section 94 of this article, or is retired under section, have been retired an account of disability under section 94 of this article, or is retired under section, have been retired an account of disability under section 94 of this article, or have been retired on account of disability under section 94 of this article, or have been retired on account of disability und

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That completes the calendar. BERNARR MACFADDEN

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I ask consent to introduce a private bill for the relief of Hon. Bernarr Macfadden, a publisher of the city of New York.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill introduced by the Senator from North Carolina will be received and appropriately referred.

The bill (S. 1744) for the relief of Bernarr Macfadden, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I should now like to make a brief statement relative to the bill which I have introduced. I wish to say that there is now before the Senate a bill, Senate bill 1620, introduced on February 28 by the distinguished Senator from New York [Mr. Wagner] looking toward the formulation of a definite national health program.

At this very time, when the Congress is engaged in the authorization of appropriations mounting into hundreds of millions of dollars for national-defense purposes, it is very timely and essential, in my opinion, that the Federal Government tackle the health problems of the Nation in a systematic and practical manner. Naturally, our first line of de-defense is a healthy nation. The health of the youth must be guarded and preserved. What would it avail our country to have adequate military equipment for the Army, the Navy, and the air forces if we did not have vigorous men and women to man the implements so provided?

I desire to place particular emphasis on the vast change that has taken place since the beginning of the century in reference to certain diseases-namely, the venereal scourge. For generations the country suffered horrible results because of false modesty and the fear of openly discussing this unpleasant subject by tongue or pen. This transition did not take place without great sacrifice on the part of some of our forward-looking citizens.

For practically a lifetime one famed American, as a formidable ally in stamping out this vice from our midst, has steadfastly devoted his time, his energy, and his financial resources to an unrelenting crusade to turn the glaring spotlight of publicity on this hideous evil.

It is only recently that the word "syphilis" and the names of other kindred complaints have been permitted to appear in the newspapers. It is only recently that leading periodicals enlisted in campaigns of education so that youth may learn of the pitfalls and vileness of these social blights. Until very recent years the treatment for the disease was worse than the disease itself.

This remarkable reformation was finally achieved by a courageous personality, a man of vision, who boldly defied conventions and critics and actually faced a Federal penitentiary in his fearless struggle to preserve the health of young America. This martyr is the Honorable Bernarr Macfadden, an outstanding advocate of physical culture for our youth and a prominent American publisher.

During a noble crusade about 30 years ago Mr. Macfadden engaged the services of an author to write an article for his publication with the purpose of warning youth against these degenerate social diseases, and pointing out their dangers to the general public. It is with amazement that we now note that Mr. Macfadden was then rewarded by the Government with a 2-year sentence to prison and a $2,000 fine for his humanitarian efforts, believe it or not. President Taft canceled the sentence, but the $2,000 fine was paid.

In view of the immeasurable good that his campaigns have spread, considering the change of our attitude in the method of combatting these insidious diseases, I think, in the name of health, the least Uncle Sam should do at this time is to erase from the Government's financial books and records this disgraceful act of injustice committed in the ignorant past and to make amends by refunding the $2,000 fine to Mr. Macfadden, the champion of a free constructive press, with an apology and interest.

In addition, Mr. President, I wish to state that I have brought this matter to the attention of the Senate at this time for the reason that this private bill interests itself primarily with the bill which I mentioned a moment ago as having been introduced in February by the senior Senator from New York relating to the national health, which naturally greatly concerns the youth of America. It is of particular interest, because it would be useless for us, as I have stated, to make expenditure of billions of dollars, which we are doing, for the purpose of purchasing implements of war unless we have strong, healthy youth in America to make use of such implements. I think, as a matter of fact, that the least his Government and our Government could possibly do to erase the disgrace that was imposed upon him, one might say, at that time would be to rescind the fine.

I wish to say further in conclusion that I shall hope to be provided on opportunity of having Mr. Macfadden personally appear before the Committee on Claims, which will have jurisdiction of this particular claim, and at that time present to the committee written and printed matter to which I have referred and which is not to be compared with that which we now read daily in the newspapers of the country.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEE ON POST OFFICES AND POST ROADS

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of several postmasters, which were ordered to be placed on the Executive Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LEE in the chair). If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will proceed to call the Executive Calendar.

REGULATION OF WHALING

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider Executive C, a protocol amending the international agreement for the regulation of whaling, signed in London on June 24, 1938, which was read the second time, as follows:

PROTOCOL

The Government of the Union of South Africa, the United States of America, the Argentine Republic, the Commonwealth of Australia, Canada, Eire, Germany, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, New Zealand and Norway, desiring to introduce certain amendments into the International Agreement for the Regulation of Whaling, signed in London on the 8th June, 1937 (hereinafter referred to as the Principal Agreement) in accordance with the provisions of Article 21 thereof, have agreed as follows:

ARTICLE 1

With reference to the provisions of Articles 5 and 7 of the Principal Agreement, it is forbidden to use a factory ship or a whale catcher attached thereto for the purpose of taking or treating humpback whales in any waters south of 40° South Latitude during the period from the 1st October, 1938, to the 30th September, 1939.

ARTICLE 2

Notwithstanding the provisions of Article 7 of the Principal Agreement, it is forbidden to use a factory ship or a whale catcher attached thereto for the purpose of taking or treating baleen whales in the waters south of 40° South Latitude from 70° West Longitude westwards as far as 160° West Longitude for a period of two years from the 8th day of December, 1938.

(1) No factory ship which has been used for the purpose of treating baleen whales south of 40° South Latitude shall be used for that purpose elsewhere within a period of twelve months from the end of the open season prescribed in Article 7 of the Principal

(2) Only such factory ships as have operated during the year 1937 within the territorial waters of any signatory Government shall, after the signature of this Protocol, so operate, and any such ships so operating shall be treated as land stations and remain moored in territorial waters in one position during the season and shall operate for not more than six months in any period of twelve months, such period of six months to be continuous.

ARTICLE 4

To Article 5 of the Principal Agreement there shall be added the

"except that blue whales of not less than 65 feet, fin whales of not less than 50 feet and sperm whales of not less than 30 feet in length may be taken for delivery to land stations provided that the meat of such whales is to be used for local consumption as a spinal food."

To Article 7 of the Principal Agreement there shall be added the following:

"Notwithstanding the above prohibition of treatment during a close season, the treatment of whales which have been taken during the open season may be completed after the end of the open season."

ARTICLE 6

In Article 8 of the Principal Agreement the word "baleen" shall be inserted after the word "treating."

ARTICLE 7

For the areas specified in (a), (b), (c) and (d) of Article 9 of the Principal Agreement there shall be substituted the following areas, viz.:

(a) in the waters north of 66° North Latitude; except that from 150° East Longitude eastwards as far as 140° West Longitude the taking or killing of whales by such ship or catcher shall be permitted between 66° North Latitude and 72° North Latitude;

(b) in the Atlantic Ocean and its dependent waters north of 40° South Latitude;

(c) in the Pacific Ocean and its dependent waters east of 150° West Longitude between 40° South Latitude and 35° North Lati-

(d) in the Pacific Ocean and its dependent waters west of 150° West Longitude between 40° South Latitude and 20° North Latitude;
(e) in the Indian Ocean and its dependent waters north of 40°

South Latitude.

ARTICLE 8

For Article 12 of the Principal Agreement there shall be substituted the following, viz.: The taking of whales for delivery to a factory ship shall be so regulated or restricted by the master or person in charge of the factory ship that no whale carcase shall remain in the sea for a longer period than 33 hours from the time of killing to the time when it is taken up on the deck of the factory ship for treatment.

ARTICLE 9

The present Protocol shall come into force provisionally on the first day of July, 1938, to the extent to which the signatory Governments are respectively able to enforce it.

ARTICLE 10

(i) The present Protocol shall be ratified and the instruments of ratification shall be deposited with the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland as soon as possible.

(ii) It shall come into force definitively upon the deposit of the instruments of ratification by the Governments of the United Kingdom, Germany and Norway.

(iii) For any other Government which is a party to the Principal Agreement, the present Protocol shall come into force on the date of the deposit of its instrument of ratification or notification of accession. accession

(iv) The Government of the United Kingdom will inform the other Governments of the date on which the Protocol comes into force and the date of any ratification or accession received subsequently.

ARTICLE 11

(i) The present Protocol shall be open to accession by any Government which has not signed it and which accedes to the Principal Agreement before the definitive entry into force of the Protocol.

(ii) Accession shall be effected by means of a notification in writing addressed to the Government of the United Kingdom and shall take effect immediately after the date of its receipt.

(iii) The Government of the United Kingdom will inform all the Governments which have signed or acceded to the present Protocol of all accessions received and the date of their receipt.

Any ratification of or accession to the Principal Agreement which may be deposited or notified after the date of definitive coming into force of the present Protocol shall be deemed to relate to the Principal Agreement as amended by the present Protocol.

In witness whereof the undersigned, duly authorised thereto, have signed the present Protocol.

Done in London the twenty fourth done of True 1000 in the twenty fourth done of True 1000 in the twenty fourth done of the 1000 in the 1000 in the twenty fourth done of the 1000 in the 100

Done in London the twenty-fourth day of June, 1938, in a single copy, which shall be deposited in the archives of the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, by whom certified copies shall be communicated to all the signatory Governments:

For the Government of the Union of South Africa:

C. T. TE WATER. F. J. DU TOIT.

For the Government of the United States of America: HERSCHEL V. JOHNSON. REMINGTON KELLOGG.

WILFRID N. DERBY

For the Government of the Argentine Republic: MANUEL E. MALBRAN.

M. FINCATI. For the Government of the Commonwealth of Australia: ROBERT G. MENZIES.

For the Government of Canada: VINCENT MASSEY.

For the Government of Eire:
SEAN O'FAOLAIN O'DULCHAONTIGH.
J. D. RUSH.
For the Government of Germany:

HELMUTH WOHLTAT.
For the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland: HENRY G. MAURICE, GEO. HOGARTH.

For the Government of New Zealand: W. J. JORDAN. For the Government of Norway:

BIRGER BERGERSEN. Certified a true copy:

[SEAL] STEPHEN GASELEE.

Librarian and Keeper of the Papers at the Foreign Office. London, July 13, 1938.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The protocol is before the Senate and open to amendment. If there be no amendment to be proposed, the protocol will be reported to the Senate. The protocol was reported to the Senate without amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution of ratification will be read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Resolved (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of Executive C, Seventy-sixth Congress, first session, a protocol signed in London on June 24, 1938, amending the International Agreement for the Regulation of Whaling, signed in London on June 8, 1937.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution of ratification. [Putting the question.] Two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein, the resolution of ratification is agreed to, and the protocol is

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Joseph T. McDonald, of Scranton, Pa., to be collector of internal revenue for the twelfth district of Pennsylvania.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Austin J. Mahoney, of Rochester, N. Y., to be collector of customs of customs district No. 8, with headquarters at Rochester, N. Y.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

UNITED STATES PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

The legislative clerk read the nomination of William L. Smith to be senior surgeon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of James G. Telfer to be passed assistant surgeon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

That concludes the calendar.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM FOR REMAINDER OF THE WEEK-ADJOURN-MENT

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wish to say, in order that Senators may make their arrangements accordingly, that it is now proposed to adjourn until tomorrow. So far as I am aware, there will be no business on the calendar for the remainder of this week. The Appropriations Committee has not reported any bills; the reciprocal-tax bill will not be ready until Monday, because hearings are in progress on certain amendments to the measure that have been offered. So, it is likely that tomorrow there will be very little business, and the Senate will adjourn then until Monday. I make this statement so that Senators may know how to arrange their time between now and that date.

As in legislative session, I now move that the Senate adjourn until tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 3 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, March 9, 1939, at 12 o'clock meridian.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate March 8, 1939

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE

Joseph T. McDonald to be collector of internal revenue for the twelfth district of Pennsylvania.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS

Austin J. Mahoney to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 8. with headquarters at Rochester.

UNITED STATES PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

William L. Smith to be senior surgeon. James G. Telfer to be passed assistant surgeon.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 8, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Eternal Spirit, we are grateful for a continuance of Thy mercies. Suns may forget to rise and set, tides to ebb and flow, but Thou, O Christ, art the unerring One: "The same yesterday, today, and forever." O Lord and Master of us all, whose crown of thorns mocks the diadems of mortal monarchs, whose scepter is a broken reed, sway the nations to the Christian service of man. Marshal them, we pray Thee, into forms of everlasting grace, and may they bring forth concordant raptures of fraternity and brotherhood. As the clouds that cluster about the morning star fade into a new day, so may humanity journey through the morning shades and come to the glory of a new-found vision. Heavenly Father, come and make earth's broken things whole-broken faiths, broken loves, broken hearts, and broken lives. In our dear Redeemer's name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of vesterday was read and MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments, in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 3791. An act to provide more effectively for the national defense by carrying out the recommendations of the President in his message of January 12, 1939, to the Congress.

NATIONAL-DEFENSE BILL

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 3791) to provide more effectively for the national defense by carrying out the recommendations of the President in his message of January 12, 1939, to the Congress, with Senate amendments, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees on the part of the House: Messrs. May, Thomason, Harter of Ohio, ANDREWS, and SHORT.

REVISION OF TRADE-MARK LAWS

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute to make an announcement.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, a few days ago I introduced a bill (H. R. 4744) providing for a revision of the trade-mark laws based upon hearings at the last session of Congress. I desire at this time to make the announcement and give notice to all interested parties that hearings on this measure will be begun before a subcommittee of the Committee on Patents at 10 o'clock in the morning on March 28.

SEIZURE OF CERTAIN AMERICAN PROPERTY IN MEXICO

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I present a privileged report from the Committee on Foreign Affairs on House Resolution 107, requesting information of the President on seizure of certain American property in Mexico.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

House Resolution 107

Resolved, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, requested, if not incompatible with the public interest, to inform the House of Representatives—

(1) What facts, if any, are in possession of the State Department as to how many farms owned by American citizens have been expropriated by the Mexican Government since March 4, 1933; the total acreage and the estimated or claimed value of

(2) What information, if any, is in possession of the State Department relative to the number of American-owned factories, mills, and mines that have been expropriated by the Mexican Government since March 4, 1933, and the estimated or claimed

Government since March 4, 1933, and the estimated or claimed value of these properties;

(3) What facts the State Department has with regard to the estimated or claimed value of American-owned oil properties expropriated by the Mexican Government;

(4) What information, if any, is in possession of the State Department regarding a report that oil selzed from American properties was bartered by the Mexican Government for German farm, road, or factory machinery hitherto purchased from the United States.

(5) What facts, if any, the State Department has that our export trade with Mexico decreased 50 percent in 1938 whereas the German trade increased 50 percent during that period; and (6) Whether the State Department has any facts concerning the alleged charge that United States Ambassador Josephus Daniels suppressed, for a considerable time, a note of protest from the United States Government to the Mexican Government regarding the seizure of American-owned oil properties in Mexico.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the adverse report. The Clerk read as follows:

ADVERSE REPORT (TO ACCOMPANY H. RES. 107)

The Committee on Foreign Affairs to whom was referred the resolution (H. Res. 107) requesting the President of the United States to transmit to the House of Representatives all data in regard to the seizure of certain American property in Mexico, having considered the same, submit the following report thereon, with the recommendation that it do not pass:

Such information available to the Department of State as is consistent with the public interest has been furnished your committee and is on file.

mittee and is on file

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I move to lay the resolution on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL. 1940

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported the bill (H. R. 4852) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 161), which was read a first and second time, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union and ordered to be printed.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I reserve all points of order on the bill.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. Merritt, Mr. Buck, Mr. Brooks, and Mr. Shafer of Michigan asked and were given permission to revise and extend their own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. SATTERFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an address delivered by Brig. Gen. George Richards, United States Marine Corps.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD by printing a speech delivered by my colleague the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MARSHALL].

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a concurrent resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Kansas.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered. There was no objection.

FREEDOM OF RELIGIOUS WORSHIP

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, so many assaults have been made on Christianity throughout the world that people in every section of this country have become apprehensive. Especially is this true now in the light of certain legislation that has been introduced in Congress which many people think threatens religious freedom or the right to worship God as one pleases.

I have just received a statement from Dr. John R. Sampey. president of the Southern Baptist Seminary, at Louisville, Ky., which I am inserting as a part of my remarks.

The Baptist Church has always stood for religious freedom and for the development of the highest qualities of moral and spiritual manhood and womanhood. It has always stood for complete separation of church and state and has never asked that it be given governmental preference over other denominations.

They see in this movement a danger to religious freedom, and for that reason they are appealing to Congress not to destroy that sacred heritage, which has come down to us from former generations of brave men and brave women who helped to establish religious liberty and to make it one of the cornerstones of American institutions.

I take great pleasure in inserting Dr. Sampey's statement, and I hope that every Member of the House and the Senate will read it carefully and heed its timely warning.

The matter referred to follows:

A STATEMENT BY THE FACULTY OF THE SOUTHERN BAPTIST THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY CONCERNING THE AMENDMENT TO THE SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

A new threat to religious liberty in America may develop from a bill recently introduced in Congress to amend the Social Security Act. Baptists, in particular, and Christians of all faiths who are of like mind should inform themselves of the dangerous potentialities of this bill. In 1935 Congress passed "An act to provide for the general welfare by establishing a system of old-age benefits and by enabling its several States to make more adequate provision for aged persons, blind persons, dependent and crippled children, maternal and child welfare, public health, and the administration of their unemployment compensation laws; to establish a Social Security Board; to raise revenue; and for other purposes."

This act significantly contained an exclusion clause which omitted from the application of the act and from taxation thereunder "service performed in the employ of a corporation, community chest, fund, foundation, organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual." The bill which has been introduced into the present Congress (H. R. 101, by Mrs. O'Dax') would amend the original act by striking out this exclusion clause. And it is to this amendment as it concerns the churches and other institutions of religion that we would direct the earnest attention of Baptists and of all other Christians.

What does the amendment mean? Practically it means (1) that in the future the function of providing for the economic

What does the amendment mean? Practically it means (1) that in the future the function of providing for the economic security of employees of churches, denominational organizations, and other institutions of religion would be taken away from these groups and be made the function of the State; it means (2) that the churches and their institutions would be taxed by the State for the support of its scule security program. for the support of its social-security program; (3) it opens the door for the punitive coercion of the churches by the State in the enforcement of its regulations; and (4) it involves the individual workers of the churches in a direct economic dependence upon the State that will tend to dull religious conviction and stifle inde-

State that will tend to dull religious conviction and stifle independent conscientious action.

The further meaning of the amendment for Baptists becomes clear when we recall their historic views. Early American history rings with their insistence upon full religious liberty for all men. In order to guarantee such liberty for the individual they further insisted on the state's recognition of the distinctive nature and distinctive function of the church in the world, warranting the demand for a free church in a free state. They believed, and Baptists still believe, that the church is not in the same category as the economic corporation, that it is the voice of God in the world, and that its spiritual function becomes impossible when its organization and methods are controlled by the state, or when it becomes economically dependent upon any other group whatits organization and methods are controlled by the state, or when it becomes economically dependent upon any other group whatsoever. The church must be free from entangling alliances if it is to remain the voice of God in human society. Although the different functions of the church and the state are complementary rather than antagonistic, they are so different that neither the church nor the state is fitted to govern the other, and that attempted domination of either by the other makes only for injustice, bitterness, strife, and disruption.

The proposed amendment, furthermore, reverses the historic judgment of the Nation. The above Baptist principles were recognized in the Bill of Rights and in the legislative policy of our Government, a policy based, we must be reminded, not upon the expediency of gratuitous exemption, but upon the essential right and requirement of the church in the exercise of its spiritual function. But the twentieth century pressure of economic and political expediency begins to ignore the essential difference between churches and other associations, and to regard the freedom of religion as freedom of thought and worship only, without dom of religion as freedom of thought and worship only, without the implementation of action and method. In our sight this amendment is just another step, undiscerningly proposed perhaps, in the direction of incorporating religious organizations under the leadership and control of the state, a movement that promises as great a disaster for democratic government as for the church. We speak, therefore, not merely in defense of the freedom of the church, but as patriotic citizens we would enter our protest against a step that would further secularize the national thought, endanger the freedom and variety of democratic association, yield to a step that would further secularize the national thought, endanger the freedom and variety of democratic association, yield to the totalitarian principle another gain in its conquest of western civilization, and become the portent of national confusion.

Because we feel so deeply that this proposal is an incipient thrust at something basic in our national life we voice this warning and protest. We appeal particularly to our southern Baptist brethren to give to our historic conscience supremacy over an easy conformity. Our fathers won recognition for the high principles of religious liberty and separation of church and state at the price of hardship and blood; we must not easily surrender them or retreat from their full meaning. We must make our protest. And we suggest that Baptists urge upon their Senators and Representatives the meaning of what is about to be done and register a strong dissent. We must. Baptists urge upon their Senators and Representatives the meaning of what is about to be done and register a strong dissent. We must, furthermore, be willing to pay the price of separate action, which in this matter means adequate provision for the workers in our churches and institutions through our own agencies. The work of our relief and annuity board for the security of our preachers, teachers, and other denominational workers is already well established and making remarkable progress toward a complete service. And now a critical challenge confronts us. Shall we go on to perfect the service of our own agencies of security? Or shall we abandon them and yield our task to the state? Our answer should not be in doubt. We shall cooperate most loyally with the state in the area of its own functioning, but within the life of our churches and our denomination we shall claim the right and accept the task of caring for our own. for our own.

JOHN R. SAMPEY, President (For the faculty).

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to incorporate in the RECORD a memorial of the Legislature of the State of Maine regarding the naval services of Capt. Jerome O'Brien in the Revolutionary War.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. FAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks in the RECORD on the St. Lawrence seaway and power project and to include therein an address made February 23, 1939, by Mr. Fred J. Freestone, past master of the New York State Grange.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I presume that 50 years from now the House will be holding a session commemorating the two hundredth anniversary of the First Congress of the United States. They will be looking for the names of the former Members of Congress serving in 1939 and at 50-year intervals since the beginning of our Government. Thus, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks at this point in the RECORD and include therein the names of the President and Vice President and Congressmen who served in the First Congress, a list of those who served in the Congress 100 years ago, a list who served in the Congress 50 years ago, as well as a list of the present Congressmen, all arranged alphabetically by States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SNYDER]?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SNYDER] if he thinks under the New Deal and the way we are going we will have a Congress 50 years from now?

Mr. SNYDER. Oh, yes; and a much better country and Congress than now as a result of the New Deal and similar

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SNYDER]?

There was no objection.

FIRST CONGRESS-MARCH 4, 1789, TO MARCH 3, 1791

First session, March 4, 1789, to September 29, 1789; second session, January 4, 1790, to August 12, 1790; third session, December 6, 1790, to March 3, 1791

Vice President of the United States: John Adams, of Massa chusetts.

President pro tempore of the Senate: John Langdon,3 of New Hampshire.

Secretary of the Senate: Samuel A. Otis, of Massachusetts. Speaker of the House of Representatives: Frederick A. C. Muhlenberg,* of Pennsylvania. Clerk of the House: John Beckley,⁵ of Virginia.

CONNECTICUT

Senators: Oliver Ellsworth, William S. Johnson. Representatives: Benjamin Huntington, Roger Sherman, Jonathan Sturges, Jonathan Trumbull, Jeremiah Wadsworth.

DELAWARE

Senators: Richard Bassett, George Read. Representative: John Vining.

Senators: William Few, James Gunn. Representatives: Abraham Baldwin, James Jackson, George

MARYLAND

Senators; John Henry, Charles Carroll of Carrollton. Representatives: Daniel Carroll, Benjamin Contes, George Gale, Joshua Seney, William Smith, Michael Jenifer Stone.

MASSACHUSETTS

Senators: Tristram Dalton, Caleb Strong.
Representatives: Fisher Ames, Elbridge Gerry, Benjamin Goodhue, Jonathan Grout, George Leonard, George Partridge, Theodore Sedgwick, George Thacher.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Senators: John Langdon, Paine Wingate. Representatives: Abiel Foster, Nicholas Gilman, Samuel Liver-

NEW JERSEY

Senators: Jonathan Elmer, William Paterson,7 Philemon Dickinson.8

Representatives: Elias Boudinot, Lambert Cadwalader, Thomas Sinnickson, James Schureman.

NEW YORK

Senators: Rufus King,10 Philip Schuyler.11 Representatives: Egbert Benson, William Floyd, John Hathorn, ¹² John Laurance, Peter Silvester, ¹³ Jeremiah Van Rensselaer, ¹⁴

John Laurance, Peter Silvester, Jeremiah Van Rensselaer, Jeremiah Van Rensselaer, Neither a quorum of the Senate nor of the House of Representatives appeared in their respective Chambers on Wednesday, March 4, 1789. But eight Senators appeared and the minority adjourned from day to day until Monday, April 6, when a quorum of the Senate was first present. Thirteen Members of the House of Representatives appeared on March 4, and a quorum was not present until April 6, when the body proceeded to the transaction of business. When both Houses were organized, on April 6, they met in joint convention, in the hall of the Senate, and proceeded to open and count the electoral vote for President and Vice President. John Adams, the Vice President elect, appeared in the Senate Chamber and assumed the duties of the chair on Tuesday, April 21, 1789. On May 15, 1789, the Senate determined by lot the classes into which the membership should be divided agreeably to paragraph 2, section 3, of article I of the Constitution, as follows:

Class 1, term expires March 3, 1791; Messrs. Carroll, Dalton, Ellsworth, Elmer, Macray, Read, and Grayson.

Class 2, term expires March 3, 1793: Messrs. Bassett, Butler, Few, Lee, Strong, Paterson, and Wingate.

Class 3, term expires March 3, 1795: Messrs. Gunn, Henry, Johnson, Izard, Langdon, and Morris.

Elected April 6, 1789.

Elected April 1, 1789.

Elected April 1, 1789.

Resigned March 2, 1790, having been elected Governor.

Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of William Paterson, and took his seat December 6, 1790.

The election of all four Representatives was contested, but owing to the burning of the papers and documents from the First to the

The election of all four Representatives was contested, but owing to the burning of the papers and documents from the First to the Sixth Congress, by the British in 1814, it is not possible to ascertain the grounds upon which the contest was based. It is known that it related to questions of regularity and procedure, and that the decision was favorable to the sitting Members.

Took his seat July 25, 1789; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1795.

10t, March 3, 1795.

11 Took his seat July 27, 1789; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1791.

12 Took his seat April 23, 1789.

13 Took his seat April 22, 1789.

14 Took his seat May 9, 1789.

NORTH CAROLINA

Senators: Benjamin Hawkins, 15 Samuel Johnston. 26 Representatives: John Baptista Ashe, 17 Timothy Bloodworth, 28 John Sevier, 19 John Steele, 20 Hugh Williamson. 21

Senators: William Maclay, Robert Morris.
Representatives: George Clymer, Thomas Fitzsimons, Thomas
Hartley, Daniel Hiester, Frederick A. C. Muhlenberg, John Peter G.
Muhlenberg, Thomas Scott, Henry Wynkoop.

RHODE ISLAND

Senators: Theodore Foster, 22 Joseph Stanton, Jr. 22 Representative: Benjamin Bourn. 24

SOUTH CAROLINA

Senators: Pierce Butler, Ralph Izard. Representatives: Ædanus Burke, Daniel Huger, William L. Smith,²⁵ Thomas Sumter, Thomas Tudor Tucker.

VIRGINIA

Senators: William Grayson,20 John Walker,27 James Monroe,29

Richard Henry Lee.

Representatives: Theodoric Bland, William B. Giles, John Brown, Isaac Coles, Richard Bland Lee, James Madison, Andrew Moore, John Page, Josiah Parker, Alexander White, Samuel Griffin.

TWENTY-SIXTH CONGRESS--MARCH 4, 1839, TO MARCH 3, 1841 First session, December 2, 1839, to July 21, 1840; second session, December 7, 1840, to March 3, 1841

Vice President of the United States: Richard M. Johnson, of Kentucky.

President pro tempore of the Senate: William R. King, a of Alabama.

Secretary of the Senate: Asbury Dickens, of North Carolina. Speaker of the House of Representatives: Robert M. T. Hunter, of Virginia.

Clerk of the House: Hugh A. Garland,34 of Virginia.

ALABAMA

Senators: William R. King, Selma; Clement C. Clay, Huntsville. Representatives: Reuben Chapman, Somerville; David Hubbard, Courtland; George W. Crabb, Tuscaloosa; Dixon H. Lewis, Lowndes-boro; James Dellet, Claiborne.

ARKANSAS

Senators: William S. Fulton, Little Rock; Ambrose H. Sevier, Lake Port Representative: Edward Cross, Washington.

CONNECTICUT

Senators: Perry Smith, New Milford; Thaddeus Betts, 35 Norwalk; Jabez W. Huntington, 30 Norwich.

Representatives: Joseph Trumbull, Hartford; William L. Storrs, Middletown; William W. Boardman, New Haven; Thomas W.

by lot, March 3, 1795.

Took his seat January 29, 1790; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1793.

by lot, March 3, 1793.

17 Took his seat March 24, 1790.

18 Took his seat April 6, 1790.

19 Took his seat June 16, 1790.

20 Took his seat April 19, 1790.

21 Took his seat March 19, 1790.

22 Took his seat June 25, 1790; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1791.

lot, March 3, 1791.

Took his seat June 25, 1790; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1793.

Took his seat December 17, 1790.

Took his seat April 13, 1789; on April 15, 1789, David Ramsay presented a petition claiming that Smith was ineligible because at the time of his election he had not been a citizen of the United States the term of years required by the Constitution, which was referred to the Committee on Flestings the constitution, which was States the term of years required by the Constitution, which was referred to the Committee on Elections; the committee reported on April 18, 1789, and on May 22, 1789, the House adopted a resolution that Mr. Smith was eligible at the time he was elected.

Died March 12, 1790.

Appointed to fill vacancy caused by death of William Grayson and took his seat April 26, 1790.

Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of William Grayson, and took his seat December 6, 1790.

Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of William Grayson, and took his seat December 6, 1790.

Died June 1, 1790.
Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Theodoric Bland, and took his seat December 7, 1790.
Continuing from preceding session; reelected July 3, 1840; March 32 Reelected December 9, 1839. 33 Elected December 16, 1839.

 Reelected December 21, 1839.

 Died April 7, 1840.

 Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Thaddeus Betts and took his seat June 2, 1840. 87 Resigned in June 1840 to become associate judge of the court of [∞] Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of William L. Storrs and took his seat December 7, 1840.

¹⁵ Took his seat January 13, 1790; term to expire, as determined

Williams, New London; Thomas B. Osborne, Fairfield; Truman Smith, Litchfield; John H. Brockway, Ellington.

DELAWARE

Senators: Richard H. Bayard,39 Wilmington; Thomas Clayton, New Castle.

Representative: Thomas Robinson, Jr., Georgetown.

GEORGIA

Senators: Alfred Cuthbert, Monticello; Wilson Lumpkin, Athens. Representatives: Julius C. Alford, Lagrange; Edward J. Black, Jacksonboro; Walter T. Colquitt. Columbus; Hines Holt, Columbus; Mark A. Cooper, Columbus; William C. Dawson, Greensboro; Richard W. Habersham, Clarksville; Thomas Butler King, Waynesville; Eugenius A. Nisbet, Macon; Lott Warren, Palmyra.

ILLINOIS

Senators: John M. Robinson, Carmi; Richard M. Young, Quincy. Representatives: John Reynolds, Cadiz; Zadoc Casey, Mount Vernon; John T. Stuart, Springfield.

Senators: Oliver H. Smith, Indianapolis; Albert S. White, La

Representatives: George H. Proffit, Petersburg; John W. Davis, Carlisle; John Carr, Charlestown; Thomas Smith, Versailles; James Rariden, Centerville; William W. Wick, Indianapolis; Tilghman A. Howard, 2 Rockville; Henry S. Lane, 2 Crawfordsville.

KENTUCKY

Senators: Henry Clay, Lexington; John J. Crittenden, Frankfort.
Representatives: Linn Boyd, Cadiz; Philip Triplett, Owensboro;
Joseph R. Underwood, Bowling Green; Sherrod Williams, Monticello; Simeon H. Anderson, Lancaster; John B. Thompson, Harrodsburg; Willis Green, Green; John Pope, Springfield; William J. Graves, New Castle; John White, Richmond; Richard Hawes, Winchester; Landaff W. Andrews, Flemingsburg; Garrett Davis, Paris;
William O. Butler, Carrollton.

LOUISIANA

Senators: Robert C. Nicholas, Donaldsonville; Alexander Mouton, Vermilionville.

Representatives: Edward D. White, Thibodaux; Thomas W. hinn, Baton Rouge; Rice Garland, Opelousas; John Moore, The Control of Franklin.

MAINE

Senators: John Ruggles, Thomaston; Reuel Williams, Augusta.
Representatives: Hugh J. Anderson, Belfast; Nathan Clifford, Newfield; Thomas Davee, Blanchard; George Evans, Gardiner; Joshua A. Lowell, East Machias; Virgil D. Parris, Buckfield; Benjamin Randall, Bath; Albert Smith, Portland.

MARYLAND

John S. Spence, Berlin; John L. Kerr, Easton; William D. Merrick, Allens Fresh.
Representatives: John Dennis, Princess Anne; Philip F. Thomas, Easton, John T. H. Worthington, Shawan; Solomon Hillen, Jr., Baltimore; James Carroll, Baltimore; William Cost Johnson, Jefferson; Francis Thomas, Frederick; Daniel Jenifer, Milton Hill.

Senators: Daniel Webster, 51 Boston; Rufus Choate, 52 Boston; John Davis, 53 Worcester; Isaac C. Bates, 54 Northampton.
Representatives: Abbott Lawrence, 55 Boston; Robert C. Winthrop, 56 Boston; Leverett Saltonstall, Salem; Caleb Cushing, Newburyport; William Parmenter, East Cambridge; Levi Lincoln, Wordenstall, Salem; Caleb Cushing, Newburyport; William Parmenter, East Cambridge; Levi Lincoln, Wordenstall, Salem; Caleb Cushing, Newburyport; William Parmenter, East Cambridge; Levi Lincoln, Wordenstall, Salem; Caleb Cushing, Newburyport; William Parmenter, East Cambridge; Levi Lincoln, Wordenstall, Salem; Caleb Cushing, Newburyport; William Parmenter, East Cambridge; Levi Lincoln, Wordenstall, Salem; Caleb Cushing, Newburyport; William Parmenter, East Cambridge; Levi Lincoln, Wordenstall, Salem; Caleb Cushing, Newburyport; William Parmenter, East Cambridge; Levi Lincoln, Wordenstall, Salem; Caleb Cushing, Newburyport; William Parmenter, East Cambridge; Levi Lincoln, Wordenstall, Salem; Caleb Cushing, Newburyport; William Parmenter, East Cambridge; Levi Lincoln, Wordenstall, Salem; Caleb Cushing, Newburyport; William Parmenter, East Cambridge; Levi Lincoln, Wordenstall, Salem; Caleb Cushing, Newburyport; William Parmenter, East Cambridge; Levi Lincoln, Wordenstall, Salem; Caleb Cushing, Newburyport; William Parmenter, East Cambridge; Levi Lincoln, Wordenstall, Salem; Caleb Cushing, Newburyport; William Parmenter, East Cambridge; Levi Lincoln, Wordenstall, Salem; Caleb Cushing, Newburyport; William Parmenter, East Cambridge; Levi Lincoln, Wordenstall, Salem; Caleb Cushing, Newburyport; William Parmenter, East Cambridge; Levi Lincoln, Wordenstall, Salem; Caleb Cushing, Newburyport; William Parmenter, East Cambridge; Levi Lincoln, Wordenstall, Salem; Caleb Cushing, Newburyport; William Parmenter, Wordenstall, W

 Resigned September 19, 1839, to become chief justice of Delaware; reelected to fill vacancy caused by his own resignation, and took his seat January 19, 1841; vacancy in this class from September 19, 1839, to January 11, 1841.

 Resigned July 21, 1840.

 Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Walter T. Colquitt, and took his seat February 1, 1841.

 Resigned August 1, 1840.

 Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Tilghman A. Howard, and took his seat December 7, 1840.

 Died August 11, 1840.

 Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Simeon H. Anderson, and took his seat December 7, 1840.

 Resigned July 21, 1840.

 Resigned July 21, 1840.

 Resigned July 21, 1840.

 Reelected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Rice Garland, and took his seat December 17, 1840.

 Reelected to the Twenty-seventh Congress but resigned, having been elected Senator.

been elected Senator.

Died October 24, 1840.

Died October 24, 1840.

Died October 24, 1840.

Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of John S. Spence, and took his seat January 13, 1841.

Resigned, effective February 22, 1841.

Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Daniel Webster, and took his seat March 1, 1841.

Resigned January 5, 1841.

Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of John Davis, and took his seat January 21, 1841.

Resigned September 18, 1840.

Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Abbott Lawrence, and took his seat December 7, 1840.

cester; James C. Alvord, Greenfield; Osmyn Baker, Amherst; George N. Briggs, Lanesboro; William B. Calhoun, Springfield; William S. Hastings, Mendon; Henry Williams, Taunton; John Reed, Yarmouth; John Quincy Adams, Quincy.

MICHIGAN

Senators: John Norvell, Detroit; Augustus S. Porter, 9 Detroit. Representative: Isaac E. Crary, Marshall.

MISSISSIPPI

Senators: Robert J. Walker, Madisonville; John Henderson, Pass Christian.

Representatives: Albert G. Brown, Gallatin; Jacob Thompson, Pontotoc.

MISSOURI

Senators: Thomas H. Benton, St. Louis; Lewis F. Linn, Ste. Genevieve.

Representatives: Albert G. Harrison, Fulton; John Jameson, a Fulton; John Miller, Conners Mills.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Senators: Henry Hubbard, Charleston; Franklin Pierce, Concord.
Representatives: Charles G. Atherton, Nashua; Edmund Burke,
Newport; Ira A. Eastman, Gilmanton; Tristram Shaw, Exeter; Jared W. Williams, Lancaster.

NEW JERSEY

Senators: Samuel L. Southard, Trenton; Garret D. Wall, Burling-

Representatives: William R. Cooper, Swedesboro; Philemon Dickerson, Paterson; Joseph Kille, Salem; Joseph F. Randolph, New Brunswick; Daniel B. Ryall, Freehold; Peter D. Vroom, Somerville.

NEW YORK

Senators: Silas Wright, Jr., Canton; Nathaniel P. Tallmadge, Poughkeepsie.

Representatives: Thomas B. Jackson, Newtown; James De la Montanya, Haverstraw; Ogden Hoffman, New York City; Edward Curtis, New York City; Moses H. Grinnell, New York City; James Monroe, New York City; Gouverneur Kemble, Cold Spring; Charles Johnston, Poughkeepsie; Nathaniel Jones, Warwick; Rufus Palen, Fallsburg; Aaron Vanderpoel, Kinderhook; John Ely, Coxsackie; Hiram P. Hunt, Troy; Daniel D. Barnard, Albany; Anson Brown, Ballston; Nicholas B. Doe, Waterford; David A. Russell, Salem; Augustus C. Hand, Elizabethtown; John Fine, Ogdensburg; Peter J. Wagner, Fort Plain; Andrew W. Doig, Lowville; John G. Floyd, Utica; David P. Brewster, Oswego; Thomas C. Chittenden, Adams; John H. Prentiss, Cooperstown; Judson Allen, Harpersville; John C. Clark, Bainbridge; Stephen B. Leonard, Owego; Amasa Dana, Clark, Bainbridge; Stephen B. Leonard, Owego; Amasa Dana, Ithaca; Edward Rogers, Madison; Nehemiah H. Earli, Syracuse; Christopher Morgan, Aurora; Theron R. Strong, Palmyra, Frances Granger, Canandaigua; Meredith Mallory, Hammondsport; Thomas Kempshall, Rochester; Seth M. Gates, Leroy; Luther C. Peck, Pike; Richard P. Marvin, Jamestown; Millard Fillmore, Buffalo; Charles F. Mitchell, Locknore. Mitchell, Lockport.

NORTH CAROLINA

Senators: Bedford Brown, Browns Store; Willie P. Mangum, Red Mountain; Robert Strange, Fayetteville; William A. Graham, Representatives: Kenneth Rayner, Winton; Jesse A. Bynum, Halifax; Edward Stanly, Washington; Charles B. Shepard, New Bern; James I. McKay, Elizabethtown; Micajah T. Hawkins, Warrenton; Edmund Deberry, Lawrenceville; William Montgomery, Albrights; John Hill, Germantown; Charles Fisher, Salisbury; Henry W. Connor, Sherrills Ford; James Graham, Rutherfordton; Lewis Williams, Panther Creek.

Senators: William Allen, Chillicothe; Benjamin Tappan, Steubenville.

⁶⁷ Died September 27, 1839, before Congress assembled. ⁸⁸ Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of James C. Alvord, and took his seat January 14, 1840.

²⁰ Elected to fill vacancy in term commencing March 4, 1839, caused by failure of legislature to elect, and took his seat February 7, 1840; vacancy in this class from March 4, 1839, to January 19, 1840.

[∞] Died September 7, 1839.

en Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Albert G. Harrison, and took his seat December 12, 1839.

and took his seat December 12, 1839.

2 Messrs. Ayerigg, Maxwell, Halsted, Stratton, and Yorke contested the election of Messrs. Vroom, Dickerson, Kille, Cooper, and Ryali; the House at first declined to seat either set of candidates, but by resolution of March 10, 1840, the five last named were admitted "without prejudice to the final rights of the claimants," and on July 17, 1840, were adjudged entitled to their seats.

Died June 14, 1840.

Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Anson Brown, and took his seat December 7, 1840.

Resigned, effective November 16, 1840.

Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Bedford Brown, and took his seat December 9, 1840.

Resigned, effective November 16, 1840.

Resigned, effective November 16, 1840.

Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Robert Strange, and took his seat December 10, 1840.

Representatives: Alexander Duncan, Cincinnati; John B. Weller, Hamilton; Patrick G. Goode, Sidney; Thomas Corwin, Lebanon; Jeremiah Morrow, Twentymile Stand; William Doan, Withamsville; Calvary Morris, Athens; William K. Bond, Chillicothe; Joseph Ridgway, Columbus; William Medill, Lancaster; Samson Mason, Springfield; Isaac Parrish, Cambridge; Jonathan Taylor, Newark; Daniel P. Leadbetter, Millersburg; George Sweeny, Bucyrus; John W. Allen, Cleveland; Joshua R. Giddings, Jefferson; John Hastings, Salem; David A. Starkweather, Canton; Henry Swearingen, Smithfield.

PENNSYLVANIA

Senators: James Buchanan, Lancaster; Daniel Sturgeon, 11 Uniontown.

Representatives: Lemuel Paynter, Philadelphia; John Sergeant, Philadelphia; George W. Toland, Philadelphia; Charles Naylor, Philadelphia; Edward Davies, Churchtown; John Edwards, Ivy Mills; Francis James, West Chester; Joseph Fornance, Norristown; John Davis, Davisville; David D. Wagener, Easton; Peter Newhard, Allentown; George M. Keim, Reading; William Simonton, Hummelstown; James Gerry, Shrewsbury; James Cooper, Gettysburg; William S. Ramsey, Carlisle; Charles McClure, Carlisle; William W. Potter, Philadelphia; George McCulloch, Center Line; David Petrikin, Danville; Robert H. Hammond, Milton; Samuel W. Morris, Wellsboro; Charles Ogle, Somerset; Albert G. Marchand, Greensburg; Enos Hook, Waynesburg; Isaac Leet, Washington; Richard Biddle, Pittsburgh; Henry M. Brackenridge, Tarentum; William Beatty, Butler; Thomas Henry, Beaver; John Galbraith, Erie.

RHODE ISLAND

Senators: Nehemiah R. Knight, Providence; Nathan F. Dixon, Westerly.

Representatives: Robert B. Cranston, Newport; Joseph L. Tillinghast, Providence.

Senators: John C. Calhoun, Fort Hill; William C. Preston, Columbia.

Representatives: Sampson H. Butler, Barnwell; John Campbell, Parnassas; John K. Griffin, Newberry; Isaac E. Holmes, Charleston; Francis W. Pickens, Edgefield; R. Barnwell Rhett, Blue House; James Rogers, Maybinton; Thomas D. Sumter, Slatesburg; Waddy Thompson, Jr., Greenville.

TENNESSEE

Senators: Hugh Lawson White, Knoxville; Alexander Anderson, Knoxville; Felix Grundy, 1 Nashville; Alfred O. P. Nicholson, 20 Columbia

Representatives: William B. Carter, Elizabethton; Abraham Mc-Clellan, Blountsville; Joseph L. Williams, Knoxville; Julius W. Blackwell, Athens; Hopkins T. Turney, Winchester; William B. Campbell, Carthage; John Bell, Nashville; Meredith P. Gentry, Harpeth; Harvey M. Watterson, Shelbyville; Aaron V. Brown, Pulaski; Cave Johnson, Clarksville; John W. Crockett, Trenton; Christopher H. Williams, Lexington.

VERMONT

Senators: Samuel Prentiss, Montpelier; Samuel S. Phelps, Middlebury.

Representatives: Hiland Hall, Bennington; William Slade, Middlebury; Horace Everett, Windsor; John Smith, St. Albans; Isaac Fletcher, Lyndon.

VIRGINIA

Senators: William H. Roane, Richmond; William C. Rives, 83 Lindseys Store.

Representatives: Lin Banks, Madison; Andrew Beirne, Union; John M. Botts, Richmond; Walter Coles, Robertsons Store; Robert © Resigned, effective May 30, 1840.

© Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Thomas Corwin, and took his seat December 7, 1840.

© Elected January 14, 1840, to fill vacancy in the term commencing March 4, 1839, caused by failure of the legislature to elect, and took his seat January 24, 1840.

© Election unsuccessfully contested by Charles J. Ingersoll.

© Died, October 17, 1840, before the commencement of the Twenty-seventh Congress, to which he had been reelected.

© Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of William S. Ramsey, and took his seat December 7, 1840.

© Died, October 28, 1839, before Congress assembled.

© Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of William W. Potter, and took his seat December 2, 1839.

© Resigned in 1840.

© Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Richard Biddle, and took his seat December 10, 1840.

© Resigned January 13, 1840.

© Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Hugh L. White, and took his seat February 26, 1840.

© Elected to fill vacancy in the term commencing March 4, 1839, caused by resignation of Ephraim H. Foster, in preceding Congress, and took his seat January 3, 1840; vacancy in this class from March 4 to December 14, 1839; died December 19, 1840.

© Appointed to fill vacancy caused by death of Felix Grundy, and took his seat January 11, 1841.

© Elected to fill vacancy in term commencing March 4, 1839, caused by failure of legislature to elect, and took his seat January 30, 1841; vacancy in this class from March 4, 1839, caused by failure of legislature to elect, and took his seat January 30, 1841; vacancy in this class from March 4, 1839, caused by failure of legislature to elect, and took his seat January 30, 1841; vacancy in this class from March 4, 1839, caused by failure of legislature to elect, and took his seat January 30, 1841; vacancy in this class from March 4, 1839, caused by failure of legislature to elect, and took his seat January 31, 1841.

Craig, Christiansburg; George C. Dromgoole, Gholsonville; James Garland, Lovingston; William L. Goggin, Liberty; John Hill, Buckingham; Joel Holleman, Burnwell Bay; Francis Mallory, Hampton; George W. Hopkins, Lebanon; Robert M. T. Hunter, Lloyds; Joseph Johnson, Bridgeport; John W. Jones, Petersburg; William Lucas, Charlestown; Charles F. Mercer, Aldie; William M. McCarty, Alexandria; Francis E. Rives, Littleton; Green B. Samuel, Woodstock; Lewis Steenrod, Wheeling; John Taliaferro, Fredericksburg: Henry A. Wise, Accomac. burg; Henry A. Wise, Accomac.

TERRITORY OF FLORIDA

Delegate: Charles Downing, St. Augustine.

TERRITORY OF IOWA

William W. Chapman,88 Burlington; Augustus C. Delegates: William Dodge, Burlington.

TERRITORY OF WISCONSIN

Delegate: James D. Doty, Ashton.

FIFTY-FIRST CONGRESS-MARCH 4, 1889, TO MARCH 3, 1891

First session December 2, 1889, to October 1, 1890; second session, December 1, 1890, to March 2, 1891; special session of the Senate, March 4, 1889, to April 2, 1889

Vice President of the United States: Levi P. Morton, of New York. Presidents pro tempore of the Senate: John J. Ingalls, of Kansas; Charles F. Manderson, of Nebraska.

Secretary of the Senate: Anson G. McCook, of New York. Speaker of the House of Representatives: Thomas B. Reed, of Maine.

Clerks of the House: John B. Clark, Jr., of Missouri; Edward McPherson, of Pennsylvania.

ALABAMA

Senators: John T. Morgan, Selma; James L. Pugh, Eufaula. Representatives: Richard H. Clarke, Mobile; Hilary A. Herbert, Montgomery; William C. Oates, Abbeville; Louis W. Turpin, New-bern; John V. McDuffie, Hayneville; James E. Cobb, Tuskegee; John H. Bankhead, Fayette; William H. Forney, Jacksonville; Joseph Wheeler, Wheeler.

ARKANSAS

Senators: James K. Jones, Washington; James H. Berry, Bentonville.

Representatives: William H. Cate, Jonesboro; Lewis P. Featherston, Forest City; Clifton R. Breckinridge, Pine Bluff; Thomas C. McRae, Prescott; John H. Rogers, Fort Smith; Samuel W. Peel, Bentonville.

CALIFORNIA

Senators: Leland Stanford, San Francisco; George Hearst,11 San

Representatives: John J. De Haven, 12 Eureka; Thomas J. Geary, 13 Santa Rosa; Marion Biggs, Gridley; Joseph McKenna, Suisun; William W. Morrow, San Francisco; Thomas J. Clunie, San Francisco; William Vandever, San Buenaventura.

COLORADO

Senators: Henry M. Teller, Central City; Edward O. Wolcott, Denver. Representative: Hosea Townsend, Silver Cliff.

Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Joel Holleman, and took his seat January 7, 1841.
 Resigned December 26, 1839.

#Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Charles F.
Mercer, and took his seat January 25, 1840.

Served until October 27, 1840, when his term expired under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1839.

Elected in compliance with the act of March 3, 1839, and took Elected in compliance with the act of March 3, 1839, and took his seat December 8, 1840.

 Elected March 7,, 1889, and April 2, 1889 (special session of the Senate); February 28, 1890, and April 3, 1890; resigned as President pro tempore, effective March 2, 1891.
 Elected March 2, 1891.
 Elected December 2, 1889.
 Elected December 2, 1889.
 Elected December 2, 1889.
 Election unsuccessfully contested by Frank H. Threet.
 Served until June 4, 1890; succeeded by John V. McDuffle, who contested his election.

contested his election.

contested his election.

[†] Successfully contested the election of Louis W. Turpin, and took his seat June 4, 1890.

[§] Served until March 5, 1890; succeeded by Lewis P. Featherston, who contested his election.

[§] Successfully contested the election of William H. Cate, and took his seat March 5, 1890.

[§] Election contested by John M. Clayton, who died January 29, 1889 (before the beginning of the congressional term), while case was pending; served until September 5, 1890, when Clayton was declared to have been elected and the seat vacant; subsequently elected to fill vacancy caused by death of John M. Clayton, and took his seat December 1, 1890.

^{‡†} Died February 28, 1891.

11 Died February 28, 1891.

12 Resigned October 1, 1890.

13 Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of John J. De Haven, and took his seat December 9, 1890.

⁸⁴ Resigned in 1840.

CONNECTICUT

Senators: Orville H. Platt, Meriden; Joseph R. Hawley, Hartford. Representatives: William E. Simonds, Canton; Washington F. Willcox, Chester; Charles A. Russell, Killingly; Frederick Miles, Chapinville.

DELAWARE

Senators: George Gray, New Castle; Anthony Higgins, Wilmington.

Representative: John B. Pennington, Dover.

FLORIDA

Senators: Wilkinson Call, Jacksonville; Samuel Pasco, Monticello. Representatives: Robert H. M. Davidson, Quincy; Robert Bullock, Senators: Joseph E. Brown, Atlanta; Alfred H. Colquitt, Atlanta. Representatives: Rufus E. Lester, Savannah; Henry G. Turner, Quitman; Charles F. Crisp, Americus; Thomas W. Grimes, Columbus; John D. Stewart, Griffin; James H. Blount, Macon; Judson C. Clements, Rome; Henry H. Carlton, Athens; Allen D. Candler, Gainesville; George T. Barnes, Augusta.

IDAHO 14

Senators: 15 George L. Shoup, 16 Salmon City; William J. McConnell, 17 Moscow.

Representative: Willis Sweet,18 Moscow.

ILLINOIS

Senators: Shelby M. Cullom, Springfield; Charles B. Farwell, Chicago.

Representatives: Abner Taylor, Chicago; Frank Lawler, Chicago; William E. Mason, Chicago; George E. Adams, Chicago; Albert J. Hopkins, Aurora; Robert R. Hitt, Mount Morris; Thomas J. Henderson, Princeton; Charles A. Hill, Joliet; Lewis E. Payson, Pontiac; Philip S. Post, Galesburg; William H. Gest, Rock Island; Scott Wike, Pittsfield; William M. Springer, Springfield; Jonathan H. Rowell, Bloomington; Joseph G. Cannon, Danville; George W. Fithian, Newton; Edward Lane, Hillsboro; William S. Forman, Nashville; Richard W. Townshend, Shawneetown; James R. Williams, Carmi; George W. Smith, Murphysboro.

INDIANA

Senators: Daniel W. Voorhees, Terre Haute; David Turpie, Indianapolis.

dianapolis.

Representatives: William F. Parrett, Evansville; John H. O'Neall, Washington; Jason B. Brown, Seymour; William S. Holman, Aurora; George W. Cooper, Columbus; Thomas M. Browne, Winchester; William D. Bynum, Indianapolis; Elijah V. Brookshing, Crawfordsville; Joseph B. Cheadle, Frankfort; William D. Owen, Logansport; Augustus N. Martin, Bluffton; Charles A. O. McClellan, Auburn; Benjamin F. Shively, South Bend.

IOWA

Senators: William B. Allison, Dubuque; James F. Wilson, Fairfield.

Representatives: John H. Gear, Burlington; Walter I. Hayes, Clinton; David B. Henderson, Dubuque; Joseph H. Sweney, Osage; Daniel Kerr, Grundy Center; John F. Lacey, Oskaloosa; Edwin H. Conger, Des Moines; Edward R. Hays, Knoxville; James P. Flick, Bedford; Joseph R. Reed, Council Bluffs; Jonathan P. Dolliver, Fort Dodge; Isaac S. Struble, Le Mars.

KANSAS

Senators: John J. Ingalls, Atchison; Preston B. Plumb, Emporia. Representatives: Edmund N. Morrill, Hiawatha; Edward H. Funston, Iola; Bishop W. Perkins, Oswego; Thomas Ryan,²⁴ Topeka; Harrison Kelley,²⁵ Burlington; John A. Anderson, Manhattan; Erastus J. Turner, Hoxie; Samuel R. Peters, Newton.

KENTUCKY

Senators: James B. Beck, Lexington; John G. Carlisle, Covington; Joseph C. S. Blackburn, Versailles.

¹⁴ Admitted as a State into the Union July 3, 1890.
¹⁵ In addition to the Senators named the credentials of Fred T. Dubois, who had been elected "for the term of 6 years from March 4, 1891," were presented December 30, 1890, but the Senate refused to consider them prior to the beginning of the Fifty-second Congress, when they were to become effective.

¹⁶ Took his seat December 29, 1980; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1895.

¹⁷ Took his seat January 5, 1891; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1891.

¹⁸ Took his seat December 1, 1890.

¹⁹ Died March 9, 1889, before Congress assembled.

²⁰ Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Richard W. Townshend, and took his seat December 2, 1889.

²¹ Election unsuccessfully contested by Francis B. Posey.

²² Resigned October 3, 1890.

Election unsuccessfully contested by Francis B, Posey.

Resigned October 3, 1890.

Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Edwin H. Conger, and took his seat December 1, 1890.

Resigned April 4, 1889, before Congress assembled.

Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Thomas Ryan, and took his seat December 2, 1889.

Died May 3, 1890.

Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of James B. Beck, and took his seat May 26, 1890.

Representatives: William J. Stone, Kuttawa; William T. Ellis, Owensboro; Isaac H. Goodnight, Franklin; Alexander B. Montgomery, Elizabethtown; Asher G. Caruth, Louisville; John G. Carlisle, Covington; William W. Dickerson, Williamstown; William C. P. Breckinridge, Lexington; James B. McCreary, Richmond; Thomas H. Paynter, Greenup; John H. Wilson, Barboursville; Hugh F. Finley, Williamsburg.

LOUISIANA

Senators: Randall L. Gibson, New Orleans; James B. Eustis, New Orleans.

Representatives: Theodore S. Wilkinson, Plaquemines Parish; Hamilton D. Coleman, New Orleans; Edward J. Gay, Daquemine; Andrew Price, Thibodaux; Newton C. Blanchard, Shreveport; Charles J. Boatner, Monroe; Samuel M. Robertson, Baton Rouge.

Senators: Eugene Hale, Ellsworth; William P. Frye, Lewiston. Representatives: Thomas B. Reed, Portland; Nelson Dingley, Jr., Lewiston; Seth L. Milliken, Belfast; Charles A. Boutelle, Bangor.

MARYLAND

Senators: Arthur Pue Gorman, Laurel; Ephraim K. Wilson, 32 Snow Hill.

Representatives: Charles H. Gibson, Easton; Herman Stump, Belair; Harry W. Rusk, Baltimore; Henry Stockbridge, Jr., Baltimore; Barnes Compton,³⁸ Laurel; Sydney E. Mudd,³⁴ Bryantown; Louis E. McComas, Hagerstown.

MASSACHUSETTS

Senators: Henry L. Dawes, Pittsfield; George F. Hoar, Worcester.
Representatives: Charles S. Randall, New Bedford; Elijah A. Morse, Canton; John F. Andrew, Boston; Joseph H. O'Neil, Boston; Nathaniel P. Banks, Waltham; Henry Cabot Lodge, Nahant; William
Cogswell, Salem; Frederic T. Greenhalge, Lowell; John W. Candler, Brookline; Joseph H. Walker, Worcester; Rodney Wallace, Fitchburg; Francis W. Rockwell, Pittsfield.

MICHIGAN

Senators: Francis B. Stockbridge, Kalamazoo; James McMillan,

Representatives: J. Logan Chipman, Detroit; Edward P. Allen, Ypsilanti; James O'Donnell, Jackson; Julius C. Burrows, Kalamazoo; Charles E. Belknap, Grand Rapids; Mark S. Brewer, Pontiac; Justin R. Whitting, St. Clair; Aaron T. Bliss, Saginaw; Byron M. Cutcheon, Manistee; Frank W. Wheeler, West Bay City; Samuel M. Stephenson, Menominee.

MINNESOTA

Senators: Cushman K. Davis, St. Paul; William D. Washburn, Minneapolis.

Representatives: Mark H. Dunnell, Owatonna; John Lind, New Ulm; Darwin S. Hall, Stewart; Samuel P. Snider, Minneapolis; Solomon G. Comstock, Moorhead.

MISSISSIPPI

Senators: James Z. George, Carrollton; Edward C. Walthall, Grenada.

Representatives: John M. Allen, Tupelo; James B. Morgan,²⁸ Hernando; Thomas C. Catchings, Vicksburg; Clarke Lewis, Cliftonville; Chapman L. Anderson, Kosciusko; Thomas R. Stockdale, Summit; Charles E. Hooker, Jackson.

MISSOURI

Senators: Francis M. Cockrell, Warrensburg; George G. Vest, Kansas City.

Representatives: William H. Hatch, Hannibal; Charles H. Man-Representatives: William H. Hatch, Hannibal; Charles H. Mansur, Chillicothe; Alexander M. Dockery, Gallatin; Robert P. C. Wilson, Platte City; John C. Tarsney, Kansas City; John T. Heard, Sedalia; Richard H. Norton, Troy; Frederick G. Niedringhaus, St. Louis; Nathan Frank, St. Louis; William M. Kinsey, St. Louis; Richard P. Bland, Lebanon; William J. Stone, Nevada; William H. Wade, Springfield; James P. Walker, Dexter; Robert H. Whitelaw, Cape Girardeau.

28 Resigned May 26, 1890, having been elected Senator.

Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of John G. Carlisle, and took his seat June 30, 1890.
 Died May 30, 1889, before Congress assembled.

³¹ Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Edward J. Gay, and took his seat December 2, 1889.

Died February 24, 1891; had been reelected for the term beginning March 4, 1893.
 Served until March 20, 1890; succeeded by Sydney E. Mudd, who contested his election.

Successfully contested the election of Barnes Compton, and took his seat March 20, 1890.
 Election unsuccessfully contested by James R. Chalmers.
 Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Representative-elect James N. Burnes, in the preceding Congress, and took his seat December 2, 1889.
 Died James N. 1909.

37 Died July 20, 1890.

28 Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of James P. Walker, and took his seat December 1, 1890.

MONTANA 39

Senators: 40 Thomas C. Power,41 Helena; Wilbur F. Sanders,42

Representative: Thomas H. Carter,43 Helena.

NEBRASKA

Senators: Charles F. Manderson, Omaha; Algernon S. Paddock,

Representatives: William J. Connell, Omaha; James Laird, 44 Hastings; Gilbert L. Laws, 45 McCook; George W. E. Dorsey, Fremont.

NEVADA

Senators: John P. Jones, Gold Hill; William M. Stewart, Carson

Representative: Horace F. Bartine, Carson City.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Senators: Henry W. Blair, Manchester; Gilman Marston, 6 Exeter; William E. Chandler, 6 Concord.

Representatives: Alonzo Nute, Farmington; Orren C. Moore,

NEW JERSEY

Senators: John R. McPherson, Jersey City; Rufus Blodgett, Long Branch.

Representatives: Christopher A. Bergen, Camden; James Buchanan, Trenton; Jacob A. Geissenhainer, Freehold; Samuel Fowler, Newton; Charles D. Beckwith, Paterson; Herman Lehlbach, Newark; William McAdoo, Jersey City.

NEW YORK

Senators: William M. Evarts, New York City; Frank Hiscock, Schadors: William M. Evats, New York City, Frank hiscock, Syracuse.

Representatives: James W. Covert, Long Island City; Felix Campbell, Brooklyn; William C. Wallace, Brooklyn; John M. Clancy, Brooklyn; Thomas F. Magner, Brooklyn; Frank T. Fitzgerald, W. W. York City; Charles H. Turner, New York City; Edward J. Dunphy, New York City; John H. McCarthy, New York City; Samuel S. Cox, New York City; Amos J. Cummings, New York City; Francis B. Spinola, New York City; John Quinn, New York City; Roswell P. Flower, New York City; John Quinn, New York City; William G. Stahlnecker, Yonkers; Moses D. Stivers, Middletown; John H. Ketcham, Dover Plains; Charles J. Knapp, Deposit; John A. Quackenbush, Stillwater; Charles Tracey, Albany; John Sanford, Amsterdam; John H. Moffitt, Chateaugay Lake; Frederick Lansing, Watertown; James S. Sherman, Utica; David Wilber, Oneonta; John S. Pindar, Cobleskill; James J. Belden, Syracuse; Milton De Lano, Canastota; Newton D. Nutting, Oswego; Sereno E. Payne, Auburn; Thomas S. Flood, Elmira; John Raines, Canandaigua; Charles S. Baker, Rochester; John G. Sawyer, Albion; John M. Farquhar, Buffalo; John McC. Wiley, East Aurora; William G. Laidlaw, Ellicottville.

NORTH CAROLINA

Senators: Matt W. Ransom, Weldon; Zebulon B. Vance, Charlotte. Representatives: Thomas G. Skinner, Hertford; Henry P. Cheatham, Henderson; Charles W. McClammy, Scotts Hill; Benjamin H. Bunn, Rocky Mount; John M. Brower, Mount Airy; Alfred Rowland, Lumberton; John S. Henderson, Salisbury; William H. H. Cowles, Wilkesboro; Hamilton G. Ewart, Hendersonville.

39 Admitted as a State into the Union November 8, 1889.

William A. Clark and Martin Maginnis presented papers purporting to be credentials of their election January 23, 1890; the four claimants were given privileges of the floor pending the contest; by resolutions of April 16, 1890, Clark and Maginnis were declared not entitled to seats and Power and Sanders entitled thereto.

"Took his seat April 16, 1890; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1895.

42 Took his seat April 16, 1890; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1893.

43 Took his seat December 2, 1889.

"Died August 17, 1889, before Congress assembled.

"Died August 17, 1839, before Congress assembled.

"Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of James Laird, and took his seat December 2, 1839.

"Appointed to fill vacancy in term beginning March 4, 1889, during the recess of the legislature.
"Elected to fill vacancy in the term beginning March 4, 1889, and took his seat December 2, 1839.

"Resigned November 4, 1839, before Congress assembled.

⁴⁰ Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Frank T. Fitz-gerald, and took his seat December 9, 1889.

⁵⁰ Resigned January 14, 1891.

 Died September 10, 1889, before Congress assembled.
 Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Samuel S. Cox, and took his seat December 2, 1889.

53 Died April 1, 1890.

⁸⁴ Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of David Wilber, and took his seat December 1, 1890.

55 Died October 15, 1889, before Congress assembled.

[∞] Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Newton W. Nutting, and took his seat December 2, 1889.

NORTH DAKOTA ST

Senators: Lyman R. Casey, 58 Jamestown; Gilbert A. Pierce, 59 Fargo. Representative at Large: Henry C. Hansbrough, 50 Devils Lake.

OHIO

Senators: John Sherman, Mansfeld; Henry B. Payne, Cleveland.
Representatives: Benjamin Butterworth, Cincinnati; John A.
Caldwell, Cincinnati; Elihu S. Williams, Troy; Samuel S. Yoder, Lima; George E. Seney, Tiffin; Melvin M. Boothman, Bryan; Henry
L. Morey, Hamilton; Robert P. Kennedy, Bellefontaine; William
C. Cooper, Mount Vernon; William E. Haynes, Fremont; Albert
C. Thompson, Portsmouth; Jacob J. Pugsley, Hillsboro; Joseph
H. Outhwaite, Columbus; Charles P. Wickham, Norwalk; Charles
H. Grosvenor, Athens; James W. Owens, Newark; Joseph D. Taylor, Cambridge; William McKinley, Jr., Canton; Ezra B. Taylor, Warren;
Martin L. Smyser, Wooster; Theodore E. Burton, Cleveland.

OREGON

Senators: Joseph N. Dolph, Portland; John H. Mitchell, Port-

Representative at Large: Binger Hermann, Roseburg.

PENNSYLVANIA

Senators: J. Donald Cameron, Harrisburg; Matthew S. Quay, Beaver.

Representatives: Henry H. Bingham, Philadelphia; Charles O'Neill, Philadelphia; Samuel J. Randall, Philadelphia; Richard Vaux, Philadelphia; William D. Kelley, Philadelphia; John E. Reyburn, Philadelphia; Alfred C. Harmer, Philadelphia; Smedley Darlington, West Chester; Robert M. Yardley, Doylestown; William Mutchler, Easton; David B. Brunner, Reading; Marriott Brosius, Lancaster; Joseph A. Scranton, Scranton; Edwin S. Osborne, Wilkes-Barre; James B. Reilly; Pottsville; John W. Rife, Middletown; Myron B. Wright, Susquehanna; Henry C. McCormick, Williamsport; Charles R. Buckalew, Bloomsburg; Louis E. Atkinson, Mifflintown; Levi Maish, York; Edward Scull, Somerset; Samuel A. Craig; Brookville; John Dalzell, Pittsburgh; Thomas M. Bayne, Allegheny; Joseph W. Ray, Waynesburg; Charles C. Townsend, New Brighton; William C. Culbertson, Girard; Lewis F. Watson, Warren; Charles W. Stone, Warren; James Kerr, Clearfield.

RHODE ISLAND

Senators: Nelson W. Aldrich, Providence; Jonathan Chace, Providence; Nathan F. Dixon, Westerly.

Representatives: Henry J. Spooner, Providence; Warren O. Arnold, Gloucester.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Senators: Matthew C. Butler, Edgefield; Wade Hampton, Charles-

Representatives: Samuel Dibble, Orangeburg; George D. Tillman, Clarks Hill; James S. Cothran, Abbeville; William H. Perry, Greenville; John J. Hemphill, Chester; George W. Dargan, Darlington; William Elliott, Beaufort; Thomas E. Miller, Beaufort.

SOUTH DAKOTA 71

Senators: Richard F. Pettigrew, 72 Sioux Falls; Gideon C. Moody, 73

Representatives: Oscar S. Gifford," Canton; John A. Pickler," Faulkton.

TENNESSEE

Senators: Isham G. Harris, Memphis; William B. Bate, Nashville. Representatives: Alfred A. Taylor, Johnson City; Leonidas C. Houk, Knoxville; H. Clay Evans, Chattanooga; Benton McMillan, ⁵⁷ Formed from a portion of the Territory of Dakota, and admitted as a State into the Union November 2, 1889.

⁵⁸ Took his seat December 4, 1889; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1893.

Dok his seat December 4, 1889; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1893.

Took his seat December 4, 1889; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1891.

Took his seat December 2, 1889.

Died April 13, 1890.

Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Samuel J. Randall, and took his seat February 24, 1890.

Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of William D. Kelley, and took his seat February 24, 1890.

Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of William D. Kelley, and took his seat February 24, 1890.

Elected to fill vacancy caused by death of Lewis F. Watson, and took his seat December 1, 1890.

Resigned April 9, 1889.

Elected to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Jonathan Chace, and took his seat December 2, 1889.

Served until September 23, 1890; succeeded by Thomas E. Miller, who contested his election.

Successfully contested the election of William Elliott, and took his seat September 24, 1890.

Tormed from a portion of the Territory of Dakota, and admitted as a State into the Union November 2, 1889.

Took his seat December 2, 1889; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1895.

by lot, March 3, 1895.
Took his seat December 2, 1889; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1891.

Took his seat December 2, 1889.

Carthage; James D. Richardson, Murfreesboro; Joseph E. Washington, Cedar Hill; Washington C. Whitthorne, Columbia; Benjamin A. Enloe, Jackson; Rice A. Pierce, Union City; James Phelan, 75

Senators: Richard Coke, Waco; John H. Reagan, Palestine.
Representatives: Charles Stewart, Houston; William H. Martin,
Athens; Constantine B. Kilgore, Wills Point; David B. Culberson, Jefferson; Silas Hare, Sherman; Jo Abbott, Hillsboro; William H.
Crain, Cuero; Littleton W. Moore, Lagrange; Roger Q. Mills, Corsicana; Joseph D. Sayers, Bastrop; Samuel W. T. Lanham, Weather-

VERMONT

Senators: George F. Edmunds, Burlington; Justin S. Morrill, Representatives: John W. Stewart, Middlebury; William W. Grout. Barton.

VIRGINIA

Senators: John W. Daniel, Lynchburg; John S. Barbour, Alexandria. Representatives: Thomas H. B. Browne, Accomac; George E. Bowden, Norfolk; George D. Wise, Richmond; Edmund Waddill, Jr., Richmond; Edward C. Venable, Petersburg; John M. Langston, Petersburg; Posey G. Lester, Floyd; Paul C. Edmunds, Hallfax; Charles T. O'Ferrall, Harrisonburg; William H. F. Lee, Burkes Station; John A. Buchanan, Abingdon; Henry St. George Tucker,

WASHINGTON 81

Senators: John B. Allen.82 Walla Walla: Watson C. Squire.83

Representative at Large: John L. Wilson, si Spokane Falls.

WEST VIRGINIA

Senators: John E. Kenna, Charleston; Charles J. Faulkner, Martinsburg. Representatives: John O. Pendleton, Wheeling; George W. Atkinson, Wheeling; William L. Wilson, Charles Town; John D. Alderson, Nicholas; J. Monroe Jackson, Parkersburg; Charles B. Smith, Parkersburg.

WISCONSIN

Senators: Philetus Sawyer, Oshkosh; John C. Spooner, Hudson. Representatives: Lucien B. Caswell, Fort Atkinson; Charles Barwig, Mayville; Robert M. La Follette, Madison; Isaac W. Van Schalek, Millwaukee; George H. Brickner, Sheboygan Falls; Charles B. Clark, Neenah; Ormsby B. Thomas, Prairie du Chien; Nils P. Haugen, River Falls; Myron H. McCord, Merrill.

WYOMING 89

Senators: Joseph M. Carey, Cheyenne; Francis E. Warren, 12 Cheyenne.

Representative at Large: Clarence D. Clark, 92 Evanston.

TERRITORY OF ARIZONA

Delegate: Marcus A. Smith, Tombstone. TERRITORY OF DAKOTA

Delegate: George A. Mathews,83 Brookings.

 Served until April 10, 1890; succeeded by Edmond Waddill, Jr., who contested his election.

Served until April 10, 1890; succeeded by Edmond Waddill, Jr., who contested his election.

T Successfully contested the election of George D. Wise, and took his seat April 12, 1890.

Served until September 23, 1890; succeeded by John M. Langston, who contested his election.

D Successfully contested the election of Edward C. Venable, and took his seat September 23, 1890. It was in connection with this case that the minority party adopted for the first time the plan of withdrawing in a body from the Hall of the House, to avoid being counted as part of a quorum.

Delection unsuccessfully contested by Henry Bowen.

Admitted as a State into the Union November 11, 1889.

Took his seat December 2, 1889; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1893.

Took his seat December 2, 1889; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1891.

Took his seat December 2, 1889.

Served until February 26, 1890; succeeded by George W. Atkinson, who contested his election.

Successfully contested the election of John O. Pendleton, and took his seat February 3, 1890; succeeded by Charles B. Smith, who contested his election. It was in connection with the final votes in this case that Speaker Reed, for the first time, made his parliamentary ruling regarding the "counting of a quorum."

Successfully contested the election of J. Monroe Jackson, and took his seat February 3, 1890.

Took his seat December 1, 1890; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1895.

Took his seat December 1, 1890; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1895.

Took his seat December 1, 1890; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1895.

Took his seat December 1, 1890; term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1895.

by lot, March 3, 1893.

Took his seat December 1, 1890, term to expire, as determined by lot, March 3, 1893.

Took his seat December 1, 1890.

Served until November 2, 1889, when the Territory of Dakota was divided and granted statehood as the States of North and South Dakota by act of Congress approved February 22, 1889.

TERRITORY OF IDAHO

Delegate: Fred T. Dubois, 4 Blackfoot.

TERRITORY OF MONTANA

Delegate: Thomas H. Carter, 65 Helena.

TERRITORY OF NEW MEXICO

Delegate: Antonio Joseph, Ojo Caliente.

TERRITORY OF OKLAHOMA 96 Delegate: David A. Harvey, or Oklahoma City.

TERRITORY OF UTAH

Delegate: John T. Caine, Salt Lake City.

TERRITORY OF WASHINGTON

Delegate: John B. Allen,98 Seattle. TERRITORY OF WYOMING

Delegate: Joseph M. Carey, 90 Cheyenne.

SEVENTY-SIXTH CONGRESS-JANUARY 3, 1939-JANUARY 3, 1941 First session, January 3, 1939

Vice President of the United States, John N. Garner, of Texas, President pro tempore of the Senate, Key Pittman, of Nevada. Secretary of the Senate, Edwin Alexander Halsey, of Virginia. Speaker of the House of Representatives, William B. Bankhead, of

Clerk of the House, South Trimble, of Kentucky.

LIST OF SENATORS BY STATES, 1939

Clerk of the House, South Trimble, of Kentucky.

LIST OF SENATORS BY STATES, 1939

Alabama: John H. Bankhead and Lister Hill.
Arizona: Henry F. Ashurst and Carl Hayden.
Arkansas: Hattle W. Caraway and John E. Miller.
California: Hiram W. Johnson and Sheridan Downey.
Colorado: Alva B. Adams and Edwin C. Johnson.
Connecticut: Francis T. Maloney and John A. Danaher.
Delaware: John G. Townsend, Jr., and James H. Hughes.
Florida: Charles O. Andrews and Claude Pepper.
Georgia: Walter F. George and Richard B. Russell.
Idaho: William E. Borah and D. Worth Clark.
Illinois: J. Hamilton Lewis and Scott W. Lucas.
Indiana: Frederick Van Nuys and Sherman Minton.
Iowa: Guy Mark Gillette and Clyde L. Herring.
Kansas: Arthur Capper and Clyde M. Reed.
Kentucky: Alben W. Barkley and M. M. Logan.
Louisiana: John H. Overton and Allen J. Ellender.
Maine: Frederick Hale and Wallace H. White, Jr.
Maryland: Millard E. Tydings and George L. Radeliffe.
Massachusetts: David I. Walsh and Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr.
Michigan: Arthur H. Vandenberg and Prentiss M. Brown.
Minnesota: Henrik Shipstead and Ernest Lundeen.
Mississippi: Pat Harrison and Theodore G. Bilbo.
Missouri: Bennett Champ Clark and Harry S. Truman.
Montana: Burton K. Wheeler and James E. Murray.
Nebraska: George W. Norris and Edwin R. Burke.
Nevada: Key Pittman and Patrick McCarran.
New Hampshire: Styles Bridges and Charles W. Tobey.
New Jersey: William H. Smathers and W. Warren Barbour.
New Mexico: Carl A. Hatch and Dennis Chavez.
New York: Robert F. Wagner and James M. Mead.
North Carolina: Josiah W. Bailey and Robert R. Reynolds.
North Carolina: Josiah W. Bailey and Robert R. Reynolds.
North Carolina: Josiah W. Bailey and Robert F. Guffey.
Rhode Island: Peter G. Gerry and Theodore Francis Green.
South Carolina: Hilson D. Smith and James F. Byrnes.
South Dakota: W. J. Bulow and Chan Gurney.
Tennessee: Kenneth McKellar and Tom Stewart.
Texas: Morris Sheppard and Tom Connally.
Utah: William H. King and Elbert D. Thomas.
Vermont: Warren R. Austin and Ernest W. Gibson.
Virginia: Ca

24 Served until July 3, 1890, when the Territory of Idaho was granted statehood by act of Congress approved that date.

¹⁶ Served until November 8, 1889, when the Territory of Montana was granted statehood by act of Congress approved February 22, 1889; subsequently elected the first Representative from the new State.

S Formed from a portion of Indian Territory and from that portion of the United States known as the Public Land Strip and granted a Delegate in Congress by act of May 2, 1890.

Took his seat December 1, 1890.

Served until November 11, 1889, when the Territory of Washington was granted statehood by act of Congress approved February 22, 1889; subsequently elected Senator from the new State.

Served until July 10, 1890, when the Territory of Wyoming was granted statehood by act of Congress approved July 10, 1890; subsequently elected Senator from the new State.

REPRESENTATIVES, BY STATES

Alabama: Frank W. Boykin, Mobile; George M. Grant, Troy; Henry B. Steagall, Ozark; Sam Hobbs, Selma; Joe Starnes, Guntersville; Pete Jarman, Livingston; William B. Bankhead, Jasper; John J. Sparkman, Huntsville; Luther Patrick, Birmingham.

Arizona: John R. Murdock, Tempe.

Arkansas: E. C. Gathings, West Memphis; Wilbur D. Mills, Kennset; Clyde T. Ellis, Bentonville; ———————————————; David D. Terry, Little Rock; W. F. Norrell, Monticello; Wade Hampton Kitchens, Magnolia.

California: Clarence F. Lea, Santa Rosa; Harry L. Englebright, Nevada City; Frank H. Buck, Vacaville; Franck R. Havenner, San Francisco; Richard J. Welch, San Francisco; Albert E. Carter, Oakland; John H. Tolan, Oakland; John Z. Anderson, San Juan Bautista; Bertrand W. Gearhart, Fresno; A. J. Elliott, Tulare; Carl Hinshaw, Pasadena; Jerry Voorhis, San Dimas; Charles Kramer, Los Angeles; Thomas F. Ford, Los Angeles; John M. Costello, Hollywood; Leland M. Ford, Santa Monica; Lee E. Geyer, Gardena; Thomas M. Eaton, Long Beach; Harry R. Sheppard, Yucaipa; Ed. V. Izac, San Diego.
Colorado: Lawrence Lewis, Denver; Fred Cummings, Fort Collins; John A. Martin, Pueblo; Edward T. Taylor, Glenwood Springs.
Connecticut: William J. Miller, Wethersfield; Thomas R. Ball, Old Lyme; James A. Shanley, New Haven; Albert E. Austin, Old Greenwich; J. Joseph Smith, Waterbury; B. J. Monkiewicz, New Britain.

Delaware: George S. Williams, Millsboro. Florida: J. Hardin Peterson, Lakeland; Lex Green, Starke; Mil-ard F. Caldwell, Milton; Pat Cannon, Miami; Joe Hendricks, Florida: J. Hardin Peterson, Lakeland; Lex Green, Starke; Millard F. Caldwell, Milton; Pat Cannon, Miami; Joe Hendricks, De Land.

Georgia: Hugh Peterson, Alley; E. E. Cox, Camilla; Stephen Pace, Americus; E. M. Owen, Griffin; Robert Ramspeck, Atlanta; Carl Vinson, Milledgeville; Malcolm C. Tarver, Dalton; W. Ben Gibbs, Jesup; B. Frank Whelchel, Gainesville; Paul Brown, Elberton.

Idaho: Compton I. White, Clark Fork; Henry C. Dworshak, Bur-lew

Idaho: Compton I. White, Clark Fork; Henry C. Dworshak, Burlew.

Illinois: Arthur W. Mitchell, Chicago; Raymond S. McKeough, Chicago; Edward A. Kelly, Chicago; Harry P. Beam, Chicago; Adolph J. Sabath, Chicago; A. F. Maciejewski, Cicero; Leonard W. Schuetz, Chicago; Leo Kocialkowski, Chicago; James McAndrews, Chicago; Ralph E. Church, Evanston; Chauncey W. Reed, West Chicago; Noah M. Mason, Oglesby; Leo E. Allen, Galena; Anton J. Johnson, Macomb; Robert B. Chiperfield, Canton; Everett M. Dirksen, Pekin; Leslie C. Arends, Melvin; Jessie Sumner, Milford; William H. Wheat, Rantoul; James M. Barnes, Jacksonville; Frank W. Fries, Carlinville; Edwin M. Schaefer, Belleville; Laurence F. Arnold, Newton; Claude V. Parsons, Golconda; Kent E. Keller, Ava; John C. Martin, Salem; Thomas V. Smith, Chicago.

Indiana: William T. Schulte, Hammond; Charles A. Halleck, Rensselaer; Robert A. Grant, South Bend; George W. Gillie, Fort Wayne; Forest A. Harness, Kokomo; Noble J. Johnson, Terre Haute; Gerald W. Landis, Linton; John W. Boehne, Jr., Evansville; Eugene B. Crowe, Bedford; Raymond S. Springer, Connersville; William H. Larrabee, New Palestine; Louis Ludlow, Indianapolis, Iowa: Thomas E. Martin, Iowa City; William S. Jacobsen, Clinton; John W. Gwynne, Waterloo; Henry O. Talle, Decorah; Karl M. LeCompte, Corydon; Cassius C. Dowell, Des Moines; Ben F. Jensen, Exira; Fred C. Gilchrist, Laurens; Vincent F. Harrington, Sloux City.

Kansas: W. P. Lambertson, Fairview; U. S. Guyer, Kansas City; Thomas D. Winter, Girard; Edward H. Rees, Emporia; John M. Houston, Newton; Frank Carlson, Concordia; Clifford R. Hope, Garden City.

Garden City.

Kentucky: Noble J. Gregory, Mayfield; Beverly M. Vincent, Brownsville; Emmet O'Neal, Louisville; Edward W. Creal, Hodgenville; Brent Spence, Fort Thomas; Virgil Chapman, Paris; Andrew
J. May, Prestonsburg; Joe B. Bates, Greenup; John M. Robsion, Barbourville.

Barbourville.

Louisiana: J. O. Fernandez, New Orleans; Paul H. Maloney, New Orleans; Robert L. Mouton, Lafayette; Overton Brooks, Shreveport; Newt V. Mills, Mer Rouge; John K. Griffith, Slidell; René L. DeRouen, Ville Platte; A. Leonard Allen, Winnfield.

Maine: James C. Oliver, South Portland; Clyde H. Smith, Skowhegan; Ralph O. Brewster, Dexter.

Maryland: T. Alan Goldsborough, Denton; William P. Cole, Jr., Towson; Thomas D'Alesandro, Jr., Baltimore; Ambrose J. Kennedy, Baltimore; Lansdale G. Sasscer, Upper Marlboro; William D. Byron, Williamsport.

Baltimore; Lansdale G. Sasscer, Upper Marlboro; William D. Byron, Williamsport.

Massachusetts: Allen T. Treadway, Stockbridge; Charles R. Clason, Springfield; Joseph E. Casey, Clinton; Pehr G. Holmes, Worcester; Edith Nourse Rogers, Lowell; George J. Bates, Salem; Lawrence J. Connery, Lynn; Arthur D. Healey, Somerville; Robert Luce, Waltham; George Holden Tinkham, Boston; Thomas A. Flaherty, Boston; John W. McCormack, Boston; Richard B. Wigglesworth, Milton; Joseph W. Martin, Jr., North Attleboro; Charles L. Gifford, Barnstable.

Michigan: Rudolph G. Tenerowicz, Hamtramck; Earl C. Michener, Adrian; Paul W. Shafer, Battle Creek; Clare E. Hoffman, Allegan; Carl E. Mapes, Grand Rapids; William W. Blackney, Flint; Jesse P. Wolcott, Port Huron; Fred L. Crawford, Saginaw; Albert J. Engel, Lake City; Roy O. Woodruff, Bay City; Fred Bradley, Rogers City; Frank E. Hook, Ironwood; Clarence J. McLeod, Detroit; Louis C. Rabaut, Grosse Pointe Park; John D. Dingell, Detroit; John Lesinski, Dearborn; George A. Dondero, Royal Oak. Minnesota: August H. Andresen, Red Wing; Elmer J. Ryan, South St. Paul; John G. Alexander, Minneapolis; Melvin J. Maas, St. Paul; Oscar Youngdahl, Minneapolis; Harold Knutson, St. Cloud; H. Carl Andersen, Tyler; William A. Pittenger, Duluth; Richard T. Buckler, Crookston.

Mississippi: John E. Rankin, Tupelo; Wall Doxey, Holly Springs; William M. Whittington, Greenwood; A. L. Ford, Ackerman; Ross A. Collins, Meridian; William M. Colmer, Pascagoula; Dan R. McGehee, Meadville.

 A. Collins, Meridian; William M. Colmer, Pascagoula; Dan R.
 McGehee, Meadville.
 Missouri: Milton A. Romjue, Macon; William L. Nelson, Columbia; Richard M. Duncan, St. Joseph; C. Jasper Bell, Blue Springs; Joseph B. Shannon, Kansas City; Reuben T. Wood, Springfield; Dewey Short, Galena; Clyde Williams, Hillsboro; Clarence Cannon, Elsberry; Orville Zimmerman, Kennett; Thomas C. Hennings, Jr., St. Louis; C. Arthur Anderson, Lemay; John J. Cochran, St. Louis.

Montana: J. Thorkelson, Butte; James F. O'Connor, Livingston, Nebraska: George H. Heinke, Nebraska City; Charles F. Mc-Laughlin, Omaha; Karl Stefan, Norfolk; Carl T. Curtis, Minden; Harry B. Coffee, Chadron.

Nevada: James G. Scrugham, Reno. New Hampshire: Arthur B. Jenks, Manchester; Foster Stearns,

New Hampshire: Arthur B. Jenks, Manchester; Foster Stearns, Hancock.

New Jersey: Charles A. Wolverton, Merchantville; Walter S. Jeffries, Margate City; William H. Sutphin, Matawan; D. Lane Powers, Trenton; Charles A. Eaton, Watchung; Donald H. McLean, Elizabeth; J. Parnell Thomas, Allendale; George N. Seger, Passaic; Frank C. Osmers, Jr., Haworth; Fred A. Hartley, Jr., Kearny; Albert L. Vreeland, East Orange; Robert W. Kean, Livingston; Mary T. Norton, Jersey City; Edward J. Hart, Jersey City.

New Mexico: John J. Dempsey, Santa Fe.

New York: Leonard W. Hall, Oyster Bay; W. B. Barry, Hollis; Joseph L. Pfeifer, Brooklyn; Thomas H. Cullen, Brooklyn; Marcellus H. Evans, Brooklyn; Adrew L. Somers, Brooklyn; John J. Delaney, Brooklyn; Donald L. O'Toole, Brooklyn; Eugene J. Keogh, Brooklyn; Emanuel Celler, Brooklyn; James A. O'Leary, West New Brighton; Samuel Dickstein, New York City; City; City; Michael J. Kennedy, New York City; Martin J. Kennedy, New York City; Bruce Barton, New York City; Martin J. Kennedy, New York City; Bruce Barton, New York City; Vito Marcantonio, New York City; Joseph A. Gavagan, New York City; Edward W. Curley, Bronx; Charles A. Buckley, Bronx; James M. Fitzpatrick, Bronz; Ralph A. Gamble, Larchmont; Hamilton Fish, Garrison; Lewis K. Rockefeller, Chatham; William T. Byrne, Loudonville; E. Harold Cluett, Troy; Frank Crowther, Schenectady; Wallace E. Pierce, Plattsburg; Francis D. Culkin, Oswego; Fred J. Douglas, Utica; Bert Lord, Afton; Clarence E. Hancock, Syracuse; John Taber, Auburn; W. Sterling Cole, Bath; Joseph J. O'Brien, East Rochester; James W. Wadsworth, Genesco; Walter G. Andrews, Buffalo; J. Francis Harter, Eggertsville; Pius L. Schwert, Buffalo; Jonnel A. Reed, Dunkirk; Caroline O'Day, Rye; Matthew J. Merritt, Flushing.

North Carolina: Lindsay C. Warren, Washington; John H. Kerr, Warrenton; Graham A. Barden, New Bern; Harold D. Cooley, Nashville; Alonzo D. Folger, Mount Airy; Carl T. Durham, Chapel Hill; J. Bayard Clark, Fayetteville; William O. Burgin, Lexington; Robert L. D

Weaver, Asheville.

North Dakota: William Lemke, Fargo; Usher L. Burdick, Williston.

Ohio: Charles H. Elston, Newtown; William E. Hess, Cincinnati;
Harry N. Routzohn, Dayton; Robert F. Jones, Lima; Cliff Clevenger, Harry N. Routzohn, Dayton; Robert F. Jones, Lima; Cliff Clevenger, Bryan; James G. Polk, Highland; Clarence J. Brown, Blanchester; Frederick C. Smith, Marion; John F. Hunter, Toledo; Thomas A. Jenkins, Ironton; Harold K. Claypool, Chillicothe; John M. Vorys, Columbus; Dudley A. White, Norwalk; Dow W. Harter, Akron; Robert T. Secrest, Caldwell; James Seccombe, Canton; William A. Ashbrook, Johnstown; Earl R. Lewis, St. Clairsville; Michael J. Kirwan, Youngstown; Martin L. Sweeney, Cleveland; Robert Crosser, Cleveland; Chester C. Bolton, Lyndhurst; George H. Bender, Cleveland Heights; L. L. Marshall, Euclid.

Oklahoma: Wesley E. Disney, Tulsa; Jack Nichols, Eufaula; Wilburn Cartwright, McAlester; Lyle H. Boren, Seminole; Mike Monroney, Oklahoma City; Jed Johnson, Anadarko; Sam C. Massingale, Cordell; Phil Ferguson, Woodward; Will Rogers, Oklahoma City.

Oregon: James W. Mott, Salem: Walter M. Pierce, La Grander.

Oregon: James W. Mott, Salem; Walter M. Pierce, La Grande; Homer D. Angell, Portland.

Pennsylvania: Leon Sacks, Philadelphia; James P. McGranery, Philadelphia; Michael J. Bradley, Philadelphia; J. Burrwood Daly, Philadelphia; Fred C. Gartner, Philadelphia; Francis J. Myers, Phila-Philadelphia; Fred C. Gartner, Philadelphia; Francis J. Myers, Philadelphia; George P. Darrow, Philadelphia; James Wolfenden, Upper Darby; Charles L. Gerlach, Allentown; J. Roland Kinzer, Lancaster; Patrick J. Boland, Scranton; J. Harold Flannery, Pittston; Ivor D. Fenton, Mahanoy City; Guy L. Moser, Douglassville; Albert G. Rutherford, Honesdale; Robert F. Rich, Woolrich; J. William Ditter, Ambler; Richard M. Simpson, Huntingdon; John C. Kunkel, Harrisburg; Benjamin Jarrett, Farrell; Francis E. Walter, Easton; Chester H. Gross, Manchester; James E. Van Zandt, Altoona; J. Buell Snyder, Perryopolis; Charles I. Faddis, Waynesburg; Louis E. Graham, ² Member-elect of 75th Cong.; elected June 14, 1938, to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Lister Hill, January 11, 1938.

² Vacancy caused by death of Ben Cravens, January 13, 1939.

⁴ Elected February 3, 1939, to fill the vacancy caused by death of Stephen W. Gambrill, Member-elect, December 19, 1938.

Beaver; Harve Tibbott, Ebensburg; Robert G. Allen, Greensburg; Robert L. Rodgers, Erie; Robert J. Corbett, Bellevue; John McDowell, Wilkinsburg; Herman P. Eberharter, Pittsburgh; Joseph A. McArdle, Pittsburgh; Matthew A. Dunn, Mount Oliver.
Rhode Island: Charles F. Risk, Saylesville; Harry Sandager, Cranston.

South Carolina: Thomas S. McMillan, Charleston; Hampton P. Fulmer, Orangeburg; Butler B. Hare, Saluda; Joseph R. Bryson, Greenville; James P. Richards, Lancaster; John L. McMillan, South Dakota: Karl E. Mundt, Madison: Francis Case, Custer, Tennessee: B. Carroll Reece, Johnson City; J. Will Taylor, Knox-ville; Sam D. McReynolds, Chattanooga; Albert Gore, Carthage; Joseph W. Byrns, Jr., Nashville; Clarence W. Turner, Waverly; Her-ron Pearson, Jackson; Jere Cooper, Dyersburg; Walter Chandler, Memphis.

Memphis.

Texas: Wright Patman, Texarkana; Martin Dies, Orange; Lindley Beckwich, Gilmer; Sam Rayburn, Bonham, Hatton W. Sumners, Dallas; Luther A. Johnson, Corsicana; Nat Patton, Crockett, Albert Thomas, Houston; Joseph J. Mansfield, Columbus; Lyndon B. Johnson, Austin; William R. Peage, Waco; Fritz G. Lanham, Fort Worth; Ed Gossett, Wichita Falls; Richard M. Kleberg, Corpus Christi; Milton H. West, Brownsville; R. Ewing Thomason, El Paso; Clyde L. Garrett, Eastland; Marvin Jones, Amarillo; George H. Mahon, Colorado; Paul J. Kilday, San Antonio; Charles L. South, Coleman.

Utah: Abe Murdock, Beaver; J. W. Robinson, Provo.
Vermont: Charles A. Plumley, Northfield.

Virginia: Schuyler Otis Bland, Newport News; Colgate W. Darden, Jr., Norfolk; Dave E. Satterfield, Jr., Richmond; Patrick Henry Drewry, Petersburg; Thomas G. Burch, Martinsville; Clifton A. Woodrum, Roanoke; A. Willis Robertson, Lexington; Howard W. Smith, Alexandria; John W. Flannagan, Jr., Bristol.

Washington: Warren G. Magnuson, Seattle; Mon C. Wallgren, Everett; Martin F. Smith, Hoquiam; Knute Hill, Prosser; Charles H. Leavy, Spokane; John M. Coffee, Tacoma.

West Virginia: Andrew Edmiston, Weston; George W. Johnson, Parkersburg; John Kee, Bluefield; Joe L. Smith, Beckley.

Wisconsin: Stephen Bolles, Janesville; Charles Hawks, Jr., Horicon; Harry W. Griswold, West Salem; John C. Schafer, Milwaukee; Lewis D. Thill, Milwaukee; Frank B. Keefe, Oshkosh; Reid F. Murray, Waupaca; Joshua L. Johns, Algoma; Merlin Hull, Black River Falls; Bernard J. Gehrmann, Mellen.

Wyoming: Frank O. Horton, Saddlestring.

DELEGATES Texas: Wright Patman, Texarkana; Martin Dies, Orange; Lindley

DELEGATES

Alaska: Anthony J. Dimond, Valdez. Hawaii: Samuel W. King, Honolulu.

RESIDENT COMMISSIONERS

Commonwealth of the Philippines: Joaquin M. Elizalde, Manila. Puerto Rico: Santiago Iglesias, San Juan.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts [Mrs. Rogers]?

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I think the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SNYDER] has made a very valuable contribution, and the country should be very grateful to him. The eyes of the people of the United States are focused on the Congress today as never before in our history. There was a tremendous interest in the anniversary of the birth of Congress, and the splendid speeches made the people realize the importance and value of our Supreme Court and our Congress.

LOANS TO LITTLE BUSINESS

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one-half minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, the bill H. R. 4851 which I have just introduced is sponsored by the American Federation of Little Business, a nonprofit, nonpartisan, and Nation-wide organization of independent small-business men. The bill provides for a permanent, decentralized credit system for small business and is patterned closely after the Federal home-loan bank-Federal saving and loan system heretofore provided for home owners. The intent is to set up a decentralized credit facility in which local management and responsibility and some local money will be combined with Federal regulation and some Federal money, with the requirement that after 5 years the preferred stock investment of the Secretary of the Treasury shall be progressively retired.

TO BRING ABOUT RUSINESS RECOVERY

Mr. Speaker, a supreme problem confronting this Congress is to bring about a business recovery. This is not a partisan problem. It is a national necessity. We cannot indefinitely preserve democratic institutions in an atmosphere of chronic economic crisis. We cannot continue forever to support twelve to fourteen million unemployed workers and their families. We cannot continue forever to spend more than we get. Somehow, someway, the health and resiliency of our economic system must be restored.

The group which this legislation is designed to benefit are our largest employers of labor. In the aggregate they pay most of the taxes for the support of local, State, and Federal Governments. Eliminate them from our economic structure-and their numbers are steadily being reduced-and the foundation of our American system will crumble.

HAND-OUT NOT ASKED FOR

I wish to make it perfectly clear that independent small business is not asking for a Government hand-out. It is not asking for the creation of another governmental agency in competition with private banks or other legitimate lending institutions. It is not proposing a plan which will be a burden upon the taxpayers. It is merely asking the temporary assistance of Government to enable it to establish an instrumentality of self-help. And it is not wedded to any particular ideas as to the form that such an instrumentality should take. The proposed system is modeled after one that has worked well in its field and has cost the taxpayers nothing. Perhaps a pooling of our ideas and thinking may result in an even better plan. Little business is interested in resultsnot in the advancement of any particular formula for obtaining them.

PROTECTION AGAINST INROADS OF MONOPOLY

The only change I have made in the bill as drafted by the federation is the addition of a provision for loans to cooperative purchasing associations of small independents to enable them to increase the aggregate of their buying power. This does not eliminate the disparity of position existing between the independent and the chain, but it may be helpful in some instances. Little business needs more than just another credit facility to enable it to survive against the inroads of monopoly.

LITTLE BUSINESS OUR PROBLEM

Most of us here represent communities in which a majority of the business is little business. Its problems are therefore our problems. For this reason I earnestly urge the Members of this House-without regard to party-to consider this problem of credit for the small independent. Perhaps, as I have said, we can improve upon the plan embodied in the bill which I have just introduced. But the important thing is that something sound and constructive be done, and that it be done now.

SUMMARY OF PROPOSED INVESTMENT BANK ACT (H. R. 4851)

First. The bill (H. R. 4851) is designed to provide permanent intermediate credit facilities for independent small business ($100,000 limitation on size of loans).

Second. The proposed structure is closely patterned after the existing Home Loan Bank-Federal Savings and Loan Association system. At the top is a three-man board, appointed by the President and charged with general supervision over the banks, the associations, and the insurance corporation. The 12 regional investment banks provided for are intended to serve primarily as reservoirs for the discount paper emanating from the local investment associations, although they may make loans direct under certain The local investment associations consticircumstances. tute the broad base of the system and are authorized to make loans generally for business purposes (including character loans) when credit of the type applied for is not otherwise available through the usual local commercial banking channels. Thus, the passing upon credit risks and the extension of credit is made a function of local management, although the Board and the banks keep in close touch through examinations.

Third. It is proposed that the capital be provided as follows

(a) The capital stock of the regional investment banks: To be subscribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, the money (up to a total of $120,000,000) to be provided by

(b) The capital of the local investment associations: To be provided by local investors and the Secretary of the Treasury ($60,000,000 appropriated for this purpose-paragraph (h) of section 10), the latter being authorized to subscribe for preferred shares at a 4-to-1 ratio (to common capital) up to $100,000 for each local association. The common stock subscriptions are protected by insurance up to $5.000 in the case of each such investment.

(c) The capital stock of the Insurance Corporation ($100,000,000): To be subscribed by R. F. C.

Fourth. The intent is to provide a decentralized intermediate credit system in which local management and responsibility and some local money will be combined with Federal regulation and Federal money. After 5 years, the preferred stock investment of the Secretary of the Treasury in the local associations is to be progressively retired.

Fifth. The total lending capacity of the system depends upon many factors, such as the number and capitalization of the local associations. The banks are authorized to issue their consolidated debentures in the ratio of 12 to 1 of capital. Such debentures are generally tax-exempt, but are not guaranteed by the Government.

Sixth. The proposed method of insurance, mechanics thereof, and so forth, are practically identical with those provided in connection with the Home Loan Bank-Federal Savings and Loan Association system and program.

Seventh. The bill is sponsored by the American Federation of Little Business, an independent, nonpartisan, and Nationwide organization of independent, small-business men. The active support of all Members of Congress, without regard to party affiliation, is cordially invited.

MEMBERS OF THE BOARD OF VISITORS TO THE UNITED STATES COAST GUARD ACADEMY

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following communication from the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, which was read:

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 23, 1939.

Washington, D. C., January 23, 1939.

Hon. William B. Bankhead,
Speaker of the House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.
My Dear Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to the act of April 16, 1937
(Public, No. 38, 75th Cong., 1st sess.), I have appointed for the remainder of the first session of the Seventy-sixth Congress the following members of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries to serve as members of the Board of Visitors to the United States Coast Guard Academy: Hon. Lindsay C. Warren, Hon. Edward J. Hart, and Hon. Richard J. Welch.

As chairman of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries I am authorized to serve as an ex officio member of the Board. Yours very sincerely,

S. O. Bland.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is not a quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and eighty-five Members are present, not a quorum.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House. A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 25]

Anderson, Calif. Duncan Johnson, Lyndon Patton Eaton, N. J. Keefe Kerr Reece, Tenn. Seger Ball Casey, Mass. Evans McGehee Ferguson Flaherty Stearns, N. H. Creal Sweeney Vorys, Ohio Wood McReynolds Curley Daly Fulmer Maas Martin, Colo. Mitchell Gearhart Dingell Hunter Youngdahl Osmers O'Toole Disney Doughton Jenks, N. H.

The SPEAKER. Three hundred and ninety-five Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

On motion of Mr. Cochran, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. Keogh asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. HARRINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

Mr. HARRINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the resolution of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Anderson] for an investigation of the National Labor Relations Board. which is now before the Rules Committee.

For the past 2 years I have heard discussed on the floor of this House the conduct of the Labor Board, and I have read something of it in the newspapers.

Due to the many duties of my office and the needs of my district last year, I did not give the matter the study it should have had.

However, in my home town during the past year we have had an opportunity of learning at first hand how the Board operates and its manner and methods. I have compared what we learned of its procedure in Sioux City. Iowa, my home, with what has taken place in other sections of the country, and find to my surprise a situation far worse than anything described or even intimated on this floor.

I represent a fine agricultural district. Our main products are grain and livestock. At my home in Sioux City we have a plant of Swift & Co. It serves, along with other packers, the needs of the farmers of my district.

Swift & Co. has had no trouble with its employees. Their employee plan has been satisfactory, and they have had a local employee association for many years. It was a mutual

When the National Labor Relations Act was upheld the employees were told by Swift & Co. it would have to withdraw from any activity for fear of being held in violation of the act. Consequently the employees formed an independent union with a majority membership in the plant for the purpose of collective bargaining with the company.

After proving it had a majority of the membership of the company, it was given an agreement of collective bargaining with Swift & Co.

Some time later a group of C. I. O. organizers began to operate in Sioux City and formed an organization committee in the plant. At no time, however-and I quote authoritatively, because I have just completed reading the full transcript of the National Labor Relations Board case, known as case Nos. XVLII-C-188 and XVIII-R-142-did the C. I. O. union have a majority membership in the plant.

On September 27, 1938, the C. I. O. committee, in my opinion, made a deliberate attempt to coerce the management into agreeing to all their demands by calling an illegal sitdown strike in the plant. The sit-down strike was called in the departments known as the "kill" departments, where livestock is killed and moved on to the coolers to prevent

The charge of the C. I. O. was that the management would not bargain collectively with their committee of nine members over so-called grievances. Facts are that the management had always had a policy of meeting with the aggrieved employee and a member or members of the union.

At any rate, a sit-down strike-now mark you this was late last September—was called because the employees would not permit supervisors and nonstriking employees to remove the freshly killed meat. The company suffered a loss of better than $6,000 because this meat was condemned by Government inspectors as spoiled.

The company, after giving notice, discharged those who refused to leave the plant and many were indicted for unlawful seizure of property. The activity of outside organizers and some of the C. I. O. group was so offensive to the public peace of the city that an injunction was granted against certain of their activities.

Now, let me paint this picture for you again. At no time did the C. I. O. have a majority at Swift & Co. for members. At no time had the company refused to discuss with the C. I. O. the demands of the organization, despite the fact that they had an agreement for collective bargaining with an independent union.

The company had been most cautious and impartial in its activities toward all organizations.

The C. I. O. started an unlawful sit-down strike in the plant and were discharged but refused to leave the plant until arrests of the ringleaders were made and others told that they must leave the property or also be arrested.

Despite that picture, on which I shall comment at length at a later date, the trial examiner ordered the company to recognize the C. I. O. as the sole bargaining agent, reinstate those whom it had discharged for illegal seizure of their property, and pay them back wages from the time of discharge until rehired.

Mr. Speaker, to say that there was no basis for these findings is putting it mildly. It appears to me that the decision in these cases is reached before the hearings are held and the hearings are merely set up for the purpose of attempting to justify to the American people, the acts of the Labor Board.

I am no lawyer, Mr. Speaker, but I have sufficient education and intelligence to know that no decision can be reached by taking the word of one union organizer and placing the wreath of sanctity on it while ignoring the directly opposite testimony of other substantial citizens.

I make the charge here now, Mr. Speaker, that, in my opinion, we are wasting the taxpayers' money in holding these hearings. The statements of fact contained in the examiner's reports are so prejudiced, unwarranted, and unfair that they prove to me that the holding of a hearing was for the sole purpose of obtaining testimony favorable to the C. I. O.

And, Mr. Speaker, here is the serious part of these "Findings of fact." If the Labor Board approves them, they cannot be reviewed by the courts of the land, since the law restricts them to a review of matters of law. In other words, this Board is holding a lot of kangaroo hearings, issuing orders for the benefit of one group, and there is nothing left for the accused to do but hope there has been a mistake in legal procedure or legal application made by the Board so that justice can be obtained in the impartial courts of the land.

I for one, Mr. Speaker, believe the Members of Congress want a full and open investigation of the Labor Relations Act and the Labor Board. I will not participate in any activity which has for its purpose the hindering of the rights of labor to organize, but I fear if this situation is not investigated it will result, as the distinguished Member from Missouri has pointed out, in a complete crushing of organized labor by an aroused and resentful public opinion against these abuses.

The American people will support any effort which is fair, but they will make their force heard and felt if the privileges of fair play are abused. [Applause.]

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, its Chief Clerk, announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 3791) entitled "An act to provide more effectively for the national defense by carrying out the recommendations of the President in his message of January 12, 1939, to the Congress," disagreed to by the House; agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. Lewis, Mr. Logan, and Mr. Austin to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

REORGANIZATION BILL OF 1939

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill

(H. R. 4425) to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 4425, with Mr. McCormack in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise merely for the purpose of getting some information from the minority Members, if they can inform us at this time. It was stated yesterday by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Dirksen] that he proposed to offer what is known as the Byrd bill as an amendment to this bill. Under the procedure under which we are operating, that amendment can be offered only at the very beginning; that is, now, or at the very end of the consideration of the bill. I am wondering if the gentleman would indicate whether they intend to offer the amendment now or wait until the completion of the consideration of the bill.

Mr. TABER. I may say the amendment will not be offered to this section. The condition of the bill at the end of the day's session might make a difference as to what attitude we might take.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WARREN. Yes. Mr. HOFFMAN. Was the gentleman from North Carolina asking the gentleman from New York for a constructive suggestion this morning?

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer a committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment offered by Mr. Cochran: Page 2, strike out lines 15 and 16 and insert "(b) The Congress declares that the public interest demands the carrying out of the purposes specified in subsection (a) and that such purposes may be accomplished in great measure by."

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Before the Committee rose on yesterday the Clerk had read all of section 1. Is this an amendment to section 1?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understand the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri relates to lines 15 and 16 on page 2, which are a part of section 1.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I offer a substitute amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair asks the gentleman from Virginia if his amendment is a substitute for the pending amendment?

Mr. ROBERTSON. It is a substitute for the pending amendment. It amends the first part of section 1 instead of lines 16 and 17, but it covers the same subject matter.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair may state that in the opinion of the Chair the amendment of the gentleman from Virginia does not constitute a substitute amendment. The Chair will recognize the gentleman as soon as possible.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the Clerk again report the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will again report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mis-

There was no objection.

The Clerk again reported the committee amendment.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. TABER. When this amendment is disposed of, would a motion to strike out lines 15 to 19 still be in order?

The CHAIRMAN. It would.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I am acquainted with the amendment the gentleman from Virginia proposes to offer and I think it fair to him to state that it is more in the nature of an amendment to the pending amendment than a substitute amendment; as a matter of fact, I believe, if the gentleman will carefully read the amendment now proposed, he will abandon the idea of offering his amendment, because the amendments are substantially the same.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ROBERTSON: On page 1, beginning in line 7, strike out all of lines 7, 8, 9, and 10, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Section 1. (a) The Congress hereby declares that by reason of continued national deficits, it is imperative to materially reduce Government expenditures; and that such reduction may be accomplished in a measure by proceeding immediately under the provisions of this act.

"Accordingly the President shall investigate the organization of all executive agencies of the Government and shall determine what changes therein are necessary to accomplish the following purposes."

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I was unable to follow adequately the committee amendment that has just been offered and adopted, but regardless of whether my distinguished friend from Georgia [Mr. Cox] is correct or not in stating that that amendment carries the essence of the amendment which has just been read, a copy of which I presented to the chairman of the committee before we met, I want to take this opportunity to express here and now my belief that in a bill designed to give us better government for less money, I am vitally interested in economy as well as efficiency.

This is no new stand for me. I was elected in 1932 on an economy platform, but that was no new stand for me. Ah, for 6 years as a legal adviser to the board of supervisors in my home county, I was on an economy platform, and for 6 years as a member of the Virginia State Senate. I entered this distinguished body in 1932 on an economy platform, and I have never departed from it. [Applause.]

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me? Mr. ROBERTSON. I yield to my friend from Georgia.

Mr. COX. Since the gentleman has had an opportunity to examine the committee amendment, it is not his opinion that it substantially embodies what is contained in the amendment the gentleman has just proposed?

Mr. ROBERTSON. I have not had time to examine it, but I showed the gentleman my amendment, and he is familiar with the other amendment. If the gentleman says they are substantially the same, then I will withdraw my amendment.

Mr. COX. I may say frankly to the gentleman, and I am not combating the argument he makes that economy is desirable and is one of the major purposes of the bill, the committee amendment that has just been adopted, in effect, states that the public interest demands economy and that it can be effectuated by carrying out the purposes of the bill. The gentleman's amendment may have suggested the amendment offered by the committee.

Mr. ROBERTSON. That was all I wanted—to send a message to the people of this Nation that this Congress, although we know we cannot immediately balance the Budget, recognizes the danger of continued deficit financing [applause], and that in our hearts we seek to correct and change that trend, recognizing what Robert Browning said that "man's reach should exceed his grasp or what's a heaven for." We reach out for a balanced Budget, we cannot get it now, but we want the business leaders of this Nation to know that and to know that we will not sit here and continue to appropriate any unnecessary money leading, eventually, to inflation or possible repudiation of debts.

I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman, to withdraw my amendment, believing its purposes have been accomplished.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. CROSSER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 11, strike out "or such functions thereof."

Mr. CROSSER. Mr. Chairman, if this amendment should be adopted, I hand to the Clerk a paper containing two other amendments for the purpose of making the bill consistent. These amendments have been prepared by the legislative drafting service. They raise the same question that I brought to the attention of the Committee a year ago when the so-called reorganization bill was before the House.

I think every one will agree that almost universally the people are under the impression, when they talk about reorganization, that what is proposed is to merge one board or commission with another or, perhaps, do away with a board altogether in order to save the expense involved in the payment of these boards. When, however, the bill proposes to authorize the abolition of functions, that is an entirely different thing. The functions are the provisions of law stating what is to be done by the agency. For instance, take the irrigation system. The agency discharges the functions, but the functions are the statutory requirements for the irrigating of the land.

This bill proposes to authorize one person to abolish any of these functions.

This is not a question of personalities. I think everyone here knows that I never resort to that sort of thing. We should dispose of this matter on the basis of principle.

The Congress of the United States by the Constitution was made the legislative authority. All legislative powers, says the Constitution, are vested in the Congress of the United States, the exact language being, "All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States."

This was done deliberately, and for a very definite reason. Lawmaking is policy declaration, and the followers of Jefferson who were very influential in that Convention, believing thoroughly in democracy, felt that the only safe way to have policy declared is by Representatives, that is, Members of Congress, elected by the people from their own neighborhoods.

So, the legislative power, the policy-declaring power, was placed in Congress, as I think it should have been placed. When we propose by this blanket authority to make possible the abolition of the functions of more than 130 executive agencies, we are, in my opinion, if we make the proposal law, violating the spirit of our institutions. Under the language of the bill, as it is now framed, an order proposing the abolition of the law providing for irrigation of arid lands, for the abolition of the Reclamation Service, for the abolition of railroad retirement system, which was shorn since, or for the abolition of the Railroad Mediation Board, provided for several years ago could be issued.

All these institutions might not only have their boards abolished but the provisions of law in regard to reclamation projects, the provisions of law for the payment of pensions, and the provisions of law for the settlement of railroad labor disputes could be all abolished by orders issued under the terms of this bill. I think that is not what was intended by the term "reorganization." What was in the mind of almost everybody and what I am sure is in the minds of the people today is that if here and there a board is not necessary, a board whose functions could be performed by some other board, then do away with the unnecessary board and to let the functions be performed by the other board which may be qualified for the work. It was not expected by the people of the country that we authorize someone to abolish the substantive law, the provisions of law for carrying out reclamation projects, for the payment of railroad workers' pensions, or for the settlement of labor disputes.

Mr. LEA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CROSSER. Yes.

Mr. LEA. Does the gentleman understand that the enactment of this measure would authorize the abolition of the Mediation Board?

Mr. CROSSER. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment. I dislike to find myself in disagreement with my long-time and devoted friend, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Crosser]. He is not only one of the most splendid gentlemen I have ever known but one of the best balanced legislators with whom I have served. I do not know even now that the gentleman and I are very far apart. I think his fears as to what might result under the language of the bill, in the event of its adoption, are not well founded. If this language were stricken out, we could have no coordination of the different departments, which is most necessary; we could have no elimination of duplications, which we know to be most necessary; and, therefore, there could be brought about no economy, which I am sure the membership of this House puts first in the purposes of the act.

Mr. CROSSER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. COX. Yes.

Mr. CROSSER. I do not think my good friend disputes for a single minute that definite provisions of law for the doing of certain things could be provisionally abolished by the bill as it stands.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, our dispute probably grows out of a difference of understanding as to the meaning of the word "function." "Function," Mr. Chairman, has been defined as a special activity, a duty, a course of action, which pertains to office. It is said to be a power, an activity, doing a performance of work, and so forth. In Bouvier's Law Dictionary "function" is defined in the language of the court in the case of State against Hyde, an Indiana case, as being office, duty, fulfillment of a definite end, or set of ends, by the correct adjustment of means, the occupation of an office by the performance of its duty-the officer is said to be fulfilling his function.

On Monday last the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN], in the very extraordinary statement he made to the House, cataloged a great many duplications in the work being done by a multiplicity of agencies of the Government. For instance, he developed the fact that there are at least at this time 29 agencies concerned with the lending activities of the Government, that there are 34 agencies concerned with the acquisition of land for public purposes, that there are 16 agencies engaged in wildlife preservation, and so forth, 10 agencies concerned with Government construction, 9 agencies with credit and finance, 10 agencies with materials of construction; that there are more than 100 information and publication offices in Washington, besides the Library of Congress; and he further developed the fact that there are 28 agencies in this Government handling welfare matters, 14 agencies handling forestry matters, and 65 agencies gathering statistics.

I am sure, Mr. Chairman, that we are all prepared to admit that there are too many of these agencies doing work of a similar character and that there is far too much duplication. Certainly any reorganization of the executive departments must take into consideration this condition, and by observing the instructions that are set out in this bill will be compelled to abolish certain work of certain agencies in order that the purposes of the bill may be brought about.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment. I concur in everything that the proponent of this amendment, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. CROSSER] has said. I call to the attention of my colleagues on the Democratic side as well as on the Republican side the fact that we are not going to restore business confidence by merely passing resolutions or amendments such as we passed a few moments ago, declaring that we are in favor of economy and that we must reduce the expenditures of government.

Our New Deal friends passed resolutions favoring and promising a 25-percent reduction in the cost of government in 1932 and rode into office on those promises. That was prior to the date of the 1932 election. After that election the record shows that our New Deal friends were long on promises and short on performance. They increased the cost of government more than 100 percent instead of reducing it 25 percent, as promised when fishing for votes. I call upon my Republican colleagues who during the last campaign have denounced and condemned the drunken New Deal spending spree to also act as well as talk, and stop trying to outdo our New Deal brethren in raiding the taxpayers' Treasury. We must restore business confidence. Actions and not demagogic talk will restore such confidence. I suggest that all crackpot, half-baked, Socialist-minded New Deal self-righteous Scribes and Pharisees who have been unfairly denouncing and attacking private business and hitting it below the belt be removed from public service and muzzled. Get government out of subsidized competition in private fields of business endeavor and encourage private business to expand.

Encourage expansion and increase of private business activities by removing the shackles and straitjackets of the Socialist conceptions of government imported direct from Moscow by our New Deal "brain trusters." Reduce the cost of Government and stop talking about the necessity of such reductions while trying to spend our way into prosperity.

We will then be able to furnish jobs to more than 12,-000,000 of our people who today cannot find a job after more than 6 years of our New Deal administration.

If we continue to follow the road and the pace we have been traveling for the past 6 years Uncle Sam will soon be bankrupt. We will have inflation with resulting chaos, misery, suffering, and distress such as this generation has never experienced. We cannot prevent America from going into bankruptcy with resulting inflation and perhaps civil war by passing resolutions pledging economy, or amendments to legislation stating that economy is necessary. We must act as well as talk, my friends. I ask that the New Deal get down to business. You have control of the appropriating branch of the Government as well as the administrative branch. Practice what you preach and you will help restore business confidence. If you continue your unbridled expenditures and half-baked Moscow Socialist imported theories of government and attacks on legitimate private business much longer, the time will soon be here when we will not have private business to furnish jobs for our people and private business will be unable to produce the tax dollars so that our New Deal spendthrifts can furnish jobs on public pay rolls. [Applause.]

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

Mr. CROSSER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. I simply want to say that what the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox] has said is practically what I claim-namely, that what he calls "duties" are "functions."

I want to call attention to the meaning of the word "abolish," according to Webster's Dictionary. It is: "To do away with wholly; to annul; to make void; said of laws governments, etc."

If you do away with the function of providing for the irrigation of arid lands, for instance, you are doing away with the provision of law put on the statute books to help agriculture. Lengthy committee work, long debate in the House, all requiring much effort and time, all would go for naught.

If two boards are doing the same thing in the same way, one of those boards could be abolished. But when you abolish a function, do not fool yourselves for a single minute that you are merely tinkering with boards. You are repealing laws.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CROSSER. I yield.
Mr. COCHRAN. Let us assume that the President transfers five agencies to one agency. Every one of the agencies he transferred, we will say, had a statistical division. If the President is deprived of abolishing the functions, he cannot abolish the functions performed in each of those divisions with reference to gathering statistics and put them into one statistical division.

Mr. CROSSER. If all five are gathering the same statistics, four boards could be abolished, leaving one to do the work. That, however, would not mean that you were repealing the law providing for the collection of statistics. If you were to abolish the functions of collecting statistics, no statistics could then be gathered. Under the terms of this bill you could repeal half the statutes of the United States. Do not be deceived for a minute in regard to the proposition.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. CROSSER) there were—ayes 109 and noes 116.

Mr. CROSSER. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chair appointed Mr. Crosser and Mr. Cochran to act as tellers.

The Committee again divided; and the tellers reported there were ayes 136 and noes 162.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Taber: On page 2, lines 17 to 19, inclusive, strike out all after the comma in line 17 and to the end of the section in line 19.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I have offered this amendment particularly to take away from the bill the declaration of incompetency on the part of the legislature. For my own part, I believe that our House of Representatives and our Senate are competent to prepare and pass any positive legislation, any direct legislation necessary to curtail unnecessary activities of the Government.

It has been said by the President several times that no economy can be accomplished by a reorganization bill. There is not any question that this bill, as it stands, without further amendment to section 4 and section 5 is not a bill to promote economy. I want to see it made a bill to promote economy and efficiency in government. One of the worst things in the bill is section 5. I want to call to your attention at this time a provision in the Constitution. It is part of section 7 of article I, appearing on page 36 of the Manual:

Every order, resolution, or vote to which the concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives may be necessary (except on a question of adjournment) shall be presented to the Presi-dent of the United States; and before the same shall take effect, shall be approved by him.

Under that provision, in my opinion, a resolution disproving any act of the President under section 4 of this bill would have to go over a veto in order to become effective and require a two-thirds vote to prevent it.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield at that point?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. COX. I wonder if the gentleman would mind disclosing the basis for that opinion.

Mr. TABER. The language of the Constitution itself which appears in section 7, at page 36, of the Manual.

Mr. COX. Do I understand the gentleman to say that the Congress cannot constitutionally attach a condition to the grant of vacating whatever might be done by concurrent resolution of the two Houses?

Mr. TABER. I would not say that. I would say that it is not done in the language that has been provided here in this bill.

Mr. COX. What is there in the language of the bill that disturbs the gentleman on that particular point?

Mr. TABER. Whether or not a resolution of both Houses, regardless of the approval of the President of the resolution. could result in the defeat of a reorganization proposal is disputable; but whether it can be done in the particular language of this bill is not disputable, in my opinion.

Mr. COX. The gentleman means in the particular case? Mr. TABER. Where we have attempted to do it, because we have not set forth in this bill any provision that the concurrent resolution shall operate as a veto regardless of the approval of the President.

Mr. COX. Is not the gentleman mistaken about that? Does not the bill very clearly state that in the event of dissatisfaction on the part of the two Houses that they may vacate the finding of the President by concurrent resolution?

Mr. TABER. It says that specifically. This provision of the Constitution, as I read it, would require the submission of such a resolution to the President for his approval.

Mr. COX. Not at all, not at all. In other words, Congress has the constitutional power to attach a condition very much more limited and restricted than the condition which is here provided.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. COX. May I proceed?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. COX. The gentleman is evidently disturbed because of an opinion rendered by Attorney General Mitchell in 1932 when Congress was considering a reorganization bill which delegated power to the then President to do the things provided in the bill and in addition thereto to make an Executive order. The Attorney General in that case said in effect that it was not within the power of the Congress either by simple or concurrent resolution to repeal a statute; which, of course, was sound to the extent that he went in that particular statement of the case. But to say that the Congress cannot attach the condition that it is within the power of either House to vacate whatever is done under the grant is clearly unsound. The condition is a part of the legislation.

Mr. TABER. There is absolutely nothing in this bill that says that such a proposed reorganization would be vetoed by a resolution passed by both Houses of Congress without the President's approval. Perhaps we might be allowed to attach that kind of condition to the bill if it can be done in that particular way. I can find nothing in the bill that says that. I may be mistaken.

Mr. COX. If the gentleman will yield right there, I would be glad to hear what the gentleman has to say as to this provision of the bill:

SEC. 5. The reorganizations specified in the plan shall take effect

(a) Upon the expiration of 60 calendar days after the date on which the plan is transmitted to the Congress, but only if during such 60-day period there has not been passed by the two Houses a concurrent resolution stating in substance that the Congress does not favor the reorganization plan.

In the opinion of the gentleman does this not mean that Congress may, by concurrent resolution, vacate what is done?

Mr. TABER. It does not meet my objection. It does not mean that to me. The resolution, under the Constitution, would have to be submitted to the President for his approval.

Mr. COX. Not at all, sir.

Mr. TABER. If the provision stated that passage of the resolution without the approval of the President—
Mr. COX. That is certainly the intention of the committee reporting and sponsoring the bill.

Mr. TABER. But it does not say that.

Mr. COX. And I think it is the intention of the House. There is no objection to a commitment being made on that proposition, none whatever. That is exactly what the language says.

Mr. TABER. Frankly, I do not believe it says so in such a way as to be effective. I would not want to pass on the question of whether it could be effective otherwise; but I am satisfied that the present language does not make the reservation effective.

Mr. COX. A concurrent resolution is simply the joint action of the two Houses; and the bill states that the plan may be upset through the joint action of the two Houses expressed through a concurrent resolution. That is all it states.

Mr. TABER. A concurrent resolution to be effective except with reference to the question of adjournment has to be submitted to the President for his approval, under this section of the Constitution, and if he shall veto the resolution to stop a proposed reorganization, a two-thirds vote of both the House and Senate would be required.

Mr. COX. The language of the bill simply states that the plan may be upset by action that falls short of legislation. That is what the language states.

Mr. TABER. Frankly, I do not think the language in the bill is broad enough to support that proposition.

Mr. COX. The gentleman has never heard of a concurrent resolution having been submitted to the President, has he?

Mr. TABER. If it relates to legislation, and all of these things very evidently relate to legislation, the note here states:

Although the requirement of the Constitution seems specific, the practice of the Congress has been to present to the President for approval only such concurrent resolutions as are legislative in effect.

This resolution, disapproving of the reorganization plan, would be legislative in effect.

Mr. COX. The Congress provides in the instant case what it may do by way of upsetting the plan, as in the Tobacco Inspection case. In that case the Court held that the condition attached to the grant was valid, so in the instant case it must hold that the condition here attached is valid.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 additional minute.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER]?

There was no objection.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, in that case there was a specific reservation, while here there is a specific reservation that must be construed under the terms of the Constitution and the practice in favor of the submission of a concurrent resolution to the President and the requirement that it be passed by a two-thirds vote over his veto.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, the question which the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber] and the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox] have just been debating presents a very interesting question to the House for consideration.

This bill provides (sec. 5 (a)) that any plan of reorganization submitted by the President shall take effect upon the expiration of 60 calendar days after the date on which the plan is transmitted to the Congress, unless during such 60-day period both Houses of Congress pass a concurrent resolution stating in substance that Congress does not favor the reorganization plan. Under this provision the enactment of a concurrent resolution gives negative effect to the plan of the President; the failure to pass a concurrent resolution presumes to give positive effect to such plan.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] has reviewed the constitutional provisions with respect to the submission of all bills, resolutions, orders, or votes to the President for signature which have legislative effect, so I will not repeat them.

This bill, suffice it to say, reverses the process by which legislation must be passed under the Constitution.

Under the practice of Congress concurrent resolutions concern only intracongressional functions and do not have the effect of law. For this reason it has not been the universal practice to submit them to the President for signature; but whether a document considered by the Congress is a concurrent resolution, a joint resolution, an order, or a bill, does not depend upon the designation of such a document but rather upon whether it contains matter which is properly to be regarded as legislative in its character and effect.

In this connection the precedents and practices are embodied in a report from the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, dated January 27, 1897, which that committee had been directed to make on the subject of joint and concurrent resolutions and their approval by the President. The report declared that concurrent resolutions have uniformly been regarded by all the departments of the Government as matters peculiarly within the province of the Congress alone. They have never embraced legislative provisions proper and, hence, have never been deemed to require executive approval. In the instant case, however, we have an entirely different situation. It is sought to give negative legislative effect to a supposedly otherwise valid program by the enactment of a concurrent resolution.

Mr. Chairman, I want to read for the benefit of the House the finding of the Judiciary Committee made back in 1897, which clearly states this principle. It was stated at that time:

We conclude this branch of the subject by deciding the general question submitted to us, to wit, "whether concurrent resolutions are required to be submitted to the President of the United States," must depend not upon their mere form but upon the fact whether they contain matter which is properly to be regarded as legislative in its character and effect. If they do, they must be presented for his approval; otherwise they need not be. In other words, we hold that the clause in the Constitution which declares that every order, resolution, or vote must be presented to the President, to "which the concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives may be necessary," refers to the necessity occasioned by the requirement of the other provisions of the Constitution, whereby every exercise of "legislative powers" involves the concurrence of the two Houses; and every resolution not so requiring such concurrent action, to wit, not involving the exercise of legislative powers, need not be presented to the President. In brief, the nature or substance of the resolution, and not its form, controls the question of its disposition.

In keeping with the Constitution, this report embodies the interpretations which have been put upon the specific provisions of the Constitution in no uncertain language. A concurrent resolution, therefore, which gives either positive or negative legislative effect to any action, comes within the category of those orders, resolutions, or bills mentioned in the Constitution, and must be presented to the President for approval. Any other procedure would not be in conformity with the Constitution. To negative the action of the President in case of a veto of the concurrent resolution provided in the bill, which, of course, would follow as a natural consequence, a mere 33 Members of the Senate might nullify the expressed will of the unanimous action of the House.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, if I understand the statement just made, it is that the gentleman entertains the opinion that under the language of the pending bill nothing short of legislation could vacate the action of the President in submitting a plan. I would like to have the gentleman indicate if that is the meaning of what he has said? In other words, is it the opinion of the gentleman that under the language of the bill we have before us, nothing less than legislation would suffice in setting aside, or an attempt to set aside, any plan of reorganization that might be submitted by the President?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Section 5 of the bill provides in substance that this plan of the President shall become the law of the land unless we take negative action.

Mr. COX. Very true.

Mr. WOLCOTT. That is positive action.

Mr. COX. That is correct.

Mr. WOLCOTT. If it does not become the law of the land, it necessitates negative action on the part of the Congress and the negative action on the part of the Congress is the concurrent resolution.

Mr. COX. That is true.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Whether the concurrent resolution has a positive or negative effect does not detract from its legislative effect. We virtually—I should not use the term "repeal" in this instance because the law has not taken effect, but it nullifies the otherwise valid acts of the President, which we have delegated to him.

Two questions are involved here. One is whether we have the authority to reverse the process under the Constitution by which legislation is enacted. If we hold that this resolution is not negative in its legislative effect, then we must have to admit that we have delegated to the President the lawmaking power, which is equally unconstitutional.

Mr. COX. Is the gentleman taking the position that the condition which is here attached to the grant is ineffectual insofar as the power being employed by the Congress through concurrent resolution to vacate what might be done by the President is concerned? Is the gentleman taking that

Mr. WOLCOTT. I do take the position that if this concurrent resolution is not, as provided by the bill, presented to the President for his signature it has no force and effect whatever to negative the program of the President.

Mr. COX. A concurrent resolution is not law, and law cannot be repealed by such a resolution; but in this case the concurrent resolution is a part of the law.

Mr. WOLCOTT. It is the exercise of no power so far as its legislative effect is concerned. It merely establishes what we want done but it has no legislative effect.

Mr. COX. Let us see about that by consulting what has happened heretofore and what the Supreme Court has said in interpreting a measure very similar to the bill now before us.

Mr. WOLCOTT. May I anticipate that the gentleman is going to quote again the tobacco case?

Mr. COX. Yes, of course. Mr. WOLCOTT. May I in reply say to the gentleman we had set up machinery whereby individuals-not the people of the Government at large, for that measure had no control over the people at large-if they saw fit could cooperatively place certain restrictions upon themselves, but that was absolutely different from this matter.

Mr. COX. In other words, the exercise of a power, created under the act of either setting aside or nullifying in effect the application of a law which was conditioned upon referendum vote.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Not any more than a statement in the law that a man might come into court and waive his constitutional right to trial by jury. The same question is

Mr. COX. If I understand the gentleman, he takes the position that in an instance such as the case we have before us, presented by the pending bill, the Congress has the right to attach any condition it may see fit, which in this case is a condition subsequent, and that there must be some compliance with that condition, or substantial compliance with that condition, before the law becomes effective. Is that the position of the gentleman?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I understand the gentleman's point in that connection.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

Mr. COX. Now, let us see. The Court, in interpreting the Tobacco Inspection Act of 1935, said with respect to the provision that the Secretary might provide for the setting up of regulations of a certain character which could only become effective upon a vote taken of the growers directly affected under the law.

The Court said:

So far as growers of tobacco are concerned, the required referendum does not involve any delegation of legislative authority. Congress has merely placed a restriction upon its own regulation by withholding its operation as to a given market—

Quoting from the statute-

"unless two-thirds of the growers voting favor it." Similar conditions are frequently found in police regulations.

So in the case before us we provide a condition which empowers the Congress through joint action to do with respect to the pending bill what was provided might be done by the growers of tobacco under the inspection act of 1935.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania. Mr. DITTER. May I direct the attention of the gentleman from Georgia to the letter from the President last year which was labeled the letter of denial of dictatorship, and may I quote from that letter this opinion of the President:

But there are two cogent reasons why the bill should go through as it is now drawn. The first is the constitutional ques-tion involved in the passage of a concurrent resolution, which is only an expression of congressional sentiment. Such a resolution cannot repeal executive action taken in pursuance of a law.

Mr. COX. Very true. In the bill before us there is no provision for executive action. The action of the President under the bill is not executive and it is not legislative. He is the delegate of this Congress appointed to do the will of the Congress as expressed in the law.

Let me make this observation, and I certainly have no purpose to conceal from anyone any opinion I may have as to the power of Congress to attach conditions. In the instant case the Congress in the bill before us proposes to set up a condition whereby the two Houses through joint action can negative not an Executive order but a report made by the delegate of the Congress itself, acting as a ministerial agent.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield at that point?

Mr. COX. Now let me say this, just one more observation: It is clearly within the constitutional power of the Congress to attach even a more limited condition than is provided in the instant case, where provision is made for the two Houses acting through concurrent resolution to vacate a reorganization plan. Congress might constitutionally attach the condition that any plan submitted by the President, the agent of the Congress, as he is made in the bill before us, might be vacated, might be set aside, might be nullified, or might be entirely extinguished by a simple resolution of a single House of the Congress.

Mr. DITTER. Now will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. Yes; I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. DITTER. Does the gentleman admit that we constitute the President the agent of the Congress?

Mr. COX. I certainly do.

Mr. DITTER. For legislative purposes?

Mr. COX. I do not, and there is consistency in all the holdings of the courts on the question, from the time of Chief Justice Marshall.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia). The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the

Mr. Chairman, there is an old adage which says, "You may not believe all that you hear, but you can repeat it."

I wished to take the floor rather early and before the details of the bill were reached. It is not a question of privilege, because I am not greatly disturbed, but my constituents have been fed up in the last 24 hours with the statement that I would not vote for any bill, or even for the Ten Commandments, if proposed by a Democrat. I am glad to say that I rose yesterday and indicated that I would vote for the Byrd bill if it were offered as a substitute.

The assurance was given to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Robertson] that the committee amendment just adopted would be just as effective as the language contained in the Byrd bill. I trust we may rely on this assurance of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox]. For the benefit of the newer Members of this House I may say that for 10 years I was on the majority side. I voted often with the minority and was not loaded down with honors from the Republicans, because I could not be a rubber stamp. I voted with the minority too often, probably. I even voted for the famous Goldsborough bill, which caused much annoyance among my friends, I can assure you. I voted for your wage and hour bill. Perhaps some of you do not think that was a real Democratic measure. When your President came into power in 1933 I voted for about everything he proposed during those first 6 months. Large numbers of Democrats ducked and would not support him when he attempted cuts on benefits to veterans. I supported him on the bonus veto and most of you Democrats ran out on him. Far more than you, during that period, did I support him. It was only when he began the spendthrift era that I withheld my approval.

I asked you to be generous with my statement when I declared that I did not trust the President to bring about any economy under this bill; but rather would he attempt to freeze all emergency measures into permanent agencies. Some gentlemen were so unfair as to simply repeat a portion of my remark "I did not trust the President." Just what meaning did they wish to convey? That I would not trust him with a $10 bill or a similar trust? What were you attempting to accomplish by such tactics?

Attacks of this kind, as far as I am concerned, do not do me any particular harm I think, but I want the newer Members of the House to understand that no matter what party may be in power, I am not to be a rubber stamp. Neither did I say that I would not support or vote for any reorganization bill. Those words were spoken by others without any authority whatever. If the limitations and the instructions with respect to economy, which the gentleman from Georgia now says are equal to the language of the Byrd bill, and with proper procedure with respect to affirmative action, are put into this bill, most of us will be glad to support the measure. Why the declaration that the Republicans would not support any reorganization bill?

Let me call your attention to the bill now under discussion. When this proposition for reorganization is finally presented by the President to the Congress for either affirmative or negative action, you will be forced to vote to accept or reject it without amendment of any sort. This bill as now presented is legislation by negative action. To illustrate: you might approve of a hanging but if you had to vote affirmatively you would hesitate. If you could simply avoid any action you might accomplish your desire without expression of approval or disapproval.

We want affirmative action by the Congress and we should preserve the integrity of the legislative branch of government. That is what the people desire.

I am sorry, indeed, that the attitude of the President last year so inflamed the public mind against any proposition he may advance in the matter of reorganization. Many have been led to believe that they were elected or defeated on that particular issue.

Do I need to enlarge on this further? I close as I began, "You need not believe all you hear, but you can repeat it." In that manner much harm can be done. No rejoinder to any attack here is interesting to the newspapers and it is useless to make one. An attack is always interesting. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that we have had a perfect example in the last 30 minutes to bear out the contention that hearings should have been held on this bill, and that further study should have been given to it before it was brought to the House. We saw two able gentlemen, one on either side of the aisle, both anxious to bring about reorganization, both anxious to have economy in Government, and they could not agree in 15 minutes' discussion as to what one section of the bill means. It bears out the contention that this bill should be sent back to the committee for further study.

I came on the floor of the House Monday morning with an absolutely open mind. I had just two thoughts in my mind in connection with this bill: First, that there are numerous boards and commissions that should be abolished or consolidated; and second, that the citizens of my district did not want the reorganization bill proposed in the last session of Congress. They do not at this time know the contents of this bill, and in that same connection reference has been made on the floor to editorial comment throughout the country. I went to the Library of Congress and looked up several of these editorials. Certainly these editorial writers are in favor of reorganization, but they did not discuss this bill, because at the time the editorials were written they had not seen the bill, and neither had we.

I listened attentively during the last 2 days and I listened for an hour to the chairman of this special committee as he reported his bill and explained its contents, and I regret, as one seeking information, that so much of that hour was devoted to an attack on the minority members of this special committee. In the 2 days that I have sat here I have not heard one good reason advanced by the proponents of this bill why we should not so write the bill that Congress can take positive rather than negative action on the recommendation of the proposals of the President. This Congress wants reorganization, the people of the United States want reorganization, and if the reorganization committee had been given time enough it could have ironed out the differences of opinion and brought a bill to this House that Congress could have united on and that the people would have approved. I cannot help asking the question, Why the rush? Why were no hearings held on this bill, and why was not a real effort made to write a bill that we could all approve? If I understand the debate I have heard on this floor it means just one thing. Let us assume that the President, after studying the departments of the Government decides on a program and recommends that program to the Congress, and let us assume that the program contains 10 proposals, 9 of them most desirable, something we all want, and 1 that we could not in all conscience approve. In that circumstance we would have to turn down nine good proposals simply to eliminate one that might be dangerous.

Very little has been said in the last 2 days about section 301 of the bill. Perhaps it is not important but it involves quite a sum of money. It provides for six assistants for the President at a salary of $10,000 a year each.

No Member of the Congress opposes giving the President all the help he needs, but we must bear in mind that a lot of these duties, responsibilities, and tasks that the President is now performing were taken from this Congress and from other agencies of the Government, and I predict that after 1940, no matter what party elects the President, a lot of those duties the President is now performing will be returned to the Congress. [Applause.]

In closing, just one thought. I listened attentatively, as I always do, to my good friend from Massachusetts [Mr. Mc-Cormack] in his reference to those who had said they had lost confidence in the President. I cannot feel that there is anything disgraceful about that. There is nothing personal in it, certainly, and I say, with all sincerity, that many people of my district have lost confidence in the President, and have lost confidence in the New Deal, and they are looking to this Congress to take back the prerogatives we have turned over to the Chief Executive. Without indulging in personalities, and with the highest respect, personally, for the man who is President of the United States, I say the American people have lost confidence in this administration. [Applause.]

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Jenkins of Ohio: Page 2, beginning in line 15, strike out down through line 19.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I have offered this amendment because I am very much interested in this matter that I wish to have stricken out. We have had some very learned discussion with reference to this subsection (b), and it leaves me, as it were, out on a limb because this discussion has not been clarifying. All this discussion has indicated what this subsection does not do. I should like to find out what it does do. I maintain from my reading of it that it does not do anything that is absolutely necessary to make the bill efficient, if it is ever going to be efficient. I ask the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox], in the first place, what subsection (a) does the language refer to in this language that I move to strike out.

Mr. COX. It refers to (a) in section 1.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. If it refers to subsection (a) in section 1, then there is little wonder that all of this learned discussion has not been especially enlightening for it referred to subsection (a) over in section 5.

Mr. COX. Subsection (a) contains everything down through line 14 on page 2, does it not?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. That is what I maintain, too. Now, what does the gentleman think about this? Why cannot that whole section be stricken out? What does it do?

Mr. COX. That section is retained there for the purpose of supporting the constitutionality of the act. The Congress is here setting up its reason why an agent is being appointed to do the work which the Congress has not the facilities to do. In other words, all of the detail work, all of the investigating, all of the fact-finding and filling in all the details which the Congress is clearly not in a position to do.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. It strikes me yet, and I think I am absolutely right in my position, that this section does not do anything in the world toward making this law a constitutional act. I took that position yesterday and I take it now.

Mr. COX. The bill sets up justification for the law.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Yes; but that is not necessary.

Mr. COX. And is most essential to its validity.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. It is not necessary to set up explanatory language to make an act constitutional. If it has any constitutionality it gets it on its own wording.

Mr. COX. The gentleman is in error about that. You will find a statement of policy set out in the majority of the major proposals that come to this House, and they are put in for the express purpose of supporting the legality of the action taken by the Congress on the subject matter.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I maintain that this subsection (b) is not necessary to do but one thing. It is employed to set out in clear language that the Congress has surrendered. It sets it out so that the Supreme Court, should it be called upon to pass upon it, would have a more direct invitation to say that the Congress has abdicated its legislative right and power.

Mr. COX. Let me ask the gentleman this question.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Just wait until I make my statement.

I repeat, at the expense of being tedious, that this section is not necessary. If there is any merit to this bill the language of the bill should be sufficient without this explanatory language. If the constitutionality of subsection (a) in section 5 is safe and it will stand up, this language that I am asking to strike does not in any way strengthen it. It does no more than say that we are surrendering. We are giving up our authority to the President to do something. It is for no other purpose than that the Supreme Court may say, when it comes to construe this act, "Well, here is where the Congress itself said that it surrendered. The Congress knew what it was doing. It said that the President can do this work more efficiently than they can do it. Consequently, they are surrendering to him."

Of course, we know that without putting it into this statute. Everybody knows that we are surrendering. That is the reason I am opposed to the bill, because we are surrendering our legislative authority. All this is merely a recitation of our abject surrender. I am ashamed of this admission, and although I am going to vote against this bill, I want this language to be stricken so that there will be no open admission of our impotency.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield fur-

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Of course, the membership of this House, if interested in the setting up of a law that will stand the test in the courts, will not support the amendment to strike this provision of the act. The language of the section does no more than state a fact. That is, that the purposes specified may be accomplished in great measure by proceeding immediately, under the provisions of the title, and can be accomplished more speedily thereby than by the enactment of specific legislation.

There are literally hundreds of these agencies that are sought to be dealt with under the law. Is it seriously contended that the House, dealing with each one specifically, by specific acts, can proceed more rapidly and more effectively than would be possible under this bill, with the President acting as the ministerial agent of the Congress?

I submit, Mr. Chairman, that the section simply sets up the reason for the law and that if stricken it is doubtful if the act could withstand a test in the courts on the ground of its constitutionality.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. Yes; I yield to my friend.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Is not the real purpose of this subsection to take the place of those long oratorical preambles that marked the introduction of prior legislation brought up from the White House? Does it not have the same purpose, exactly, as a preamble and has it not been held repeatedly that a recitation in a preamble has no legalistic effect? It is not a part of the law?

Mr. COX. This sets up the reason why the Congress is delegating the power to do work which the agent is best able to do. A tremendous amount of detail is required in reorganization, and this detail Congress cannot well supply, and therefore has seen fit to delegate to the President.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I yield.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Does not a similar provision obtain in the Securities and Exchange Act, the Utilities Act, and all legislation where similar authority has been conferred?

Mr. COX. Oh, and a great many others.

So, Mr. Chairman, summarizing, I say that the language is most essential to the validity of the measure, and I trust that the House will reject the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, after the confession of the gentleman from Georgia, I know now I shall have to oppose and vote against this bill unless it is drastically amended. The gentleman from Georgia admits that the language in question is a confession that the preponderant New Deal majorities in the Senate and the House are unable to perform their duties under the American Constitution. [Laughter.] You talk about delegating powers and duties to the President because they are too involved for Congress to perform. It appears from the provisions of this bill that you are delegating your duties and powers to six petty officials whose appointments at $10,000 a year are provided for in this bill. During the last 6 years your Democratic New Deal administration has been creating so many new Government bureaus and agencies that it takes a Philadelphia lawyer to find out how many we now have. I know that very few New Dealers, if any, could tell us the names and number of all of these New Deal Government creations.

If our New Deal President can effect savings by reorganizing and merging Government activities, why has he not made specific recommendations to Congress under the authority which he now has? Why has the New Deal controlled Congress failed to enact legislation or even consider legislation to effect such savings? The record indicates that our New Deal brethren, from the President down, do not practice economy; they only talk about the necessity of and promise economy. You talk about and promise savings by eliminating and merging Government bureaus and agencies, while the record indicates you expend and multiply said bureaus and agencies. The American people want and are entitled to something more than talk and promises. They expect Congress to practice as well as preach. We should end the drunken orgy of spending by the New Deal crackpots, brain trusters, and nitwits who are on the Federal administrative pay roll. We should stop using the taxpayers' pocketbooks as guinea pigs in the laboratory of New Deal state socialism imported direct from Moscow. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn.

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment. The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 2. When used in this title, the term "executive agency" means any executive department, commission, independent establishment, corporation owned or controlled by the United States, board, bureau, division, service, office, authority, or administration, in the executive branch of the Government.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Wadsworth: Page 2, line 25, insert "For the purposes of this title the Botanic Garden shall be deemed an executive agency."

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the amendment, but I reserve the point of order. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina reserves a point of order against the amendment.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I recognize the courtesy extended to me by the gentleman from North Carolina. He extended it to me, of course, in order that I may make my seventeenth desperate attempt, directly or indirectly, to divorce the Botanic Garden from the Congress of the United States.

Ever since 1915 I have asked upon what I supposed were appropriate occasions why it is the Congress of the United States is running a greenhouse. I have never received a satisfactory answer. This amendment, if drawn properly and if admitted to be in order, would authorize the President to regard the Botanic Garden as a football which could be kicked into the executive department, where it belongs. I believe that the Congress, Mr. Chairman, should perform legislative functions, not horticultural. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New York withdraw the amendment?

Mr. WADSWORTH. No; this is a desperate matter.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from North Carolina insist upon his point of order?

Mr. WARREN. I do.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I am really in sympathy with the object of the gentleman from New York; but this bill, of course, is a bill to reorganize the executive agencies of the Government. The Botanic Garden is a part of the legislative establishment. I make the point of order that the amendment is not germane to the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair feels that it is a very close and delicate question. [Laughter.] The Chair feels constrained to take the position stated by the gentleman from North Carolina, that the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York does not come within the purview of the section or the bill.

The point of order, therefore, is sustained.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 3. No reorganization plan under section 4 shall provide—
(a) For the abolition or transfer of an executive department or all the functions thereof:

all the functions thereof;

(b) In the case of the following executive agencies, for the transfer, consolidation, or abolition of the whole or any part of such agency or of its head, or of all or any of the functions of such agency or of its head, except the function of preparing estimates of appropriations: Civil Service Commission, Coast Guard, Engineer Corps of the United States Army, Federal Communications Commission, Federal Power Commission, Federal Trade Commission, General Accounting Office, Interstate Commerce Commission, National Bituminous Coal Commission, National Labor Relations Board, Securities and Exchange Commission, United States Board of Tax Appeals, United States Employees' Compensation Commission, United States Maritime Commission, United States Tariff Commission, or Veterans' Administration; or sion, or Veterans' Administration; or

(c) For changing the name of any executive department or the title of its head, or for designating any executive agency as "De-partment" or its head as "Secretary."

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I offer a committee amend-

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment offered by Mr. Warren: At page 3, lines 8 and 9, strike out the comma and the words "except the function of preparing estimates of appropriations."

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, this is the amendment I stated on Monday that I would offer, and this is the lan-guage that we stated we would be glad to strike from the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Luplow: On page 3, line 4, after the word "thereof" and before the semicolon, insert the following: "or for the establishment of any new executive department."

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, this is acceptable to the committee

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Chairman, I do not think this amendment requires any discussion. It is a clarifying amendment and was explained in general debate. I believe the amendment is acceptable to the committee.

Mr. COCHRAN. There is no objection from the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. RANKIN: On page 3, line 18, after the word "Commission", insert the words "the Rural Electrifica-tion Administration."

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, I have offered this amendment to exempt from the provisions of this bill the Rural Electrification Administration. As I explained yesterday, there is absolutely no reason for not doing so.

The Rural Electrification Administration is setting an example for economy in overhead expenditures that the other governmental agencies might well follow. In addition to that. it is doing its job well. You are not going to increase efficiency and you are not going to promote economy by disturbing the R. E. A. at this time. Unless exempted, this agency will be left in a disturbed condition and in a state of uncertainty for the next few months, which will have an effect from one end of the country to the other.

I pointed out yesterday that it has already been instrumental in the building of approximately 200,000 miles of rural power lines to serve approximately two and a half million people in the rural sections who never would have received electricity otherwise. Someone will say, "Oh, this is left up to the President." My understanding is that the President never asked that the Rural Electrification Administration be included; besides, we know that a board will do this reorganizing; and for this reason, and for the further reason the Rural Electrification Administration is functioning properly now, I ask that my amendment be adopted.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. RANKIN. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. Does the gentleman fear that the President would under the plan proposed here do away with the T. V. A. under this bill?

Mr. RANKIN. No; I am not as afraid of the President as far as the T. V. A. is concerned as I am of the gentleman from Indiana. The T. V. A. has proved its worth to the American people.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania. Mr. RICH. Is it not possible that the President might consolidate this bureau with some of the other bureaus?

Mr. RANKIN. I am not afraid of the President of the United States. I am not offering the amendment to embarrass the President in any way, and it will not embarrass him. I think if I had taken the time and had gone to him I could have got him to recommend that the amendment be agreed to or that the R. E. A. be exempted.

I am appealing to the membership of the House to exempt this agency, as the Labor Relations Board, the Coal Commission, and many other organizations have been exempted. some of which never have done and never will do as much good for the American farmers as has the Rural Electrification Administration. I was in hope the gentleman from North Carolina would accept my amendment and not take up the time of the House.

Mr. MOTT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield to the gentleman from Oregon.

Mr. MOTT. If the gentleman is not worried or afraid that the President may do something in regard to rural electrification, then why does he want it exempted?

Mr. RANKIN. I thought I explained that to the gentleman a moment ago.

Mr. MOTT. I listened, but I have not heard anything

Mr. RANKIN. I will tell the gentleman. I do not say it will convince the gentleman, because that is an awfully hard thing for a Democrat to do sometimes.

Mr. MOTT. The gentleman from Mississippi is very convincing at times.

Mr. RANKIN. Here are my reasons: In the first place, this reorganization will go on from month to month. The Rural Electrification Administration is functioning as well as it possibly can. The uncertainty will leave them in a disturbed state, which will have an effect on the efficiency of the organization and the promotion of rural electrification in the meantime. There is no reason, in my opinion, for it being in the bill, and for this reason I ask that it be exempted.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania. Mr. RICH. The gentleman said that the T. V. A. was taking care of itself. What he meant to say was that the taxpayers of the various districts of this country were taking care of the T. V. A., which is losing other people's money.

Mr. RANKIN. What I am trying to tell the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich] is that the T.V. A. is taking care of his constituents by forcing down their electric light and power rates.

Mr. RICH. How is it forcing the rates down in Pennsylvania? They have low rates in Mississippi where the gentleman lives, but our fellows back in Pennsylvania have to pay the bills.

Mr. RANKIN. Oh, no; we have reduced rates to the people of Pennsylvania by more than $40,000,000 a year.

Mr. RICH. The gentleman is not doing anything for our people, and with all this hub-bub it is wrong.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Rankin].

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Mississippi is so appealing and ingratiating that I hate very much to oppose his amendment. He says he cannot see a single reason why his amendment should not be adopted. There are exactly 270 reasons why it should not be adopted. Once you let down the floodgates and let every bureau, board, and administration come under the exemptions provided in this bill, then you have nothing whatever left and nothing to be performed by the President.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WARREN. I am getting ready to compliment the gentleman now.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN] has made a Nation-wide reputation on his study of the power question and related problems. This particular board or administration is very dear to his heart. I may also say, as he has well expressed it, this matter is also very dear and near to the heart of the President of the United States who formerly recommended legislation on this subject. It is inconceivable to me that the President with the authority granted only to him will set out to destroy or impair the efficiency of an agency that is so near to him. Once we adopt this amendment, or other similar amendments which will follow, then we simply open up the whole proposition, and I therefore ask that the amendment be defeated.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WARREN. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. RANKIN. That logic carried to its ultimate conclusion would mean that you have opened the floodgates already when these other agencies were exempted.

Mr. WARREN. No; that does not hold true. I stated on Monday that personally I think we have too many exemptions in this bill; but most of these exemptions, in fact two-thirds of them, are the so-called quasi-legislative agencies of the Government. Certainly the Rural Electrification Administration could in nowise be termed a quasi-legislative agency.

Mr. RANKIN. These are not all quasi-legislative agencies.
Mr. WARREN. I did not say all; I said about two-thirds, but we have reasons for the others which I will be glad to give.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Rankin) there were—ayes 54, noes 89.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were refused.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read, as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. RANDOLPH: On page 3, line 7, after the word "appropriations", insert "Civil Aeronautics Authority."

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Chairman, I rise with some trepidation due to the fact that the amendment offered by my beloved friend, the gentleman from Mississippi, an amendment to add an exemption, has been defeated in this Committee. I have the desire very honestly to present to this Committee in the time allotted to me the reasons why I believe the Civil Aeronautics Authority should be exempted from the provisions of the bill.

We have on this floor today the very able chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, the gentleman from California [Mr. Leal. He remembers very well that the creation of the Civil Aeronautics Authority took place in the closing days of the last session of the Seventy-fifth Congress, early in the summer of last year. It was not until the last of October 1938, or a little more than 4 months ago, that the Civil Aeronautics Authoriy began to function. I believe it is absolutely wrong after such a short period of time for this Congress to in fact nullify that which we did in the last days of the Seventy-fifth Congress.

I call attention to the message which was sent by the President of the United States to the National Aviation Forum, which met in Washington, D. C., on February 20 and 21, and I ask you to listen carefully to these words. The President said:

Civil aviation is clearly recognized as the backlog of national defense in the Civil Aeronautics Act which set up the effective machinery for a comprehensive national policy with respect to the air.

These are the words sent 2 weeks ago by the President of the United States to the National Aviation Forum, and in them he reaffirms his belief in the provisions and purposes of the Civil Aeronautics Act. The President stated that "underlying the statute is the principle that the country's welfare in time of peace and its safety in time of war rests" on the stabilization of this new and great industry.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANDOLPH. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia. Mr. COX. Does the gentleman entertain any fears whatever about the President doing anything in carrying out the will of the Congress that would in any wise embarrass the authority to which the gentleman refers? There has not been any indication on the part of anyone connected with the Civil Aeronautics Authority indicating a desire to be exempted from the provisions of the law, has there?

Mr. RANDOLPH. I am pleased to answer the two questions of the gentleman. No official of the Civil Aeronautics Authority has approached me with reference to the amendment which I have introduced, and certainly I have no fear the President of the United States would take the action the gentleman suggests. However, I believe it is absolutely wrong for the Congress of the United States to march up the hill and then seem to turn about and march down the hill in just the short period of a few months' time, when the provisions and reasons for the new act were given the most careful consideration by the committee and then later by the House. Let us remember that we deal not only with civil aviation but with such aviation as it affects the national defense of this country. Civil aeronautics certainly is the backlog of any true national-defense program in the days that are to come. We must, during peacetime, promote and maintain civil aviation in all its important phases. Wartime supremacy in the air is certainly based on peacetime superiority in the air.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANDOLPH. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. MAY. The gentleman has referred to the fact that we are preparing to nullify what we did 4 months ago in setting up this authority. This proceeding does not nullify it or authorize anything to be done with it particularly. Further, the President recommended to the Congress only a few months ago that the Civil Aeronautics Authority be set up, and surely he has not changed his mind about it this soon.

Mr. RANDOLPH. That contention is no doubt true, but we do not know that and the gentleman, of course, does not know it.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANDOLPH. I yield.

Mr. COX. Of course the gentleman understands that under the bill the President is not authorized to abolish any activity or any agency except that which is made useless, and that would be in the form of a duplication as a result of coordination or consolidation.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I want also to call your attention to this communication of the President within the last 2 weeks, in which he states:

This new policy set up by the Congress views American aviation as a special problem requiring special treatment.

This Congress today should reaffirm by the adoption of my amendment what it did just a few months ago when it gave special treatment to civil aeronautics.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. RANDOLPH. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DONDERO. Does not the gentleman believe the fear he expresses might best be avoided by changing section 5 of this bill so that it will require affirmative action by both branches of the Congress before a plan is adopted that might disturb the Civil Aeronautics Authority? What is the gentleman's answer to that question?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANDOLPH. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Has not the gentleman considered the possibility that without the protection of this amendment a consolidation might abolish Langley Field as a National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics?

Mr. RANDOLPH. That could be taken into consideration.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. RANDOLPH. I yield to the gentleman from

Mr. NICHOLS. The gentleman has pointed out the national-defense angle of civil aviation. With reference to the question of the gentleman from Georgia as to whether or not the gentleman has any fear of the President tampering with the Civil Aeronautics Authority, is it not a fact that what the gentleman is most interested in is not the personnel of the Board or the peace of mind of the Board itself but rather the peace of mind of the aviation industry in the United States? The Board was set up because of the very unhealthy condition of the aviation industry, and if the industry has another case of hysteria about what might happen to it, then the industry itself is the one that would suffer if the gentleman's amendment is defeated, and not the Board.

Mr. RANDOLPH. The gentleman from Oklahoma makes a splendid contribution to the argument I trust I have brought to this committee. I say to you here today that I feel it is absolutely necessary that we put this amendment in the bill. President Roosevelt said further in the letter I have quoted—

That hardly another civil activity of our people bears such a direct and intimate relation to the national security as does civil aviation.

Let us, then, allow the Civil Aeronautics Authority to function with no doubt in any citizen's mind that a change might be made. [Applause.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I think the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. Randolph] has made the best argument that could possibly be made as to why his amendment should not be adopted. The gentleman knows, as I know, we would not have the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and the Congress of the United States would not have created it in its last session, if it had not been for the President of the United States. The gentleman has read to you the message of the President to the National Aviation Forum. Now, can anyone imagine that the President is going to abolish or cripple an agency of this character in which he himself is so greatly interested?

We all know the progress aviation is making. We all know the necessity for Government assistance. We all know the value that is going to come as a result of the Safety Board and the leadership of the Authority.

I say to the membership of this House that we do not want to fill up this bill with exemptions. The Civil Aeronautics Authority itself has never made a request upon the committee to be exempted, and I hope we can have confidence in the President, who is delegated to do the job, and that he can be trusted not to destroy that which he himself is more responsible for creating than any individual or any official of the Government. If the President can find a way to improve the administration of the act, I am sure he will do it. He is interested in aviation. Remember, he can, if he desires, add to the duties of the Authority, and I predict he will do it rather than in any way impede the progress that is being made.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in favor of the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Missouri has just stated a thing which I emphasized day before yesterday. He guarantees to the gentleman from West Virginia that Civil Aeronautics will not be disturbed. The President, of course, will not abolish his pets and he will, of course, try to destroy the old set-ups which do not respond so freely to him. This is just one of the things I pointed out to you as one of the reasons he should not have this power.

The gentleman from West Virginia is disturbed about what might happen to C. A. in which he is interested. The gentleman from Mississippi is disturbed about the R. E. A. We can all be disturbed about anything we have any particular interest in because the first effect of giving the President the power over all boards and commissions to consolidate or eliminate or do whatever he wants to do with them, is going to put them all at his feet. They will all bow down to him for 2 years. They will all eat out of his hand.

The gentleman from Missouri, the great chairman of this committee, has indicated the weakest thing about the whole proposition. Of course, the President would not hurt any of his own babies. I think everybody ought to be exempted in this bill except the different alphabetical set-ups and then we should let the President work on them all he wants to, after exempting everything else.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Yes, briefly.

Mr. MAY. The gentleman referred to the fact that these agencies might be at the President's feet eating out of his hand.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Yes: I think so.

Mr. MAY. What does the gentleman think he is going to have in his hand under the present set-up?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Power and intimidation.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. In a moment I will yield.

The distinguished Chairman of the Committee of the Whole twice yesterday referred to my statement that I had lost faith in the President. I did not say that I have lost faith in the President, but I do not have faith in his inclination to save money. A man who has added one-third to our bureaucracy is naturally not qualified to reorganize it.

I do not know any better way to express it than to draw a parallel with the parable of the prodigal son. The prodigal son took his portion of the estate and wasted his substance. He came back and lived off the old folks, but the parable does not indicate anywhere that the prodigal son ever was successful afterward or that he ever did anything worth while. A leopard does not change his spots-a spender is a spender. He learned to spend with the money his parents gave him. and that is all he ever had to live on, and he spent that money riotously; the burden of the taxpayers and the sacrifice of his family never haunted him. His father did not ask him to reorganize his business. So how can a man who has done more to spend money than all the Republican Presidents since the Civil War be qualified to reorganize the Government in the interest of economy when, as the Chairman has just said, he will not hurt his babies-and his are one-third of them all? [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I yield.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Does not the gentleman recall that the President is the one who had something to do with aviation in connection with the mail contracts, and that he canceled them, and 12 Army boys went to their death?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I know that he canceled the contracts and used Army planes.

Mr. HOFFMAN. And 12 of them died.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I yield.

Mr. GIFFORD. The gentleman will have to take a little comfort, as I have done, in being joined with him in an expression of lack of faith. And it is a further comfort to know that we have as much faith as one-half of you, if we are well informed about the whisperings that are going on.

Mr. HOUSTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I yield.

Mr. HOUSTON. The gentleman from Kansas would be for this bill if we had a Republican President?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I would be for it with any other President. Democrat or Republican. [Laughter and applause.1

I think the amendment of the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. RANDOLPH] should be supported and everything else exempted from this bill. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I am going to support this amendment, and at the outset I say that I am sure that none of my friends who have worked so hard on this committee to bring out this bill will even think that I want to do anything to hurt the bill, because I do not. I appreciate the feeling of the gentleman that it might be dangerous to let the floodgates down by adopting an amendment which would exempt an additional department, but even in view of all that I say this. I have no interest in the Civil Aviation Authority as a board. I know no member of the Authority except one, and he was for a long time in the Post Office Department, and I knew him in that capacity and not in his capacity on the Board. I am not interested in the personnel of the Board. I am not interested in the longevity of the life of the Board, but I am interested, as I think every other citizen of the United States is interested, in the protection of an infant industry in this country which is rapidly growing to be a major industry, and which industry forms a strong right arm for the national defense of the country, and I am talking about aviation. Today civil aviation in the United States leads civil aviation of the entire world. We are behind Germany, we are behind many other of the great nations of the world in military and naval aviation, but we lead them all in civil aviation. If my friends of the committee are right. and I think they are, that the President has no intention of bothering this Board, then let us do the thing this year that we did last year when, upon the President's suggestion, we set up a board here for the purpose of making healthy an unhealthy industry.

The aviation industry in this country, up until the creation of the Civil Aviation Authority, was an industry that was losing money every year. It was losing money largely because those interested in it could not get the proper regulations and the proper rules which would allow them to get enough for the transportation of the United States mail and for the carrying of express and passengers to permit them to earn a profit on their investment. We have now got them in a healthy state. Millions and millions and millions of dollars have been invested in this industry, just as it was in the railroads years ago, from which there has not yet been taken a profit. Let us not hold over their heads a threat that perhaps the President of the United States might, if he wants to-though he does not want to, as we all agree-do something to give this industry a serious set-back. Let us take this threat away from them and let us allow this aviation industry, which today is in its swaddling clothes, to grow to a strong, healthy industry in the United States, with no threat of interference.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. Yes.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Is it not true that this is a semilegislative authority which we have created? More than a century ago American genius produced the sailing clipper and the flag of our land was borne proudly over the seven seas. Then came a decline. Is it not a fact that because of the obscurant national policy in respect to our place on the sea, our people watched American ships leave the oceans, and we were faced with humiliation, so that in 1914-18 we found we were deficient in shipping; and if we pursue a similar course in respect to aviation we may find ourselves deficient in the air. We stand in the air now where a hundred years ago we stood on the sea. But we must not remain idle. We are not unchallenged. Our clippers of the sky must not go down as did our earlier clippers of the sea.

Mr. NICHOLS. I am not sure that I can answer the gentleman in respect to this being a semilegislative authority; but I do point out, in answer to the last part of the distinguished gentleman's question, that if today we were forced into war our defenses in the air would probably have to depend upon the equipment in operation by private companies within the United States, who make up the civil aviation industry of the country today.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from West Virginia.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. RANDOLPH) there were-ayes 47, noes 123.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mrs. Rogers of Massachusetts: Page 3, line 17, after the word "Commission", insert "United States Employment Service."

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, this is a very simple amendment. It would merely insure that the United States Employment Service be kept in the Department of Labor. This amendment has the endorsement of labor, and it has the endorsement of the veterans' organizations, because labor and the veterans realize that if this service is taken from the Department of Labor, labor and the veterans who want work will not fare so well. It is the only placement bureau that the veterans have at the present time, the only department where the veteran can go and be sure of receiving assistance in getting a job. Twenty-five thousand placements have been made during the past year.

The United States Employment Service was created under a Republican administration that has been carried on as one of the best New Deal departments since the New Deal had its existence. There are 1,600 employment offices all over the United States, and the logical place for this service is under the Department of Labor. [Applause.]

The Department knows all the regulations regarding labor, the wage and hour law, the pay, and the hours of work. It also has very complete records about children, and if children are likely to be employed and should not be, and thereby interfere with the jobs of the older men and women, those children can be prevented from working, as a humane measure. It will also give employment to the older men and women. If it should be put under the Social Security, the benefit department of the Government, it would be an insurance matter and it would be easier to pay them unemployment wages than to pay them real wages. Everybody wants real wages for the people of the country.

The Department of Labor, with its statistical department, knows where all the industries and types of industries are located where employment can be obtained.

I sincerely hope the amendment will be adopted. Mrs. NORTON. Will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mrs. NORTON. I would suggest that the amendment is unnecessary because the unemployment service is now in the Department of Labor.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. This is not unemployment. This is known as the United States Employment Service. Unemployment compensation is a different thing.

Mrs. NORTON. Of course. It has to do with unemployment, however. The Employment Service is now in the Department of Labor and we intend to keep it there.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Yes, I know that; but this bill does not specify the Employment Service be kept in the Department of Labor. I feel those words should be in the bill in order to clarify it. There has been a great deal of agitation about this. There have been many rumors that it would be placed under Social Security. I have a great many letters concerning it. It does belong there.

Mrs. NORTON. May I say that there is now a bill before the House Labor Committee to retain the United States Employment Service in the Department of Labor? I hope action will soon be taken on this bill, and I am sure the lady from Massachusetts will support this legislation.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Yes, I shall be glad to; but my amendment would keep it in the Labor Department; also it would prevent its transfer to another department, and labor as well as the veterans want it kept where it is.

Mrs. NORTON. It is now in the Labor Department. The amendment is not necessary. I believe that this matter should be dealt with by separate legislation, because it is of very great importance. The Labor Committee recognizes its importance.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Massachusetts [Mrs. Rogers].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

I do this for the purpose of propounding a question to the committee, particularly to the gentleman from North Caroline [Mr. Warren]. My question is this: Does the phrase-ology respecting the Engineer Corps of the United States Army in section 3 under consideration, in the opinion of the gentleman, preclude, without question, the transfer of flood control and river and harbor works from the War Department and from the supervision of the Chief of Engineers?

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I will say that it most emphatically does. I do not believe there could be a Member of the House who is more interested in or who has greater respect and appreciation for the Corps of Engineers than I. I am the one who suggested, in the very first reorganization bill we ever had, that they should be completely exempted in every way, shape, and form. I believe that is in accord with the overwhelming wishes of the Congress.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. One other question: Does the term "functions" in this section, with respect to the Corps of Engineers of the United States Army, embrace or mean works and allied activities in rivers and harbors and flood-control improvements now being done by the Corps of Engineers and the Chief of Engineers in and under the supervision of the Department of War?

Mr. WARREN. It certainly does. I would also like to call to the attention of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Mansfield] my answer to the gentleman. I think I can answer it in just one sentence. If it is not a function, then they are not affected by this bill. If it is not a function, then it cannot possibly be affected by this bill, for this bill provides only for the transfer or abolition of functions. If it is a function, then it is specifically exempted under section 3.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Legislation for river and harbor and flood-control works provides for the construction of those works by the Chief of Engineers, under the supervision of the Department of War. Is the term "Chief of Engineers" synonymous with the word "head" in the section under consideration, so that the work would be done by the Corps of Engineers, under his supervision, in the Department of War, and could not be transferred, and would be exempt from the provisions of this act?

Mr. WARREN. Absolutely. I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that we cite that as a case in our report on this bill, which you will find on pages 5 and 6. We call specific attention to the very thing the gentleman is mentioning now.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. So that not only the intent but the phraseology used does exempt the flood-control, river and harbor works, and allied activities now done by the Corps of Engineers, under the Chief of Engineers, from the provisions of this bill?

Mr. WARREN. There is no question about it. [Here the gavel fell.]

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Van Zandt: On page 3, line 14, after the comma, insert "Railroad Retirement Board."

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Chairman, the fact that the Railroad Retirement Board is not included in the list of agencies to be exempt from transfer, consolidation, or abolition convinces me that some plan is afoot to make some change in this set-up which affects the welfare of the railroad men of this country.

As many of you know, in June 1937 Congress approved a bill which empowered the President to set up the present Railroad Retirement Board. Up until the present time 2,300,000 individuals employed by the railroads in the United States have paid into the retirement fund of the Board $102,000,000 as their share. Railroad management has matched this amount with $102,000,000 as its share. This makes a grand total of $204,000,000 that has been paid into the Government for the purpose of taking care of pensions or annuities to the railroad employees and to the survivors of deceased railroad workers.

The benefits of this agency of our Government have not cost the taxpayers of the United States one penny beyond a small administrative cost. We therefore consider the Rallroad Retirement Board as the baby of the railroaders themselves. We certainly would resent the President's shifting this Board in any way which would affect the operation of the requirements of the Railroad Retirement Act. For this reason I appeal to the membership of this committee to add to those agencies to be exempted from the provisions of this bill the Railroad Retirement Board so that it may continue to function for the benefit of the railroad employees.

Mr. PATRICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VAN ZANDT. I yield.

Mr. PATRICK. Has the gentleman as a Member of Congress had an appeal from the Railroad Retirement Board? Has a member of that Board communicated with the gentleman asking that they be excepted?

Mr. VAN ZANDT. They have not.

Mr. PATRICK. Are they apprehensive of this in any wav?

Mr. VAN ZANDT. I did not ask them. I speak for the railroad employees of this country and not for the Railroad Retirement Board.

Mr. PATRICK. Have the railroad men been appealing to the gentleman as a Congressman to intercede for them?

Mr. VAN ZANDT. They have contacted me. I have discussed this matter with a large number of railroad men in my home city of Altoona, Pa., one of the Nation's great railroad centers.

Mr. DONDERO. They have such confidence in the gentleman that they know he would intercede for them on the floor of the House without their communicating with him.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Exactly.

Mr. PATRICK. Have they been writing to the gentleman? Mr. VAN ZANDT. I did not write to them. I said they had contacted me in person.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, we all recall when the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Crosser] late one evening presented his bill creating the Railroad Retirement Board, and how the House passed it unanimously. I recall very well after that bill was passed the reception that was given to the gentleman from Ohiothe many nice speeches which referred to his long and honor-

With the passage of that bill, the Congress of the United States made an agreement with the railroad men of this country, and there is not a Member of Congress here who will ever live to see the day that this agreement will not be carried out. I say there is absolutely no danger of seeing that act repealed. It will be improved, not repealed. Under the circumstances there is no reason why we should exempt the Railroad Retirement Board in this bill.

I hope the amendment will be voted down.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Schafer of Wisconsin) there were—ayes 76, noes 93.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. CROSSER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Crosser: On page 3, line 18, after the word "Commission", strike out the word "or", and after the word "Administration" strike out the semicolon and insert the following: "National Mediation Board, National Railroad Adjustment Board, or Railroad Retirement Board."

Mr. CROSSER. Mr. Chairman, the amendment which I have just offered provides for the exemption of three agencies with the creation of which I had a great deal to do. The older Members will recall how at midnight in the closing hours of the session in 1934 I stood there where the gentleman from Utah [Mr. Robinson] now sits and pleaded for concurrence in the Senate amendment to the railway labor bill creating the present Mediation Board. This law has been heralded from one end of the country to the other as a means of settling disputes between employers and railroad employees. It probably suggested the establishment of the N. L. R. B. We find the N. L. R. B. exempted, but the Mediation Board is not exempted, nor is the Railroad Retirement Board. Three times we passed a Railroad Retirement Act before a retirement system actually operated in the full sense of the word.

Let me call your attention to the fact that no other agency of the Government functions exactly as do these three agencies. They are peculiarly adapted to the needs of the railroads and the railroad workers' problems. The railroad pension bill is entirely different from anything else that the Government has established, and even to make it possible to consolidate it with something else would be a grave mistake. The same is true of the Adjustment Board. The Adjustment Board would not operate or work in the adjustment of any other labor dispute. Those who think so just do not understand the situation.

Now, Mr. Chairman, this is not only my request, but the spokesmen of all the railroad men throughout the country ask for this exemption. These men know how hard it was to have this legislation passed; and I submit to the Members here who have had to do with railway labor legislation that railroad labor never comes here with an unreasonable or foolish demand. When they do come, it is for something that is well considered and supported by sound reason.

Let me read a telegram I received the other day:

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 6, 1939.

Washington, D. C., March 6, 1939.

Hon. Robert Crosser,

Member of Congress, House Office Building:

H. R. 4425 reported favorably to House, March 3, which I understand will likely come up for consideration early this week would, if enacted, seriously jeopardize if not destroy rights and interests which have been secured by railway labor only after 50 years of struggle. The National Mediation Board, National Railroad Adjustment Board, and the Railroad Retirement Board, agencies in which railroad labor has a vital interest, are not excluded from the bill. I am reliably informed of a well-directed effort to bring about the abolition of these boards which would unquestionably result in incalculable harm to railroad workers throughout the country. On behalf of the 20 standard railway labor organizations I urge upon you most strongly that when this measure comes up in the House if adequate provision has not been made by the committee to insure exclusion of these agencies you call upon the friends of railway labor who have so generously made possible the rights and protection now enjoyed by railroad workers under the laws creating these agencies, to amend the bill by adding to section 2, page 3, line 18, after words "Veterans' Administration," the following: "National Mediation Board, National Railroad Adjustment Board, and the Railroad Retirement Board."

George M. Harrison,

Chairman, Railway Labor Executives Association

GEORGE M. HARRISON, Chairman, Railway Labor Executives Association.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for 3 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox]?

There was no objection.

Mr. CROSSER. Mr. Chairman, there is the statement of the man who represents the great army of railroad workers throughout the United States. As I said before, these are highly honorable men, men who are intelligent, men who give sound reasons for what they ask. These men, through their official spokesman, have sent me the telegram which I have just read to you. Are we-after the many months of labor which the committees and the House and Senate have devoted to these measures—are we to make it possible to do what this telegram says may happen?

Mr. MAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CROSSER. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky. Mr. MAY. I am sure I would be entirely incapable of paying a just tribute to the gentleman from Ohio in his lovalty to the railroad men of this country; but is it not possible that your informant is laboring under a misapprehension due to the fact that certain other agencies have been exempted in the bill and he, Mr. Harrison, is under a misapprehension that those agencies not specifically exempted are being abolished, when, as a matter of fact, the President, labor's greatest and best friend, can be trusted to deal fairly with them and will undoubtedly do justice to all labor?

Mr. CROSSER. I did not yield for a speech.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. CROSSER. I yield to the gentleman from Arizona.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I not only wish to pay the gentleman a tribute for what he has done already, but I think he is right in regard to the pending amendment. Did the gentleman not make the statement that these agencies are different from all others because they deal distinctly with the problems and also with the money of these railroad men?

Mr. CROSSER. The gentleman is correct. This railroad retirement law does not involve a single penny of Government money. Do not forget that. There are just two groups involved. The railroad men pay half the money to the Railroad Retirement Board and the railroads pay the other half. Not a single penny of Government money is expended for the system.

Mr. RISK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CROSSER. I yield to the gentleman from Rhode

Mr. RISK. Does the gentleman think this measure constitutes a threat to the well-being of the railroad laboring men of this country?

Mr. CROSSER. I have read what the president of the Labor Executives Association has had to say in reference to the matter. I add to that what the gentleman from Arizona mentioned a moment ago, namely, that the money which goes into this fund, the money to be used for pensions, is paid in one-half by the railroads and one-half by the railroad men themselves. Not one penny is paid by the Government of the United States.

Mr. COOLEY. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. CROSSER. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. COOLEY. Who is it that is threatening to abolish these boards?

Mr. CROSSER. I refer the gentleman to the telegram which I have read.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr.

Mr. Chairman, during my 14 years' service in this House I have looked upon and regarded the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Crosser] as the authorized and responsible spokesman for the railway laboring people of this country. He has never failed to champion their cause, and, in my opinion, had contributed more to the advancement of their welfare than any other single individual or group of individuals in the Nation. [Applause.]

I expect him to take advantage of every opportunity to testify to the fine patriotism of the people in the railway service of this country. However, Mr. Chairman, I think if he has any apprehensions with respect to what may happen of an unfavorable character to these agencies, in behalf of which he now speaks, that those apprehensions are not well founded.

I am sure that the railway workers of the country look upon the President of the United States as their best friend and gladly give him credit for having done more for the workers than any other single individual who has ever occupied that high official station in the Nation. There is no one here who would participate in the setting up of any sort of situation which would admit of injury to these agencies of the Government which serve the special need of the railway workers.

The difficulty, Mr. Chairman, is that no stronger reasons can possibly be offered for exempting the agencies named in the pending amendment than may be offered by those who hold themselves out as special pleaders for many of the other agencies which could be affected as a result of performance under the law. If we open the door for the exit of the agency or agencies in behalf of which the gentleman just spoke, there will be no possibility of closing it against others who for reasons satisfactory to themselves wish to

Mr. Chairman, I submit that in the interest of the bill pending before us today the amendment should be rejected. I am confident that those of us voting against the amendment will do so with complete confidence that the President in the exercise of the powers that are delegated to him will do nothing that will in any wise impede or affect the agencies in their operations.

Mr. Chairman, I ask that the amendment be rejected. Mr. MOSER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last

Mr. Chairman, I would be untrue to nearly a quarter of a century's association with labor among railroad employees if I did not rise on this occasion to support the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. CROSSER].

All that he has said with respect to railroad employees I wholeheartedly endorse. But leaving it rest just at that point, I should like to leave with the Committee this thought, that were We to visualize the possibility that the Railroad Retirement Board, for example, were to be merged or placed under the control of another agency of government, it would seem to me the Social Security Board would be the logical hand of government that would reach out to grasp control of this splendid organization. To those of you who have shared with me experience in dealing with these agencies of the Government, may I say I should like to ask you to contrast your experience in dealing with Mr. Latimer and Mr. Lynch, of the Railroad Retirement Board, and the efficient railroad employees they have brought together there from the different sections of the country to deal with the Members of Congress who must contact them, and your experience in dealing with Mr. Altmeyer, of the Social Security Board, or with Mr. Bane, who is no longer with the Board, and the Council of State Governments will doubtless learn to know him as we did. You all know the distinction and the difference. I sincerely trust my friends and colleagues of this Committee will vote to endorse the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. CROSSER].

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MOSER. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. COX. Does the gentleman recall that when the reorganization bill was before the House in August 1937, it did not exempt from its provisions the agencies in behalf of which the gentleman now speaks, that they did not ask to be exempted, and that the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Warren], who was handling the bill, stated on the floor that the railway workers of the country supported the bill he was then offering?

Mr. MOSER. Some of these agencies were not in existence at that time. Moreover, I will say this regarding our vote in 1937 on the reorganization bill that passed this House at that time, if I could recall that vote, having experienced much to change my mind, I would recall it today.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the remainder of my time. [Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman. I rise in support of the pending amendment submitted by the distinguished friend of labor from Ohio [Mr. CROSSER]. I do not desire to trespass on your time and cover the ground which he has covered. I heartily endorse everything he has said. I am somewhat surprised to find members of the committee in charge of this bill opposing his very meritorious amendment. The argument made by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Crosser] is unanswerable.

The daddy of the bill, my good friend the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cochran], with whom I served for many years on the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, should be the first man to rise in his place and accept the pending amendment, in view of his splendid labor record since he has been a Member of the Congress.

As the gentleman from Ohio indicated a reorganization or consolidation of these agencies would break faith with those whose affairs they handle and would not result in economy or greater efficiency, but would only create chaos, extravagance, and inefficiency. The great recognized rail-road labor organizations are in favor of this amendment. They have never been unreasonable and this House should overwhelmingly support their position.

I sincerely hope that all of my Republican colleagues will vote for the fair and just amendment offered by our distinguished Democratic colleague, the great friend of labor and able legislator, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. CROSSER]. If the amendment is defeated, let it not be said that Republican votes were responsible. I call upon the leadership of my party to place this amendment in our motion to recommit if it is defeated now, so that the railroad employees of the country can see who their friends are and who their enemies are. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LORD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. LORD. I yield.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 7 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent that all debate on the pending amendment close in 7 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LORD. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. CROSSER] exempting the Railroad Retirement Board from this bill. It has taken many years for the railroad men of this country to get legislation they wanted that would help to care for them in the days when they could no longer work on the railroad. To bring them under the provisions of this reorganization bill will create distrust in their minds and they will all be on edge and wonder what is going to happen. We have exempted many different departments in this bill. If there is reason for exempting any department, there certainly is very good reason for exempting the Railroad Retirement Board. This Board has only just got started, it has just got so it can function, and to give them cause for distrust, to make them wonder what is going to happen, including possibly combining them with some other department, is only going to create confusion, and it will take much longer for men who have retired to get their retirement pay than it will if the Board is permitted to continue the way it is now and knowing it will not be disturbed.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LORD. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. The Bituminous Coal Commission has been in operation now for nearly 2 years. It has cost the coal people, it is charged, $50,000,000 and the taxpayers $20,000,000 more, but has done nothing to help the industry. Why is it exempted from this reorganization bill? Does not it need reorganizing?

Mr. LORD. That is something I cannot understand.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Then an effort is here made to subject to reorganization the Railroad Retirement Board and other boards for railroad workers which have functioned efficiently and well. I favor exemption of all these rail workers' boards.

Mr. LORD. If the Bituminous Coal Commission or the Civil Service Commission or any other of the some 16 or 18 other activities are going to be exempted, certainly the Railroad Retirement Board should be exempted from overhauling or combining with some other department.

Someone has said there has been no protest from the railroad men. This is a bill that was slipped out of committee before it was even printed and available. I tried to get a copy of this bill on Saturday and one was not available, yet they came before this House with the bill on Monday. What opportunity did the railroad men have to protest?

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. LORD. Not just now.

What opportunity have they had to present any objection to legislation they did not even know was being considered?

I think we will hear from the railroad men if we do not exempt them from this bill, and I hope all the friends of the railroad men will rise up at this time and support the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Crosser].

[Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CROSSER. Mr. Chairman, since a number of Members seem to be somewhat in doubt about what was stated in the telegram which I read a few minutes ago, I shall read from the telegram, as follows:

I am reliably informed of a well-directed effort to bring about the abolition of these boards, which would unquestionably result in incalculable harm to railroad workers throughout the country. On behalf of the 20 standard railway labor organizations, I urge upon you most strongly that when this measure comes up in the House, if adequate provision has not been made by the committee to insure exclusion of these agencies, you call upon the friends of railway labor who have so generously made possible the rights and protection now enjoyed by railroad workers under the laws creating these agencies, to amend the bill.

This is signed, "George M. Harrison, chairman, Railway Labor Executives Association."

This association includes the heads of all railway labor organizations in the United States. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I come from a city that is entered by 32 trunk lines and no train ever goes through the city. Trains either make up or end their run in St. Louis.

I have been a friend of the railroad men all my life. They know it. I talked with the officials of the railroad organizations last Saturday and again Monday, and they promised to let me know, after the conversations I had with them, if they were not satisfied. I have not heard from them. As a friend of the railroad men, if I thought there was anything in this bill that would hurt them in the future, I would not support it. I am supporting the bill as it is, and I have just as many railroad employees in my district as practically any man in this House, and I cherish their friendship. I am satisfied they will not be harmed by this bill as it is.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Crosser].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Crosser) there were—ayes 126, noes 100.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLEN of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ALLEN of Pennsylvania: On page 3, lines 13 and 14, after the comma in line 13, strike out the words "National Bituminous Coal Commission."

Mr. ALLEN of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, so that there will be no misunderstanding regarding this amendment, let me explain that it provides for the elimination from the list of exemptions of the National Bituminous Coal Commission.

As I understand it, the prime purpose of this bill is to reduce Government expenditures and to abolish such Federal agencies and functions as may not be necessary for the efficient conduct of government. With this purpose firmly in mind it is difficult for me to understand why the National Bituminous Coal Commission, one of the most expensive and profligate and worthless agencies of government, should be placed in the list of exemptions. [Laughter and applause.]

About 2 years ago we created the Bituminous Coal Commission and since then it has spent some six or seven million dollars. I would like to ask anyone on this floor who can name one single benefit emanating from that Commission to stand on his feet and name it. It has helped neither the operators nor the miners. The operators in my district, which is one of the largest soft-coal producing districts in the United States, are worse off than they were before the passage of that bill. There is more unemployment among the miners today than there was before we created the Bituminous Coal Commission.

I have many letters in my files, and I hope to bring them to the attention of the House tomorrow when we are considering the appropriations for the continuation of the Bituminous Coal Commission, and these letters, without exception, ask that the Commission be abolished or reorganized fully. I do not want to see the Bituminous Coal Commission excluded from the possibility of abolishment in the first place, and drastic reorganization in the second. Instead of eliminating or exempting the Commission from the provisions of this bill, I believe it should be held close to the eyes of the Chief Executive for the closest possible scrutiny, and I hope the Members of the House will support this amendment and eliminate from the list of exemptions a Commission which has been absolutely ineffective and which has failed to justify its existence in every respect. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I realize the force of the argument just made by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Allen]. I would not be frank with the Committee if I did not say that the sole and only purpose of retaining this Commission in the list of exemptions is because it has been in prior bills. I do not think I have anything further to say about it. So far as we are concerned as a committee, it does not make any difference to us. It is carried simply because it was in the other bills.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. WARREN. Yes.

Mr. ANDREWS. I am wondering how long the gentleman considered this bill, if the only reason that this appears is because it was in other bills.

Mr. WARREN. Oh, the bill has had plenty of consideration and plenty of debate on the floor. I am frankly stating to the House why it is included, and if the House wants to take it out it is a matter for the Committee to decide.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I was engaged in telephone conversation with the chairman of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs and just walked into the Chamber. I understand the proposal here is to strike the Bituminous Coal Commission out of the list of exempted agencies in section 3, whereby it is exempted from reorganization and made subject to it. Mr. Chairman, the Bituminous Coal Commission is an organization having an existence of a little over a year. It is one of those agencies of the Government that pays its own way by a tax levied against the industry itself.

Mr. ALLEN of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAY. Not now. There is a tax levied against its own operators and producers, and it has not asked the Government to pay any part of its expenses. The institution is just now to a point where it is able to begin to function. It has been trying to organize, to be effective as an agency, to control and regulate the sick, the desperately sick coal industry. To disturb it now and put it in a state of uncertainty would make it impossible for it to do what it was organized to do. I do not know why the amendment is offered to take it from these exceptions, because I did not hear the remarks of the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. ALLEN of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. MAY. But I do say it is suffering from one of the worst kind of politics emanating from the State of Pennsylvania. That has been one of the obstructions to its progress so far. Perhaps the gentleman can explain that, and for that purpose I yield to him.

Mr. ALLEN of Pennsylvania. If the gentleman had remained on the floor, he would have heard why I think this should be exempted from the list which appears in the bill. It is for the simple reason that after 2 years and the expenditure of millions of dollars it has failed to accomplish one single constructive act.

Mr. MAY. Is the gentleman asking me a question?

Mr. ALLEN of Pennsylvania. I am just explaining. The gentleman asked me a question and I am trying to answer him.

Mr. MAY. I think the gentleman has stated his position very well. I come from a district that produces 20,000,000 tons of coal each year. I know that the operators in my district throughout the Appalachian coal area all over the United States, with the exception of two of the larger ones that are always kicking about something, are eminently satisfied with the operation of the National Bituminous Coal Commission, and I know that the Commission is just now to a point where it is able to do that which it has been working 4 months to do, and while I do not think it would be particularly disturbed by the President in any reorganization, yet I say that it would continue this feeling of disturbance and uncertainty which would make it impossible for it to function as the Congress intended it to.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. May) there were—ayes 164, noes 53.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

The CHAIRMAN. Tellers are demanded. As many as are in favor of taking the vote by tellers will rise and remain standing until counted. [After counting.] Three Members standing, not a sufficient number, and tellers are refused.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Morr: Page 3, line 10, after the words "Coast Guard", insert "United States Forest Service."

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, this amendment adds the United States Forest Service to the list of exempted agencies under section 3 of the bill. I think every Member of the House is familiar with the argument in support of this amendment. It was made when the last reorganization bill, in 1938, was in the House; and although that bill did not pass, it is my recollection that an amendment similar to this one was adopted.

There is every reason, it seems to me, why the United States Forest Service should be included in the list of exempted agencies. There is no real reason that I know of why it should not be so included. The Forest Service of the United States, with the possible exception of the Corps of Army Engineers, is the most competent, the most experienced, and the most expert organization of any agency in the executive branch of the Government.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MOTT. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. COCHRAN. The gentleman stated that the amendment was adopted. The amendments that were offered to the bill in 1937 and in 1938 were defeated. They were not adopted.

Mr. MOTT. It is my recollection that the amendment offered to the 1938 bill was adopted.

Mr. COCHRAN. Oh, the gentleman was in favor of it, but the amendment was defeated both in 1937 and 1938.

Mr. MOTT. I may be mistaken, of course, but my recollection is that it was adopted. It makes no very great difference inasmuch as the bill did not pass. If the amendment was not adopted it was at least a very close vote.

Mr. COCHRAN. Well, the RECORD will show.

Mr. MOTT. Naturally, the Record will show, and, of course, I stand corrected if I am in error. However, whether an amendment of this kind was adopted or not last year in the bill which did not pass, it should by all means be adopted this year in the pending bill, which most Members here believe is going to pass today.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MOTT. I yield to the gentleman for a question.

Mr. WALTER. Does the gentleman propose this amendment because he is apprehensive that the Forest Service will be placed back in the Interior Department, where it was up to the time it was moved in order to give a job to Gifford Pinchot?

Mr. MOTT. Frankly, it is my opinion that if the Forestry Service is not exempted it will be transferred to the Interior Department. I did not want to go into that, but since the question has been asked directly, I will simply state what I think nearly everyone already knows. For years and years there has been agitation on the part of the Department of the Interior to take over the Forest Service. This effort has been bitterly fought by the Department of Agriculture. Most people who have had very much to do with forestry matters are of the opinion that if the Forest Service is not exempted the transfer will be made.

In every State in the Union where there are national forests private lumber concerns operate at least to some extent in those forests. The Forest Service has the best logging system that has been devised, the best conservation methods, and the best plan of disposing of the merchantable timber which should be cut. It has been cooperating with the timber operators and sawmill operators in nearly every State in the Union, and this cooperation has been of the greatest advantage both to the Government and to the lumber industry, upon which many States depend for their major pay rolls. All timber-producing States are familiar with the policy and the methods of the Forest Service which now exist, and they are unanimously in favor of the retention of that Service in the Agricultural Department.

It would be a blow to every timber-producing State in the Union if the United States Forest Service were transferred to some other department which has had little or no experience in the administration of national forests. This certainly is not a partisan matter. I think it should have just as much support upon the Democratic side as upon the Republican side. It is a meritorious amendment, and I trust it may receive the approval of a majority of the Members on both sides of the aisle. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, there are just as many reasons for defeating this amendment as any of the others that have been defeated; in fact, possibly more.

If we permit this agency to be exempted, then, as a matter of logic and justice, there are at least 56 other agencies that should receive the same treatment, because they are in the same condition as this particular agency.

As far as I am concerned, in my State the Forest Service is a very popular agency. We think a great deal of this agency. It is doing a fine work. We have no objection to the Forest Service being operated as it is now, but there are 14 different agencies that deal with forestry in the United States. Now, get that into your minds. Fourteen different agencies. For instance, the United States Forest Service itself only operates 174,198,902 acres of forest lands. Grazing Division operates 110,000,000 acres of land. The Biological Survey operates 11,492,165 acres, and the National Parks Service operates 15,491,165 acres. In other words, there are 14 different agencies under the Government handling our forest.

Mr. MOTT. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. Now, if there is any one agency in the Government where the President should have the right to consolidate any overlappings or any other work at all in connection with the operation of those agencies, this is the agency that should receive that consideration.

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. In just a moment.

I want to say further that there is no reason why the Democratic Members, or, for that matter, the Republican Members should feel at all alarmed about giving this authority to the President of the United States. There is no assurance that this will be turned over to the Interior Department.

Mr. MOTT. Will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. In just a moment. If I have time, I will. The President has made no pronouncement to the effect that this will be turned over. There will be an investigation made. Facts will be found, and if the facts warrant turning over this agency to one department, then the President will come back to Congress and recommend to this Congress that that be done, and the Congress will have a chance to vote on it.

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. I yield.

Mr. SIROVICH. Is it not a fact that the greatest economy could be effected by uniting 14 different organizations, with their personnel, into one department so that the Republicans can help us bring about economy, in which they are interested?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. I am not saying that they could or could not, but I am saying that the President of the United States should have the right to make an investigation of this department, and if, after that investigation is made, it is determined that certain things should be done with reference to those agencies, he should have the right to do it. I am saying that in face of the fact that the Forest Service is doing a fine work, and the men from the West are in sympathy with the Forest Service. We do not want anything to happen that will interfere in any way with the effective operation of the Forest Service, but we do think there can be economies made and changes effected that will help this agency.

Another thing we must bear in mind is that different agencies will operate side by side. An operator on one side of the line will be working under the Forest Service and an operator on the other side will be operating under the Biological Survey or the Department of the Interior. Is it anything more than fair that we should investigate these conditions and find out which of these agencies can best handle the operation and then when it comes back to the Congress under the recommendation of the President have the right to vote our convic-

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. I yield.

Mr. MOTT. Outside of possibly the O. and C. grant lands, does the gentleman know of any forestry work of the Department of the Interior that is similar in character to the forestry work of the United States Forest Service?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. I will grant that there is considerable difference in the forestry of Oregon as compared with some of the other States. It stands on its own footing to a very large extent.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. ELLIOTT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the

Mr. Chairman, there is not a Government agency or a department, a bureau, that has discharged its functions and duties with a higher type of efficiency and integrity than the Forest Service. It is one of the most important Government agencies we have. In the control of our watersheds, in restoration of our watersheds, and in control of floods, and our very existence is absolutely dependent on the function of the Forest Service of this Government. The Department of Agriculture wants to retain it, while another department wants to take it over and absorb it. I would like to comment on the personnel. It is the highest type to be found in any Government agency. The Forest Service should not be transferred for the best interests of agriculture as is, agriculture being the backbone of our Nation.

Let me say further that we must not forget the real extent to which we depend upon this able division of the Department of Agriculture. I do not believe the House will make any mistake in leaving it where it is. Very few times in my short career here have you heard me say a word, but I am asking the Democrats to support the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oregon. I think it is in the interest of good government to assure the perpetuation of a service that has meant so much to our Nation. I hope the amendment is adopted. [Applause.]

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MURDOCK of Utah to the amendment offered by Mr. Morr: At the end of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oregon insert the following: "of the Department of Agriculture."

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, so far as I am concerned I accept the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Utah is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Mr. Chairman-

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to permit me to submit a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. I yield.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 15 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Mr. Chairman, the only purpose of my offering this amendment at this time is that we have been advised that there are 14 different agencies of the Government now administering forest lands. I believe the gentleman from Oregon intends to exempt only the Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture. My amendment limits the exemption to the Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture and is offered only for the purpose of clarifying the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oregon.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Idaho [Mr.

WHITE], is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Chairman, I represent a district that contains the greatest concentration of national forests in the United States, the First Congressional District of Idaho. The land embraced in this national-forest area is not all forest land and the resources located in this mountainous section are not all timber. We have a number of Government agencies dealing with the undeveloped resources of the United States located within this section, within the boundaries of the national forests. We have within the boundaries of the district I represent what has been said by the Bureau of Mines to be one of the greatest undeveloped gold fields in the United States. Much of this country is isolated and inaccessable. Operating within this district also we have the Geological Survey, the Division of Public Grazing, the National Park Service, and a great many agencies all with divided authority and divided attention.

It is my idea that these lands should be committed to one management. Let me point out to the gentleman from Oregon that he was interested in a bill to create an entire new service, a new Forest Service, if you please, to administer the 2,500,000 acres of the Oregon-California land-grant forests which is under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Interior. We have today in the executive branch of the Government two Forest Services, one under the Department of Agriculture administering the national forests, and the other under the Department of the Interior administering the Oregon-California land grants, a duplication of service.

Let us pass this amendment, let us give somebody in the United States, to the President if you please, the man who is Commander in Chief of our Army and of our Navy, authority to put the forests under a unified control, under the same management. Let us pass this bill without this amendment.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, let me ask the gentleman from Idaho the same question I asked the gentleman from Utah.

There are the O. and C. lands, and I know the gentleman is aware of the fact why they are in the Interior Department, because they have been there since they were revested 16 years ago. You could not put them any place else. Outside of that, does the gentleman know of any forest administered by the Interior Department that is similar in any way to a forest administered by the Department of Agriculture? In other words, are there not two distinct and separate jurisdictions and functions? The function of the Interior Department, insofar as forests are concerned, is to create national parks and conserve trees in them.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. I did not yield for a speech. I want to use my own time.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman has cited a divided authority. There are grazing districts within these lands that are interlaced with the national-forest lands under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Interior; and there are also some grazing lands under the jurisdiction of the Department of Agriculture. This involves some difficulty when it comes to cattle grazing on this land.

I have tried to have passed a bill to place all of this land in the national forests, so that there would be one authority, so that there might be order in handling the grazing of the cattle on public land, but I have been unsuccessful, due to the controversy between the two Departments and the divided authority. These Departments are always at war and they are always in trouble with one another.

Let us carry out the provisions and intent of this bill and vote down the amendment. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

NATIONAL FORESTS AND NATIONAL PARKS

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Utah IMr. Robinson said that there were several agencies operating these timberlands and implied that they should be under the same administration regardless of the purposes for which the timberland is operated. It does not seem to me that should be any more true than if we should say that regardless of the different purposes for birds in the country they should always be managed by a single agency. You can have birds for a circus, you can have birds for a zoo, or you can have birds for a poultry farm.

We have the National Park Service operating some timberlands for park purposes. We have the National Forest Service operating some timberland for a variety of uses. Each of those Departments in its particular field is doing a fine service. However, we have two entirely different aims, two purposes to be served.

I have seen both of these services operating in my district and I admire them both. It happens that my home town is the headquarters for the Harney National Forest, which I believe was the first forest in the country to be placed under the control and operation of the National Forest Service, in which they put into effect the principle of cropping the forest, supervising the cutting. Today the Harney National Forest stands first in the entire Denver region in the production of timber revenue to the National Government.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Will the gentleman yield? I think he has made a mistake.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. The gentleman is probably proud of his forests, too. The fact is that the National Forest Service operates the forest from the standpoint of a multiple-use program. It recognizes that timberlands can be operated for grazing without interfering with the management of the timber for cropping purposes. It recognizes that mineral land within a national forest can be operated for mining without injuring timber as a crop. It recognizes, also, that you can use the national forests for certain recreational purposes without interfering with mining or timber cropping. All of these several purposes are carried out, one without interfering with the other.

When you come to the National Park Service you have a different proposition. Here the purpose is to maintain the forest in its primeval state. The National Park Service seeks to preserve the natural features of the timberland. You have an entirely different and proper park purpose to be served. The National Park Service does not want its timber cut. It does not want any mining carried on. It does not want any public recreation of the kind that would interfere with the preservation of the natural character of the timberlands. So you have two entirely different propositions,

Those of us who see them operate side by side are not aware of any conflict. In many cases timberlands of the National Forest Service are located alongside of forests of the National Park Service. I have seen the two operate in very close cooperation for fire prevention but each has a different primary purpose. The personnel of the Park Service is trained primarily to serve the traveling public; the personnel of the Forest Service is trained primarily to administer the forest for a multiple-use program of a timber crop, a grass crop, mining, and such additional public uses as can be carried on. I feel that the operation of the two should be kept separate and distinct, and I make this statement based upon personal observation.

Mr. SIROVICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SIROVICH. If we are to have economy why should not these 14 agencies be united into 1 group and each one subdivided to do the work the gentleman is talking about? You people on this side stated when the bill came up this afternoon that you wanted economy, but when it hits home in your own State you are selfish enough to see that they act independently.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Ah, but the gentleman would not get economy; he would get waste and confusion. We are not objecting to the consolidation of timberland operations where there is the same purpose; the pending proposal only exempts the Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture. If the gentleman followed closely what I said, he would know that I was pointing out the fact you are leaving the way open for an unwise consolidation of two purposes that are entirely separate and distinct, and will mean waste instead of economy or efficiency.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield to the gentleman from Idaho.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. The gentleman admits there are two forest services in operation, one operating under the Department of the Interior, administering the California-Oregon land grants, and another one administering the national forests. We have at the present time two forest services in operation. Does not the gentleman think they ought to be united?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. The National Forest Service operates forests from the viewpoint of a multiple-use program, and that is entirely different from the park purposes of the National Park Service.

Mr. SCRUGHAM. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment. One of the greatest problems in the West is the control of grazing. A portion of the grazing area is under the supervision of the Forest Service, for whose fine work I have the highest regard. The grazing lands affected are not usually within the actual forests. The grazing lands are largely sagebrush and grass areas. Immediately adjoining them may be other areas of sagebrush and grass under the jurisdiction of the Interior Department. Sheep, cattle, and horses are grazed on this public domain under permits from the Government agency having jurisdiction. There should be only one agency. In eating its daily food the grazing animal does not know whether it is under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Interior or the Department of Agriculture. It may be violating the law, as a separate permit is required for grazing under each Division. There should be some consolidation of grazing activities. That will necessitate a change in the Forest Service organization, which the President will be empowered to make under the terms of this proposed act. The consolidation will be hampered by Mr. Chairman, I trust the amendment will be defeated.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I have three fine forest reserves in my district, and I am for the Forest Service just as strongly as any man in this House, but this is the practical situation I am up against. At the request of counties, towns, and civic groups who want these lands protected and reforested I introduce bills here to create small additions to national-forest reserves, and the Department of Agriculture approves the bills, and the Department of the Interior disapproves them, so they are hung across the fence, and we never get any action on them. I have had this situation existing for 4 or 5 years. These Departments hang onto these lands just as if they owned them. You never will correct this condition unless you put all the public domain under one jurisdiction. For that reason I am against the amendment. [Applause.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, if there are any agencies in the Government service that needs to be revamped it is the 14 or 15 agencies that are handling Government land. Here the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. Morr] is attempting to take a very small unit in the Department of Agriculture and exempt it. How about all the other units in all the other departments?

You are now considering a unit of the Department of Agriculture for exemption which is the most outstanding propaganda outfit in the entire Government, the Forest Service. I had photostatic copies of the letters of the forestry organizations and they are proof of the statement I just Let me say further that I do not know why they are interested, although maybe some of the gentlemen who favor this amendment might know; but I want to tell you the big lumber interests of the western part of the country want this amendment adopted. Why? I do not know. I do not live in that part of the country where the great forests are, but when men who do live there tell you this amendment should be defeated, I know it should be defeated. I do not care where you put these units handling Government land, but they should all be under one head. When you talk about saving money, certainly you must admit that is the way to save it. You have heard how different agencies have their organizations alongside one another both doing the same kind of work, using the same kind of machinery. Picture, if you will, two adjoining farms and you have an idea of what this means. In this instance, however, the Government owns both pieces of property but two agencies. one controlling one part of the property and another controlling the adjoining one.

Mr. Chairman, Congress has placed on the statute books the laws that govern in administering these laws, and I say to you no matter what individual is in charge they are going to be administered as Congress intended they should be.

There might be some excuse for a Member offering an amendment to exempt some independent agency, but an attempt to exempt a small unit of an executive department is certainly out of reason. The amendment should be voted down. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. Mott].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Morr) there were— ayes 101, noes 148.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. DIRKSEN: Page 3, line 21, insert the following:

"(d) For the continuation of any temporary or emergency executive agency or function beyond the period authorized by law; or

"(e) For the creation or establishment of any new executive agency to exercise any functions which are not expressly authorized by law in force on the date of enactment of this act; or

"(f) For an increase in the number of executive agencies above the number in existence on the date of enactment of this act; or

"(g) For the increase or extension of the legislative authority of any executive agency or part thereof transferred."

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, the one happy circumstance about the deliberations of this Committee is that the members are acting in their free and independent right. You will recall the chairman of the committee handling this bill stated that it has never been sullied by contact with an executive department; it has never been profaned by coming before the eyes of Mr. Corcoran or Mr. Cohen. So far as anyone in this House knows, including the members of the committee, this bill may or may not be acceptable to the President of the United States. So we can operate intelligently, free of all influence and prejudice, as we consider the amendments.

It is difficult to interpret the action of the House this afternoon. If Dorothy Thompson or Walter Lippmann or General Johnson seek in their respective columns to evaluate the actions of this day, they are going to have some difficulty. Apparently we want economy in the Civil Aeronautics Authority because it has been rejected as an exempted agency, but probably not so much economy in the Retirement Board because it was included in the exceptions. We seem so anxious for economy in the Rural Electrification Administration, but we do want it in the Mediation Board. When you try to put it all together you are going to have a difficult time rationalizing this experience this afternoon, except to say that we are voting some of our pet peeves and our pet prejudices.

However, one thing has happened. The Committee itself accepted an amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Ludlow]. It is written into section 3, on line 4, and provides that no reorganization plan under section 4 shall provide for the establishment of any new executive department. This means that the House is stating that no new Cabinet department shall be created under a reorganization plan. The Committee, under the leadership of Mr. COCHRAN and Mr. WARREN, has accepted that amendment.

Now, why do we not go a little bit further? Why do we not add to that other new executive agencies, which includes bureaus and commissions? The phrase "executive department" does not embrace a commission; it does not embrace a bureau. Why not write it in? That is what this amendment provides for. If you are going to be consistent in the interest of efficiency and economy, why not add the rest of the language so far as emergency agencies are concerned?

Under this bill you can consolidate an emergency agency with a permanent agency and very possibly translate and continue functions that you otherwise might oppose. Now, if you are interested in efficiency and economy, then support this amendment because it is in line with that purpose. It is what you have been asking for and it is what you have been protesting, and there should not be a vote on this side of the aisle against the pending amendment.

The amendment provides also that the number of agencies under any reorganization plan shall not be increased above the number that exists on the date this act goes into effect. The President could very well, conceivably, make two out of one-I do not say he will do it or that he will not do it, but I do say if you do not want the number increased, then let us state in the bill that the number shall not be increased above the number that exists at the present time.

Finally, if you want to be preciously careful that temporary and emergency functions are not extended by consolidation with some permanent bureau, commission, or agency, then you ought to vote for this amendment because it contains a provision against that possibility.

Now, Mr. Chairman, let us be fair about it. The President does not know what is in this bill. He has had no contact with it. It has not been referred to any executive agency. We are operating as independent legislators this afternoon. If you want efficiency, if you want economy, if you do not want new agencies created, then vote for this amendment. You have already stated and the committee has stated that no reorganization plan shall provide for the creation of a new executive department. This is the language of the Ludlow amendment that was adopted this afternoon. In all harmony and consistency let us go a little bit further and adopt this amendment, because it is language that was taken from the proposal made by the Senator from Virginia. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the

In the first place, the amendment has no place at the point in the bill where it was offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Dirksen]. The gentleman has picked this up from a colloquy between the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Robertson] and myself yesterday afternoon. Early this morning, several hours before the House was in session, an amendment to clarify what I stated to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Robertson] was very carefully prepared. I hold it in my hand and it is to be offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Smith] as a new section. The gentleman from Illinois has gone much further than we have gone here. He provides, if I catch it right, that the President cannot even set up a new bureau or a new board. Such a restriction would absolutely defeat any form of reorganization.

We provided originally, and clarified the provision today, by the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. LUDLOW] that he cannot create a new department of the Government. No such power or authority as that has ever been even contemplated.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WARREN. I yield. Mr. DIRKSEN. I am fearful the gentleman has not carefully read the language so far as the creation of a new agency is concerned. The language is "for the creation or establishment of any new executive agency to exercise any functions which are not expressly authorized by law in force on the date of the enactment of this act." It does not stop the President from creating any new agencies.

Mr. WARREN. I assure the gentleman that the amendment which I now hold in my hand, which will be offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH] provides for that; but, as I understood from the gentleman's speech, he goes much further than that, and I would suggest to the gentleman, if he is interested, he should withdraw his amendment now and incorporate it as a new section in the bill, although I will not support the amendment offered by the gentleman because it goes too far. However, the amendment I have referred to has been very carefully worked out and is in line with what was stated to the House and upon which we gave assurances yesterday.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I do not feel impelled to withdraw the amendment because the provision that is to be offered later contains only one provision of the amendment that is now pending at the desk.

Mr. WARREN. I ask that the amendment be rejected on the grounds it would defeat the purposes of reorganization. [Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

The question was taken; and on a division, (demanded by Mr. Dirksen) there were—ayes 101, noes 157.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Nichols: Page 3, line 9, as amended, strike out "Civil Service Commission."

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I am deeply interested in the reorganization of the governmental departments and agencies. I hope that that reorganization will be carried on by the Chief Executive for the purpose of promoting efficiency in government and economy in government. I think that most of the Members of this House will agree with me that probably the biggest octopus on government today is the so-called merit system designated as civil service. I want to see in the Government of the United States a merit system and I would like to see a system inaugurated which would permit Government employees to hold their jobs only so long as they hew to a constant line of efficiency.

I would like to see a law on the books which would compel the discharge of Government employees when they go a certain distance below a constant line of efficiency, but I would like to see that law provide that promotion and advancement in salary could only be given when they have gone a certain distance above a constant line of efficiency; and to my amazement I find exempted under this bill the Civil Service Commission. I am not interested in the Commission nor any of the members of the Commission. I know none of them and have no brief for or against them, but I am interested in the system; and gentlemen know, if they have made any study of the proposition, that a cloak of protection called civil service is covering more inefficiency in this Government than anything in existence in Government today; and if we are going into reorganization—and I am for it—then let us not hide and cover up and protect from reorganization the one department of Government that needs reorganization worse than any other department in the Government. I would like to see the Chief Executive send to this Congress recommendations that would put into force and effect a real merit sys-I would like to see it fixed so that you could not have blanketed into the civil service the cousin of a friend of the administrator of some department. [Applause.] I would like to see a law written that would be so just in its operation that a recommendation from a Congressman would not guarantee an applicant for civil service that he could get a job under civil service. I would like to see an honest merit system put into operation, and the only chance to do that is to adopt this amendment, which will take the Civil Service Commission from among the exemptions in this bill—and I do not have much fear but that this amendment will be adopted by this House.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment. I think I know the feeling on this side of the House in reference to this amendment, but I am particularly interested in knowing how our friends on the minority side will vote on this particular amendment. It will be interesting to observe it. As we know, in the omnibus bill that was defeated last year, one of the titles contained provisions for reorganization of the Civil Service Commission. Many able Members of this House, and especially on the Democratic side, as well as the entire Republican minority, stated that they were bitterly opposed to that title of the bill. This is one of the things where we have to try to meet on a common ground, as I said before, to evaluate, if you please, just what were some of the objections dealing with this entire problem of reorganization. Therefore, we have decided, so far as the Committee on Government Reorganization is concerned, to abandon that phase of the problem. We have a standing committee here in the House, headed by the able gentleman from Georgia [Mr. RAMSPECK], and if there is any reorganization or legislation along civil-service lines, we feel that it should not come from the Reorganization Committee, but from our own efficient House committee, and I therefore ask that the amendment be rejected.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. The speech of my friend from Oklahoma [Mr. Nichols] comes as somewhat of a surprise to me. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Nichols] stood on this floor during the last session of Congress and proclaimed to the world that he was in favor of the spoils system and opposed to the merit system, and that occurred when we had under consideration the bill placing postmasters under civil service. Therefore, it is hard for me to understand his conversion here this afternoon as expressed on the floor. However, I am happy to welcome my distinguished and able friend from Oklahoma into the ranks of those who profess to believe in a real merit system, and I hope that he will join me later in this session when I bring in legislation to provide a real merit system for the entire Government service.

So I welcome the gentleman into the ranks of those who believe in the merit system.

May I say frankly that I am not satisfied with the present civil-service system. There are many improvements I would like to see made in it, but when you have had your back to the wall, fighting for existence, it is hard to make improvements. The President of the United States last June issued an Executive order to improve the merit system. It went into effect on the 1st day of February 1939, and if this Congress gives the Commission the funds to carry it out we will have a real personnel system, a real personnel officer in every department of this Government, and I think you will see many improvements in the operation of the merit system.

Mr. NICHOLS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. I yield.

Mr. NICHOLS. Does my memory serve me correctly that my distinguished friend from Georgia was on the floor last year when the reorganization bill was being considered, making an able argument in support of keeping in the bill the provision which would give the Chief Executive the right to reorganize the Civil Service?

Mr. RAMSPECK. Oh, the gentleman well knows I voted against the reorganization bill last year because it contained a provision permitting the abolishment of the bipartisan Civil Service Commission and the substitution of a single administrator, who it was admitted, could be discharged by any President at any time. [Applause.]

I never expect to support any such legislation. That is why I am opposed to the gentleman's amendment, because I want to retain the bipartisan characteristics of the Civil Service Commission. I hope the Members of this House will not vote for the gentleman's amendment. I say to you on absolute authority that the American Federation of Labor asked its friends in this House last year to oppose the reorganization bill because of that very fact, that they wanted to retain the bipartisan Civil Service Commission. I do not believe you can have nonpartisan administration of any agency of this Government. I think the nearest we can get to it is bipartisan. I think the minority must have representation in the operation of any merit system if we are to keep public faith in that system. For that reason I hope the amendment offered by the gentleman will be defeated, so that we can go along in an orderly way, through the regular legislative committee, in our efforts to improve the merit system. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Nichols].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Schaffer of Wisconsin: On page 3, line 10, strike out the words "Coast Guard."

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I call upon the "daddy" of this bill, the distinguished new dealer from Missouri [Mr. Cochran] to support this amendment and practice what he has preached on the floor of the House while opposing and supporting other amendments considered this afternoon.

Is there any valid reason why the Coast Guard, which is not a quasi-judicial branch of the Government, should be exempted? I served with the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cochran] on the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments prior to 1932, when I was swept out of Congress by the New Deal tidal wave.

He knows that at that time there were presented to the Committee on Expenditures positive facts indicating that great savings could be made by consolidating certain activities of the Coast Guard with certain activities of the Immigration Bureau, certain activities of the Customs Bureau, and certain activities with reference to the enforcement of prohibition. Why does not the gentleman from Missouri support this amendment and allow the President to consider savings which might be made if Coast Guard activities are consolidated with other activities of government? If the President can effect some savings for the taxpayers' Treasury by consolidating the Customs Service with other Government activities, he should not be prevented from doing so. Why is the Coast Guard, a non-quasi-judicial body, exempted under the present bill? Is it exempted so you can hold a number of votes in line for this bill, or is it because you do not trust your own New Deal President?

If those in charge of this bill mean what they have said that they are in favor of having their President effect savings, I ask you to show that you meant what you said. If you are not going to accept this amendment I ask you gentlemen in charge of this bill to present some valid facts or reasons why you cannot trust your President to do the right thing for the Coast Guard. I know you do not like to hear the facts. You are going to hear a great many facts from now on that you do not like to hear. I intend to stand in the well of the House, under my oath of office and under my constitutional right and the rules of the House, and tell you the facts as I see them. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I think I can answer the gentleman in just two sentences. In the first place, the Coast Guard has already been reorganized, and under the statute law immediately upon a declaration of war, without any action on the part of the Congress, the President, or anyone else, it automatically goes under the Navy. In times of peace it is under the Treasury Department, enforcing customs regulations and acting as messengers of mercy throughout this land.

I therefore ask that the amendment be rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Hoffman: Page 3, line 14, strike out "National Labor Relations Board."

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, all that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Allen] said about the Coal Commission can be said with equal truth about the N. L. R. B. The American Federation of Labor undoubtedly had much to do with the writing of the N. L. R. A. It had apparently nothing, or little, to do with the selection of the Board members. Since those members have been acting and the Board has been handing down decisions, the A. F. of L. has charged, and has supported its charges by evidence that cannot be disputed, that the Board in many cases has been biased and unfair in its decisions. The A. F. of L. in effect has charged, not once but many times, that the Board has acted as the organizing agent of a rival union.

There can be little question in the mind of anyone present but that the N. L. R. A. will sooner or later be amended. The whole difficulty cannot be charged to the terms of that law. Part of the trouble, much of the trouble, comes from the interpretation and the administration of the law. We know now that the President has asked the representatives of the two great rival labor unions to meet down here, and they did meet yesterday at the White House in order to adjust their differences if possible. We have had industrial strife between employer and the employee for the past 2 years that has caused the major portion of our unemployment and of our national loss. We are now having strife between the two great rival labor organizations. The parties to the battle, to a large extent, have shifted, and the trouble now is mainly between the rival labor organizations, not between employer and employee. So long as the President has asked the representatives of these two unions to meet together and to adjust their differences, why should we not place in his hands now the opportunity and the responsibility of calling in at the same time the members of the Board, the gentlemen who were appointed by him, for whose actions he is responsible, who have been interpreting, who have been enforcing this act, and let him have before him or before the Secretary of Labor all three of the parties who through consultation and a presentation of their ideas do much to arrive at a common ground of understanding, and bring nearer the end of this controversy and see if we cannot arrive at some peaceful solution of the present trouble, which must end soon if we are to have renewed business activity.

Some may say over there on the Democratic side that I do not like to place in the hands of the President the necessary authority, and that is the great argument that we have made against many of the provisions of this bill. My reason for giving to him the authority to act in this particular case is because he has the representatives of these two great organizations before him. He appointed and is responsible for these three men who are administering this law; and the Board's activities have in the judgment not only of the employers but of many employees and of the American Federation of Labor been so biased, so unfair, so un-American that it cannot be any worse; and this action may do some good. It will give the President the opportunity to exercise his great power to bring about peace here at home, where the two warring factions have made a battleground on industry's field. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, very few times have I ever come into the Well of the House and asked the support of any Member of this House for any bill or any amendment. Time after time I have supported amendments; and I defy any Member of this House to show where at any time I have ever voted against a legitimate labor bill of any kind in this House. My father was a laboring man. For years he held a card in a legitimate labor union. After graduation from law school in 1924 I represented a majority of the labor unions in the city of St. Louis. When I was elected prosecuting attorney in 1932 I had the whole-hearted support of union labor. In 1934 I again had the whole-hearted support of union labor for reelection. When I came to Congress in 1936 I had their support again; and last year I had the support of the American Federation of Labor.

I know anything I may say will not get one vote on the Republican side of the House. What few votes we get on this side will be gotten because the Members on the Democratic side know I am right in this contention. Gentlemen, if there is one branch of the service that should be reorganized, it is the National Labor Relations Board. It has done more to cause labor unrest than anything else in this country. [Applause.]

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. For one question; yes.

Mr. COX. Does the gentleman not think it would be well to leave this agency in the position where the bill places it and let Congress later, by direct treatment of the problem, deal with this outfit as its scandalous performances demand? Let me say to the gentleman that I am in complete sympathy with him in his effort to straighten up or else to wipe out this agency which has so disgraced the Government in bringing it into existence because of its manner of performing under the law. [Applause.]

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. I thank the gentleman for the suggestion, but I think this matter should be corrected now by reorganization; if there is one branch that should be reorganized it is the National Labor Relations Board. I do not care about big business. The little-business man in my district, who has 10 or 15 employees, are the ones that have suffered from the misconduct of this agency. It is up to us to give him a helping hand in his struggle. But, if the Civil Aeronautics Authority is not exempted under this bill, and if the T. V. A. is not exempted under this bill, then the National Labor Relations Board should not be exempted; it is the same sort of an agency.

Mr. Chairman, we should support this amendment and let the little-business man back home know that we are with him, and that this body intends to straighten out the labor trouble in this country, and start us out again on the road to prosperity. Thank you. [Applause.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the

Mr. Chairman, the question whether we approve the actions of the National Labor Relations Board or the statute that set up this Board certainly is not involved in the pending question in any way.

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. WARREN. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. If the Civil Aeronautics Authority should be reorganized and if the T. V. A. should be reorganized, does not the gentleman believe the Labor Relations Board ought to be reorganized also? What is the difference?

Mr. WARREN. There is a very decided difference. The National Labor Relations Board is a quasi-legislative agency set up by an act of Congress, and for this reason it was placed in the list of exemptions. As I have just stated, we should not be governed by our prejudices or by our likes or dislikes in reference to this Board, because that is entirely beside the question and has nothing to do with it. This particular agency was placed in here because it is a quasi-legislative agency.

Mr. Chairman, I ask that the amendment be rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Hoffman].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by | Mr. Hoffman) there were—yeas 114, noes 140.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HAWKS: Page 3, lines 17 and 18, strike out "the United States Tariff Commission."

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Chairman, a great many amendments have been offered to this bill. We have just heard an argument for the reorganization of a certain department of our Government. I am offering my amendment not that we may reorganize one of the bureaus but rather that we might liquidate it.

The United States Tariff Commission is not functioning, has not been functioning, will not function, and cannot function so long as we have favored nations and just so long as we have reciprocal-trade agreements. The statement was made on the floor of the House the other day that in a great many States in 1938 the elections were won by Republicans because of local issues. I would like to call the attention of the House to the fact that in a great many States, including some of those mentioned by the gentleman the other day, reciprocal-trade agreements did more to elevate Republicans to public office than any other factor in the election.

Why am I up here advocating the elimination of the United States Tariff Commission? I am here advocating its elimination to save money. I am perfectly willing to turn this matter over to the President of the United States and let him effect a saving to the American taxpayers of approximately $1,000,000, if he so desires. In fact, the correct figure is $907.798.

There are six Commissioners, each of whom receives a salary of $11,000 a year. The employees of that Commission receive in salaries $762.371.

The claim is made that this bill is offered to save some money. You maintain it is an economy bill, still the United States Tariff Commission is put under the exempted provisions of the bill.

Mr. Chairman, this Commission is not functioning. It has done more to injure labor, the farmer, and industry of this country by its refusal to act, its refusal to defend labor, agriculture, and industry, than any other one branch of our Government. Every single function of this Commission is in the hands of the State Department today, and the State Department through reciprocal-trade agreements is pushing labor, farming, and industry deeper into despair.

Here is an opportunity to save the taxpayers a million dollars. Why not kick that agency out of this bill and put it in the hands of the President of the United States, and let him say, "Here, you are not functioning; you are not earning your salt; you are not doing the people of this country any good. I am going to get rid of you."

Because this Commission is not functioning, 11,000,000 or more men are today unemployed. Think of that. Our farmers are in worse circumstances today than they have ever been, and this dates back to 1920 when the agricultural depression began.

Talk about favored nations. What has happened to the favored people of the United States? Do we always have to think of other nations? Are the people of those nations more favored than our own kin and our own kind? Are not the twelve, thirteen, or fourteen million unemployed people of this country more a problem of ours than the problems of Canada, Great Britain, and France and should we not consider our own unemployed ahead of the people of foreign nations?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin IMr.

Mr. Chairman, the question of reciprocal tariffs does not enter into this matter at all. The United States Tariff Commission is a quasi-legislative body just the same as the Interstate Commerce Commission. That is the reason it was placed in here.

Mr. Chairman, I hope the amendment will be voted down. The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Hawks].

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 4. Whenever the President, after investigation, finds that (a) the transfer of the whole or any part of any executive agency the functions thereof to the jurisdiction and control of any other executive agency; or
(b) the consolidation of the functions vested in any executive

(c) the abolition of the whole or any part of any executive gency or the functions thereof, agency or the functions thereof, is necessary to accomplish one or more of the purposes of section 1 (a), he shall—

(d) prepare a reorganization plan for the making of the transfers, consolidations, and abolitions, as to which he has made findings and which he includes in the plan. Such plan shall also—

(1) designate, in such cases as he deems necessary the name of any executive agency affected by a reorganization and the title of its head;

its head;

(2) make provision for the transfer or other disposition of the

(2) make provision for the transfer or other disposition of the records, property (including office equipment), and personnel affected by such transfer, consolidation, or abolition;
(3) make provision for the transfer of such unexpended balances of appropriations available for use in connection with the function or agency transferred or consolidated, as he deems necessary by reason of the transfer or consolidation for use in connection with the transferred or consolidated functions, or for the use of the steppey to which the transfer is made but such uses the state.

sary by reason of the transfer of consolidated functions, or for the use of the agency to which the transfer is made, but such unexpended balances so transferred shall be used only for the purposes for which such appropriation is originally made;

(4) make provision for winding up the affairs of the executive agency abolished or the affairs of the executive agency with respect to the functions abolished, as the case may be; and

(e) transmit such plan (bearing an identifying number) to the Congress, together with a declaration that, with respect to each transfer, consolidation, or abolition referred to in paragraph (a), (b), or (c) of this section and specified in the plan, he has found that such transfer, consolidation, or abolition is necessary to accomplish one or more of the purposes of section 1 (a). The delivery to both Houses shall be on the same day and shall be made to each House while it is in session.

The President, in his message transmitting a reorganization plan, is requested to state (in such cases and to such extent as he deems advisable) the reduction of expenditures which it is probable will be brought about by the taking effect of the reorganizations specified in the plan.

tions specified in the plan.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TABER: On page 5, line 20, strike out the period and insert a comma and the following: "and shall submit a detailed report showing the increase or decrease of expenditures that will result from such plan."

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is offered so that when the President submits a reorganization plan he shall tell the Congress what saving he figures will be made as the result of the proposed reorganization. There is nothing in the bill as it is submitted by the committee that requires such a report. This is the only way the Congress has of finding out the facts and having anything to go by when it considers the reorganization. I hope the majority members of the Committee will see fit to cast aside partisanship for once in the consideration of this bill, and consider this amendment on its merits. It is to my mind very important that this information be given to the Congress when a plan is submitted.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan. Mr. CRAWFORD. The proposal which the gentleman submits is entirely in keeping with the practice followed by large corporations when a production manager or any other department head recommends to the policy-forming board or committee that changes be made in the general set-up of machinery or otherwise.

Mr. TABER. It is exactly the same.

Mr. CRAWFORD. As I understand the gentleman's proposal, the Congress has nothing to act upon insofar as economy is concerned unless this information is submitted with the plan.

Mr. TABER. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. Chairman, I hope the amendment will be accepted. Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, this certainly is a late hour for the gentleman from New York or anyone else on the other side of the aisle to raise the question of partisanship, when we have seen that side of the House voting practically as a body over the whole afternoon.

We are opposed to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York because he seeks to require the President to submit a detailed report showing the increase or decrease in expenditures that will result from the plan. If we want to be reasonable about it, we know that such a detailed report as the amendment calls for is almost impossible to procure. It is my purpose as soon as this amendment is disposed of to offer a committee amendment to that same section striking out the lines in the brackets in lines 17 and 18 on page 5 and making it mandatory upon the President to state the reduction of expenditures which it is probable to make. For that reason I ask that the amendment be rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I offer a committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment offered by Mr. Warren: On page 5, lines 17 and 18, strike out "is requested to state (in such cases and to such extent as he deems advisable)" and insert in lieu thereof the words "shall state."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 5. The reorganizations specified in the plan shall take effect in accordance with the plan:

(a) Upon the expiration of 60 calendar days after the date on which the plan is transmitted to the Congress, but only if during such 60-day period there has not been passed by the two Houses a concurrent resolution stating in substance that the Congress does not favor the reorganization plan.

(b) If the Congress adjourns sine die before the expiration of the 60-day period, a new 60-day period shall begin on the opening day of the next succeeding regular or special session. A similar rule shall be applicable in the case of subsequent adjournments sine die before the expiration of 60 days.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I offer a committee amendamendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Sumners of Texas: On page 6, line 1, after the word "the", strike out the words "two Houses a concurrent" and insert in lieu thereof the words "Senate or the House of Representatives a", and in line 2 of said page, after the word "that", strike out the words "the Congress" and insert in lieu thereof the word "it," so that subsection (a) of section 5 which it is proposed hereby to amend will read as follows:

"Upon the expiration of 60 calendar days after the date on which the plan is transmitted to the Congress, but only if during such 60-day period there has not been passed by the Senate or the House of Representatives a resolution stating in substance that it does not favor the reorganization plan."

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, in view of the fact that some constitutional question is involved, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I very much hesitate to interpose a proposed amendment to a carefully considered bill that comes from another committee, but I believe this amendment ought to be incorporated in this bill.

Let us consider our ordinary method of procedure in determining policy. The President, for instance, if he is disposed to, sends down a message suggesting legislation. This reorganization would be akin to that. It requires the two Houses to express the will and judgment of the Congress. If either House fails to agree it is not an expression of the will or judgment of Congress. This proposed amendment holds the procedure with regard to these suggested reorganizations by the President in harmony with the general plan of procedure as between the President and the two Houses of Congress.

There is another angle I should like to submit to the consideration of the Committee, for whom I have the highest respect. It is my judgment, and I submit it to your consideration, that when we have a situation where there is sufficient opposition in one of the two Houses of Congress to a proposed reorganization to cause that House to initiate a resolution and support that resolution by an affirmative declaration of opposition, it is not wise in that situation to force that sort of a reorganization.

Let me state it another way: For a reorganization to be forced through which is against the judgment of one of the two Houses gives rise to an element of friction and discord between the Executive and that House that it is not worth the price paid for it.

In view of the fact I understand there is some notion of constitutional difficulties about having one House opposed to a proposed plan of reorganization to prevent its consolidation, I venture the opinion, and I have no uncertainty about it, that we may provide just as well for a resolution by one House to prevent a reorganization, from a constitutional standpoint, as we can by a resolution by both Houses. The two Houses do not constitute the Congress insofar as their power to legislate is concerned.

I am grateful to the Committee for giving me more time upon the amendments. I believe I have stated the main things that may not have occurred to those of you who have considered the matter, and I should like to yield to interrogation from Members of the Committee. I know you will credit me at least with the purpose of trying to be helpful.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Texas vield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. WARREN. I understood the gentleman to say that the two Houses do not constitute the legislative power. I wish the gentleman would elaborate on that.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. All right; it requires explana-

A concurrent resolution by the two Houses of Congress which proceeds no further than that does not make a law. We know that. The two Houses of Congress are required under the Constitution to submit that thing which they agree to to the President to take the judgment of the President with reference to it. Now, you do not contemplate with regard to this particular resolution that it shall go further than the resolution agreed to by the two Houses of Congress, which my colleagues will agree does not constitute a law.

That is what I am trying to say. It is not a law, it is simply an expression of the attitude of the two Houses of Congress, and if it is effective at all it is effective because you so provide in this bill and not because of any constitutional grounds.

May I now make this observation? I am not certain, because I have not examined it, but if I may assume that you gentlemen who have drawn this bill are certain that a concurrent resolution, as you have provided, may be incorporated in the bill and that the concurrent resolution will prevent the going into effect of a reorganization, I have no hesitancy in giving assurance—and it is without proper considerationbut I have no hesitancy in giving assurance you may do the same thing with a resolution of opposition by a single House.

Mr. GAVAGAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes.

Mr. GAVAGAN. Do I understand the gentleman correctly to say that in his opinion the exercise of the power of a President to ratify or to veto the act of Congress is the performance of a legislative function by the President?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I would like not to go into the question of the power of the veto. It is a part of the arrangement provided for in our Constitution for the enactment of legislation, and will the gentleman please excuse me and not draw me into a detailed discussion of that matter.

Mr. GAVAGAN. I will excuse the gentleman, but I understood the gentleman's main argument to be that the President was exercising a legislative function.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. No.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to my distinguished friend, the Speaker.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Do I understand that the gentleman's amendment is based upon his conception that it is not a wise thing, from a standpoint of policy, that this bill be passed as it is or is it based upon constitutional objections?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. It is not based upon constitutional objections. I may say very candidly to my friend that you can just as well provide, insofar as the Constitution is concerned, for the holding up of a reorganization by concurrent resolution as you can by opposition of a single House, and, vice versa, you can provide just as well by opposition of a single House as by concurrent resolution.

Mr. BANKHEAD. So the gentleman's conclusion is based upon one of policy rather than law?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is true, but I would like to qualify that a little. Our plan of legislation is to take the agreed judgment of the two Houses, plus the agreement of the President, speaking generally, before a thing becomes operative as a law. That is our policy of legislation, and the language I suggest is in harmony with that policy.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Since the gentleman proposes this amendment as a matter of policy, the gentleman wishes to get away from the provision in the present bill which might permit one House by refusing to take action to thus permit the President's proposal to become a law.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. In a way I think that is true. Under our plan of operating our Government, it takes the agreement of the two Houses of Congress to express the judgment of the policy-fixing agency of the Government, which is the Houses of Congress. Now, the thing I suggest merely carries that general policy of government, which we recognize everywhere, into this arrangement.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield.

Mr. MAY. Does the gentleman think there is any constitutional question involved in the course pursued here by reason of the fact that we pass a resolution or a bill, if you wish to call it that, which makes it possible for one branch of the Congress by failure to act, to prevent the other branch from having a say in a matter that becomes effective affecting what would otherwise be legislation?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I wonder if my friend will permit me to answer his question in this way? The amendment which I propose raises no new constitutional question.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, if a question of law or of constitutionality were involved, I would rise with great temerity to debate with the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. Sumners], chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, but under the questioning of the Speaker of the House, who has just participated in this debate, he admits that there is no question of constitutionality, but that it is one solely of policy. The reason why a simple resolution is much weaker constitutionally is that if the two parts of the legislative branch of the Government are in agreement, then there is no violation of the doctrine of separation of power. A simple resolution represents the judgment of only one House, and not the two Houses of Congress. The legislative power of Congress is not exercisable by a simple resolution. It is exercisable only by a resolution to which both Houses agree. To the extent that there is any question about the validity of such a provision, it is in the opinion of the Attorney General Mitchell under Mr. Hoover's administration.

Now, as to policy. This provision such as now proposed by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Sumners] was incorporated in the almost unlimited grant of power that we gave former President Hoover. As has been previously stated, Mr. Hoover's own Attorney General, Mr. Mitchell, in an exhaustive opinion, said that a resolution of either house which would tend to stop an Executive order by the President—and while that was called an order, we call this a plan—was clearly invalid on its face.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WARREN. Yes.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Did Attorney General Mitchell indicate that if that had been a concurrent resolution the question would have been at all different from the one presented?

Mr. WARREN. It is not my recollection that he did.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WARREN. Yes.

Mr. COX. Yes; the Attorney General in that opinion held that nothing short of legislation would suffice to set aside an Executive order.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. A concurrent resolution is not legislation.

Mr. COX. That is very true, and the Attorney General held in that opinion that a concurrent resolution would not be sufficient to vitiate an Executive order.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is all right.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, confronted with the opinion of the Attorney General while President Hoover was still in office, because this opinion was rendered January 24, 1933, I think the Congress, both Houses, if you please-and I am coming now to the question of policy that the gentleman has brought up-unanimously amended the act in two important respects. We struck out of it the objections raised by the Attorney General, to wit, a resolution by either House, and then we struck out the unlimited time feature, and limited it to a 2-year period. All of us at that time recognizedand it is the first time I have heard it said since that it was not-that the opinion of the Attorney General was sound, and we therefore made the change in the Hoover act. There is a rule in part 2 of the bill which provides for the consideration of the plan submitted by the President. The distinguished gentleman from Texas asks if it would not be a good thing if the country were aroused over some particular plan that might be sent down here and if one House was overwhelmingly opposed to it, to stop it there. Why, if that should happen in the House, if such an order should be disapproved according to the rules that we have laid down in part 2, that resolution would immediately go to the other body, and there any one Member of the Senate, any one of the entire 96, who might be opposed to that plan or anything in that plan, could simply rise and offer the resolution coming from the House or one of his own as a privileged matter, and there get a vote on it after 10 hours of debate.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina has expired.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I must defend the concurrent resolution provision of the bill. That provision, in my opinion, is unquestionably valid. Some misunderstanding as to the application of the Mitchell opinion to the question before us grows out of the fact that there is a difference between the bill before the Congress in 1932 and the bill that is now before us. In the legislation of 1932 legislative power was being delegated to the President to provide for reorganization by Executive order. Attorney General Mitchell rendered an opinion that an Executive order made under the grant of legislative power could not be vacated or set aside by any congressional action short of legislation. It is perfectly apparent to the membership of the House that this bill was drawn with the view of naming the President as the ministerial agent of the House rather than vesting in him legislative power, and therefore the provision contained in this bill whereby Congress may vacate any action taken by the President by concurrent resolution is perfectly valid, because it is a condition subsequent and is a part of the law itself.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WARREN. Yes.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I ask my distinguished colleague if there is any difference between the constitutional status of a concurrent resolution and a resolution by one House.

Mr. COX. Let me say to my friend that because of the great concern of my colleagues on the Reorganization Committee, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cochran] and the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Warren], I experience great embarrassment in answering the gentleman's question, and yet I must not take the attitude of trying to conceal any honest opinion that I may entertain with respect to the proposition. I say to the gentleman, in answer to his question, that there is no difference whatsoever; that if it is within the competency of Congress to provide for vacating a plan that might be submitted under the bill by the President, by a concurrent resolution, it is of course equally within the right of Congress to provide that the order might be vacated by a simple resolution of either body.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the amendment offered by my distinguished colleague from Texas [Mr. Sumners] because I am sincerely in favor of reorganizing the departments of the Government. In making that statement I do not intend to imply that my colleague is not also in favor of reorganization. I simply think that if this amendment is adopted there is strong probability that in the future no reorganization may come about. We have heard expressions in this House in the last 2 days that would indicate a probability that if in the future either House of the Congress was not in accord with the political views of the occupant of the White House, who had brought forward a plan of consolidation, that that House, be it this one or the Senate, would in all probability veto any reorganization bill presented by a President that they did not like politically or that they did not like personally.

I think it would be very safe for the membership of this House to follow the considered judgment of this committee, which has labored so long. [Laughter.] Well, the committee has been organized for more than 2 years and has given great consideration to this matter. I do not mind that sort of disorder, Mr. Chairman. I sometimes expect it. But I think it would be wise for us who really want reorganization—and I think the vast majority of the Members of this House do feel the necessity of some kind of reorganization—if we followed the considered judgment of this committee and made it so that before a plan of reorganization could be vetoed that it require the action of both bodies constituting the Congress of the United States. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Sumners].

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, may we have the amendment again reported?

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will again report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Sumners].

There was no objection.

The Clerk again reported the amendment offered by Mr. Sumners of Texas.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Sumners of Texas) there were ayes 153 and noes 133.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I ask for tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chair appointed Mr. Sumners of Texas and Mr. Warren to act as tellers.

The Committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 176, noes 155.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KLEBERG. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. KLEBERG: Page 5, line 21, to page 6, line 9, strike out all of section 5 and insert in lieu thereof:

"Sec. 5. The reorganization specified in the plan shall not be-

"SEC. 5. The reorganization specified in the plan shall not become effective until after the enactment of a joint resolution specifically approving such plan. Any such joint resolution shall provide for the approval of such plan as a whole, without modifications, and shall contain no other provisions. If any such joint resolution providing for the approval of any such plan is introduced in either House, it shall at once become the special order therein and that House shall proceed to its consideration, without reference to a committee; and, not later than 1 hour after that House meets on the twentieth calendar day (Sundays excepted) after the day on which such joint resolution was introduced, a vote shall be taken in that House on the question of the passage of a joint resolution approving such plan. If any such joint resolution is passed by one House, it shall be sent to the other House, and that House shall immediately proceed to its consideration, without reference to a committee. Not later than 1 hour after that House meets on the twentieth calendar day (Sundays excepted) after it has received such joint resolution, a final vote shall be taken in that House on the question of the passage of such joint resolution. No notice or motion to reconsider the vote shall be in order."

Mr. KLEBERG. Mr. Chairman, the hour is late and I know the patience of the membership of this Committee is at a low ebb. It will not be necessary for me to make any lengthy statement in explanation of the simple amendment which has just been read by the Clerk. It is the Wheeler amendment, an amendment offered in another body during the consideration of the reorganization bill offered in the last session of Congress.

I am deeply sorry that it is necessary for me to take the time of the House on this occasion to belabor you with still further consideration of matters in the bill under consideration which many of you know should be changed, but I must offer this amendment in order to keep a promise repeatedly made in public utterances in my district. That promise was that not by my voice or my vote would a single proposition be advanced to curtail the voice of those whom I represent, or of the people of the United States in the halls of state. [Applause.]

I feel a deep and abiding friendship for every member of the hard-worked Special Committee on Reorganization of the Executive Branch of the Government, because it is well known to every member that this committee has worked hard to satisfy the membership of this House by presenting a bill on which the Members could agree and reach an accord for the reorganization of the executive branch of the Government; and it is with that exact purpose in mind that I take the floor here this evening and urge you to go back to the simple, well-known, time-honored form of the functioning of representative democracy in order to accomplish that end.

Mr. Chairman, I can see no earthly reason for all of the devious methods of approach to the question of asking the President to reorganize the executive branch of the Government that have been discussed in connection with this bill and which have been presented to us, asking the Congress of the United States to accept a position where by negative action only can they express the wish of the people or the voice of those whom they represent. There has never been in my meager observation and knowledge any like proposition.

Mr. Chairman, it will be said when my 5 minutes are over, that the proposition I have to make will destroy this bill and we had just as well not attempt to reorganize the executive branch of the Government. I am not willing, Mr. Chairman, on this or any other occasion, to stand before the country and acknowledge the incompetence of the legislative branch of this Government to perform its constitutional functions. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, it is patent to even a high-school student that under this bill, under the amendment as offered by myself, when a proposal comes from the Chief Executive acting as the agent, if you please, of the Congress being requested to reorganize the executive branch of the Government, that proposal can just as well be acted upon by vote of the House in an affirmative fashion as it can by a vote in a negative manner as suggested in this bill. [Applause.] I cannot therefore accede to an argument that would claim that it is not possible to reorganize the Government by the method I propose, or that this amendment would destroy any effective effort to that end. I hope the membership of this House will adopt this amendment.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HOOK. If this amendment be adopted would it supersede the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Sumners] that the House just adopted?

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. McCormack). In reply to the parliamentary inquiry, it is the opinion of the Chair if the pending amendment is agreed to it will supersede the amendment recently adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KLEBERG1.

Mr. Chairman, we have now approached the very heart and essence of the entire bill. The gentleman from Texas proposes to do nothing whatsoever than stand up here and reiterate the present law of the land. He does not propose to write into this legislation one single, solitary thing that is not already guaranteed to the President of the United States under the Constitution. He comes up with a dagger and tries to strike this whole proposition down. I would not be fair with the House, I would not be fair to myself and to the committee if I did not tell you that if the amendment is agreed to then we shall move to table the bill, and let it be said that the death blow came from the majority side of the House. [Applause.]

Anyone who wants to see reorganization in the Government cannot support this amendment. Anyone who wants to see reorganization, and who has seen the many futile and fruitless attempts at reorganization over a period of years, knows if such a proposition as this is adopted, then we would go right back to 2 years ago, when we first started. All day long, since the opening of this debate, we have seen a partisan question raised here. All through today, on all of these amendments, with just one or two exceptions, we have seen the mass voting on this side of the House that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DITTER] likes so much to boast about.

I want to talk to my fellow Democrats. I want to recall to you a story.

Have you forgotten the story of Lorna Doone-how the Doones, men of high family, who had fallen under the displeasure of the government, had betaken themselves to the Doone Valley, surrounded on all sides by precipitous mountains, and from this strongly fortified position levied their blackmail upon the surrounding country, killing and robbing and outraging the people of the land until the citizens were aroused and determined to extirpate them? Do you recall how the men of the eastern county gathered together on the eastern mountain, and the men from the western county on the western mountain, with their arms and cannon ready to fall upon the Doones and destroy them, when by some untoward accident a cannon from the western ranks was trained across the valley into the ranks of the men of the east, and while these foolish people were slaughtering one another, the Doones sallied forth and put both counties to flight and continued to rob and kill and outrage for years to come.

Let us heed the lesson, my fellow Democrats. Let me say to the gentleman from Texas and those on this side who might follow him: The Doones are in the valley. I pray you gentlemen, train your guns a little lower. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Kleberg].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Kleberg) there were—yeas 139, noes 176. So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SMITH of Virginia: Page 6, after line 9, insert a new section to read as follows:

"Sec. 6. No reorganization under this title shall have the effect "(a) of continuing any executive agency or function beyond the time when it would have terminated if the reorganization had not been made; or

"(b) of continuing any function beyond the time when the executive agency in which vested before the reorganization would have terminated if the reorganization had not been made."

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, the committee accepts the amendment just offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH].

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 6. For the purposes of this title any transfer, consolidation, abolition, designation, disposition, or winding up of affairs, referred to in section 4 (d), shall be deemed a "reorganization."

SEC. 7. (a) All orders, rules, regulations, permits, or other privileges made, issued, or granted by or in respect of any executive agency or function transferred to, or consolidated with, any other executive agency or function under the provisions of this title, and in effect at the time of the transfer or consolidation, shall continue in effect to the same extent as if such transfer or consolidation had not occurred, until modified, superseded, or repealed.

(b) No suit, action, or other proceeding lawfully commenced by or against the head of any executive agency or other officer of the United States, in his official capacity or in relation to the discharge of his official duties, shall abate by reason of any transfer of authority, power, and duties from one officer or executive agency of the Government to another under the provisions of this title, but thority, power, and duties from one officer or executive agency of the Government to another under the provisions of this title, but the court, on motion or supplemental petition filed at any time within 12 months after such transfer takes effect, showing a neces-sity for a survival of such suit, action, or other proceeding to obtain a settlement of the questions involved, may allow the same to be maintained by or against the head of the executive agency or other officer of the United States to whom the authority, powers, and duties are transferred. duties are transferred.

(c) All laws relating to any executive agency or function transferred to, or consolidated with, any other executive agency or function under the provisions of this title, shall, insofar as such laws are not inapplicable, remain in full force and effect.

SEC. 8. The appropriations or portions of appropriations unexpended by reason of the operation of this title shall not be used for any purpose, but shall be impounded and returned to the Treasury.

any purpose, but shall be impounded and returned to the Treasury.
SEC. 9. Whenever the employment of any person is terminated by a reduction of personnel as a result of a reorganization effected under this title, such person shall thereafter be given preference, when qualified, whenever an appointment is made in the executive branch of the Government, but such preference shall not be effective for a period longer than 12 months from the date the employment of such person is so terminated.

SEC. 10. If the reorganizations specified in a reorganization plan take effect, the reorganization plan shall be printed in the Statutes at Large in the same volume as the public laws, and shall be printed in the Federal Register.

SEC. 11. No reorganization specified in a reorganization plan shall

SEC. 11. No reorganization specified in a reorganization plan shall take effect unless the plan is transmitted to the Congress before January 21, 1941.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the section numbers in title I be changed where necessary so they may be arranged properly.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of asking a question of the chairman of the committee.

Is it purposed by the chairman to offer motions that will bring part 2 of the bill into line with the amendment that was adopted by the Committee?

Mr. WARREN. I do not think so.

The Clerk read as follows:

PART 2

SEC. 21. The following sections of this part are enacted by the Congress:

(a) As an exercise of the rule-making power of the Senate and House of Representatives, respectively, and as such they shall be considered as part of the rules of each House, respectively, but applicable only with respect to the procedure to be followed in such House in the case of resolutions (as defined in sec. 22); and such rules shall supersede other rules only to the extent that they are inconsistent therewith; and are inconsistent therewith; and

(b) With full recognition of the constitutional right of either House to change such rules (so far as relating to the procedure in such House) at any time, in the same manner, and to the same extent as in the case of any other rule of such House.

SEC. 22. As used in this part, the term "resolution" means only a concurrent resolution of the two Houses of Congress, the matter after the resolving clause of which is as follows: "That the Congress does not favor the reorganization plan No. — transmitted to Congress by the President on — , 19—", the blank spaces therein being appropriately filled; and does not include a concurrent resolution which specifies more than one reorganization plan.

SEC. 23. A resolution with respect to a reorganization plan shall be referred to a committee (and all resolutions with respect to the same plan shall be referred to the same committee) by the President of the Senate or the Speaker of the House of Representatives, as the case may be.

as the case may be.

SEC. 24. (a) If the committee to which has been referred a resolution with respect to a reorganization plan has not reported it before the expiration of 10 calendar days after its introduction (or, in the case of a resolution received from the other House, 10 calendar days after its receipt), it shall then (but not before) be in order to move either to discharge the committee from further consideration of such resolution, or to discharge the committee from further consideration of any other resolution with respect to such reorganization plan which has been referred to the committee.

(b) Such motion may be made only by a person favoring the resolution, shall be highly privileged (except that it may not be made after the committee has reported a resolution with respect to the same reorganization plan), and debate thereon shall be limited to 20 minutes, to be equally divided between those favoring and those opposing the resolution. No amendment to such motion shall be in order, and it shall not be in order to move to reconsider the vote by which such motion is agreed to or disagreed to.

disagreed to.

(c) If the motion to discharge is agreed to or disagreed to, such motion may not be renewed, nor may another motion to discharge the committee be made with respect to any other resolution with motion may not be renewed, nor may another motion to discharge the committee be made with respect to any other resolution with respect to the same reorganization plan.

Sec. 25. (a) When the committee has reported, or has been discharged from further consideration of, a resolution with respect to a reorganization plan, it shall at any time thereafter be in order (even though a previous motion to the same effect has been disagreed to) to move to proceed to the consideration of such resolution. Such motion shall be highly privileged and shall not be debatable. No amendment to such motion shall be in order and it shall not be in order to move to reconsider the vote by which such motion is agreed to or disagreed to.

(b) Debate on the resolution shall be limited to not to exceed 10 hours, which shall be equally divided between those favoring and those opposing the resolution. A motion further to limit debate shall not be debatable. No amendment to, or motion to, recommit the resolution shall be in order, and it shall not be in order to move to reconsider the vote by which the resolution is agreed to or disagreed to.

Sec. 26. (a) All motions to postpone, made with respect to the discharge from committee, or the consideration of, a resolution with respect to a reorganization plan, and all motions to proceed to the consideration of other business, shall be decided without debate.

debate.

(b) All appeals from the decisions of the Chair relating to the application of the rules of the Senate or the House of Representatives, as the case may be, to the procedure relating to a resolution with respect to a reorganization plan shall be decided without

SEC. 27. If, prior to the passage by one House of a resolution of that House with respect to a reorganization plan, such House receives from the other House a resolution with respect to the same plan, then—

(a) If no resolution of the first House with respect to such plan has been referred to committee, no other resolution with respect to the same plan may be reported or (despite the provisions of section 24 (a)) be made the subject of a motion to discharge.

(b) If a resolution of the first House with respect to such plan

(b) If a resolution of the first House with respect to such plan has been referred to committee—

(1) the procedure with respect to that or other resolutions of such House with respect to such plan which have been referred to committee shall be the same as if no resolution from the other House with respect to such plan had been received; but

(2) on any vote on final passage of a resolution of the first House with respect to such plan the resolution from the other House with respect to such plan shall be automatically substituted for the resolution of the first House.

TITLE II-BUDGETARY CONTROL

SEC. 201. Section 2 of the Budget and Accounting Act, 1921 (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 31, sec. 2), is amended by inserting after the word "including" the words "any independent regulatory commission or board and."

TITLE III-ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANTS

SEC. 301. The President is authorized to appoint not to exceed six administrative assistants and to fix the compensation of each at the rate of not more than $10,000 per annum. Each such administrative assistant shall perform such duties as the President

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with sundry amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. McCormack, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 4425) to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, and for other purposes, had directed him to report the same back to the House with sundry amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill and all amendments to final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment?

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I demand a separate vote on the Sumners amendment.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded on any other amendment? If not, the Chair will put them in gross.

The amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the Sumners amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 6, line 1, after the word "the", strike out the words "two Houses a concurrent" and insert in lieu thereof the words "Senate or the House of Representatives a"; and in line 2 of said page, after the word "that", strike out the words "the Congress" and insert in lieu thereof the word "it", so that subsection (a) of section 5, which it is proposed hereby to amend, will read as follows: "Upon the expiration of 60 calendar days after the date on which the plan is transmitted to the Congress, but only if during such 60-day period there has not been passed by the Senate or the House of Representatives a resolution stating in substance that it does not favor the reorganization plan."

All

An An

An An Are

Au

Bat Bei Bla Bol

Brs

Bre Bur Cal Car Car Car Chi Chi

Chi Cla Cle

Clu Cof Col Col Cor Cro Cro Cro

Cui Dar

Dir Dit Dot

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment. Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, on this vote I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were-yeas 193, nays 209, not voting 32, as follows:

[Roll No. 26]

	YEA	AS—193
exander len, Ill.	Dowell Drewry	Kean Kennedy, Martin	Rockefeller Rodgers, Pa.
len. Pa.	Dworshak	Kinzer Kinzer	Rogers, Mass.
dersen, H. Carl		Kleberg	Routzohn
derson, Mo.	Edmiston	Knutson	Rutherford
dresen, A. H.	Elliott	Kunkel
drews	Elston	Lambertson	Sandager
ngell	Engel	Landis	Satterfield
ends	Englebright	Lanham	Schafer, Wis.
hbrook	Faddis	LeCompte	Schiffler
istin	Fenton	Lemke	Seccombe
rton	Fish		Secrest
tes. Mass.	Ford, Leland M.	Lewis, Ohio	Shafer, Mich.
ckworth	Gamble	Lord Luce	Short
nder	Gartner	McDowell	Simpson
ackney	Gehrmann		Smith, Maine
		McLaughlin	Smith, Ohio
olles	Gerlach	McLean	South
lton	Gibbs	McLeod	Spence
ren	Gifford	Maas	Springer
adley, Mich.	Gilchrist	Mapes	Stefan
ewster	Gillie	Marshall	Sumner, Ill.
own, Ohio	Graham	Martin, Iowa	Sumners, Tex.
rdick	Grant, Ind.	Martin, Mass.	Taber
ldwell	Griswold	Mason	Talle
nnon, Fla.	Gross	May	Taylor, Tenn.
rlson	Guyer, Kans.	Michener	Thill
rter	Gwynne	Miller	Thomas, N. J.
se, S. Dak.	Hall	Monkiewicz	Thorkelson
apman	Halleck	Moser	Tibbott
iperfield	Hancock	Mott	Tinkham
urch	Harness	Mundt	Treadway
ason	Harter, N. Y.	Murray	Van Zandt
evenger	Hawks	O'Brien	Vorys, Ohio
uett	Heinke	Oliver	Vreeland
ffee, Nebr.	Hess	Patton	Wadsworth
le, Md.	Hinshaw	Pierce, N. Y.	Welch
le, N. Y.	Hobbs	Pittenger	West
llins	Hoffman	Plumley	Wheat
rbett	Holmes	Poage	White, Ohio
awford	Hope	Powers	Wigglesworth
osser	Horton	Rankin	Williams, Del.
owther	Hull	Reece, Tenn.	Winter
lkin	Jarrett	Reed, Ill.	Wolcott
rtis	Jenkins, Ohio	Reed, N. Y.	Wolfenden, Pa.
rrow	Jensen	Rees, Kans.	Wolverton, N. J.
rksen	Johns	Rich	Woodruff, Mich.
tter	Johnson, Ill.	Risk
ndero	Johnson, Ind.	Robertson
uglas	Jones, Ohio	Robsion, Ky.

NAYS-209

llen, La.	Beam	Bradley, Pa.	Buckley, N. Y.
rnold	Bland	Brooks	Bulwinkle
arden	Bloom	Brown, Ga.	Burch
arnes	Boehne	Bryson	Burgin
arry	Boland	Buck	Byrne, N. Y.
ates, Ky.	Boykin	Buckler, Minn.	Byrns, Tenn.

Byron	Gore	McMillan, John L
Cannon, Mo.	Gossett	McMillan, Thos. 8	3.Sacks
Cartwright	Grant, Ala.	Maciejewski	Sasscer
Casey, Mass.	Green	Magnuson	Schaefer, Ill.
Celler	Gregory	Mahon	Schuetz
Chandler	Griffith	Maloney	Schulte
Clark	Hare	Marcantonio	Schwert
Claypool	Harrington	Martin, Colo.	Scrugham
Cochran	Hart	Martin, Ill.	Shanley
Coffee, Wash.	Harter, Ohio	Massingale	Shannon
Colmer	Havenner	Merritt	Sheppard
Connery	Healey	Mills, Ark.	Sirovich
Cooley	Hendricks	Mills, La.	Smith, Conn.
Cooper	Hennings	Monroney	Smith, Ill.
Costello	Hill	Mouton	Smith, Va.
Cox	Hook	Murdock, Ariz.	Smith, Wash.
Crowe	Houston	Murdock, Utah	Smith, W. Va.
Cullen	Hunter	Myers	Snyder
Cummings	Izac	Nelson	Somers, N. Y.
D'Alesandro	Jacobsen	Nichols	Sparkman
Darden	Jarman	Norrell	Steagall
Delaney	Johnson, Luther A		Sullivan
Dempsey	Johnson, Okla.	O'Connor	Sutphin
DeRouen	Johnson, W. Va.	O'Day	Sweeney
		O'Leary	Tarver
Dickstein	Jones, Tex.	O'Neal	Tenerowicz
Dingell	Kee	O'Toole
Doxey	Keller		Terry
Duncan	Kelly	Owen	Thomas, Tex.
Dunn	Kennedy, Michael		Thomason
Durham	Kennedy, Md.	Parsons	Tolan
Eberharter	Keogh	Patman	Turner
Ellis	Kilday	Patrick	Vincent, Ky.
Fay	Kirwan	Pearson	Vinson, Ga.
Fernandez	Kitchens	Peterson, Fla.	Voorhis, Calif.
Fitzpatrick	Kocialkowski	Peterson, Ga.	Wallgren
Flaherty	Kramer	Pfeifer	Walter
Flannagan	Larrabee	Pierce, Oreg.	Warren
Flannery	Lea	Polk	Weaver
Folger	Leavy	Rabaut	White, Idaho
Ford, Miss.	Lesinski	Ramspeck	Whittington
Ford, Thomas F.	Lewis, Colo.	Randolph	Williams, Mo.
Fries	Ludlow	Rayburn	Woodrum, Va.
Fulmer	McAndrews	Richards	Zimmerman
Garrett	McArdle	Robinson, Utah	The Speaker
Gathings	McCormack	Rogers, Okla.
Gavagan	McGranery	Romjue
Geyer, Calif.	McKeough	Ryan
	Action to the second se

Jenks, N. H. Osmers Anderson, Calif. Doughton Jenks, N. H.
Johnson, Lyndon Seger
Starnes, Ala. Ball Bell Eaton, N. J. Keefe Kerr McGehee Evans Ferguson Gearhart Stearns, N. H. Taylor, Colo. Creal Curley McReynolds Mansfield Daly Goldsborough Whelchel eld Mitchell Youngdahl Disney Jeffries

NOT VOTING-32

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call my name.

The Clerk called the name of Mr. BANKHEAD, and he answered "nay."

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On the vote:

Mr. Eaton of New Jersey (for) with Mr. Doughton (against).
Mr. Jeffries (for) with Mr. Mansfield (against).
Mr. Keefe (for) with Mr. Curley (against).
Mr. Stearns of New Hampshire (for) with Mr. Bell (against).
Mr. Hartley (for) with Mr. Kerr (against).
Mr. Ball (for) with Mr. Starnes of Alabama (against).
Mr. Jenks of New Hampshire (for) with Mr. McReynolds (against).
Mr. Osmers (for) with Mr. Evans (against).
Mr. Seger (for) with Mr. Daly (against).
Mr. Youngdahl (for) with Mr. McGeehee (against).
Mr. Anderson of California (for) with Mr. Disney (against).

General pairs:

Mr. Dies with Mr. Gearhart. Mr. Taylor of Colorado with Mr. Creal. Mr. Wood with Mr. Mitchell. Mr. Ferguson with Mr. Whelchel.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded. The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit. The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill? Mr. TABER. I am.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. TABER moves to recommit the bill to the Select Committee on Government Organization with instructions to report the same back forthwith with the following amendment: Page 5, line 21, to page 6, line 9, strike out all of section 5 and insert in lieu thereof:

"SEC. 5. The reorganization specified in the plan shall not become effective until after the enactment of a joint resolution specifically approving such plan. Any such joint resolution shall provide for the approval of such plan as a whole, without modifications, and shall contain no other provisions. If any such joint resolution providing for the approval of any such plan is introduced in either House, it shall at once become the special order therein and that House shall proceed to its consideration, without reference to a committee; and, not later than 1 hour after the House meets on the twentieth calendar day (Sundays excepted) after the day on which such joint resolution was introduced, a vote shall be taken in that House on the question of the passage of a joint resolution approving such plan. If any such joint resolution is passed by one House, it shall be sent to the other House, and that House shall immmediately proceed to its consideration, without reference to a committee. Not later than 1 hour after that House meets on the twentieth calendar day (Sundays excepted) after it has received such joint resolution, a final vote shall be taken in that House on the question of the passage of such joint resolution. No notice or motion to reconsider the vote shall be in order." "SEC. 5. The reorganization specified in the plan shall not become

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to recommit

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from New York to recommit the bill.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DINGELL. Does this motion to recommit contain the so-called Kleberg amendment in disguise?

The SPEAKER. The Chair is not prepared to answer that parliamentary inquiry.

The question was taken; and there were-yeas 163, nays 236, not voting 34, as follows:

[Roll No. 271 YEAS-163

Alexander	Eaton, Calif.	Kinzer	Rodgers, Pa.
Allen, Ill.	Elston	Kleberg	Rogers, Mass.
Allen, Pa.	Engel	Knutson	Routzohn
Andersen, H. Carl	Englebright	Kunkel	Rutherford
Andresen, A. H.	Fenton	Lambertson	Sandager
Andrews	Fish	Landis	Schafer, Wis.
Angell	Ford, Leland M.	Lanham	Schiffler
Arends	Gamble	LeCompte	Seccombe
Austin	Gartner	Lemke	Secrest
Barton	Gerlach	Lewis, Ohio	Shafer, Mich.
Bates, Mass.	Gifford	Lord	Short
Bender	Gilchrist	Luce	Simpson
Blackney	Gillie	McDowell	Smith, Maine
Bolles	Graham	McLean	Smith, Ohio
Bolton	Grant, Ind.	McLeod	Springer
Bradley, Mich.	Griswold	Maas	Stefan
Brewster	Gross	Mapes	Sumner, Ill.
Brown, Ohio	Guyer, Kans.	Marshall	Taber
Burdick	Gwynne	Martin, Iowa	Talle
Carlson	Hall	Martin, Mass.	Taylor, Tenn.
Carter	Halleck	Mason	Thill
Case, S. Dak.	Hancock	Michener	Thomas, N. J.
Chapman	Harness	Miller	Thorkelson
Chiperfield	Harter, N. Y.	Monkiewicz	Tibbott
Church	Hawks	Mott	Tinkham
Clason	Heinka	Mundt	Treadway
Clevenger	Hess	Murray	Van Zandt
Cluett	Hinshaw	O'Brien	Vorys, Ohio
Cole, N. Y.	Hoffman	Oliver	Vreeland
Corbett	Holmes	Pierce, N. Y.	Wadsworth
Crawford	Hope	Pittenger	West
Crowther	Horton	Plumley	Wheat
Culkin	Hull	Powers	White, Ohio
Curtis	Jarrett	Reece, Tenn.	Wigglesworth
Darrow	Jenkins, Ohio	Reed, Ill.	Williams, Del.
Dirksen	Jensen	Reed, N. Y.	Winter
Ditter	Johns	Rees, Kans.	Wolcott
Dondero	Johnson, Ill.	Rich	Wolfenden, Pa.
Douglas	Johnson, Ind.	Risk	Wolverton, N. J.
Dowell	Jones, Ohio	Robsion, Ky.	Woodruff, Mich.
Dworshak	Kean	Rockefeller	STORY THE STORY

NAYS-236

len. La.	Boykin	Cannon, Fla.	Cooper
derson, Mo.	Bradley, Pa.	Cannon, Mo.	Costello
nold	Brooks	Cartwright	Cox
hbrook	Brown, Ga.	Casey, Mass.	Crosser
rden	Bryson	Celler	Crowe
rnes	Buck	Chandler	Cullen
rry	Buckler, Minn.	Clark	Cummings
tes. Ky.	Buckley N. Y.	Claypool	D'Alesandro am	Bulwinkle	Cochran	Darden
ckworth	Burch	Coffee, Nebr.	Delaney
and	Burgin	Coffee, Wash.	Dempsey
oom	Byrne, N. Y.	Cole, Md.	DeRouen
ehne	Byrns, Tenn.	Colmer	Dickstein land	Byron	Connery	Dingell
ren	Caldwell	Cooley	Doxey

An Ari Asi Ba Ba Ba Ba Be Be

Bla Bla Bo

Satterfield Schaefer, Ill.

Schuetz Schulte

Schwert

Scrugham Shanley

Sheppard Sirovich Smith, Conn. Smith, Ill.

Smith, Va. Smith, Wash. Smith, W. Va.

Snyder Somers, N. Y.

Sumners, Tex.

South Sparkman Spence

Steagall Sullivan

Sutphin

Sweeney

Tolan Turner

Walter

Warren

Weaver

Welch

Tarver Tenerowicz

Terry Thomason

Vincent, Ky.

Vinson, Ga. Voorhis, Calif. Wallgren

White, Idaho Whittington Williams, Mo. Woodrum, Va.

Zimmerman

Starnes, Ala. Stearns, N. H. Taylor, Colo.

Thomas, Tex. Whelchel

Youngdahl

Wood

Shannon

Drewry	Hunter	Mills, Ark.
Duncan	Izac	Mills, La.
Dunn	Jacobsen	Monroney
Durham	Jarman	Moser
Eberharter	Johnson, Luther A
Edmiston	Johnson, Okla.	Murdock, Ariz.
Elliott	Johnson, W. Va.	Murdock, Utah
Ellis	Jones, Tex.	Myers
Faddis	Kee	Nelson
Fay	Keller	Nichols
Fernandez	Kelly	Norrell
Fitzpatrick	Kennedy, Martin	Norton
Flaherty	Kennedy, Michael	O'Connor
Flannagan	Kennedy, Md.	O'Day
Flannery	Keogh	O'Leary
Folger	Kilday	O'Neal
Ford, Miss.	Kirwan	O'Toole
Ford, Thomas F.	Kitchens	Owen
Fries	Kocialkowski	Pace
Fulmer	Kramer	Parsons
Garrett	Larrabee	Patman
Gathings	Lea	Patrick
Gavagan	Leavy	Patton
Gehrmann	Lesinski	Pearson
Geyer, Calif.	Lewis, Colo.	Peterson, Fla.
Gibbs	Ludlow	Peterson, Ga.
Gore	McAndrews	Pfeifer
Gossett	McArdle	Pierce, Oreg.
Grant. Ala.	McCormack	Poage
Green	McGranery	Polk
	McKeough	Rabaut
Gregory
Griffith	McLaughlin	Ramspeck
Hare	McMillan, John L.	Randolph
Harrington	McMillan, Thos. S
Hart	Maciejewski	Rayburn
Harter, Ohio	Magnuson	Richards
Havenner	Mahon	Robertson
Healey	Maloney	Robinson, Utah
Hendricks	Marcantonio	Rogers, Okla.
Hennings	Martin, Colo.	Romjue
HIII	Martin, Ill.	Ryan
Hobbs	Massingale	Sabath
Hook	May	Sacks
Houston	Merritt	Sasscer

Anderson, Calif.	Doughton	Johnson, Lyndon
Ball	Eaton, N. J.	Keefe
Bell	Evans	Kerr
Collins	Ferguson	McGehee
Creal	Gearhart	McReynolds
Curley	Goldsborough	Mansfield
Daly	Hartley	Mitchell
Dies	Jeffries	Osmers
Disney	Jenks, N. H.	Seger

So the motion to recommit was rejected. The Clerk announced the following pairs: On this vote:

Mr. Eaton of New Jersey (for) with Mr. Doughton (against).
Mr. Jeffries (for) with Mr. Mansfield (against).
Mr. Keefe (for) with Mr. Curley (against).
Mr. Stearns of New Hampshire (for) with Mr. Bell (against).
Mr. Hartley (for) with Mr. Kerr (against).
Mr. Ball (for) with Mr. Starnes of Alabama (against).
Mr. Jenks of New Hampshire (for) with Mr. McReynolds (against).
Mr. Osmers (for) with Mr. Evans (against).
Mr. Seger (for) with Mr. Daly (against).
Mr. Youngdahl (for) with Mr. McGehee (against).
Mr. Gearhart (for) with Mr. Thomas of Texas (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. Taylor of Colorado with Mr. Creal. Mr. Wood with Mr. Mitchell. Mr. Ferguson with Mr. Whelchel. Mr. Dles with Mr. Goldsborough.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded. The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the hill

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, on the final passage I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I also ask for the yeas and navs.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Bryson

The question was taken; and there were-yeas 246, nays 153, not voting 34, as follows:

[Roll No. 28]

Allen, La. Bland Anderson, Mo. Arnold Bloom Boehne Ashbrook Boland Boren Boykin Bradley, Pa. Barden Barnes Barry Bates, Ky. Brooks Brown, Ga. Beckworth

YEAS-246 Buckler, Minn. Buckley, N. Y. Bulwinkle Burch Burgin Byrne, N. Y. Byrns, Tenn. Byron Caldwell

Cannon, Fla. Cannon, Mo. Cartwright
Casey, Mass.
Celler
Chandler Chapman Clark Claypool Cochran

Coffee, Nebr. Coffee, Wash. Cole, Md. Collins Colmer Connery Cooley Cooper Costello Cox Crosser Crowe Cullen Cummings D'Alesandro Darden Dempsey DeRouen Dickstein Dingell Doxey Drewry Duncan Dunn Durham Eaton, Calif. Eberharter Edmiston Elliott Ellis Faddis Fay Fernandez Fitzpatrick Flaherty Flannagan Flannery Folger Ford, Miss. Ford, Thomas F. Fries Fulmer Garrett Gathings Gavagan Gehrmann Geyer, Calif. Gibbs Gore Gossett Grant, Ala.

Alexander

Allen, Ill. Allen, Pa.

Andrews Angell

Bates, Mass. Bender

Blackney

Bolton Bradley, Mich.

Brewster Brown, Ohio Burdick

Carlson

Clason

Carter Case, S. Dak.

Chiperfield Church

Clevenger Cole, N. Y. Corbett

Crawford Crowther

Culkin

Curtis

Darrow

Ditter

Dirksen

Dondero Douglas

Dworshak

Dowell

Arends Austin Barton

Andersen, H. Carl Andresen, A. H.

Maciejewski Magnuson Mahon Green Gregory Griffith Hare Harrington Maloney Mapes Marcantonio Hart Harter, Ohio Martin, Colo. Martin, Ill. Havenner Healey Hendricks Massingale May Merritt Hennings Mills, Ark. Mills, La. Hobbs Hook Hope Houston Monroney Moser Mouton Hull Murdock, Ariz. Murdock, Utah Hunter Izac Jacobsen Myers Nelson Jarman Nichols Johnson, Luther A Johnson, Okla. Johnson, W. Va. Jones, Tex. Kee Keller Kelly Kennedy, Martin Kennedy, Michael Kennedy, Md. Keogh Kilday Kirwan Kitchens Knutson Kocialkowski Kramer Larrabee Lea Leavy Lewis, Colo. Ludlow McAndrews McArdle McCormack McGranery McKeough Robertson
McLaughlin Robinson, Utah
McMillan, John L. Rogers, Okia.
McMillan, Thos. S.Romjue

Norton O'Connor O'Day O'Leary O'Neal O'Toole Parsons Patrick Patton Pearson Peterson, Fla. Peterson, Ga. Pfeifer Pierce, Oreg. Poage Polk Rabaut Ramspeck Randolph Rankin Rayburn Reece, Tenn. Richards

Rvan Sabath Sacks Satterfield Schaefer, Ill. Schuetz Schulte Schwert Scrugham Shanley Shannon Sheppard Sirovich Smith, Conn. Smith, Ill. Smith, Va. Smith, Wash. Smith, W. Va. Snyder Somers, N. Y. South Sparkman Spence Steagall Sullivan Sumners, Tex. Sutphin Sweeney Tenerowicz Terry Thomason Tolan
Turner
Vincent, Ky.
Vinson, Ga.
Voorhis, Calif. Wadsworth Wallgren Walter Warren Weaver Welch White, Idaho Whittington Williams, Mo. Wolverton, N. J. Woodrum, Va. Zimmerman

NAYS-153

Kleberg Kunkel Elston Engel Englebright Fenton Landis Lanham Fish Ford, Leland M. Gamble Gartner Gerlach Gifford Luce Gilchrist McLean Grahan. McLeod Grant, Ind. Griswold Maas Marshall Gross Guyer, Kans. Gwynne Hall Mason Michener Halleck Miller Hancock Mott Mundt Harness Harter, N. Y. Hawks Heinke Murray O'Brien Hess Hinshaw Oliver Hoffman Holmes Plumley Powers Reed, Ill. Jarrett Jenkins, Ohio Jensen Johns Johnson, Ill Johnson, Ind. Jones, Ohio Robsion, Ky. Rockefeller Rodgers, Pa Kean Kinzer Rogers, Mass

Routzohn Rutherford Lambertson Sandager Schafer, Wis. Schiffler Seccombe Secrest Shafer, Mich. LeCompte Lemke Lewis, Ohio Short Simpson Smith, Maine Smith, Ohio McDowell Springer Stefan Sumner, Ill. Martin, Iowa Martin, Mass Taber Talle Taylor, Tenn. Thill Thomas, N. J. Thorkelson Tibbott Tinkham Monkiewicz Treadway Van Zandt Van Zandt Vorys, Ohio Vreeland West Wheat White, Ohio Wigglesworth Williams, Del. Pierce, N. Y. Pittenger Reed, N. Y. Rees, Kans. Rich Risk Winter Wolfenden, Pa. Woodruff, Mich.

NOT VOTING-34 Johnson, Lyndon

Keefe Kerr

McGehee McReynolds Mansfield

Mitchell

Osmers

Seger

Anderson, Calif. Ball Bell Doughton Eaton, N. J. Evans Ferguson Cluett Creal Curley Daly Dies Disney Gearhart Goldsborough Hartley Jenks, N. H.

So the bill was passed.

Starnes, Ala. Stearns, N. H. Taylor, Colo. Thomas, Tex. Whelchel Wood Youngdahl

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs: On this vote:

Mr. Doughton (for) with Mr. Eaton of New Jersey (against).
Mr. Mansfield (for) with Mr. Jeffries (against).
Mr. Curley (for) with Mr. Keefe (against).
Mr. Bell (for) with Mr. Stearns of New Hampshire (against).
Mr. Kerr (for) with Mr. Hartley (against).
Mr. Starnes of Alabama (for) with Mr. Ball (against).
Mr. Starnes of Alabama (for) with Mr. Ball (against).
Mr. Evans (for) with Mr. Jenks of New Hampshire (against).
Mr. Evans (for) with Mr. Osmers (against).
Mr. Daly (for) with Mr. Seger (against).
Mr. McGehee (for) with Mr. Youngdahl (against).
Mr. Disney (for) with Mr. Anderson of California (against).
Mr. Thomas of Texas (for) with Mr. Gearhart (against).
My Lyndon B. Johnson (for) with Mr. Cluett (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. Taylor of Colorado with Mr. Creal, Mr. Wood with Mr. Mitchell. Mr. Ferguson with Mr. Whelchel. Mr. Dies with Mr. Goldsborough.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded. A motion to reconsider the vote whereby the bill was passed was laid on the table.

INDEPENDENT OFFICES APPROPRIATION BILL, 1940-CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I submit a conference report on the bill (H. R. 3743) making appropriations for the Executive Office and sundry independent executive bureaus, boards, commissions, and offices, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes, for printing under the rule.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I submit a conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 2868) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for other purposes, for printing under the rule.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. Whelchel, indefinitely, on account of illness.

To Mr. JEFFRIES (at the request of Mr. Wolverton), indefinitely, on account of illness.

To Mr. Kramer, for 7 days, on account of official business. To Mr. STARNES of Alabama (at the request of Mr. SPARKMAN), for the remainder of the week, on account of important business in his district.

To Mr. Faddis, for 2 days, on account of important business.

MILK INVESTIGATION-DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. SMITH of Virginia, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following resolution (Rept. No. 180) for printing under the rule.

House Resolution 113

House Resolution 113

Resolved, That the House Committee on the District of Columbia, or a duly authorized subcommittee thereof, be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to make a full and complete investigation of (1) the sources and purity of the milk and cream supply of the District of Columbia; (2) of any violation of the law of the District of Columbia or regulations of the District Commissioners made pursuant thereto with respect to the importation of milk or cream into the District of Columbia or importation of unlicensed milk or cream into the District of Columbia and the method by which such violations are perpetrated; (3) the possible effect upon the health of the community by reason of the unlawful importation of unlicensed milk or cream into the District of Columbia; (4) whether and to what extent cream for ice cream purposes, under section 4 of the 1925 Milk Act of the District of Columbia; is being diverted unlawfully to milk or cream for fluid consumption; (5) whether any conspiracy exists on the part of any distributor of any dairy products to violate the provisions of the 1925 District Milk Act or the regulations made pursuant thereto.

The said committee or any subcommittee thereof is hereby authorized for the purpose of this resolution to subpena and require the production of the books and records of any person, firm, or corporation licensed to import milk or cream into the District of Columbia or unlawfully importing milk or cream into the District of Columbia or unlawfully importing milk or cream into the District of Columbia or unlawfully importing milk or cream into the District of Summittee or any subcommittee thereof is hereby authorized to sit and act at such times and places within the United States, whether the House is sitting or has recessed or has adjourned, to hold such hearings, to require the attendance of such witnesses, and the production of such books or papers or documents or vouchers by subpena or otherwise, to take such testimony and records, and to employ such clerical and other assistants as it deems necessary. Subpenas shall be issued under the signature of the Speaker of the House at the request of the chairman of the committee and shall be served by the Sergeant at Arms of the House or by such person or persons as may be designated by him. The chairman of the committee or any member of the committee may administer oaths to witnesses. Every person who, having been summoned as a witness by authority of said special committee or any subcommittee thereof, or having been required to produce necessary books or papers or documents or vouchers by authority of said special committee or any subcommittee thereof, willfully makes default, or who, having appeared, refuses to answer any question pertinent to the study and investigation heretofore authorized, or who fails to produce such books or papers or documents or vouchers as required by subpenas, shall be held to the penalties provided in section 102 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. C., title 2, sec. 192), as amended.

That the committee or duly authorized subcommittee is authorized to call upon any agency of the District or Federal Government for the purpose of rendering assistance in carrying out the terms of this resolution.

That the said committee shall report to the House of Representatives at the earliest practicable date the result of its investigation at the said committee shall report to the House of Representatives at the earliest practicable date the result of its investigation.

That the said committee shall report to the House of Representatives at the earliest practicable date the result of its investigation, together with its recommendations for the enactment of desirable or necessary legislation or regulations.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. Sabath asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for leave of absence for 5 days on account of a death in my family, of which I have just received notice.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD by including a speech delivered on the floor of the House.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks and to include therein a speech made by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SMITH 1.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GERLACH] may be allowed to address the House for 20 minutes on Monday next after the completion of the legislative program for the day and such other special orders as may have been entered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

REORGANIZATION BILL

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, whatever defects the pending bill for the reorganization of the Government may have, it must be said it is far superior to the measure which the administration unsuccessfully endeavored to have enacted by the last Congress. This pending proposal at least makes some attempt to place some limitations on the power to be delegated to the President, whereas the defeated proposal of the Seventy-fifth Congress would have vested in the President practically unlimited powers.

Those who are familiar with the original reorganization bill, so called, which the President suggested, will well remember that it was so designed as to enable the President to abolish the entire executive branch of the Government if he so desired, with absolutely no check on the exercise of that sweeping power. He could have abolished all the independent agencies and commissions, quasi judicial and quasi legislative in character. The power to be delegated under the original proposal was so broad that, as one commentary put it, the President could abolish his own office.

It will always be difficult for the American people to understand why a measure of that kind and character should even so much as enter the minds of men living in a free country, much less be recommended for enactment to the free representatives of a free people charged with the responsibility of preserving our constitutional form of government. And it will always be difficult for the American people to understand why the President stubbornly resisted the attempts then made in Congress so to amend the proposed bill that the Congress might retain some check on the exercise of the great power it was asked to delegate. It has caused thoughtful men and women to wonder as to the true motives of those who sought such power and who insisted that no limitations be placed on it.

That is now history. Posterity will better understand and appreciate that crucial period for American democracy than those of us who lived through it and met the test.

The significance of the victory for our system of government that was won in the defeat of the New Deal reorganization bill by the Seventy-fifth Congress is, to some extent, reflected in the character of the reorganization bill now being considered by the Seventy-sixth Congress. Rather than again recommending a broad delegation of power without any limitation whatsoever, the pending bill at least attempts to place some limitations on it and at least makes semblance of leaving a check in Congress.

But the question is, How real are the limitations and how effective is the check Congress is to have under the terms of this bill on the possible arbitrary exercise of delegated

Before turning to the provisions of this specific measure, I should like to make a few observations on the subject of Government reorganization generally. I should like to comment briefly on the different kinds of reorganization plans and on the different legislative methods of putting those plans into effect. By such an examination of the subject we will bring ourselves to a better understanding of the approach this particular bill before us makes to the problem and what other methods are open to us to employ for reorganization.

From such study as I have been able to make of the problem of government reorganization, State and Federal, there seem to be three general concepts. In other words, practically all the government reorganization proposals I have had occasion to examine may be classified in one of three general concepts, dependent upon the approach each makes to the problem.

First. There is the reorganization proposal that emphasizes as its objective a transfer and regrouping of executive agencies so as to provide for a greater coordination of activities and a larger degree of supervision and control by the Chief Executive. A proposal of this character has coordination and control as its primary objective rather than economy.

Second. There is the reorganization proposal that emphasizes as its objective the actual reduction in the cost of government. It seeks a simplification of the processes of government and the elimination of all unnecessary activities with a view to obtaining actual savings for the people who bear the ever-increasing cost.

No hard and fast line can be drawn between these two classes or concepts of reorganization. The distinction lies in where the emphasis is placed and what constitutes the immediate objective, whether simply in a reshuffling of bureaus and agencies or in reducing the expense of government. Both look to a surgical operation on the executive body on which all manner of bureaus and agencies' have affixed themselves.

And there is a third type of reorganization proposal which especially commends itself to me as representing the really practical approach. It is the plan which not only looks to immediate reorganization of the Government in the interest of economy and efficiency but also definitely establishes a legislative mechanism for the orderly consideration of organization problems as they arise in the future. It must not be forgotten that even though we should today so arrange the bureaus and agencies as to place the Government on an economical basis, even though we might by some magic be able to make the entire machinery perfect, next year and the years to come will present changed conditions and new problems.

It is a serious mistake to think of Government reorganization as just something to be done today. Rather, it should be thought of as a continuous process, to be undertaken every year Congress meets. No Government reorganization can, in my judgment, be said to be complete unless at the same time we take pains to devise a practical method whereby it may be kept reorganized, so to speak, and at the same time meet new conditions and situations. An agency which may be extremely important today may readily become unnecessary tomorrow. What is economical today may be expensive tomorrow; what is efficient today may be inefficient tomorrow. A well considered reorganization plan would make provision for such future contingencies.

Let us now ask ourselves: In which of these three general classes of Government reorganization proposals should this particular bill we are considering be placed?

I regret to have to say that of the three possibilities this bill falls within the group having the least merit. In the first place, the measure does not look upon reorganization as a continuous need and responsibility in the interest of future economy and efficiency. There is not a single provision in the bill to enable the Congress to keep the Government on an economical and efficient basis. No attempt is made in any part of the bill to set up a definite procedure or mechanism whereby the Congress may effectively keep itself in touch with new conditions and activities. Such machinery could readily be established through the General Accounting Office and our standing Committee on Appropriations.

In the second place, the measure before us does not have economy as an immediate objective. It would be more accurate to say that the entire emphasis is on giving the President power to rearrange and consolidate the 132 existing agencies and bureaus so that he may exercise greater control over them. The general tone of the bill, as well as its specific provisions, make it clear that the primary purpose of the proposal is not to realize actual savings for the taxpayers but simply to change the executive structure.

This represents one of the distinguishing features between this bill, H. R. 4425, and that sponsored by the Senate Special Committee to Investigate Executive Agencies under the chairmanship of Senator Harry Byrd, of Virginia. And it is this distinguishing feature, among others, which commends the so-called Byrd bill, S. 1706, to me in preference to that before us in the House.

It is true that it is set forth in the measure before us that one of the purposes of the bill is to "reduce expenditures to the fullest extent consistent with the efficient operation of the Government." Other than those few words, practically no attention is given to economy.

In comparison I would like to call your special attention to the opening section of the Byrd bill. It not only contains the words just quoted from the bill we are considering, but the Byrd bill by declaration emphasizes economy as an objection. Let me read the language to be found in section 1 (a) not to be found anywhere in the administration's bill:

The Congress hereby declares that a serious emergency exists by reason of continued national deficits; that it is imperative to reduce drastically Government expenditures; and that such reduction may be accomplished in great measure by proceedings immediately under the provisions of this act.

That language solemnly declares to the President that the power to be exercised under the terms of the bill in the reorganization of the Government is not simply to reshuffle bureaus and agencies but definitely to realize economy. It solemnly declares to the President that economy is to be immediate objective in any plan he may submit. But no such declaration is contained in the administration's bill we are debating, notwithstanding the fact that our national debt is rapidly approaching $50,000,000,000, and the Secretary of the Treasury has recently recommended that the existing statutory limitation of $45,000,000,000 be raised.

And, Mr. Speaker, there are certain other distinguishing features between this New Deal bill and the Byrd bill along this same line that should be noted in passing as indicating difference between the two as relating to needed economy. In section 3 (c), (d), and (e) of the Byrd bill are to be found carefully worded provisions to prevent the continuance of temporary or emergency agencies beyond the period authorized by law and to prevent there being any increase in the agencies.

The importance of those restrictive provisions in the Byrd bill cannot be overemphasized. Of the list of 132 existing agencies as of January 1, 1937, compiled by the Brookings Institution, 35 of them were created by the President himself or by other executive agencies. They were not created by law or specifically authorized by law. They were simply created out of the innumerable delegations of power made to the President during the last 6 years and funds were allotted to them by the President out of the blank-check appropriations New Deal Congresses have been making for the President's disposition. And, it is of interest to note that 8 of these agencies were established without even a formal Executive order, but rather simply by a letter or informal memorandum out of the White House.

For obvious reasons, if we are ever to realize economy in government, if we are ever to accomplish a reorganization to simplify the processes of government, such practices on the part of this President or any other President must stop. To make certain that it will be stopped the Byrd bill makes specific provision to preclude it.

And there is still another distinguishing feature of the Byrd bill which indicates it has economy as an immediate objective as compared to the administration's bill we have under consideration. In section 4 of the Byrd bill, page 6. will be found a provision requiring a far more rigid report from the President showing the increase or decrease in expenditures which will result from any reorganization plan he may submit under the power delegated, than is required by this House bill.

I am convinced, Mr. Speaker, that a careful study of the measure before us today on the administration's recommendation employs the least effective of three possible reorganization concepts. It makes no provision for reorganization as a continuing process, and it makes no definite avowal or even pretense of accomplishing an actual reduction in the cost of government. While the Byrd bill falls short of what might be done for a really practical and effective reorganization plan, nonetheless it is a far superior measure to H. R. 4425, the administration sponsors.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I would like to turn from the question of plans of reorganization and their objectives to legislative methods of putting the plans into effect. In many respects this may be said to be the most important part of the entire subject, inasmuch as it seriously involves our system of government. It is on this phase of the subject of reorganization that most of the controversy in Congress

As I view the question of methods that might be employed for accomplishing a reorganization, there are five possibilities, bearing in mind that our system of government is one of "checks and balances" we are under oath to preserve.

First. There is the orthodox method, strictly in keeping with the principles of this democracy. Instead of making any delegation of power to the President, simply leave it to him to recommend any changes in existing laws affecting organization and Government activities and leave it to Congress to enact the recommendations into law. Or, even without any Presidential suggestion or recommendation, Congress could proceed to pass various bills for reorganizations.

This is the customary legislative procedure. It is the procedure the founders of our Government would insist upon. It is the procedure in keeping with the established principles of our democracy, whereby the Executive and the Congress cooperate but one operates as a definite check on the other.

Being the orthodox procedure in our democracy, I suppose we should naturally expect the new dealers to reject it. Judging from the nature of a great many bills the New Deal has enacted in the last 6 years, delegations of power and blank-check appropriations, as well as the defeated Supreme Court plan, anything that is orthodox and in keeping with the Constitution is just naturally taboo to the New Deal. For some reason the new dealers seem to be endowed with an innate dislike for anything that is orthodox. And so, as to be expected, this method of proceeding toward a reorganization is not employed by the administration in this bill.

Second. There is the method whereby Congress delegates certain powers to the President to issue reorganization orders or plans, but they are not to become effective until approved by the House and Senate by joint resolution. Under this procedure Congress must act on the question of approval or disapproval within a certain specified number of days after the joint resolution for approval is introduced. which is made a special order of business. The obvious advantage to be gained by the administration by this method is that no amendment can be made to the plan submitted and all possible committee difficulties are eliminated. It brings the question of approval promptly to a vote.

This is the method embodied in the Byrd bill, allowing 20 days within which each body of Congress must act after the resolution is introduced. While there is a delegation of power to the President, he can exercise that power only with the positive approval by Congress. His plan for reorganization cannot be emasculated by House and Senate amendments, but the plan does not become effective without an expression of approval by the House and Senate.

This method of procedure clearly leaves a check on the Executive by the people's representatives in Congress. It constitutes a protection against the possible arbitrary exercise of power by the Executive. It gives the President freedom to act but at the same time preserves the principle of checks and balances. And we cannot to greatly stress how important it is that Congress have a check on the delegate power, even though it may never have occasion to use it in refusing approval of any plan the Executive may propose.

But apparently this method of procedure is also much too orthodox for the new dealers, who have demonstrated their impatience with the democracy. For some reason they have a natural dislike for any effective check in Congress on the exercise of any delegated power to the Executive.

And so we will have to turn to the third possible method of procedure which is not quite so orthodox and which would leave less control in the hands of Congress. Power can be delegated to the President to issue Executive orders for reorganization and provide that those orders become effective unless either the House or Senate pass a resolution within a certain specified number of days to negative it or set it aside. This method gives the Executive order full force and effect of law unless one or the other House of Congress acts within 20 days, let us say, to set it aside.

But this method also leaves too much of a check on the President and his advisers to satisfy the new dealers. While the action to be taken by Congress is purely of a negative nature and there is a time limitation within which the action must be taken, only one House need to act within that time to prevent the Executive order from being law. And that method was rejected by the new dealers.

We must then turn to the fourth possible method of procedure in putting a reorganization of the Government into effect. We must depart still further from the orthodox method of legislative procedure if we are to find the scheme suggested by the New Deal. And we thus come to the device set out in this particular bill.

In section 5 it provides that the Executive order or orders of the President will become effective unless within 60 days both the House and Senate pass a concurrent resolution to set it aside. Obviously, this method makes the check of Congress even less effective, because both Houses of Congress must act. So long as the President and his advisers can block action in one of the Houses of Congress the Executive order will go entirely unchecked, regardless of what the other House may desire. And you and I know that pap, patronage, pressure, and projects have shown themselves to be rather effective means employed by the new dealers in influencing the House or Senate.

Drastic limitations are placed on the debate under the terms of this provision, even in face of the stipulation in the Constitution to the effect that each House of Congress will have control over its own rules of procedure and debate. Assume that the President should issue an Executive order embodying a plan for the complete revision of the Government, abolishing functions of departments and agencies, and nullifying laws now on the statute books; and assume that the complicated plan covers several hundred, perhaps thousands of pages; under the terms of this bill, limiting the time within which Congress can consider the proposal, it would not be possible to consider the plan and all its implications.

One can best obtain a picture of the breadth of the power delegated to the President by this particular bill by turning to the language employed in section 4 (c) on page 4. It speaks of what the President's reorganization plans may embody in the following language:

the abolition of the whole or any part of any executive agency or the functions thereof.

There are thus two questions to be answered in an interpretation of the power that vests under that language in the President: What is an executive agency? And, secondly, what is a function? It is important that we understand the meaning of those terms in understanding what the President may abolish and actually do.

The definition of the term "executive agency" is to be found on page 2, section 2. It reads:

When used in this title, the term "executive agency" means any executive department, commission, independent establishment, corporation owned or controlled by the United States, board, bureau, division, service, office, authority, or administration in the executive branch of the Government.

In short, the term "executive agency" was defined broad enough to include every single part of the executive branch of the Government. The term is defined as the whole administrative machinery that exists, from a Cabinet officer to some minor office. Subject to the few limitations to be found in section 3, page 3, the President is thus to be delegated power to abolish practically the whole of our administrative machinery.

Now, what does the word "functions" mean, which the President may abolish? It can be given only one construction. That word "functions" means policies of government. In other words, by the language of section 4 (c) the President is delegated the power to abolish existing policies and thus to declare null and void practically every law on the statute books, of which it is a function of the respective executive agencies to administer.

Is not the power to abolish functions, change policies, and to declare our laws null and void a power that is sweeping in nature? Yet that is the very power we are asked here to delegate.

It is alleged that the limitation in section 3, on page 3, does not permit the President to abolish or transfer an established executive department under the respective Cabinet officers. I ask that you note carefully the language of section 3 and (a):

SEC. 3. No reorganization plan under section 4 shall provide—
(a) For the abolition or transfer of an executive department or all the functions thereof.

Note carefully it says no plan can abolish "all the functions" of an executive department. But the President can abolish some of the functions of an executive department. He can abolish 1 percent of them or 99 percent. As a practical matter, while he cannot completely wipe out an executive department, he can wipe out 99 percent of its functions and thus reduce it to something of no importance or consequence. And so that limitation is not as real as it would at first blush appear.

Yet such far-reaching action would go into effect regardless, under an Executive order unless both the Senate and House set it aside within 60 days. And do not forget that a calendar day of 60 days may amount to only 30 legislative days, or less, insofar as the actual consideration of the President's plan may be given by Congress. And do not overlook the fact that the Senate has unlimited debate, and it is perfectly possible for a filibuster to take place so as to preclude any action by the Senate within the time limitation placed on Congress to set aside a drastic reorganization plan. Unless the Senate, as well as the House, unless both bodies adopt a resolution within 60 days, the President's plan would go into effect.

Mr. Speaker, this method is unorthodox and unprecedented. It delegates broad power to the President, enabling him to abolish functions of Government and thereby change the policies of our laws and Government. But it leaves Congress without any effective check on the exercise of that power. It sets up a negative procedure instead of providing that Congress should act affirmatively and directly. And this was, accordingly, the method selected by the New Deal in preference to all the other possible methods I have just explained.

There is, to be sure, a fifth possible method of procedure still less orthodox. That is by simply delegating the power to the President without any check at all, not even a negative one, in the hands of Congress. That was the method the New Deal embodied in the reorganization bill we defeated last Congress. It being apparent that our people will not stand for such procedure, the administration selected the method that would be the nearest thing to the delegation of power without a check by Congress. They have suggested a negative check, to be sure, but have taken pains that it is not particularly effective.

The issue here is not whether we should reorganize the Government. We are face to face with a deadly bureaucracy. Not a single Member on this floor questions the need for elimination and consolidation of useless bureaus and agencies. We desire economy in Government, for we are rapidly approaching national bankruptcy.

But, Mr. Speaker, in setting ourselves to that task it is not necessary that we depart from the established principles of our form of government. The strength of our democracy has always been the system of checks and balances, and it is our responsibility to preserve that system. Any delegation of legislative power must be carefully curbed. It is a precaution that should be one of our first considerations, particularly in this day when democracy is made the subject of internal and external attacks. We must recognize potential dangers to the rights and liberties of our people. No one of us can look into the future to determine what tomorrow may produce, what precedent we may establish today will constitute the very instrument employed in a future day to destroy the very foundations of this democracy.

I do not know why the administration continues to insist upon our adopting the most unorthodox method it can find to accomplish a very desirable purpose. I just cannot understand why it should object to the method embodied in the Byrd bill for realizing Government reorganization in the interest of economy by a method that recognizes the system of checks and balances of our form of government. Why is affirmative approval by Congress of an Executive order too much to require before it goes into effect? Why is it necessary to provide that the order, regardless of how far-reaching it may be, will go into effect unless both the House and Senate set it aside?

Mr. Speaker, there is one thing I insist upon and that is that we do not undermine our democracy. And this bill is another step in that direction against which I feel compelled to raise my voice in behalf of the people I represent. I can approve the Byrd bill, but I cannot approve the Warren-Cochran bill, which follows the New Deal philosophy of delegating unlimited powers to the Executive with no effective check remaining in Congress. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. Under the special order of the House heretofore entered, the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. Horton] is entitled to be recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include therein a resolution passed by the Legislature of the State of Wyoming.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered. There was no objection.

REPEAL OF SIXTEENTH AMENDMENT

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I hold in my hand a house joint memorial which was passed, almost unanimously, a few days ago, by the legislature of my home State, Wyoming, in which they go on record as favoring the repeal of the sixteenth amendment, and of placing a constitutional limitation of 25 percent on income and death taxes, which can be levied and collected by the Federal Government. I believe, Mr. Speaker, that Wyoming is the first State to take this significant step, and is therefore worthy of comment.

Since Wyoming has no State income tax, and no large income that could, by the wildest stretch of the imagination, come within a mile of the higher brackets, certainly no selfish reasons can explain why this action was taken. will have to look for other reasons.

Wyoming, until a few years ago at least, believed that the world owed no man a living, but rather an opportunity to work and earn a living, and the great majority of our citizenry, including hundreds on relief, still believe this. Certainly we always have and do believe that a man has the right to keep as his own a fair and equitable part of his earnings to take care of his family, to educate his children, and to provide for their welfare after he has gone. We so truthfully believe these things that we want them safeguarded again under our Constitution, hence this memorial.

If, as individuals, we claim these privileges, then in all fairness we cannot withhold them from legitimate enterprise. Especially since to do otherwise is pennywise and pound foolish for the very good reason that our own economic history proves that taxes above 25 percent not only slow up industry, but slow up the flow of tax moneys into the Treasury as well.

The unlimited power to tax is the power to destroy. I know, and so do you, of more than one instance when the unexpected and sudden death of a man, who had built up his own great legitimate business, accompanied by the imposition of an unfair and unjust death tax, made necessary the sacrifice of his entire life's work and left his family almost destitute. That, in itself, is bad enough, but even worse is the fact that in practically every instance of this kind the property went for a song into the hands of those who are ever looking for something for nothing. It does not take a drastic death tax to bring about such a situation, like instances occur daily because excessive taxes weaken industrial structures, making them easy prey for the same

There is one other thing that I want to speak of in connection with taxes and that is the expense and grief that individuals and industries are put to in filling out information blanks demanded by Government departments.

If the Government must have all of this information, why should not the Government pay the cost? If the Government had to pay the bill, then perhaps it would discover that many reports could be dispensed with. The Government will soon get its share of grief, however, if it insists on imposing an income tax on farm labor under guise of social security and tries to compel farmers to fill out Social Security forms.

While we are talking about blanks and forms I want to call your attention to F. C. C. Forms 705 and 706, and in doing so I am not digressing too far from the question of taxes because this sort of thing piles up tax costs. This form was sent to me by one of the small broadcasting companies in my State, and despite the fact that they were told by the F. C. C. that "it wouldn't take more than an hour's work to fill out this financial report," two men were kept busy 2 days in order to get the necessary information. Not only that, but this report followed closely on the heels of their "twice-yearly" license application for renewal. This is a serious matter and is deserving of early attention by Congress. There is one broadcasting company that I do not believe has filled out this report, and that is the Federal Government. I think that it should, and I am interested in a report showing its activities. As a matter of fact this Congress should provide for an exhaustive investigation into the activities of the F. C. C. in its relation to radio.

We thoroughly believe that taxes should be levied according to ability to pay. At the same time, we know that excessive surtaxes, such as are in effect today, not only deprive the Government of maximum tax receipts but close factories and cause unemployment. In doing this it deprives the Nation of creative and wealth-producing brains. Even a Fascist state makes use of executive and creative ability by putting it to work, while under our present system they are subject to enforced idleness.

Wild Federal spending will continue and real prosperity be delayed until such time as the people in this country fully realize just whose dollar it is that is being spent. When we come to realize that they are our dollars-not your dollarsthen we will stop wild spending, and not before.

I think that my people must have come to the realization of whose dollar it is, and if they have they realize that perhaps they have gone too far in matching, on a 50-50 basis, Federal dollars for a great number of things. If our dollar is our dollar and your dollar is your dollar, then we are going to do without a lot of things that have been heretofore deemed necessary. Since I have been in this Congress more than once a fellow Member has said, "Wyoming is not entitled to any of this Federal money because Wyoming has not contributed any." While this is not true, still it is certain that we have not contributed anywhere near as much as many States.

Why? One reason might be because all of your eastern States own and control and have developed not only your surface rights but your mineral rights as well, while many of the western States own and control less than one-half of the surface of the lands within their border, while the minerals under most lands, they own not at all.

If we are to repeal the sixteenth amendment and largely go on our own as States, we must all start on an even basis in order to make it work out, not only all lands and remaining minerals must belong to the States but the millions of dollars taken from the deposits in these States, which are our birthright, must be returned to the State. Only by such an action can the so-called public-land States ever be as self-sufficient as other States and take their rightful place in the sisterhood of States.

Before condemning such a stand please recall the President's recent message in which he pointed out that more than 20 percent of the total acreage of the United States belonged to the Federal Government. Take a look at the report of the President's real estate board where perhaps you will learn for the first time that your State is listed as a public-land State and that therefore your State is as virtually interested as is mine.

House Joint Memorial 4

Joint memorial memorializing the Congress of the United States of America to amend the Constitution of the United States, relative to taxes on incomes, gifts, and inheritances; and providing limitations on taxes so levied; and repealing the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States

Whereas there is now pending or will be pending in the current session of the Congress of the United States of America, proposed legislation to repeal the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and to amend the Constitution of the tion of the United States, and to amend the Constitution of the United States relative to taxes on incomes, gifts, and inheritances; providing for a limitation of taxes thereon; that the people of the State of Wyoming are greatly interested in the passage of this said amendment: Now, therefore, be it Resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Wyoming (the senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States be memorialized as follows: That application be, and it hereby is, made to the Congress of the United States of America to call a convention for the purpose of proposing the following article as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States:

"ARTICLE

"Section 1. The sixteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States is hereby repealed.

"Sec. 2. The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several States, and without regard to any census or enumeration; provided that in no case shall the maximum rate of tax exceed 25 percent.

"SEC. 3. The maximum rate of any tax, duty, or excise which Congress may lay and collect with respect to the devolution or transfer of property, or any interest therein, upon or in contemplation of death, or by way of gift, shall in no case exceed 25

"SEC. 4. Sections 1 and 2 shall take effect at midnight on the 31st day of December, following the ratification of this article."

Be it further Resolved, That the Congress of the United States be, and it Resolved, That the Congress of the United States be, and it hereby is, requested to provide as the mode of ratification that said amendment shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of the Constitution of the United States, when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States; and be it finally Resolved, That the secretary of state be, and he hereby is, directed to send a duly certified copy of this resolution to the Senate of the United States and one to the House of Representatives in the Congress of the United States.

SENATE ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

The SPEAKER announced his signature to an enrolled bill of the Senate of the following title:

S. 660. An act to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, to provide for the reapportionment of cotton acreage allotments not planted by farmers entitled

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 7 o'clock and 46 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, March 9, 1939, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS

Public hearings will continue Thursday morning, March 9, 1939, at 10 a. m., on social-security legislation in the Ways and Means Committee room in the New House Office Building.

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at 10 a.m., Thursday, March 9, 1939. Business to be considered: Railroad legislation-H. R. 2531.

There will be a meeting of the wool subcommittee of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at 2 p. m., Thursday, March 9, 1939. Business to be considered: Opposition to wool labeling bill, H. R. 944.

COMMITTEE ON NAVAL AFFAIRS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Naval Affairs Thursday morning, March 9, 1939, at 10:30 a. m., for the consideration of H. R. 2878, to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to proceed with the construction of certain public works.

COMMITTEE ON RIVERS AND HARBORS

The Committee on Rivers and Harbors will meet Friday, March 10, 1939, at 10:30 a.m., to continue hearings on H. R. 3222 and H. R. 3223, bills for the completion of the construction of the Atlantic-Gulf Ship Canal across Florida.

COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries will hold public hearings in room 219, House Office Building, Washington, D. C., at 10 a. m. Thursday, March 9, 1939, on the bill (H. R. 4307) to extend the provisions of the Shipping Act, 1916, and the Intercoastal Shipping Act, 1933, to all common carriers by water in interstate commerce, and for other purposes.

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries will hold public hearings in room 219, House Office Building, Washington, D. C., at 10 a. m., on the bills and dates listed below:

Tuesday, March 14, 1939:

H. R. 180, H. R. 202, construction of a Nicaraguan Canal; H. R. 201, additional facilities for Panama Canal; H. R. 2667, construction of a Mexican Canal.

In listing the bills to be heard on March 14, 1939, House Joint Resolution 112 (TINKHAM), to create a commission to study and report on the feasibility of constructing the Mexican Canal, was inadvertently omitted from the notice.

This is to advise all interested parties that House Joint Resolution 112 will be considered at that time with the following bills: H. R. 180 (Izac), relative to the construction of a Nicaraguan Canal; H. R. 202 (BLAND), relative to the construction of a Nicaraguan Canal; H. R. 201 (BLAND), need for additional lock facilities at Panama; H. R. 2667 (TINK-HAM), relative to the construction of a Mexican Canal.

Tuesday, March 21, 1939:

H. R. 137, H. R. 980, H. R. 1674, relating to annuities for Panama Canal construction force.

Thursday, March 23, 1939:

H. R. 141, H. R. 142, H. R. 1819, miscellaneous Panama Canal bills.

Tuesday, March 28, 1939:

H. R. 197, relating to the clearance of vessels; H. R. 199, relating to the allotment of wages by seamen; H. R. 200, relating to foreign towboats towing between American ports; H. R. 1780, relating to penalties on certain undocumented vessels and cargoes engaging in the coastwise trade or the fisheries; H. R. 1782, relating to change of masters of vessels.

Wednesday, March 29, 1939:

H. R. 198, relating to the measurement of vessels; and H. R. 132, authorizing the use of condemned Government vessels for breakwater purposes.

Tuesday, April 4, 1939:

H. R. 3209, making it a misdemeanor to stow away on vessels; H. R. 3398, regarding the down payment of construction of new vessels; H. R. 3935, relating to the discharge of seamen.

Wednesday, April 5, 1939:

H. R. 3052, uniform insignia for Naval Reserve radio operators.

COMMITTEE ON THE PUBLIC LANDS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on the Public Lands on Wednesday, March 15, 1939, at 10 a. m., in room 328, House Office Building, to consider H. R. 3794, to establish John Muir-Kings Canyon National Park, Calif., to transfer thereto the lands now included in the General Grant National Park, and for other purposes.

There will be a meeting of the Committee on the Public Lands on Thursday, March 23, 1939, at 10 a.m., in room 328, House Office Building, to consider H. R. 3759, to authorize a National Mississippi River Parkway and matters relating thereto.

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

Beginning at 10 a. m. on Wednesday, March 22, 1939, there will be a hearing held before the subcommittee No. 4 of the Committee on the Judiciary on House Joint Resolution 176. declaring the conservation of petroleum deposits underlying submerged lands adjacent to and along the coast of California, below low-water mark and under the territorial waters of the United States of America, essential for national defense, maintenance of the Navy, and regulation and protection of interstate and foreign commerce; reserving the same as a naval petroleum reserve, subject to any superior vested right, title, or interest; and authorizing appropriate judicial proceedings to assert, ascertain, establish, and maintain the right and interest of the United States of America in such reserve and to eject trespassers.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows: 497. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriations for the Department of Agriculture in the sum of $460,000, for the fiscal year 1940 (H. Doc. No. 201); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

498. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the War Department, in the amount of $25,000, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, to remain available until expended, to aid in providing a permanent mooring for the battleship Oregon (H. Doc. No. 202); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

499. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriations for the fiscal year 1939, to remain available until June 30, 1940, amounting to $100,000 for the Department of Justice (H. Doc. No. 200); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado: Committee on Appropriations. H. R. 4852. A bill making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 161). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 3225. A bill authorizing the Department of Highways of the State of Ohio to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Ottawa River at or near the city of Toledo, State of Ohio; without amendment (Rept. No. 163). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. CROSSER: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 3375. A bill to authorize M. H. Gildow to construct a free, movable, pontoon footbridge across Muskingum River Canal, at or near Beverly, Ohio; without amendment (Rept. 164). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. PEARSON: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 3418. A bill granting the consent of Congress to the Highway Department of Davidson County, of the State of Tennessee, to construct a bridge across Cumberland River at a point approximately 1¾ miles below Clees Ferry, connecting a belt-line highway in Davidson County, State of Tennessee, known as the Old Hickory Boulevard; without amendment (Rept. No. 165). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. BULWINKLE: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 3589. A bill granting the consent of Congress to the State Highway Commission of North Carolina to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across Waccamaw River between Old Dock and Ash, N. C.; without amendment (Rept. No. 166). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. KING: Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. H. R. 4167. A bill to extend further time for naturalization of alien veterans of ineligible race who served in the armed forces of the United States during the World War; without amendment (Rept. No. 177). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 113. Resolution authorizing an investigation of the milk industry in the District of Columbia; without amendment (Rept. No. 180). Referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey: Committee on Claims. H. R. 875. A bill for the relief of Okie May Fegley; with amendment (Rept. No. 167). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. POAGE: Committee on Claims. H. R. 2072. A bill for the relief of certain disbursing officers of the Army of the United States and for the settlement of individual claims approved by the War Department; without amendment (Rept. No. 168). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey: Committee on Claims. H. R. 2104. A bill for the relief of James A. Mills; with amendment (Rept. No. 169). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. McGEHEE: Committee on Claims. H. R. 3077. A bill for the relief of Adam Casper; with amendment (Rept. No. 170). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. McGEHEE: Committee on Claims. S. 13. An act for the relief of John Mulhern; without amendment (Rept. No. 171). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. RAMSPECK: Committee on Claims. S. 60. An act for the relief of Dierks Lumber & Coal Co.; without amendment (Rept. No. 172). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. FENTON: Committee on Claims. S. 545. An act for the relief of George H. Pierce and Evelyn Pierce; with amendment (Rept. No. 173). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. McGEHEE: Committee on Claims. S. 584. An act for the relief of John R. Holt; without amendment (Rept. No. 174). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. RAMSPECK: Committee on Claims. S. 885. An act to authorize and direct the Comptroller General of the United States to allow credit for all outstanding disallowances and suspensions in the accounts of the disbursing officers or agents of the Government for payments made to certain employees appointed by the United States Employees' Compensation Commission; without amendment (Rept. No. 175). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. McGEHEE: Committee on Claims. S. 1115. An act for the relief of Lt. Malcolm A. Hufty, United States Navy; without amendment (Rept. No. 176). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

ADVERSE REPORTS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. BLOOM: Committee on Foreign Affairs. House Resolution 107. Resolution requesting the President of the United States to transmit to the House of Representatives all data in regard to the seizure of certain American property in Mexico (Rept. No. 162). Laid on the table.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

Under clause 2 of rule XXII, the Committee on Pensions was discharged from the consideration of the bill (H. R. 1514) granting an increase of pension to Thomas G. Pardue, and the same was referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. PATMAN:

H.R. 4851 (by request). A bill to provide more adequate credit facilities for independent small business, to encourage the return of private capital to commercial investment channels, to discourage monopoly, and restore opportunity for the individual; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado:

H. R. 4852. A bill making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. BRADLEY of Michigan:

H. R. 4853. A bill providing for an examination and survey of Au Train River Harbor, Mich.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. LELAND M. FORD:

H. R. 4854. A bill to amend the act entitled "An act to amend the act entitled 'An act for the retirement of employees of the classified civil service, and for other purposes,' approved May 22, 1920, and acts in amendment thereof," approved July 3, 1926, and May 29, 1930; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. PLUMLEY:

H. R. 4855. A bill to authorize the acquisition of land for military purposes at Fort Ethan Allen, Vt.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. TENEROWICZ:

H. R. 4856. A bill to provide additional home-mortgage relief by providing for reducing the rate of interest and extending payment and amortization of mortgages; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. VOORHIS of California:

H. R. 4857. A bill to provide more adequate credit facilities for independent small business, to encourage the return of private capital to commercial investment channels, to discourage monopoly, and restore opportunity for the individual; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. ALLEN of Pennsylvania:

H.R. 4858. A bill for the establishment of a system of regional industrial banks, so as to furnish additional credit and capital facilities for business purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. DEMPSEY:

H. R. 4859. A bill to prohibit military drilling by individuals wearing uniforms or insignia of, or similar to those of, foreign countries; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

H.R. 4860. A bill to amend existing law so as to provide for the exclusion and deportation of aliens who advocate the making of fundamental changes in the American form of government; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. GARRETT:

H.R. 4861. A bill for the relief of officers who failed to file application for benefits within the time limit fixed by the act of May 24, 1928; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

By Mr. LEA:

H. R. 4862. A bill to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, by extending its application to additional types of carriers and transportation, modifying certain provisions thereof, and creating and establishing a Transportation Board to administer certain provisions thereof, to create a Reorganization Court, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. MOTT:

H. R. 4863. A bill to exempt from the tax on admissions certain fees collected in the national parks and monuments; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SMITH of Washington:

H. R. 4864. A bill prohibiting the use of funds, granted or lent by the United States, for the purchase of materials which are not of domestic origin, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. STEAGALL:

H.R. 4865. A bill amending section 12B of the Federal Reserve Act to increase insurance protection to each depositor in an insured bank; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. VOORHIS of California:

H. R. 4866. A bill to provide for a statutory award of $10 per month to any war veteran who was wounded, gassed, injured, or disabled by an instrumentality of war in a zone of hostilities, and for other purposes; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

By Mr. BLAND:

H. R. 4867. A bill for preliminary examination and survey of Browns Bay, Va.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. MAGNUSON:

H. R. 4868. A bill to amend the act authorizing the President of the United States to locate, construct, and operate railroads in the Territory of Alaska, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. FLANNAGAN:

H. R. 4869. A bill to authorize a preliminary examination and survey of the North Fork of the Clinch River and its tributaries in the States of Virginia and Tennessee for flood control, for run-off and water-flow retardation, and for soil-erosion prevention; to the Committee on Flood Control.

By Mr. COCHRAN:

H. R. 4870. A bill to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to make and carry out agreements of indemnity to banks paying him moneys to cover checks or drafts issued by such banks payable to the United States or an agency or officer thereof which have been or may be lost or destroyed; to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

By Mr. DALY:

H. R. 4871. A bill to amend an act entitled "An act to amend and consolidate the acts respecting copyright," approved March 4, 1909, as amended, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. LUDLOW:

H. R. 4872. A bill to establish the Benjamin Harrison Commission to formulate plans for the construction of a permanent memorial to the memory of Benjamin Harrison, twenty-third President of the United States; to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. REES of Kansas:

H. R. 4873. A bill relating to the payment of principal and interest on certain loans made by the Federal land banks and the land bank commissioner; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. THILL:

H. J. Res. 197. Joint resolution authorizing the President of the United States to proclaim September 17 of each year Baron Frederick William von Steuben's Memorial Day for the observance and commemoration of the birth of Baron Frederick William von Steuben; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. KRAMER:

H. J. Res. 198. Joint resolution to provide for the preparation, printing, and distribution of pamphlets containing the proceedings in the House of Representatives on March 4, 1939, in commemoration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the commencement of the First Congress of the United States; to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. SABATH:

H. J. Res. 199. Joint resolution making the 13th day of April in each year a legal holiday; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SCHULTE:

H. Res. 116. Resolution to authorize the payment of expenses of investigation and study authorized by House Resolution 115; to the Committee on Accounts.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ALLEN of Pennsylvania:

H.R. 4874. A bill for the relief of the partnership firm of Albright & Beadling; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BLAND:

H.R. 4875. A bill for the relief of Mamie Hoffman; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BREWSTER:

H.R. 4876. A bill granting an increase of pension to Dora Elizabeth Perry; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COLLINS:

H.R. 4877. A bill for the relief of the estate of Vira Stokes Flowers; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. DOUGLAS:

H. R. 4878. A bill for the relief of Annie Reiley; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. DOWELL:

H. R. 4879. A bill granting an increase of pension to Josephine Anderson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FLANNAGAN:

H. R. 4880. A bill for the relief of Claude F. Beverly; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. GILLIE:

H. R. 4881. A bill for the relief of George G. Waldrop; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LELAND M. FORD:

H. R. 4882. A bill for the relief of Patrick J. Curley; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

H. R. 4883. A bill for the relief of J. H. Bowling; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. IZAC:

H. R. 4884. A bill for the relief of Burns T. Nelson; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. REECE of Tennessee:

H. R. 4885. A bill to extend the benefits of the Employees' Compensation Act of September 7, 1916, to James N. Harwood; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. REES of Kansas:

H. R. 4886. A bill granting a pension to Faye E. Gully; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

By Mr. SABATH:

H. R. 4887. A bill for the relief of John Boska; to the Com-Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin:

H. R. 4888. A bill for the relief of Frank Czermak; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. THILL:

H. R. 4889. A bill for the relief of Dr. M. Kellogg Mookerjee; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee:

H.R. 4890. A bill granting an increase of pension to Charles E. Wilson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions. By Mr. VAN ZANDT;

H.R. 4891. A bill granting an increase of pension to Anna Hamilton; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WALLGREN:

H.R. 4892. A bill for the relief of Evelyn Mary Locke; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

1622. By Mr. ALLEN of Louisiana: Petition of numerous citizens of Winn Parish, La., urging the passage of House bill 1816, providing a direct Federal old-age pension of $30 per month, beginning at the age of 60; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1623. By Mr. ANDREWS: Resolution adopted by the Women's International League of Peace and Freedom, of Buffalo, N. Y., urging strengthening of the Neutrality Act; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1624. Also, resolution adopted by the members of the Townsend Club, of Kenmore, N. Y., favoring enactment of House bill 2; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1625. By Mr. ASHBROOK: Resolution of Newark Chamber of Commerce, Newark, Ohio, concerning House bill 188, and Senate bills 126, 138, and 158, and any other bills which, if passed, would be harmful to labor, agriculture, and industry in Ohio; to the Committee on Labor.

1626. By Mr. ELSTON: Petition of Rev. H. J. Francis, pastor of Mount Carmel Baptist Church, Cincinnati, Ohio, and 36 parishioners, petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to churches of America under the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1627. By Mr. HALLECK: Petition of members of Townsend Club No. 1, Rochester, Ind., favoring House bill 2; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1628. By Mr. JOHNSON of Illinois: Petition of 124 endorsers of House bill 3842 and Senate bill 1234, from the Fourteenth Illinois District, urging enactment of this measure; to the Committee on Labor.

1629. By Mr. MARTIN J. KENNEDY: Letter from the president of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., expressing the opposition of the southern Baptists to the proposal to include churches and ministers under the extended provisions of the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1630. By Mr. KEOGH: Petition of the American Speech Correction Association, Boston, Mass., concerning the Pepper-Boland bill (H. R. 1813); to the Committee on Education.

1631. Also, petition of Belle Glade Chamber of Commerce, Belle Glade, Fla., concerning the sugar situation in the Everglades; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1632. Also, petition of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., regarding the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1633. Also, petition of the Teachers Union of the City of New York, New York City, concerning the Federal Aid to Education Act of 1939, House bill 3517 and Senate bill 1305; to the Committee on Education.

1634. By Mr. KRAMER: Resolution of the Huntington Park Lodge, No. 1415, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, relative to the adoption of a uniform vehicle code, etc.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

1635. Also, resolution of the Board of Supervisors of the County of Los Angeles, State of California, relating to flood-control and water-conservation appropriation, etc.; to the Committee on Flood Control.

1636. By Mr. LANDIS: Petition of the House of Representatives of the General Assembly of Indiana, favoring October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

1637. Also, resolution of the House of Representatives of the General Assembly, State of Indiana, memorializing the Congress of the United States to enact suitable legislation providing for the general welfare of the Nation as set out in House bill 2, now pending before the Congress of these United States; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1638. By Mr. MOTT: Senate Joint Memorial No. 1, of the Fortieth Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, petitioning the Congress of the United States to eliminate certain concessions made to foreign countries on agricultural products and to require, in the event of further trade agreements, that all entries coming into the United States shall be marked as to country of origin and that no exceptions shall be made to this rule; and that in the event of fluctuation of currency values the American producer shall promptly be protected by adjustment of the rates of duty on all commodities affected; and that legislation be passed requiring the ratification of all trade agreements by the Congress of the United States before such trade agreements may go into effect; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1639. By Mr. MURDOCK of Utah: Concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of Utah, favoring stabilization of the price of silver and the employment of silver purchases to increase exports of United States products; to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

1640. Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Utah, memorializing the Congress of the United States to approve the Harrison-Thomas-Larrabee bill; to the Committee on Education.

1641. By Mr. POLK: Petition of the First Baptist Church of Hillsboro, Ohio, signed by C. B. Gross and 33 other members, opposing the recommendation of the Social Security Advisory Council that all religious bodies be taxed and their employees receive benefits under the Social Security Act, believing that if this change becomes a law it will violate a long-cherished and vital principle, separation of church and state, will endanger religious liberty, involve the church in disputes with the state, and lead to endless trouble and confusion; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1642. By Mr. REES of Kansas: Petition of Rev. Paul E. Johnson, of Junction City; Rev. John V. Wright, of Idana; Rev. F. R. Parker, of Hope; Rev. E. M. Scott, of Carlton; Ralph A. Craig, of Alta Vista; and other citizens of the State of Kansas; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1643. By Mr. SCHIFFLER: Petition of Rev. Frederick W. Cropp, Jr., the First Presbyterian Church of Wheeling, W. Va., urging that ministers be excluded from the provisions of the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1644. By Mr. SMITH of West Virginia: Resolution of Local Union No. 6107, United Mine Workers of America, of Killarney, W. Va., protesting against the proposed amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act; to the Committee on Labor.

1645. Also, resolution adopted by the board of elders of the Montcoal Presbyterian Church of Montcoal, W. Va., protesting against the favoring of exemption of ministers of the gospel from coming under control of the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1646. Also, resolution by the Logan County Industrial Union Council of Logan, W. Va., protesting against any amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act; to the Committee on Labor.

SENATE

THURSDAY, MARCH 9, 1939

The Chaplain, Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty and everlasting God, who hatest nothing that Thou hast made and dost forgive the sins of all those who are penitent: Create and make in us new and contrite hearts, that we, worthily lamenting our sins and acknowledging our wretchedness, may obtain of Thee, the God of all mercy, perfect remission and forgiveness. And, O God, who seest that we have no power of ourselves to help ourselves, keep us both outwardly in our bodies and inwardly in our souls, that we may be defended from all adversities which may happen to the body and from all evil thoughts which may assault and hurt the soul. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Wednesday, March 8, 1939, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States submitting nominations were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Hess, one of his secretaries.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 4425) to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, and for other purposes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the enrolled bill (S. 660) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, to provide for the reapportionment of cotton acreage allotments not planted by farmers entitled thereto, and it was signed by the Vice President.

NEUTRALITY-NOTICE OF ADDRESS BY SENATOR LEWIS

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I beg at this moment to give notice that on Monday next, immediately following the morning hour, at such time as may not unduly inconvenience the Senate, I shall address the Senate in support of the bill which I tendered yesterday repealing the neutrality law, which bill was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

ASSISTANT TO THE SURGEON GENERAL

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to provide for the detail of a commissioned medical officer of the Public Health Service to serve as assistant to the Surgeon General, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Finance.

ARMY AIRWAYS RADIO TRANSMITTER STATION

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Interior, stating that, pursuant to law, the Department of the Interior had transferred to the War Department 1.03 acres of the lands belonging to St. Elizabeths Hospital in the District of Columbia for the site of an Army airways radio transmitter station, which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

YELLOWSTONE BASIN COMPACT

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from Clyde L. Seavey, representative of the United States in connection with the Yellowstone Basin compact, reporting relative to the progress made pursuant to an act of Congress approved August 2, 1937 (50 Stat. 551), granting consent of the Congress to the States of Montana and Wyoming to negotiate and enter into a compact or agreement for an equitable division and apportionment of the waters of the Yellowstone River, and making recommendation in the premises, which, with the accompanying report, was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

DISPOSITION OF EXECUTIVE PAPERS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate letters from the Archivist of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, lists of papers and documents on the files of the Departments of the Treasury, the Navy, the Interior, and Agriculture, United States Civil Service Commission, Veterans' Administration, and the former United States Coal Commission, which are not needed in the conduct of business and have no permanent value or historical interest, and requesting action looking to their disposition, which, with the accompanying papers, were referred to a Joint Select Committee on the Disposition of Papers in the Executive Departments

The VICE PRESIDENT appointed Mr. BARKLEY and Mr. GIBSON members of the committee on the part of the Senate.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of New Jersey, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce:

Concurrent resolution favoring the construction of a canal across the State of New Jersey

Whereas there exists a modern system of inside waterways along the Atlantic coast from Florida to New England and thence to the Great Lakes, with the exception of through the State of New Jersey; and

Whereas in order to complete such system it is necessary that a canal be constructed across this State, which canal would provide, at the same time, adequate communication by water between the ports and navy yards at New York and Philadelphia and would be of inestimable value in our scheme of national defense: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of New Jersey (the house of assembly concurring). That the State of New Jersey hereby reaffirms its long-continued endorsement of an adequate ship canal across this State, memorializing his Excellency, the President of the United States and Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, and the United States Senators and Congressmen from this State, to cooperate in the acceleration of the construction of such canal; and he if further and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of the senate forward certified copies of this resolution to His Excellency the President of the United States and to the United States Senators and Congressmen from New Jersey.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following resolution of the House of Assembly of New Jersey. which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

Resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to adjust and regulate the collection of income taxes

Whereas the sixteenth amendment to the Federal Constitution gives to the Congress the power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the States, and without regard to any census or enumera-

Whereas the Congress has enacted appropriate legislation to enforce the amendment and has enacted an income-tax statute which in many instances works inequitably, resulting in hardships to citizens and corporations; and Whereas in order that business may be encouraged and promoted: Therefore be it

moted: Therefore be it

Resolved by the house of assembly, That the Congress of the United States is hereby memorialized and requested to provide by proper amendment that in no case shall income taxes levied exceed 25 percent of the total of such income; and be it further Resolved, That copies of this resolution, signed by the speaker and attested to by the clerk, be transmitted to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States and to the Senators and Members of Congress from New Jersey in the Senate and House of Representatives.

This resolution shall take effect immediately.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of New Jersey, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce:

Concurrent resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States against the enactment of Senate bill 126 and House Reso-lution 188, designed to modify and interfere with existing interterritorial freight rates

Be it resolved by the Senate of the State of New Jersey (the house of assembly concurring), That the Congress of the United States be memorialized against the enactment of Senate bill 126 and House Resolution 188, which measures are designed to interfere with, modify, and disturb existing interterritorial freight rates; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this concurrent resolution, signed by the president of the senate and the speaker of the house of assembly, be transmitted to the Vice President of the United States and the Speaker of the House of Representatives and to the Senators and Representatives from this State in the Congress of the United States.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of New Jersey, which was ordered to lie on the table:

Concurrent resolution memorializing the Congress to enact Senate bill 223, providing for the exemption of certain vessels of the United States from the requirements of the Officers' Competency Certificates Convention

Be it resolved by the Senate of the State of New Jersey (the house of assembly concurring), The Congress of the United States is hereby memorialized to enact Senate bill 223 introduced by the senior Senator from New Jersey, providing for the exemption of certain vessels of the United States from the requirements of the Officers' Competency Certificates Convention of 1936; be it further Resolved, That copies of this resolution signed by the president of the senate and the speaker of the house of assembly be forwarded to the presiding officers of the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States and to the Senators and Representatives from this State in the Congress of the United States.

sentatives from this State in the Congress of the United State

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following joint memorial of the Legislature of Oregon, which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

Senate Joint Memorial 2

To the Honorable Franklin Delano Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, and to the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

We, your memorialists, the Fortieth Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, convened in regular assembly, respectfully repre-

Whereas the empire trade agreement between Great Britain and whereas the empire trace agreement between Great Britain and her commonwealths, the war in the Orient, the unsettled state of affairs in continental Europe, the general depression of the domestic market, and protracted jurisdictional labor disputes have seriously crippled the forest-products industries of the States of Oregon and Weekington; and Washington; and

Washington; and
Whereas, under the Merchant Marine Act of 1920, cargoes from port to port within the United States must be carried in ships of United States registry at rates fixed by the Maritime Commission, which is $14 per 1,000 feet on lumber, while imports of lumber into the United States from British Columbia may be carried in ships of foreign registry at $11.30 per 1,000 feet; and
Whereas the Revenue Act of 1932 placed an excise tax of $3

Whereas the Revenue Act of 1932 placed an excise tax of $3 per 1,000 feet on imported lumber for protection of a harassed industry, with the proviso that said tax expire automatically July 1, 1939, which tax, together with a $1 per 1,000 feet tariff impost, made the total import duty $4 per 1,000 feet; and Whereas the Congress passed the Domestic Origins Act in 1933, requiring that materials extracted and produced within the United States should have preference on public works and such other projects which receive financial aid from the United States over materials extracted and produced in foreign countries; and Whereas the Domestic Origins Act cannot be enforced unless materials extracted and manufactured in foreign countries are marked with the name of the country of their origin; and Whereas an act of Congress passed in 1938 required said marking, but the act contained a proviso which authorized the President of the United States to waive the requirement under the terms of trade agreements with foreign countries; and the President through the Department of State, waived the necessity of marking lumber and other forest products under provisions of a trade agreement entered into between the Dominion of Canada and the United States in November 1938; and
Whereas your Congress passed the Trade Agreement Act in 1934,

States in November 1938; and
Whereas your Congress passed the Trade Agreement Act in 1934, which authorized the President, through the Department of State, to lower the total of any import taxes by as much as 50 percent under the terms of trade agreements entered into between the United States and any foreign country, and under the provisions of said act a trade agreement was entered into with the Dominion of Canada in 1935 which provided for a 50-percent reduction in the $4 import duty on lumber exported into the United States by the Dominion of Canada, not exceeding 250,000,000 feet per annum, and as a result of said agreement the lumber industry of Oregon and Washington suffered a loss of markets and $2 per 1,000 feet tariff protection against Canadian lumber sold in the United States, the records showing that the Dominion of Canada exported 155,-000,000 feet of lumber into the United States during the first 11 months of 1938, while during the same period of time the United States exported to the entire British Empire only 59,000,000 feet; and

whereas the aforesaid trade agreement recently entered into practically sounds the death knell of the manufacture of shingles within the United States; and Whereas the aforesaid trade agreement removes the restriction of the amount of Canadian timber which may be shipped into the

of the amount of Canadian timber which may be shipped into the United States at reduced tariff rates; and Whereas the average wage rate in the west coast logging camps and sawmills of Oregon and Washington is 76.7 cents per hour, while the average wage paid for like work in British Columbia does not exceed 57 cents per hour, with many mills employing Hindu and Chinese labor at wage rates far below this rate; and Washington operate on a maximum 40-hour workweek as compared with a 48-hour workweek in British Columbia Canada which is

Washington operate on a maximum 40-hour workweek as compared with a 48-hour workweek in British Columbia, Canada, which is 4 hours more than is permitted American industry under the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938; and

Whereas the employers of the United States pay large sums of money under the various titles of the Social Security Act for the benefit of workmen and their families, while like sums are not paid in the Dominion of Canada; and

Whereas this harassed forest-products industry which is the basis for more than 60 percent of the industrial pay roll of two States containing almost 3,000,000 people, believes it has a just grievance to place before the President and the Congress of these United States: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of Oregon (the house of representatives jointly concurring therein), That the Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon does hereby petition the President of the United States, the Members of Congress from the State of Oregon, and the whole Congress of the United States to consider conservation of our basic natural resources, together with the plight of the forest-products industries in the States of Oregon and Washington; and be it further plight of the forest-products industries in the States of Oregon and Washington; and be it further

Resolved, That the Congress of these United States extend the provisions of the Revenue Act of 1932, which placed an excise tax on lumber until July 1, 1939, to a future date; and be it further Resolved, That for the benefit of employer and employee allke, products extracted or produced in foreign countries shall be marked with the country of their origin; and be it further Resolved, That the secretary of state of the State of Oregon be authorized and he hereby is directed to forward immediately certified copies of this joint memorial to the President of the United States, President of the United States, Secretary of the Interior, and the members of the congressional delegation from the State of Oregon. State of Oregon.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a resolution of the Board of Commissioners of the City of Newark, N. J., protesting against the enactment of legislation to tax municipal bonds, which was referred to the Special Committee on Taxation of Governmental Securities and Salaries.

He also laid before the Senate a letter from William Green. president of the American Federation of Labor, Washington, D. C., transmitting a copy of the report of the housing committee of the American Federation of Labor on the so-called Fort Wayne plan, sponsored and developed by the Federal Housing Administration, which, with the accompanying report, was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. TYDINGS presented a resolution of the mayor and council of Hagerstown, Md., protesting against the enactment of legislation to change the present freight-rate structure. which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. CAPPER presented a memorial of members of the First Presbyterian Church, of Axtell, Kans., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation to include religious bodies under the operation of the social-security system, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Tipton, Kans., praying that the United States adhere to a general policy of neutrality, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Atchison, Kans., praying that the United States adopt a policy of nonparticipation in aggression and also take measures to discontinue the shipment of war supplies to Japan for use in operations in China, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Claffin and Redwing, Kans., praying that the United States adhere to the general policy of neutrality as enunciated in the act of August 31, 1935, to retain on the statute books the further and corollary principle enunciated in the act of May 1, 1937, extending the original act to include civil as well as international conflicts, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. MURRAY presented the following joint memorial of the Legislative Assembly of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations:

Senate Joint Memorial 16

Memorial to Hon. Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States, and to the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled, expressing appreciation of the work of the Civilian Conservation Corps in the State of Montana and requesting continuance thereof of Montana and requesting continuance thereof

We, your memorialists, the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Montana, convened in the legislative assembly, most respectfully represent and petition as follows:
Whereas heretofore there has been established under your authority and with your approval the following Civilian Conservation Corps camps in the State of Montana under various departments and bureaus of the United States at Medicine Lake, Ekalaka, Sidney, Augusta, Ballantine, Winifred, Bridger, Dillon, Darby, Thompson Falls, Philipsburg, Columbia Falls, Bozeman, Libby, Neihart, Superior, Lolo, Haugan, Huson; with two camps at Malta, Yellowstone, and Whitehall, and three camps at Belton; and Whereas the Civilian Conservation Corps has contributed greatly to the improvement of roads, parks, and forests; has aided in controlling soil erosion, prevented fires, eliminated swamps, and have performed many other useful functions enhancing the natural scenery and beauties of Montana of which this State is justly proud; and

whereas the work of the Civilian Conservation Corps has aided and has resulted in rehabilitation of the men sent to work in our State; has provided such men with a new outlook on life and in general such enrollees have bettered themselves mentally, morally, and physically by service in this organization; and whereas the members of the Civilian Conservation Corps have served in Montana with honor and fidelity and a continuance of such service is desirable from a humanitarian and economical and social viewpoint:

social viewpoint:
Now, therefore, the Legislative Assembly of the Twenty-sixth Session of the State of Montana respectfully petitions the Congress of the United States to appropriate a sufficient sum of money to continue the Civilian Conservation Corps; and the President of the United States is hereby petitioned to use his influence in that respect and to that end; be it further

Resolved, That copies of this memorial be forwarded to the President of the United States, one each be forwarded to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and likewise that a copy hereof be forwarded to each of the Senators and Representatives from the State of Montana.

State of Montana.

Mr. MURRAY also presented the following resolution of the Senate of the State of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency:

Senate Memorial 11

Resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for urgent remedial action and modification of rules in the matter of granting quartz mining loans

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled, and to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation of the United States:

Your memorialists, the members of the Senate of the Twenty-sixth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, respectfully represent as follows:

as follows:

Whereas the President and Congress appreciate that the mining of precious metals is one of the basic industries of the Nation and one of the main sources of employment throughout the western part of the United States, and have set up an agency for the loaning of funds through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to legitimate mining enterprises in order that production may be stimulated and labor unemployment decreased; and

Whereas that a mining division of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has been created for the purpose of making loans to legitimate enterprises where there is ample security for the same and has represented to the public that said loans are avaitable and Whereas the State of Montana, one of the leading quartz-mining States of the Nation, was granted loans of only $43,000 for quartz mining for approximately the first 3 years of operation of said mining division; and division; and

Whereas the State of Idaho, also richly endowed with mineral resources, was not granted a single loan for quartz mining during a like period; and

Whereas the supervisor in charge of the mining division has taken an antagonistic and unreasonable attitude in the matter of granting loans, as evidenced by the statements heretofore made, and that certain of the examiners assume a most unfriendly attitude toward

Whereas we believe it was the intention of the Honorable Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Congress of the United States to assist worthy quartz-mining enterprises: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States and the Members of Congress from Montana, and the Honorable Jesse Jones, Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, are petitioned to investigate the affairs of the Mining Division as related to quartz loans, particularly as to changing the personnel of the department heads and removing unfair examiners and liberalizing the regulations of the division; and that it be further

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be forwarded to the President of the United States, to each House of Congress, the congressional delegation from Montana, and to the Honorable Jesse Jones, Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Mr. MURRAY also presented the following joint memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation:

Senate Joint Memorial 18

Resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States for the passage of the legislation for the development of the Pig-Eye Basin storage project in Judith Basin County, Mont., as a flood-control and water-conservation measure

To the honorable Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas the Judith River in Judith Basin County, Mont., is in the watershed of, and the waters thereof flow into the Missouri River, and in times of unusual precipitation contribute to the flood

River, and in times of unusual precipitation contribute to the flood waters of such principal stream and contribute to flood damages caused by unusually high water at seasonal times; and Whereas heretofore in 1919 the United States Geological Survey has surveyed such Judith River and it has been found possible and feasible to impound approximately 11,000 acre-feet of water thereof, the official storage project being known as the Pig-Eye Basin storage project, and that such waters can be used for the irrigation of arid and semiarid lands in such project; and Whereas the Water Conservation Beard of the State of Montanas approved such project as a flood-control and water-conservation.

has approved such project as a flood-control and water-conservation

Whereas the development of such project would be of inestimable value to the farming and stock-growing industry in that portion of Montana: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of Montana (the house of representatives concurring), That we do hereby petition the Congress of the United States of America for the passage of an enabling act with sufficient appropriation of funds for the construction of the proposed Pig-Eye Basin storage project at the earliest possible time; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the Honorable Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States, to the President of the Senate, and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States and to each of the Members of the Senate and House of Representatives from Montana.

FELICITATIONS TO SENATOR REYNOLDS BY THE SENATE OF MARYLAND

Mr. TYDINGS and Mr. RADCLIFFE, jointly, presented the following resolution of the Senate of the State of Maryland, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration:

Whereas the constant and ever-increasing manifestations of peoples, groups, and organization expounding the philosophies and theories of communism, nazi-ism, and fascism; and Whereas these manifestations are in practically every instance inspired by aliens, or alien-minded people; and

Whereas the philosophy or theory as expounded by representa-tives of the individual organizations are for the promotion, foster-ing, and strengthening the doctrines of communism, nazi-ism, and ing, and strengthening the doctrines of communism, nazi-ism, and fascism in America; and

Whereas the Honorable Robert R. Reynolds, United States Senator from North Carolina, has caused to be introduced in the United States Senate, legislation in the interest of national defense and for the protection of America in time of war, providing for the registration and fingerprinting of each and every alien now in the United States, or who may hereafter apply for permission to enter the United States, and which is known as S. 408, and legislation providing that any alien or group of aliens whose presence in the United States is inimical to the public interest shall upon warrant of the Secretary of Labor be taken into custody and deported forthwith, which is known as S. 411; and
Whereas the members of the Senate of Maryland, reaffirming deported forthwith, which is known as S. 411; and Whereas the members of the Senate of Maryland, reaffirming their steadfast belief in the principles of true democracy, and abhorring the alien-directed activities, for the purpose of pregnating and demoralizing minds of young and impressionable Americans, with obnoxious and unwarranted "isms"; Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Senate of Maryland does hereby extend its appreciation and express its admiration to the Honorable Robert E. Reynolds, United States Senator from North Carolina, for his patriotic and inspiring legislation to the end that the philosophy of Washington, Jefferson, and Lincoln shall never be replaced with un-American principles as expressed by communism, nazi-ism, and fascism; and be it further

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution the secretary of the senate is hereby instructed to forward copies thereof to the Honorable ROBERT R. REYNOLDS, United States Senator from North Carolina, the Honorable Millard E. Tydings, and the Honorable George L. Radcliffe, United States Senators from the State of Maryland.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. PEPPER, from the Committee on Interoceanic Canals, to which was referred the bill (S. 1162) to provide for the recognition of the services of the civilian officials and employees, citizens of the United States, engaged in and about the construction of the Panama Canal, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 149) thereon.

Mr. HUGHES, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 1429) for the relief of Earl J. Reed and Giles J. Gentry, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 150) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (S. 221) for the relief of Anthony Coniglio, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 151)

Mr. LOGAN, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 86) for the relief of International Manufacturers' Sales Co. of America, Inc., A. S. Postnikoff, trustee, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 152) thereon.

Mr. TOWNSEND, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 1415) for the relief of certain disbursing agents and employees of the Indian Service, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 153)

Mr. SCHWARTZ, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 1038) for the relief of L. M. Bell and M. M. Bell, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 154) thereon.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. ASHURST: S. 1747. A bill for the relief of Adelaide S. Fish; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. TYDINGS:

S. 1748. A bill for the relief of John Ricker; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. NEELY:

S. 1749. A bill for the relief of George Waldo; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1750. A bill authorizing the Secretary of War to convey to the town of Marmet, W. Va., two tracts of land to be used for municipal purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. GILLETTE: S. 1751. A bill for the relief of Robert Goodwin Poole; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 1752. A bill to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 changing the definition of "market" as it pertains to the disposing of wheat; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. McNARY:

S. 1753. A bill to correct the service record of John Francis Applegate; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. BYRNES:

S. 1754. A bill to amend subsection (10) of section (13) (a) of the act approved June 25, 1938 (52 Stat. 1069), entitled "Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938"; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. BILBO:

S. 1755. A bill to provide aid to States and political subdivisions thereof in the acquisition of a privately owned interstate toll bridge; to the Committee on Commerce.

S. 1756. A bill to provide for the establishment of the Samuel Dale National Park in Lauderdale County, Miss.; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

By Mr. MURRAY:

S. 1757. A bill for the relief of Hazel Redlack, Dr. Louis Allred, the Columbus Hospital, Dora McDonald, Patricia Harris, and Dorothy Hart; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. PEPPER:

S. 1758. A bill to amend the Interstate Commerce Act so as to rectify interterritorial freight-rate disadvantages; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

By Mr. WHEELER:

S. 1759. A bill granting the consent of Congress to the States of Montana, North Dakota, and Wyoming to negotiate and enter into a compact or agreement for division of the waters of the Yellowstone River; to the Committee on Indian

HOUSE BILL REFERRED

The bill (H. R. 4425) to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Select Committee on Government Organization.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

On motion by Mr. Logan, the Committee on Claims was discharged from the further consideration of the bill (S. 601) to amend an act approved December 17, 1928, entitled "An act conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and enter judgment thereon in claims which the Winnebago Tribe of Indians may have against the United States, and for other purposes," and it was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

ERADICATION OF DUTCH ELM DISEASE-AMENDMENTS

Mr. TAFT submitted amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 1718) for the eradication of the Dutch elm disease in America, and for other purposes, which were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENT TO INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. WHEELER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to House bill 4852, making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed,

On page 70, line 3, under the heading "Bureau of Indian Affairs", in the item for Fort Peck, Mont., after the semicolon, to insert the following: "Hospital and quarters, $185,000."

PURCHASE OF SETS OF THE FEDERAL CODE ANNOTATED

Mr. VAN NUYS submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 98), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate is hereby authorized and directed to purchase and distribute to each Senator a complete set of the Federal Code Annotated, consisting of 16 volumes, together with the pocket supplements to January 1, 1940. The cost of such purchases shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, and such codes shall remain the property of the

STUDY OF FREIGHT-RATE STRUCTURE

Mr. PEPPER submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 99), which was referred to the Committee on Interstate

Whereas it is the objective of the Fair Labor Standards Act of Whereas it is the objective of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 to reach the goal of a universal minimum wage of 40 cents an hour in each industry engaged in commerce, or in the production of goods for commerce, as rapidly as is economically feasible without substantially curtailing employment and without giving a competitive advantage to any group within the industry or to any region where such industry is carried on; and

Whereas there are conspicuous discrepancies in the freight rates prevailing in different parts of the United States by reason of the present interterritorial freight-rate structures, which are the outgrowth of tradition and constitute harriers against the free flow of growth of tradition and constitute barriers against the free flow of commece and are hampering and restricting the normal develop-ment of the Nation as a whole; and

Whereas the aforesaid objectives of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 and a full utilization of the economic resources that exist in the different regions of the United States can be attained only by a correction of the inequities and discrepancies in the existing freight-rate structures: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Interstate Commerce Commission is requested to make a study of and give consideration to a plan to provide that the freight rate per mile for the shipment of goods to a point in any freight-rate territory shall be the same, irrespective of whether the shipment originated in that territory or some other territory, and such other plans as may seem to the Commission to be reasonably resulted. ably calculated to correct the discrepancies and inequities above referred to, and to report to the Senate at the earliest practicable time the results of its study, together with its recommendations.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The VICE PRESIDENT, as in executive session, laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

TRIBUTE TO THE LATE GEORGE R. HOLMES

[Mr. CLARK of Missouri asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record a tribute to the late George R. Holmes delivered at Fort Myer chapel on the 14th ultimo by Rt. Rev. Msgr. David T. O'Dwyer, director of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University, which appears in the Appendix.1

GUAM HARBOR IMPROVEMENT

[Mr. Gibson asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record an editorial from the Washington Star of March 6, 1939, regarding the improvement of Guam Harbor, which appears in the Appendix.]

FORTIFICATION OF GUAM

[Mr. Gibson asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Record an article from the Washington Evening Star of February 12, 1939, on the subject of the proposed fortification of the island of Guam, which appears in the Appendix.]

ORDER OF BUSINESS

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there be no further morning business, the calendar, under rule VIII, is in order.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask unanimous consent that the calling of the calendar be dispensed with.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

AUTHORIZATION FOR REPORTING AND SIGNING OF BILLS, ETC., DURING ADJOURNMENT

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, there is no business the Senate needs to transact today, and nothing that is in prospect for the remainder of the week. I therefore ask unanimous consent that during the adjournment of the Senate all committees may be authorized to report bills, resolutions, and nominations, that the Vice President be authorized to sign any bills or resolutions ready for his signature, and that the Secretary of the Senate may receive messages from the House of Representatives.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, there is no need to have an executive session today; so I move that the Senate stand in adjournment until 12 o'clock noon on Monday next.

LIMITATION OF PROFITS ON AIRPLANE CONTRACTS

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold that motion, as I should like to speak for about 5 minutes?

Mr. BARKLEY. I was not aware the Senator from New Hampshire desired to speak, and, of course, I withhold the motion.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, on Tuesday, the 7th of March, in this body, when the national-defense bill, providing for additional aircraft, was being discussed and debated, and, particularly, consideration was being given to the amendment which I offered limiting profits to 10 percent, the Senator from Georgia [Mr. George] addressed the Senate and called attention to House bill 7777, with the accompanying report, which sought to amend the Vinson-Trammell Act so as to exempt the aircraft industry from the operation of the act to limit profits on Navy contracts. I told the Senator from Georgia yesterday in person, and I now address myself to the Senate, and for the sake of the RECORD desire to point out that House bill 7777, to which the Senator from Georgia alluded, was not a product of the present session of the Congress, but was favorably reported in the last Congress, the Seventy-fifth Congress, and, of course, the report accompanied the measure; but, though the bill was on the House Calendar from April 18, 1938, until adjournment of the Seventy-fifth Congress, the House never acted on it.

Mr. President, I have adopted the suggestion made by the Senator from Georgia to the Senate the other day about studying that report and have studied it. I find in it three or four inconsistencies which I wish to call to the attention of the Senate, and especially of those members of the conference committee who may be present.

I hold in my hand Report No. 2149, accompanying House bill 7777, which was referred to by the distinguished Senator from Georgia in the debate on March 7, and on page 1 of the report appears the frank statement:

The purpose of this proposed legislation is to exempt the aircraft industry from the operation of the act to limit profits on Navy contracts.

In other words, it frankly says that the sole purpose is to exempt the aircraft industry from the operation of the act so as to have the profit limitation apply only to contracts for naval vessels; but on page 2 of the report we find the following recommendation, which contradicts the statement on page 1, just referred to:

For this reason the committee considers it equitable, both to the Government and to industry, to exempt, in determining excess profits, contractors for aircraft equipment which requires extensive research and development for perfection, such exemption to be determined by the Secretary of the Navy, with the proviso that Congress shall be informed annually of all cases so exempted.

So here I point out to the distinguished Senator from Georgia and to the Senate, is an inconsistency. On page 1 they recommend exemption of all aircraft. On page 2 they recommend exemption of only a certain part of the aircraft business.

On page 3 of the report the statement is made, and it is in accordance with the impression of the Senator from Georgia, that the present law does not permit the manufacturer to offset profits in excess of 10 percent in any one year against losses incurred in a previous year. This statement of the report reads as follows:

Present law does not permit the manufacturer to offset profits in excess of 10 percent in one year against deficiency in profits in a previous year.

That is emphatically an erroneous and misleading statement, because the statute specifically provides as follows:

Provided that, if there is a net loss on all such contracts or subcontracts completed by the particular contractor or subcontractor within any income taxable year, such net loss shall be allowed as a credit in determining the excess profit, if any, for the next succeeding income taxable year.

So there are two definite inconsistencies and misstatements in the committee's report, which would, unless corrected, give of the act a false picture which should not be used as a basis for intelligent legislation.

Again, on page 3 of the report, we find the following statement:

Another effect of this limitation of profit is that the manufacturer will make every legal effort to show increases in cost of Navy contracts, if by so doing he can reduce the charges to be made on other contracts.

The report further says:

If certain spaces in the shop are not as well lighted or otherwise may be less desirable from the point of view of doing efficient work, it is certain that contracts on which the profits are not limited will not be prosecuted in these spaces while Navy material is occupying more valuable space. Likewise, machine tools and equipment that make for economy of manufacture will not be so readily made available for Navy work as for work on which there is no profit limitation. The same will apply to the use of more skilled labor.

I say, if that is true, it is a manifest and intentional dishonesty on the part of such manufacturers, and if we should yield to that persuasion we would become particeps criminis by our failure to prevent such dishonesty. The purpose of the existing statute is to prevent such unworthy practices on the part of these aircraft concerns.

Further, on page 4, the report reads:

Under the act of March 27, 1934, as amended, the contractor is offered some relief in the authority to offset a loss in 1 year against profits in excess of 10 percent in a succeeding year. But he cannot offset any loss sustained in other than Navy business.

I particularly call your attention to this last sentence complaining that the manufacturer "cannot offset any loss sustained in other than Navy business." Why should he? Why should the United States Government pay a concern for loss sustained in business contracts with foreign countries, or with private customers in this country or any other country?

We of the legislative branch of the Government are dealing the Army and Navy contracts pro bono publico for whom we are trustees. We are not the guardians of private aircraft concerns in their financial dealings with foreign or private domestic customers.

Much has been made of the point regarding exemption for experimental work. I have never been opposed to that. In the Congressional Record of March 7 one of the Members asked the following question:

Let us suppose that in a contract for $50,000,000 worth of airplanes the company is required to make research of all sorts for the construction of the airplanes, which research would cost, let us say, $5,000,000. In the ultimate cost of the plane to the Government, will the $5,000,000 be taken into consideration in determining the basis on which a 10-percent profit should be allowed under the amendment?

Another Member of this body answered:

I do not so understand. However, I obtained from the House committee my understanding of the amendment which is now offered to the bill. I am not prepared to speak beyond that understanding.

Later a Member of this body said:

I think the amount of money expended in preliminary research ought, in fairness, to be included in the amount upon which the 10 percent may be allowed.

Mr. President, I am of the same mind and am glad at this time to assure the Members of this body that such provision is made by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, acting under the existing law. I hold in my hand a Treasury ruling which specifically provides for experimental contracts. This Treasury ruling reads as follows:

[From Internal Revenue Bulletin for September 27, 1937, p. 25]

MISCELLANEOUS

Section 3 of the Vinson Act (48 Stat. 503), as amended by act of June 25, 1936 (49 Stat. 1926). • • • (P. 26.)

(P. 26.) Where a special experimental project is carried on in connection with a Navy contract or in anticipation of a Navy contract, and the expense is not prorated with other general experimental expense but is reserved for charge to the particular Navy contract concerned, there clearly appearing no reasonable prospect of additional contracts for this type of equipment, the entire cost of this experimental work will be allowed.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate adjourn until 12 o'clock noon on Monday next.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 12 o'clock and 12 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, March 13, 1939, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate March 9, 1939
COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY

William Rude Jackson, of Maryland, to be aide (with relative rank of ensign in the Navy), by promotion from deck officer, vice C. R. Reed, promoted.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY

The following-named lieutenant commanders to be commanders in the Navy, to rank from the 1st day of July 1938:

Robert B. Dashiell John N. Walton
Hugh St. Clare Sease John H. Jenkins
Stanwix G. Mayfield, Jr.
Ralph U. Hyde William McK. Reifel
William J. Morcott Rollin Van Alstine Failing

The following-named lieutenant commanders to be commanders in the Navy, to rank from the 1st day of August 1938:

Lloyd E. Clifford Clyde Lovelace
Paul E. Kuter Mallery K. Aiken

The following-named lieutenant commanders to be commanders in the Navy, to rank from the 1st day of September 1938:

Charles A. Nicholson, 2d
Harry R. Hayes
Cyril T. Simard

Byron J. Connell (an additional number in grade)
Edward H. Smith

The following-named lieutenants to be lieutenant commanders in the Navy, to rank from the date stated opposite their names:

John B. Moss, October 1, 1938. William A. Bowers, January 1, 1939.

Lt. (Jr. Gr.) Edward M. Blessman to be a lieutenant in the Navy, to rank from the 12th day of January 1939.

Passed Asst. Paymaster Aubrey J. Bourgeois to be a passed assistant paymaster in the Navy with the rank of lieutenant from the 3d day of February 1938 to correct the date of rank as previously nominated and confirmed.

Gunner Gleason Sherman to be a chief gunner in the Navy, to rank with but after ensign, from the 22d day of October

1938

The following-named carpenters to be chief carpenters in the Navy, to rank with but after ensign, from the dates stated opposite their names:

Herbert L. Chapman, January 13, 1939. Harold C. Thomas, February 2, 1939.

Pay Clerk Charles F. Ueltzen to be a chief pay clerk in the Navy, to rank with but after ensign, from the 2d day of January 1939.

The following-named lieutenant commanders to be lieutenant commanders in the Navy, to rank from the 1st day of July 1938, to correct the date of rank as previously nominated and confirmed:

Frederick J. Nelson
Joyce A. Ralph
James C. Guillot
William P. Burford
William D. Anderson
Wurr E. Arnold
William M. Hobby, Jr.
William P. Burford
Philip R. Coffin
Wells L. Field

The following-named lieutenants to be lieutenant commanders in the Navy, to rank from the 1st day of February 1939:

Marshall M. Dana Kenneth D. Ringle Stanley Leith William D. Wright, Jr. Homer Ambrose Ralph W. D. Woods

William A. Graham

Robert S. Hatcher (an additional number in grade)
Edward W. Clexton (an additional number in grade)
Chester C. Wood
Clarence E, Ekstrom

POSTMASTERS

Enid Trowbridge to be postmaster at Kenney, Ill. Office became Presidential July 1, 1938.

Millie E. Moore to be postmaster at Westover, Pa. Office became Presidential July 1, 1938.

Susie A. Warburton to be postmaster at Dumbarton, Va. Office became Presidential July 1, 1938.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, MARCH 9, 1939

THURSDAT, MARCH 9, 1

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

We praise Thee, our Heavenly Father, that Thou hast again bestowed upon us rich and abundant blessings. May we express our gratitude by serving the humblest need. To Thee we lift our drooping hands in unspoken prayer; so many voices of the human breast are too sacred for speech. Forgive our quivering faith and pity us in our limitations, in our tendencies, and in our sins. Bless and strengthen us with that peace which Thou hast promised to the untroubled heart. Even the darkness hidest not from Thee, but the night shineth as the day. We bless Thee that Thou art in the shadows keeping watch above Thine own. Heavenly Father, redden our horizon with a glowing hope, and may we rejoice in health, happiness, and in the pride of life. We pray that the right may be defended and the wrong defied that the vices of today may become the virtues of tomorrow. In the name of our Saviour. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate had passed bills and joint resolutions of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 50. An act to provide for recognizing the services rendered by civilian officers and employees in the construction and establishment of the Panama Canal and the Canal Zone:

S. 270. An act for the relief of Lofts & Son;

S. 421. An act for the relief of the estate of O. K. Himley; S. 439. An act to confer the Distinguished Service Medal on Col. Richard C. Patterson:

S. 509. An act to add certain lands of the Front Royal Quartermaster Depot Military Reservation, Va., to the Shenandoah National Park, and for other purposes;

S. 510. An act to authorize certain officers and enlisted men of the United States Army to accept such medals, orders, and decorations as have been tendered them by foreign governments in appreciation of services rendered;

S. 511. An act for the relief of Dolores P. de Williamson; S. 512. An act for the relief of certain disbursing officers of the Army of the United States and for the settlement of individual claims approved by the War Department;

S. 518. An act to provide for the further development of cooperative agricultural extension work:

S. 645. An act to provide funds for cooperation with Wapato School District No. 54, Yakima County, Wash., for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children of the Yakima Reservation;

S. 661. An act for the relief of Ida A. Deaver;

S. 749. An act for the relief of Harry F. Baker;

S. 793. An act for the relief of Worth Gallaher;

S. 810. An act for the relief of Joe Pizl, Sr.;

S. 811. An act for the relief of George A. Rogers;

S. 827. An act for the relief of John H. Barry;

S. 828. An act to permit the President to acquire and convert, as well as to construct, certain auxiliary vessels for the

S. 829. An act to authorize alterations and repairs to certain naval vessels, and for other purposes;

S. 1045. An act to give effect to the International Agreement for the Regulation of Whaling, signed at London, June 8, 1937, and for other purposes;

S. 1098. An act to amend section 12 of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, by authorizing advances for crop insurance;

S. 1281. An act to prohibit reproductions of official badges, identification cards, and other insignia;

S. 1357. An act for the relief of Chester J. Babcock;

S. 1363. An act to repeal subsection (4) of subsection (c) of section 101 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938;

S. 1374. An act for the relief of Cohen, Goldman & Co.,

S. 1517. An act for the relief of F. E. Perkins;

S. J. Res. 2. Joint resolution providing for consideration of a recommendation for decoration of Sgt. Fred W. Stockham,

S. J. Res. 59. Joint resolution authorizing the Bureau of Labor Statistics to collect information as to amount and value of all goods produced in State and Federal prisons; and

S. J. Res. 76. Joint resolution to authorize the Postmaster General to withhold the awarding of star-route contracts for a period of 45 days.

CHARLES GOODWIN

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I offer a privileged resolution from the Committee on Accounts and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

House Resolution 112

Resolved, That there shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House, to Charles Goodwin, husband of Catherine Goodwin, late an employee of the House, a sum equal to 6 months' compensation, and an additional sum, not to exceed $250, to defray funeral expenses of the said Catherine Goodwin.

The resolution was agreed to, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a statement made before the Committee on Ways and Means by E. M. Warren, vice president of the American Laundry Institute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Anderson]?

There was no objection.

Mr. CARTWRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein some quotations relative to the damming of the Red

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTWRIGHT]?

There was no objection.

Mr. MASON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD on the subject Republican Prospects in 1940, and I invite the statesmen on both sides of the aisle to look it over.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mason]?

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is the gentleman a prophet?

Mr. MASON. The gentleman's name is Noah and Noah was the prophet of old that prophesied the flood and pre-

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Mason]?

There was no objection.

Mr. KILDAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD, and to include therein an address by the Honorable Coke R. Stevenson, Lieutenant Governor of the State of Texas.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KILDAY]?

There was no objection.

Mr. IGLESIAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein parts of the annual report of the Governor and also some short information of other citizens regarding their views on conditions prevailing in Puerto Rico.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the Commissioner from Puerto Rico?

There was no objection.

ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAY AND NEW YORK POWER RATES

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD to call the attention of the House to a most illuminating statement placed in the Record on yesterday by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Fay] in reference to the development of the St. Lawrence inland waterways and its effects on the power rates in the State of New York.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN].

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, did the gentleman say this was in the Record yesterday?

Mr. RANKIN. This morning's RECORD. Has not the gentleman read it? Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich] mean to tell me he has not read the Congression. SIONAL RECORD of yesterday?

Mr. RICH. Anyone who would take time enough to read all of the things in the Congressional Record would not have time to do anything else. If it is in the RECORD yesterday, then I ask that the gentleman refer to it and that he not have permission to put it in the RECORD at this point, and I object.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I am merely asking to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and call attention to it. It is a most splendid statement and one that every Member of the House should read.

Mr. RICH. Go ahead then,

Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has already helped to call attention to it. I hope he will now take the time to read it.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN].

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. Gross asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

INDEPENDENT OFFICES APPROPRIATION BILL, 1940

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 3743) making appropriations for the Executive Office and sundry independent executive bureaus, boards, commissions, and offices, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The Clerk read the conference report. The conference report is as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate numbered 17 and 18 to the bill (H. R. 3743) making appropriations for the Executive Office and sundry independent executive bureaus, boards, commissions, and offices, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses

as follows:

The committee of conference report in disagreement amendments numbered 17 and 18.

C. A. WOODRUM, JED JOHNSON, JAMES M. FITZPATRICK, JOHN M. HOUSTON, R. B. WIGGLESWORTH, EVERETT M. DIRKSEN, FRANCIS CASE,

Managers on the part of the House.

CARTER GLASS, CARTER GLASS,
JAMES F. BYRNES,
RICHARD B. RUSSELL,
ALVA B. ADAMS,
PAT MCCARRAN,
JOHN G. TOWNSEND, JI.,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the first amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 17. On page 68, after section 5 insert the following:

"Sec. 6. No part of any appropriation contained in this or any other act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, shall be available for the payment of enlistment allowance to enlisted men for reenlistment within a period of 3 months from date of discharge as to reenlistments made during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, notwithstanding the applicable provisions of sections 9 and 10 of the act entitled 'An act to readjust the pay and allowances of the commissioned and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Public Health Service', approved June 10, 1922 (37 U. S. C. 13, 16)."

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order there is not a quorum present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently a quorum is not present.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 29]

Allen, Ill. Allen, La. Anderson, Calif. Bender Bolton

Bradley, Mich. Bradley, Pa. Buckley, N. Y. Byrne, N. Y.

Cannon, Fla. Cole, N. Y. Creal Curley Daly

Dies Disney Ditter Doughton

Johnson, Lyndon O'Connor Kee Osmers Keefe O'Toole Kerr Sabath Elliott Evans Ferguson Gearhart Gerlach Kramer Lesinski McGehee Gillie Goldsborough McReynolds Miller Hancock Hartley Mitchell Hunter Jeffries. Mundt Murdock, Ariz. Jenks, N. H. Johns O'Brien

Sacks Sandager Schulte Seccombe Seger Sheppard Smith, Ill. Somers, N. Y. Starnes, Ala.

Stearns, N. H. Sweeney Tenerowicz Whelchel White, Idaho Wigglesworth Wolfenden, Pa. Wolverton, N. J. Wood Youngdahl

The SPEAKER. Three hundred and sixty-five Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

On motion of Mr. Woodrum, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURE

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on tomorrow the Committee on Agriculture may be permitted to sit during the session of the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. REECE of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD by including a brief statement made by Mr. Willis J. Ballinger before the Temporary National Economic Committee.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

INDEPENDENT OFFICES APPROPRIATION BILL, 1940

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, on amendment No. 17, which has been reported, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia moves, on the first amendment in disagreement, which has been read by the Clerk, that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. Izac].

Mr. IZAC. Mr. Speaker, I come before the House today to make another appeal for proper treatment of the enlisted men of the armed services of this country.

A question was raised the last time we discussed this amendment as to whether this was not an economy measure, and the suggestion was made that we could actually save money for the Government by ceasing to pay the reenlistment allowance, which has been on the statute books as part of the pay, at least of the Navy, for 83 years. I went into the figures, and I find that during the past year we have had to train 16,681 raw recruits to replace the trained and skilled technicians we have let go out into civil life from the Navy. We paid $4,270,000 for 3 months' training of those enlisted men. By the payment every year of approximately $2,000,000 we can keep in the service these skilled men whom the Navy really needs. By a total expenditure of a little over $5,000,000 we can keep all the trained men of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey in the service of their country, where we will benefit by their experience and skill.

This $5,000,000 may seem like a lot of money, but I contend that in a period of 4 years, covering the 4-year enlistment of a Navy man, it would cost between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000 to replace the skilled technicians we are letting go. Let me give you a brief history of this amendment.

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman

Mr. IZAC. In just a moment.

The House of Representatives a year ago voted to pay this reenlistment gratuity, as it is called. This year, about a week ago, when the amendment was before us, we voted by a vote of 156 to 21 not to recede and concur in the Senate amendment. Still, with the Senate standing fast, they come back to us and ask us to recede. After a vote of that kind it seems to me it should be evident that it is the will of the House of Representatives that we will not recede; and I ask my colleagues to stand fast with us today and do justice to the enlisted men, giving them that part of their pay which has been denied them only since the adoption of the Economy Act of 1933. [Applause.]

I now yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. Can the gentleman tell us what effect the discontinuance of the reenlistment allowance has had on reenlistment?

Mr. IZAC. I would say it has a terrible moral effect on the men who have to live on the paltry sums we give the lower brackets of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps.

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. Does the gentleman know whether or not the denial of the allowance has reduced the number of reenlistments, in terms of percentage?

Mr. IZAC. I should say the number of reenlistments has been greater during the period of depression than at any other time.

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. That is due to economic conditions?
Mr. IZAC. That is due to the economic condition of the country.

Now, when we are talking and speaking in terms of war—and war is prevalent everywhere, but thank God not in this country—I should like to see us do something to stiffen the morale of the Army, the Navy, and the Marine Corps. Let those men know that we are not only willing to pay billions of dollars for guns and planes and munitions but are also willing to pay a few million dollars to them that they may live in a proper American way of living.

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. IZAC. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SIROVICH. Is it not true that when men enlist in the Army and in the Navy today they find on the application they fill out a statement that they will receive when they reenlist the sum of $200 or $300?

Mr. IZAC. I may say to the gentleman that statement used to be on the forms and I presume it still is there because it is the basic law of this country and has never been taken from the statute books. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Van Zandt].

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, in opposing the conference report I want to quote my colleague the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Woodrum]. The other day, when I asked him if he considered an enlistment in the Navy as a contract with the Government, the gentleman from Virginia replied, "Yes."

When a man enlists in the Army, the Navy, or the Marine Corps it is true that he enters into a contract existing between himself and his Government. Many men in the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps today hold contracts with the Government and when they reenlist they are denied the reenlistment allowance, and therefore the Government is not upholding its end of the contract if the conference report is accepted. The provisions that apply to the reenlistment allowance will be stricken from the law. So not only do I oppose the report of the conferees as far as it applies to the contract that now exists between the enlisted man and the Government but I certainly oppose the idea of striking the provision out of the present law.

Eighty-three percent of the present enlisted personnel of the United States Navy are reenlistments, and they expect at the conclusion of their 4-year enlistment period, not a gratuity, but they expect this reenlistment allowance so that they can make a visit to their homes and to their parents, and so they can provide the necessities of life for their families. Many of them are married men. The lowest pay in the Navy, I find, is $21 per month, in the marines it is $20.80 a month, and in the Army it is $21 a month. The pay of a C. C. C. boy today is $30 a month. Now, here is a man who is a member of the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps—our national defense—and he is paid less than the man who is in the C. C. C. today. Mind you, if a man in the C. C. is in need of hospitalization, he is hospitalized not at his expense but at the expense of the Government; but a man in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps is hospitalized at his own expense because there is deducted from his pay every month a small sum to cover the cost of hospitalization in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Yes.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I infer that the gentleman is opposed to the report of the conferees. I was one of the conferees and I am also opposed to the motion just offered.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. I thank the gentleman very much. Mr. PATRICK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VAN ZANDT. I yield.

Mr. PATRICK. Is there any way in the world that this position can help in any measure in saving any money or promoting efficiencies? Can this motion possibly accomplish either purpose? Will the position taken in conference help either in economy or efficiency?

Mr. VAN ZANDT. If we retain in the present law the provision for reenlistment allowances to the men, and if we appropriate the money to take care of the allowances, that will actually save the Government money and promote efficiency in the Military Establishment.

Mr. PATRICK. That will promote economy and also provide more efficient service than we are getting now?

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Yes.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. It is expensive to train these men.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. It is. As my colleague the gentleman from California mentioned a few moments ago, it costs $256 to train a man for the Navy; on the other hand, when a man reenlists his allowance cannot exceed $200. Most of the reenlistments, however, are by men in the lower pay grades and the allowance cannot exceed $100. Thus the economy of this allowance is evident. As to efficiency, it is only necessary to point out that it takes time and money to train experts on torpedoes, fire control, signals, or any of the specialties the Navy has, is left to your own good judgment. A competent man in any rating can only be developed by continuance in service, and the Congress should encourage men to make the service a vocation and should restore to them that which is being denied them without justification. I appeal to you to vote for the rank and file of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. Case].

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call the attention of the Members of the House to another principle involved in the situation in which we now find ourselves.

The attitude of the House on this amendment has been definitely expressed. The proposal that is now in the bill before us comes from the Senate. It was taken out in the House on a point of order. It now comes to us as a proposal by the Senate. We have acted upon this matter once. The House voted its disapproval of a proposal to concur with an amendment, and then, subsequently, on a motion to insist upon our disagreement, the House again expressed itself as opposed to this item.

The Manual of the House indicates that a principle in such situations is recognized and well established, and is stated in Hinds' Precedents, volume 4, paragraph 3906, from which I read:

The principle seems to be generally accepted that the House proposing legislation on a general appropriation bill should recede if the other House persist in its objection.

Therefore, if we are going to follow the well-established principle in conferences between the two Houses, the House should again insist upon its disagreement and the Senate should recede.

This question has been a matter of settled precedents of the Congress over a long period of time. In paragraphs 3904, 3905, 3906, and 3908 similar instances are cited to which I want to invite the attention of the House at this time.

In 1898, in the Senate, Mr. John T. Morgan, of Alabama, submitted a similar proposition in which he recognized that the Senate should recede from its position because it was proposing an amendment in the nature of legislation on an appropriation bill—an amendment on which the House had already expressed itself in disagreement.

On June 10, 1896, a condition of prolonged disagreement came about in the House, and when this disagreement was under discussion, Mr. Joseph G. Cannon, of Illinois, chairman of the Committee on Appropriations and the Member in charge of the bill, said:

Under our parliamentary precedents the body proposing legislation, when the other body will not assent, recedes; and if the Senate, proposing legislation in this case, lets this bill fail because the House will not assent to the legislation, then let the responsibility be upon the Senate. * * * The man who has read the history of his country understandingly in the parliamentary contests in 1878, 1879, and 1880 understands—and this contest began before the breaking out of the late war—that the rule is unvarying that the body proposing legislation as a rider upon a money bill must recede if the other body will not assent.

In the Senate, in the discussion of the same disagreement, Mr. John Sherman, of Ohio, said:

It has always been, so far as I know, the custom of the Senate, and also in the House of Representatives as well, where there is a disagreement between the two Houses threatening to defeat the passage of an important appropriation bill—and it is the only true rule that can be applied to such a case—that the House proposing the amendment which is firmly resisted by the other House ought to recede from the amendment.

That is an identical situation with what we have here. Weighave the Senate proposing a legislative amendment to an appropriation bill, where the House has already taken a position.

Again, in 1906 in the Senate a discussion arose as to the respective duties of the House and Senate, as to receding from legislative amendments to appropriation bills. Mr. James Hemmenway, of Indiana—and this was in the Senate—put the question to Mr. Hale as to what was the practice of the two bodies, and Mr. Hale, of Maine, said:

Mr. President, as I have been appealed to by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. Hemmenway] to state what is my experience, I will state that when either House puts in an appropriation bill legislation it cannot force the other House to agree, but it must in the end recede if the proposition is one that the other House will not at all agree to.

That practice is well established and recognized in the several paragraphs that I have cited and, in the instant case, entirely apart from the question involved, if we are to follow the precedents between the two Houses we should insist on our disagreement to the Senate and the Senate should recede. [Applause.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. Hinshaw].

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I stand before you as a veteran of both the Regular Army and the voluntary forces of the United States, and I ask you to vote against the motion of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Woodrum] for the reasons already stated by my colleague from California [Mr. Izac], by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Van Zandt], and by the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. Case]. I call attention to a few more facts that have not been given by the gentlemen who have already spoken.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Van Zandt] has just told you about the low pay and the hours. Yet we expect this soldier and sailor to care for equipment that is worth millions. We work him 24 hours a day if the need exists. We put him out on damnably realistic war and naval games to prove the equipment and provide the most practical methods of tactics and technique.

It is vitally important that the morale of our Regular Military Establishment be maintained. It is this force that must stand both ready and able to defend our shores in the event of attack. It is this force that is called upon to maintain our valuable and highly technical and intricate machinery of war—antiaircraft guns, range finders, signal equipment, both radio and telephone, ordnance and engineer equipment in a high state of efficient preparedness,

The enlisted men of our Regular Establishment receive miserably low pay for the work they are called upon to perform, and the hours of duty are frequently long. These men are subjected in many instances to great hazards in peacetime. They must handle and fire high explosives in practice; they must cover difficult terrain in maneuvers, and all this on a base pay of about 65 cents a day and found.

The gentleman from Virginia has stated before that reenlistments are at a high rate, and that is true. These years have been conducive to hanging on to one's job, if any. But it is important to us that this small, highly trained military force be maintained and that the men reenlist and reenlist, in order that the nucleous of our national defense shall at all times be both ready and able to stand to arms. It is poor economy to take it out on our small defense force because they cannot get jobs if they do not reenlist.

Do you realize that the Army private receives less pay and less benefits than the enrollees of our C. C. C. camps—and he is in for 4 years, not a few months?

Over 5,000 names of disabled Regulars and over 1,000 dependents of line-of-duty deceased Regulars were placed on the pension rolls last year, at pensions that are a national disgrace, being as low as 30 percent of that we pay war veterans and dependents of war veterans for like disabilities.

The disabled Regular is not entitled to one thin dime for his funeral expenses unless he has war service. We even deny that disabled Regular an American flag for his casket that would then go to his nearest of kin. He is not recognized in the Department of Labor employment offices as a veteran. His pitiful little pension precludes his receiving any relief assistance in the great majority of cases, and relief would frequently pay him two or three times as much. He cannot secure W. P. A. preference. He cannot enlist in the C. C. C. unless he passes a physical examination, yet we have 30,000 war veterans in C. C. C. enrollment. The Regular in service killed in line of duty is entitled to $100 maximum funeral expenses. The C. C. c. enrollee who dies while in camp is entitled to a maximum of $145 funeral expenses.

The man behind the gun receiving fair and equitable treatment is just as important a phase of national defense as providing modern equipment. Let us consider all angles of national defense, not just one.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes. The parliamentary situation is very simple and quite regular. This amendment was put in by the House committee and went out on a point of order. It was reinserted by the Senate committee; and when it came to the House a few days ago, a motion was made to recede and concur with an amendment making it permanent law. That amendment was voted down substantially. It comes back now with a motion to recede and concur in the Senate amendment, which merely carries the inhibition against this gratuity for one additional fiscal year. So during this session of Congress the House has not voted on this motion. There is nothing irregular about the parliamentary procedure. The House has, however, for 6 consecutive years refused to allow this reenlistment gratuity. Let us get this straight. To concur in this Senate amendment does not take away from the present enlisted men in the Army or the Navy one red cent of compensation. It merely continues in force the inhibition against paying the reenlistment gratuity. What is the history of that? The history of the reenlistment gratuity is that in those days when it was very hard to get men to enlist in the Army and the Navy, and harder still to get them to reenlist, that inducement had to be offered, over and above their pay, to secure them to reenlist, and to thereby maintain the armed forces of the country. What is the situation today? The situation today is that reenlistments without the gratuity are at a much higher percentage than they were in those days when we paid the gratuity. Attribute some of that, if you care to, to the condition of the times, but it is a fact, nevertheless, that they are much greater.

What is the additional fact now? Let us see in what an inconsistent position our friends find themselves when they argue that we must freeze the present personnel of the United States Army and of the United States Navy. In the last Congress we set up machinery to create an Army reserve of 75,000 trained soldiers, to be in the Reserve forces of the country. Now, if we wish to be emotional and if we wish to look through war-colored glasses at everything we do, which I think is unfortunate. let us consider that feature for a moment. Where do we stand? Every time a man in the trained forces today leaves the Army and goes into private life you have a recruit for your trained Army Reserve of this country, and in his place there comes into the ranks of the United States Army a young vigorous man, full of vitality, quite willing and quite anxious to take up the cause of his country in the armed forces. So there is no argument whatever in the fact that it is in the interest of defense or in the interest of maintaining the Army that these men who have had one or two or three or four terms in the Army should be paid to stay in the Army. There is no logic in the position that we should take our enlisted personnel in the Army and freeze it, and say we do not want the fine splendid young men who are now standing in line wishing to enlist.

Now let us pass on. If you will bring legislation to this House to increase the meager, inadequate compensation of the private of the Army, I will vote with you to put it on

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WARREN). The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

They are poorly paid. This does not remedy that. This takes a man when he comes out of the service and hands him a gratuity. This does not remove the inequity and injustices of the low paid enlisted personnel of the Army. But what happens when a man finishes his enlistment? Mark you, there is not a man in the Army or Navy today who, when he enlisted, had the right to expect he would get this reenlistment pay, because it was not being paid and has not been paid and Congress has repeatedly indicated that they do not intend to resume paying it unless conditions change; and they have not changed. What do we do? One of my friends says he ought to get this reenlistment pay so he can go home to see his mother. When he finishes his enlistment today he is given 5 cents a mile transportation, whether he travels or not. If he finishes his service here today he is given 5 cents a mile, and he can walk around the corner to the next window and reenlist. In addition to that, he is given on an average $45 for clothing, which he did not draw during his term of enlistment. Now, to continue to resume paying this reenlistment allowance after these years would simply mean the payment of an additional gratuity gift to the enlisted men of the United States Army, which is not justified at the present time.

Now, what about the cost of it? On yesterday this House insisted on writing into the reorganization bill language that there was an emergency; that the economic situation of the country created an emergency, and that was proper language, my colleagues, because there is an emergency. There is $6,000,000 involved in this, over and above the Budget estimates. That much more is added to our deficit-$6,000,000. Well, my friend says, "It is not right not to put this back, because it is in the basic law." Now, let us follow that for a moment. How many times has the Congress authorized appropriations when they have never been made? Every appropriation bill this House has passed this Congress contains items in which the Appropriations Committee and the Congress ultimately has not appropriated the amount which is authorized to be appropriated for the subject, but the gentleman from New York [Mr. Wads-WORTH] is about to tell me that this is base pay and therefore that is different. Now, let us pursue that for a moment.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The gentleman guessed right. I wanted to ask him if he regarded this merely as an authorization?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. No; certainly not; this is base pay. Where do we stand on that? A few days ago I brought to this House a bill which cut $2,000 a year off of the base pay of members of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the United States Tariff Commission, the Maritime Commission, and the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and you gentlemen here very splendidly and very patriotically exercised your good sound judgment, when you were in an economy mood and supported me in that. That action applies to basic pay. The basic pay of a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission and all of these other organizations that carry out splendid, important, quasi-judicial functions of the Government is $12,000 a year, and yet this Congress in this very session has withheld a portion of that. Why? Because it felt that under the circumstances it was justified in so doing.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield. Mr. WADSWORTH. Surely the gentleman would not contend that a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission is bound by an enlistment contract?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. No; but it is his pay.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The soldier cannot get out. He has got to stay. He is signed.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. It is in the basic law, just the same as this reenlistment pay is there.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. O'NEAL. There is one point that has not been brought out which to me seems to be very important. When the first draft came on in 1917 the limit of age was 30 or 31. A man to be called in the first draft had to be under that age. I am told that the average age of the Regular Army today is 31 or over. It seems to me very clear that we should have a policy encouraging the younger man to come in and take the Regular Army training, that we should not retain men or encourage men to remain when they reach such an age that they cannot stand the physical rigors of warfare.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recede and concur.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Woodrum of Virginia) there were-ayes 55, noes 78.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will [After counting.] One hundred and eighty-two Members are present, not a quorum. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were-yeas 89, nays 260, not voting 84, as follows:

[Roll No. 30] YEAS-89

Johnson, Okla. Johnson, W. Va. Jones, Tex. Bates, Ky. Bates, Mass. Crawford Rees, Kans. Rich Cummings Robertson Romjue Bland Curtis Boehne Boland Dirksen Dondero Kitchens Ryan Scrugham Smith, Va. Lambertson Leavy Ludlow Doxey Brooks Drewry South Taber Burch Durham Mahon Maloney Mansfield Martin, Colo. Ellis Engel Burgin Caldwell Tarver Taylor, Colo. Cannon, Mo. Flannagan Folger Ford, Miss. Fulmer Carlson Terry Thomas, Tex. Cartwright Massingale Michener Tinkham Vincent, Ky. Michener Mills, Ark. Chapman Garrett Warren Whittington Clark Gore Gregory Murdock, Ariz. Cochran Hare Heinke Coffee, Nebr. Murdock, Utah Williams, Mo. Nelson Norrell O'Neal Woodrum, Va. Collins Hobbs Hope Houston Colmer Zimmerman Cooley Cooper Jarrett Poage NAYS-260 Brown, Ga. Brown, Ohio Alexander Allen, Pa. Andersen, H. Carl Anderson, Mo. Church Clason Claypool Barnes Bryson Buckler, Minn. Barry

Burdick

Byrns, Tenn.

Byron Carter Case, S. Dak. Casey, Mass. Chiperfield

Clevenger

Confee, Wash.
Cole, Md.
Connery
Corbett
Costello

Cluett

Barton

Bolles

Andresen, A. H.

Andrews

Angell Arends Arnold

Austin

Ball

Beam Beckworth Blackney

Cuikin	Hess	Marcantonio	Backs
Cullen	Hill	Marshall	Sasscer
D'Alesandro	Hinshaw	Martin, Ill.	Satterfield
Darden	Hoffman	Martin, Iowa	Schaefer, Ill.
Darrow	Holmes	Martin, Mass.	Schafer, Wis.
Dempsey	Hook	Mason	Schiffler
Dickstein	Horton	May	Schuetz
Dingell	Hull	Merritt	Schwert
	Izac	Miller	Secrest
Dowell			Shafer, Mich.
Duncan	Jacobsen	Mills, La.	Sharer, Mich.
Dunn	Jarman	Monkiewicz	Shanley
Dworshak	Jenkins, Ohio	Monroney	Shannon
Eaton, Calif.	Jensen	Mott	Short
Eberharter	Johnson, Ill.	Mouton	Simpson
Edmiston	Johnson, Ind.	Murray	Sirovich
Elliott	Johnson, Luther A	Mvers	Smith, Conn.
Elston	Jones, Ohio	Nichols	Smith, Maine
Englebright	Kee	Norton	Smith, Ohio
Fenton	Keiler	O'Brien	Smith, Wash.
Fernandez		O'Connor	Smith, W. Va.
	Kelly
Fish	Kennedy, Michael	O'Day	Snyder
Fitzpatrick	Keogh	O'Leary	Sparkman
Flaherty	Kilday	Oliver	Spence
Flannery	Kinzer	Owen	Springer
Ford, Leland M.	Kirwan	Pace	Steagall
Fries	Kleberg	Parsons	Stefan
Gamble	Knutson	Patman	Sumner, Ill.
Gathings	Kocialkowski	Patrick	Sutphin
Gavagan	Kunkel	Patton	Talle
Gehrmann	Landis	Peterson, Fla.	Taylor, Tenn.
Gerlach	Lanham	Peterson, Ga.	Thill
Geyer, Calif.	Larrabee	Pfeifer	Thomas, N. J.
Gibbs	Lea		Thomason
		Pierce, N. Y.	Thorkelson
Gifford	LeCompte	Pierce, Oreg.
Gilchrist	Lemke	Pittenger	Tibbott
Goldsborough	Lesinski	Plumley	Tolan
Gossett	Lewis, Colo.	Polk	Treadway
Graham	Lewis, Ohio	Powers	Turner
Grant, Ala.	Lord	Rabaut	Van Zandt
Grant, Ind.	Luce	Ramspeck	Vinson. Ga.
Green	McAndrews	Randolph	Voorhis, Calif.
Griffith	McArdle	Rankin	Vorys, Ohio
Griswold	McCormack	Reece, Tenn.	Wadsworth
Gross	McDowell	Reed, Ill.	Wallgren
Guyer, Kans.	McKeough	Reed, N. Y.	Walter
		Risk	Weaver
Gwynne	McLaughlin
Hall	McLean	Robinson, Utah	West
Harness	McLeod	Robsion, Ky.	Wheat
Harrington	McMillan, John L		White, Idaho
Harter, N. Y.	McMillan, Thos. S		White, Ohio
Havenner	Maas	Rogers, Mass.	Williams, Del.
Hawks	Maciejewski	Rogers, Okla.	Winter
Healey	Magnuson	Routzohn	Wolcott
Hendricks	Mapes	Rutherford	Woodruff, Mich

NOT VOTING-84

Allen, Ill.	Delaney	Hennings	Sandager
Allen, La.	DeRouen	Hunter	Schulte
Anderson, Calif.	Dies	Jeffries	Seccombe
Ashbrook	Disney	Jenks, N. H.	Seger
Bell	Ditter	Johns	Sheppard
Bender	Doughton	Johnson, Lyndon	Smith, Ill.
Bloom	Douglas	Keefe	Somers, N. Y.
Bolton	Eaton, N. J.	Kennedy, Martin	Starnes, Ala.
Bradley, Mich.	Evans	Kennedy, Md.	Stearns, N. H.
Buck	Faddis	Kerr	Sullivan
Buckley, N. Y.	Fav	Kramer	Sumners, Tex.
Bulwinkle	Ferguson	McGehee	Sweeney
Byrne, N. Y.	Ford. Thomas F.	McGranery	Tenerowicz
Cannon, Fla.	Gartner	McReynolds	Vreeland
Celler	Gearhart	Mitchell	Welch
Cole, N. Y.	Gillie	Mundt	Whelchel
Creal	Halleck	Osmers	Wigglesworth
Crowe	Hancock	O'Toole	Wolfenden, Pa.
Crowther	Hart	Rayburn	Wolverton, N. J.
Curley	Harter, Ohio	Richards	Wood
Daly	Hartley	Sabath	Youngdahl

So the motion to recede and concur was rejected. The Clerk announced the following additional pairs: Until further notice:

Until further notice:

Mr. Rayburn with Mr. Wolfenden.
Mr. Doughton with Mr. Eaton of New Jersey.
Mr. McReynolds with Mr. Gearhart.
Mr. Disney with Mr. Anderson of California.
Mr. Disney with Mr. Jefferies.
Mr. Kramer with Mr. Jenks of New Hampshire.
Mr. Schulte with Mr. Mundt.
Mr. Schulte with Mr. Mundt.
Mr. Starnes of Alabama with Mr. Seccombe.
Mr. Curley with Mr. Keefe.
Mr. Sullivan with Mr. Hartley.
Mr. Whelchel with Mr. Seger.
Mr. Ferguson with Mr. Seger.
Mr. Ferguson with Mr. Stearns of New Hampshire.
Mr. Creal with Mr. Youngdahl.
Mr. Bell with Mr. Johns.
Mr. Ashbrook with Mr. Sandager
Mr. McGehee with Mr. Hancock.
Mr. Wood with Mr. Bolton.
Mr. Evans with Mr. Wolverton of New Jersey.
Mr. Daly with Mr. Cole of New York.
Mr. Linden B. Johnson with Mr. Gartner.
Mr. Allen of Louisiana with Mr. Orowther.
LXXXIV——160

LXXXIV--160

Mr. Bloom with Mr. Halleck.
Mr. Martin J. Kennedy with Mr. Allen of Illinois.
Mr. Kerr with Mr. Gillie.
Mr. DeRouen with Mr. Ditter.
Mr. Bulwinkle with Mr. Welch.
Mr. Delaney with Mr. Bender.
Mr. Sweeney with Mr. Wigglesworth.
Mr. Richards with Mr. Bradley of Michigan.
Mr. Faddis with Mr. Buck.
Mr. Buckley of New York with Mr. Harter of Ohio.
Mr. Kennedy of Maryland with Mr. Byrne of New York.
Mr. McGranery with Mr. Crowe.
Mr. O'Toole with Mr. Hart.
Mr. Sheppard with Mr. Fay.
Mr. Celler with Mr. Hennings.

Mr. GROSS and Mr. MOUTON changed their votes from "yea" to "nay."

Mr. Poage changed his vote from "nay" to "yea."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House further insist upon its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 18. Page 68, line 13, strike out "Sec. 6" and insert in lieu thereof "Sec. 7."

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House further insist on its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate. This involves just a section number.

The motion was agreed to.

DEFICIENCY BILL—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 2868) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the conference report.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate numbered 23 and the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 13 to the bill (H. R. 2868) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

Amendment numbered 13: That the Senate recede from its dis-

Amendment numbered 13: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 13, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed by such amendment of the House insert the sum "$3,000,000"; and the House agree to the same.

The committee of conference report in disagreement amendment numbered 23.

C. A. WOODRUM, CLARENCE CANNON, LOUIS LUDLOW, THOS. S. McMILLAN, J. BUELL SNYDER, EMMET O'NEAL. GEO. W. JOHNSON,
W. P. LAMBERTSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

EDWARD T. TAYLOR,

ALVA B. ADAMS, CARTER GLASS, KENNETH MCKELLAR, CARL HAYDEN, JAMES F. BYRNES, JOHN G. TOWNSEND, Jr.,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on an amendment of the Senate and a House amendment to a Senate amendment to the bill (H. R. 2868) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recom-mended in the accompanying conference report as to each of such amendments, namely:

On amendment No. 13: Appropriates $3,000,000 for the control of insect pests and plant diseases, instead of $2,000,000 originally and $2,250,000 subsequently proposed by the House, and $5,417,000 proposed by the Senate.

Amendment in disagreement

The committee of conference report in disagreement the following amendment:

On amendment No. 23: Appropriating for a building temporarily to accommodate the Bureau of the Census.

EDWARD T. TAYLOR, C. A. WOODRUM, CLARENCE CANNON, Louis Ludlow, Thos. S. McMillan, J. BUELL SNYDER, EMMET O'NEAL.

GEO. W. JOHNSON,
W. P. LAMBERTSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, a brief explanation. The only item now is amendment No. 13, which was agreed to in conference, and we gave an additional sum of $750,000 for feeding the grasshoppers.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. TABER. There is nothing involved in this but $3,000,-000 for the grasshopper program, and the figure is still $200,000 below the Budget estimate.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Yes.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the first amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment 23: Page 9, line 8, strike out all of line 8 down to and including all of line 17.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 23 and concur in the same with an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Woodrum of Virginia moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 23, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Restore the matter stricken out by said amendment amended to read as follows:

"PROCUREMENT DIVISION, PUBLIC BUILDINGS BRANCH

"General Federal Office Building, Washington, D. C.: For the acquisition of the necessary land and the construction of a building for additional office space in the District of Columbia under the provisions of the Public Buildings Act approved May 25, 1926 (44 Stat. 630), as amended, including the extension of steam and water mains, removal or diversion of such sewers and utilities as may be necessary, and for administrative expenses in connection therewith, $3,500,000."

And on page 5 of the bill, in line 2, after the figure "$850,000", insert the following: ": Provided, That such additional sum shall be available for administrative expenses of the Wage and Hour Division for the fiscal year 1939 heretofore or hereafter incurred and otherwise properly chargeable thereto."

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order against the amendment on the ground that it attempts to amend an item that has not been in disagreement.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Will the gentleman reserve his point of order to permit me to make a brief explanation?

Mr. TABER. Yes; I will reserve it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York reserves a point of order against the amendment.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, undoubtedly the portion of the amendment to which the gentleman objects is subject to a point of order; but the situation that confronts the House and the Wage and Hour Division of the Department of Labor is that we carry in this deficiency bill a deficiency appropriation for the Wage and Hour Division, but they are actually out of money now and have been for several days. Under the law the deficiency appropriation, when finally signed by the President, will be available only from the time of its becoming law; so there is a period of some 8, 10, or 12 days during which the obligations and expenses of this Bureau have been running which are not provided for unless language is put in here or a joint resolution is passed. The language, of course, is subject to a point of order if the gentleman desires to press it, but if he does that we shall have to go through the formality of passing a joint resolution.

I hope with this explanation the gentleman will be willing to withdraw his point of order. The amendment does not increase the appropriation or do anything except to make the money available to pay the expenses which have been incurred during this interim I mentioned.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I do not feel I can accept the gentleman's proposition. I feel that I should insist on my point of order. I do not know whether I would insist on it if unanimous consent were asked to amend page 5 by itself as the gentleman has suggested, but I shall have to insist on the point of order if it is coupled with the census bill.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I acknowledge the point of order and will reoffer the amendment with the latter part of it stricken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WARREN). The point of order made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 23, and agree to the same with an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Woodrum of Virginia moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 23, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

"Restore the matter stricken out by said amendment amended to read as follows:

"PROCUREMENT DIVISION, PUBLIC BUILDINGS BRANCH
"General Federal Office Building, Washington, D. C.: For the acquisition of the necessary land and the construction of a building for additional office space in the District of Columbia under the provisions of the Public Buildings Act approved May 25, 1926 (44 Stat. 630), as amended, including the extension of steam and water mains, removal or diversion of such sewers and utilities as may be necessary, and for administrative expenses in connection therewith, $3,500,000."

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Does the gentleman from New York desire any time?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] 2 minutes.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, this is the same old Census Building proposition under a new name. As evidenced by the debate that occurred before, it is not necessary, because the Public Health Service buildings are going to be evacuated very quickly on account of the fact the Public Health Service will move to Bethesda and continue the activities of that branch in a new building out there, which will be available in sufficient time so that the census set-up may be taken care of. This taken with what may be secured in the regular Commerce Building will amply take care of the regular census activities and give them as much space as the 1930 census activity required. We can therefore get along without a permanent building which would require a build-up of activities later on if we provide this. I hope we can save a little money by refusing to agree to this amendment.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, may I remind the gentlemen of the House that yesterday we wrote into the reorganization bill some rather emphatic language to the effect that an emergency exists and that the time had come for drastic economy. We emphasized the fact that economy is imperative right now. In line with that thought I went along a little while ago with my friend and colleague, the gentleman from Virginia, in denying to the enlisted men of the country an enlistment bounty. I felt it was in the interest of economy, even though the motion finally lost. I felt that since it involved a burden of $6,000,000 annually on the Federal Treasury and since this legislation has been in effect for the last 6 years, that such a vote was fully justified.

Mr. Speaker, here is a request for a new building, which was first named the Census Building, and which was stricken by the Senate. Now it is the same package under a new label because it is called a general Federal building, but the item of $3,500,000 still remains.

May I admonish you gentlemen if you want to practice a little economy today, in line with the language used in the reorganization bill by the members of the majority themselves on their own motion, this is a splendid time for the minority and the majority to join in the great economy crusade. Let us kill this unnecessary building right now. [Applause.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is an economy bill, in line with the cute little placards that I understand are being hung around the Treasury Department, and it does promote recovery. This will promote recovery.

Mr. TABER. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Certainly.

Mr. TABER. Is this not economy along the line of the statement made by a great humorist, Artemus Ward, quoted during the last session, "Let us all be happy and live within our means, even if we have to borrow the money to do it with"?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. It is about as humorous as the position of my Republican friends over here who preach economy, who profess to be interested in national defense, yet reach down into a depleted Treasury and knock a hole in the bottom of it by handing out to the enlisted men of the armed services a Christmas present of $5,000,000 or $6,000,000, with the idea of inducing men who have served three, four, five, or six enlistments to reenlist and not let younger men get into the service.

Mr. COLLINS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. COLLINS. The gentleman is exactly right. Those favoring that proposition hurt rather than help national defense. We should not keep the ranks filled up with old men and we should discourage rather than encourage so many reenlistments if we ever expect to have worth-while Reserve forces

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. The gentleman has made a contribution to the discussion.

Mr. BOLLES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. BOLLES. I should like to remind the gentleman we did not vote for the Gilbertsville Dam over here-

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. We all have sins to answer for, and I am talking now about the sins of you gentlemen.

Speaking particularly with reference to this bill, I may say there is not a businessman on your side of the aisle who would not put up this building if he had a similar proposition presented to him. We are renting in the District of Columbia 120 different buildings for governmental activities. If the reorganization bill accomplishes something, which we all hope it will, and we can get rid of half of these buildings, we still would have to rent 60 buildings. If we have any business ability about us at all we must concede it to be good business practice to put up a utilitarian type of building costing three and a half million dollars, which, if we do not erect and put up, we shall have to get someone else to build for us, and the cheapest bid the Department can get for the occupancy of such a building is $400,000 a year.

Mr. KNUTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. KNUTSON. What assurances have we that will be so if half of these buildings are vacated? We have not exhausted the alphabet yet.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. We have no assurance about anything, but we can always hope, and I hope along with the rest. However, as far as this particular building is con-cerned, it would be the part of good business on the part of this Government, and on the part of economical administration of public affairs, to put up not only this building but one or two other buildings of a similar type of cheap, economical construction, into which you could move some of the departments and stop paying the landlords of Washington a dollar or a dollar and a half per square foot for high-priced office space where we are storing files.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I noticed in the Merry-Go-Round column a day or two ago that Mr. Jesse Jones had committed himself to a loan of $5,600,000 to a couple of gentlemen from Chicago to build a 12- or 15-story office building on the McLean property, and in the same transaction agreed to rent the property for the use of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The building at present oc-cupied by the R. F. C. will be vacated shortly and we will have another building vacant which could be used for this or some similar purpose.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. The gentleman does not seriously suggest the building of the R. F. C. would be ready for the Census Bureau to occupy in less than 12 months from now?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I do not know whether it would be ready by that time or not.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I imagine the gentleman would have some uncertainty about it.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. But it could be used for some other activity later.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. We need a few utilitariantype buildings. The House passed on this matter the other day. I hope, Mr. Speaker, the motion I have made will be agreed to.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Virginia to recede and concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I demand a division.

The House divided, and there were-ayes 74, noes 79.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 181, nays 158, not voting 94, as follows:

[Roll No. 31] YEAS-181

Allen, Pa. Cullen Hendricks Monroney Moser Murdock, Ariz. Murdock, Utah Barnes Cummings Hill Barry Bates, Ky. Hobbs Darden Dempsey Dickstein Hook Beam Bland Houston Jarman Johnson, Luther A. Norrell Johnson, W. Va. Norton Jones, Tex. O'Connor Bloom Dingell Doxey Boland Boren Drewry Boykin Bradley, Pa. Kee Kelly Durham Eberharter Elliott Kennedy, Michael O'Neal Brooks Brown, Ga. Keogh Kilday Parsons Patman Patrick Buck Ellis Buckler, Minn. Buckley, N. Y. Bulwinkle Kirwan Kitchens Fernandez Fitzpatrick Flaherty Flannagan Kleberg Kocialkowski Lanham Patton Pearson Peterson, Fla. Burgin Flannery Folger Ford, Miss. Ford, Thomas F. Leavy Lesinski Pierce, Oreg. Rabaut Byron Cannon, Mo. Cartwright Chandler Ramspeck Randolph Rankin Lewis, Colo. McAndrews McArdle Chapman McCormack Robertson McKeough Robinson, Uti McMillan, John L. Rogers, Okla. McMillan, Thos. S.Romjue Garrett Clark Robertson Robinson, Utah Gathings Claypool Gavagan Geyer, Calif. Gibbs Goldsborough Gossett Cochran Coffee, Nebr. Coffee, Wash. Cole, Md. Collins Ryan Sacks Sasscer Satterfield Schaefer, III. Maciejewski Magnuson Mahon Connery Cooley Corbett Costello Cox Grant, Ala. Maloney Mansfield Green Marcantonio Martin, Colo. Martin, Ill. Mills, Ark. Mills, La. Gregory Griffith Hare Schuetz Schwert Scrugham Havenner Healey Shanley

Shannon
Sheppard
Sirovich
Smith, Conn.
Smith, Va.
Smith, Wash.
Smith, W. Va.
Snyder

	South
1	Sparkman
	Spence
	Steagall
	Sutphin
	Farver
	Taylor, Colo.
3	Terry

Thomas, Tex. Tolan Vincent, Ky. Vinson, Ga. Wallgren Walter Warren Weaver

Rees, Kans. Rich Risk Robsion, Ky.

Rockefeller Rodgers, Pa. Rogers, Mass. Routzohn

Rutherford Schafer, Wis.

Schiffler Shafer, Mich.

Simpson Smith, Maine Smith, Ohio

Sumner, Ill.

Springer Stefan

Tibbott Tinkham

Treadway Van Zandt Vorys, Ohio Wadsworth Welch

Wheat White, Ohio

Wigglesworth Williams, Del.

Winter Wolcott Woodruff, Mich.

Taber Talle Taylor, Tenn. Thill Thomas, N. J. Thorkelson

NAYS-158

	7417	10-100
Alexander	Engel	Kinzer
Andersen, H. Carl	Englebright	Knutson
Anderson, Mo.	Fenton	Kunkel
Andresen, A. H.	Fulmer	Lambertson
Angell	Gamble	Landis
Arends	Gartner	Larrabee
Arnold	Gehrmann	Lemke
Austin	Gerlach	Lewis, Ohio
Ball	Gifford	Lord
Barton	Gilchrist	Luce
Bates, Mass.	Gillie	Ludlow
Beckworth	Gore	McDowell
Blackney	Graham	McLaughlin
Boehne	Grant, Ind.	McLean
Bolles	Griswold	McLeod
Bradley, Mich.	Gross	Mapes
Brewster	Guyer, Kans.	Marshall
Brown, Ohio	Gwynne	Martin, Iowa
Bryson	Hall	Martin, Mass
Burdick	Halleck	Mason
Byrns, Tenn.	Harness	Massingale
Carlson	Harter, N. Y.	Michener
Carter	Hawks	Miller
Case, S. Dak.	Heinke	Monkiewicz
Chiperfield	Hess	Mott
Church	Hinshaw	Murray
Clason	Hoffman	Nichols
Clevenger	Holmes	O'Brien
Colmer	Hope	Oliver
Crawford	Horton	Owen
Culkin	Hull	Peterson, Ga.
Curtis	Jacobsen	Pierce, N. Y.
Darrow	Jarrett	Pittenger
Dirksen	Jenkins, Ohio	Plumley
Dondero	Jensen	Poage
Dowell	Johns	Polk
Dworshak	Johnson, Ill.	Powers
Eaton, Calif.	Johnson, Ind.	Reece, Tenn.
Edmiston	Jones, Ohio	Reed, Ill.
Elston	Kean	Reed, N. Y.
CONTRACTOR OF THE PARTY OF THE	THE STATE OF THE S
	NOT V	OTING—94

Allen, Ill.	Disney	Keefe	Schulte
Allen, La.	Ditter	Keller	Seccombe
Anderson, Calif.	Doughton	Kennedy, Martin	Seger
Andrews	Douglas	Kennedy, Md.	Short
Ashbrook	Duncan	Kerr	Smith, Ill.
Barden	Eaton, N. J.	Kramer	Somers, N. Y.
Bell	Evans	Lea	Starnes, Ala.
Bender	Faddis	LeCompte	Stearns, N. H.
Bolton	Ferguson	McGehee	Sullivan
Byrne, N. Y.	Fish	McGranery	Sumners, Tex.
Caldwell	Ford, Leland M.	McReynolds	Sweeney
Cannon, Fla.	Gearhart	Maas	Tenerowicz
Casey, Mass.	Hancock	May	Thomason
Celler	Harrington	Merritt	Turner
Cluett	Hart	Mitchell	Voorhis, Calif.
Cole, N. Y.	Harter, Ohio	Mouton	Vreeland
Cooper	Hartley	Mundt	West
Creal	Hennings	Osmers	Whelchel
Crowther	Hunter	O'Toole	Wolfenden, Pa.
Curley	Izac	Pfeifer	Wolverton, N. J
Daly	Jeffries	Rayburn	Wood
Delaney	Jenks, N. H.	Richards	Youngdahl
DeRouen	Johnson, Lyndon	Sabath
Dies	Johnson, Okla.	Sandager

So the motion was agreed to. The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On the vote:

Mr. Harter of Ohio (for) with Mr. Short (against).

Mr. Thomason (for) with Mr. Andrews (against).

Mr. Allen of Louisiana (for) with Mr. Allen of Illinois (against).

Mr. Schulte (for) with Mr. Mundt (against).

Mr. Schulte (for) with Mr. Ditter (against).

Mr. Stullivan (for) with Mr. Ditter (against).

Mr. Stullivan (for) with Mr. Wolfenden of Pennsylvania (against).

Mr. Harrington (for) with Mr. Douglas (against).

Mr. Delaney (for) with Mr. Hartley (against).

Mr. Starnes of Alabama (for) with Mr. Keefe (against).

Mr. Rayburn (for) with Mr. Seccombe (against).

Mr. McReynolds (for) with Mr. Bolton (against).

Mr. Doughton (for) with Mr. Bolton (against).

Mr. Ashbrook (for) with Mr. Stearns of New Jersey (against).

Mr. Celler (for) with Mr. Stearns of New Hampshire (against).

Mr. DeRouen (for) with Mr. Molverton of New Jersey (against).

Mr. Evans (for) with Mr. Anderson of California (against).

Mr. Hart (for) with Mr. Cole of New York (against).

Mr. McGranery (for) with Mr. Gearhart (against).

Mr. McGranery (for) with Mr. Jenks of New Hampshire (against).

Mr. Merritt (for) with Mr. Jenks of New Hampshire (against).

Mr. Merritt (for) with Mr. Jenks of New Hampshire (against).

Mr. Merritt (for) with Mr. Jenks of New Hampshire (against).

Mr. Mouton (for) with Mr. Crowther (against).

Mr. O'Toole (for) with Mr. Bender (against).
Mr. Hennings (for) with Mr. Cluett (against).
Mr. Bell (for) with Mr. Maas (against).
Mr. Kennedy of Maryland (for) with Mr. LeCompte (against).
Mr. Curley (for) with Mr. Sandager (against).
Mr. Casey of Massachusetts (for) with Mr. Fish (against).
Mr. Daly (for) with Mr. Vreeland (against).

General pairs:

Mr. May with Mr. Duncan.
Mr. Creal with Mr. West.
Mr. Kerr with Mr. Hunter.
Mr. Dies with Mr. Barden.
Mr. Caldwell with Mr. Faddis.
Mr. Sweeney with Mr. Whelchel.
Mr. Ferguson with Mr. Wood.

Mr. Disney with Mr. Richards. Mr. McGehee with Mr. Lyndon B. Johnson.

Mr. Robertson changed his vote from "nay" to "yea." The result of the vote was announced as above recorded. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I propound a unanimous-consent request, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Unanimous-consent request propounded by Mr. Woodrum of Virginia: On page 5 of the engrossed bill H. R. 2868, in line 2, after the figure "$850,000", insert the following: "Provided, That such additional sum shall also be available for administrative expenses of the Wage and Hour Division for the fiscal year 1939 heretofore incurred, otherwise properly chargeable thereto."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

The amendment was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend in the RECORD the remarks I intend to make later in Committee of the Whole and include therein excerpts from the RECORD of March 2.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL, 1940

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 4852) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes; and pending that, I ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania if we can agree upon the time to be allowed for general debate?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that we permit the general debate to run on through the day and reach its conclusion tonight or tomorrow, because I have a number of requests for time.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. That will be agreeable to me. I will express the hope, however, that we may possibly get through tomorrow.

Mr. RICH. We have used two hours and a half on other matters already today. We will see about that tomorrow.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Colorado moves that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 4852; and, pending that motion, asks unanimous consent that general debate on the bill be continued through the remainder of the legislative day, the time to be equally divided between himself and the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Is there objection to the request?

There was no objection.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 4852, with Mr. Buck in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cochran].

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a letter I have received from the Attorney General.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri must get consent to include extraneous material from the House it-

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, when it can be shown by official records that $2,384,744,675.52 is involved in claims against the Government I am sure it is the duty of every Member of Congress to take notice of such a situation.

For a number of years I have taken an interest in legislation that has been advanced where attorneys for Indians and Indian tribes have attempted to secure the passage of legislation that would amend an original jurisdictional act wherein the Congress enabled them to file suit against the United States in the Court of Claims.

The older Members will recall that the deficiency bill approved August 12, 1935, section 2 of title I, extended to the Government the right to offset the claims filed by the Indians by showing advances, gratuities, and so forth made to the various Indian tribes.

This section in the deficiency act was added after the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, of which I am chairman, had thoroughly investigated the cases then pending.

In order that information might be available showing the present status of the claims, I have secured a complete list of Indian cases pending at the present time in the Court of Claims. This list shows the number of Indian claims as of January 31, 1939. The list gives the court docket number, the name of each plaintiff tribe, the principal amount claimed, and interest, where claimed, computed to July 1, 1938. In those cases where no amount is claimed an estimated aggregate principal amount and the estimated aggregate interest to July 1, 1938, is supplied.

This statement also makes known the fact that the total amount set forth does not include interest in many cases where interest was not claimed originally, but in which interest would be allowed under the theory of the Shoshone Tribe v. United States (299 U. S. 476), decided April 25, 1938. This list was furnished to me by the Attorney General, and, of course, is authentic. It follows:

TABLE I.—Showing the cases wherein the amount claimed is specified able 1.—Showing the cuses wherein the amount cutmed is specified in the petitions and showing the amount of interest involved (where interest is claimed), calculated to July 1, 1938

Number of case			Interest to July 1, 1938
K-103		$35, 151, 911. 50	$71, 208, 478. 74
J-8	Cherokee	8, 916, 170. 20	14, 414, 475. 16
L-46		699, 793. 05	103, 613. 44
L-257	do	10, 454, 994. 94	22, 478, 239. 20
L-266	do	3, 750, 000, 00	10, 593, 750.00
L-267		319, 584, 89	667, 564. 58
L-268		407, 655. 06
42080	do	4, 581, 600.00	10, 575, 860, 00
K-334	Chickasaw	43, 563, 75	137, 951, 38
K-544		1, 697, 653, 57	3, 267, 536. 85
K-187		1,000,000.00	9, 201, 000. 00
K-260	dodo	6, 391, 603. 09
K-281	do	1, 162, 500, 00
H-37b		2, 883, 620.00	3, 770, 796. 50
	ed Il-Reducks - Adopted Bruton had Subpart to provide the bulgetest should be	12, 511, 039. 00	20, 386, 697, 03
J-620 H-163		19, 076, 000. 00	35, 250, 666, 66
M-135		511, 290, 00	978, 871, 88
		270, 283, 71	793, 282, 58
L-206		150, 000, 000, 00	336, 000, 000, 00
L-234			330, 000, 000. 00
B-415		475, 596. 00
E-350	Klamath	995, 000. 00
44294		1,020,000.00	84, 109. 56
44295		40, 447. 65	130, 106. 06
	do
44303	do	300, 000. 00	372, 000. 00
	do	2, 500, 000. 00
44305		6, 000, 000. 00
K-107	Nez Perce	3, 266, 826, 22	145, 648. 81
L-194.	Nez Perce (Joseph's Band)	500, 000. 00
M-387	Pillager Chippewa	864, 000, 00	3, 931, 200. 00
L-23	Quinaielt	8, 500, 000. 00
L-51		1, 153, 022, 72
L-208	do	250, 000, 00	675, 000, 00
L-209	do	226, 294, 20	701, 539. 41
H-211	Saginaw et al., Chippewa	3, 101, 325, 60
M-107		15, 070, 000, 00
C-531	Sioux	16, 830, 802, 51	12, 151, 171, 25
C-531-2		8, 000, 000, 00

Table I.—Showing the cases wherein the amount claimed is specified in the petitions and showing the amount of interest involved (where interest is claimed), calculated to July 1, 1938—Continued

Number of case	Plaintiff tribe	Amount claimed	Interest to July 1, 1938
C-531-4	Sioux	$8,000,000.00	1010.109
C-531-6	do	140, 000, 00
C-531-7		189, 368, 531, 05	$715, 813, 047, 18
C-531-8		7, 083, 770. 93	23, 801, 470, 00
	do	100, 000, 00	354, 000, 00
C-531-10		15, 000, 000. 00	58, 500, 000. 00
C-531-11	do	40, 000, 000. 00	98, 000, 000. 00
C-531-12		1, 903, 023. 22	1, 826, 902. 28
C-531-13.	do	62, 648, 89	259, 366, 17
C-531-14		105, 024, 14	333, 976, 85
C-531-15	do	96, 000. 00	432, 000. 00
C-531-16		475, 953. 71	1, 628, 311, 54
C-531-17		200, 000, 00	408, 000, 00
C-531-18		1, 650, 000, 00	3, 089, 000, 00
C-531-19		525, 000. 00	882, 000. 00
C-531-20		25, 000, 00	42, 000, 00
C-531-21		100, 000, 00	172, 000. 00
C-531-22		685, 254, 75	1, 315, 688, 96
C-531-23		1, 525, 000, 00	2, 745, 000, 00
C-531-24		1, 750, 000, 00	3, 150, 000, 00
M-112		5, 100, 000. 00	0, 100, 000, 00
E-542	Wichita et al	11, 387, 039, 00	29, 629, 106, 38
M-421	Winnebago	1, 719, 106. 28	7, 722, 164. 96
Total in 61 cases.		615, 953, 506, 40	1, 498, 922, 593. 41

In the following cases the petitions do not specify the amounts claimed, but for statistical purposes the aggregate principal amount has been estimated as being $117,197,023.25,¹ and the aggregate interest (calculated to July 1, 1938) has been estimated as being $152,671,552,462

Number of case:	Plaintiff tribe
K-336
L-253	Choctaw and Chickasaw.
F-369
F-373
L-78
L-133
L-136
L-137
L-205
=
* on
* 00
L-89
L-123
L-132	THE PARTY OF THE P
L-207	Do.
L-233	Do.
D-776	Yankton Sioux.
44297	Menominee.
44298
44299
44300	Do.
44301	Do.
44302
44306

¹ The estimate of the principal amounts in the cases where no amount is specified is arrived at by taking the average of the amounts claimed in those suits (table I) in which the amounts are specified. In ascertaining this average, however, the Sioux case, C-531-7, and the Creek case, L-234, have been eliminated from the calculations, because it is felt that the extremely high demands in these cases would reflect a higher average for normal cases than would be justified.

² In 14 of the 25 cases listed above interest has been claimed. The interest has been estimated in the same manner as was the principal.

principal.

TABLE III

The following is a list of Indian tribes which have been granted termission to sue the United States but which have not yet filed their actions:

Wisconsin Chippewas, act of August 30, 1935 (49 Stat. 1049). Tlingit and Huida Indians of Alaska, act of June 19, 1935 (49

Stat. 388) Red Lake Band of Chippewas, act of June 28, 1938 (Public, No.

Utes, act of June 28, 1938 (Public, No. 754)

Oregon Indians, act of August 26, 1935 (49 Stat. 801).

Amount claimed in 61 cases where the amount claimed is stated (table I) __________ $615, $615, 953, 506, 40 Amount of interest claimed in 44 of these cases

1, 498, 922, 593, 41 (table I) __ Total of table I___ 2, 114, 876, 099. 81

Estimated principal amount in 25 cases (table II) _ $117, 197, 023. 25 Estimated amount of interest in 14 of these cases 152, 671, 552.46 Total of table II__ 269, 868, 575, 71

Amount of principal, actual (table I) ______ Amount of principal, estimated (table II) _____ Amount of interest, actual (table I) _____ Amount of interest, estimated (table II) _____ 615, 953, 506. 40 117, 197, 023. 25 _____ 1, 498, 922, 593. 41 152, 671, 552. 46

Total amount involved in 86 cases 1_____ 2, 384, 744, 675. 52

¹This total does not include interest in many cases where interest was not claimed originally, but in which interest now would be allowed under the theory of Shoshone Tribe v. United States (299 U. S. 476), decided Apr. 25, 1938. In most of these cases, because of the long lapse of time since the acts complained of, the amount of interest would be three or four times the amount of the principal.

I have repeatedly stated on the floor of the House that billions of dollars are involved in these claims, and I cannot see how anyone, in view of the above list, can now challenge my statement.

Contained in the annual report of the Comptroller General is a statement in reference to Indian tribal claims, and I include that statement as a part of my remarks. It follows:

INDIAN TRIBAL CLAIMS

This is an activity of this office which has been revived during

This is an activity of this office which has been revived during the past year, after a brief lapse, by the enactment of new jurisdictional legislation. The work consists of compiling reports and statistics for use in suits brought in the Court of Claims by certain Indian tribes under jurisdictional acts passed by Congress, for the recovery of amounts alleged to be due on treaty obligations or to more adequately compensate the tribes for land taken. The jurisdictional acts also authorized the Government to offset any gratuities theretofore paid on behalf of the Indians.

During the period 1925 to 1936 there was a large volume of this work, but gradually thereafter the reports were compiled and completed, and the personnel absorbed elsewhere. The final report was completed and filed in the Department of Justice on October 12, 1936, at which time the force was entirely disbanded. However, other jurisdictional acts have been passed at recent sessions of Congress and during the past year one petition, that of the Menominee Tribe of Indians, was filed in the Court of Claims. Accordingly, this activity has been resumed and its functions will undoubtedly continue and increase during the coming year as petitions of other tribes are filed for suit. petitions of other tribes are filed for suit.

undoubtedly continue and increase during the coming year as petitions of other tribes are filed for suit.

The work in connection with these Indian claims requires utmost care and painstaking effort, together with a clear understanding of the accounts, claims, treaties, statutes, Indian Office reports, records, etc., and other records and data having any bearing on the Indians and their transactions with the Government. These latter include early War Department reports, and those of the Bureau of Ethnology, as well as reports and records of the Treasury Department. Above all, the men assigned to this work, and more particularly those in charge of given phases thereof, must be fully capable of analyzing and properly evaluating the varying situations and circumstances and to follow these through to reasonable and logical conclusions. These cases, of course, must be properly and adequately defended by the Department of Justice, but, in a large measure, at least, its defense can only be as good as our reports. Incidentally, the cooperation between this office and the Department of Justice on this work, since its very beginning, has been excellent, as has that between this office and the Indian attorneys, notwithstanding the seeming clash of interests. This friendly feeling undoubtedly is due to the understanding by these attorneys that the policy of this office has been, and is, to report the facts as the records present them whether favorable or unfavorable to the Indians. or unfavorable to the Indians.

There is no satisfactory manner of estimating the additional amount of gratuities which may be allowed as offsets in the cases waiting disposition.

Notwithstanding that it is impossible to accurately estimate what the gratuities offset will ultimately total when all pending cases are adjudicated it is believed they will probably approximate somewhere between thirty and fifty millions of dollars.

Furthermore and regardless of the failure of the Indians to establish lish their claims in a particular suit, and the consequent inability to offset gratuities, there is always the possibility of further jurisdictional acts and further court considerations, in which event the reports containing the gratuity expenditures are readily available for consideration. It will only be necessary to bring such reports to a current date.

a current date.

The total cost to the General Accounting Office of performing all of its examining, reporting, and incidental work during the years from 1925 to 1936 was approximately $1,100,201.97. Much of this work comprised the preparation of full accountings, as authorized and required by the several jurisdictional acts; and in many instances these accountings must definitely have established to the satisfaction of those representing the Indians that the long-cherished thoughts relative to the Government's failure to fulfill certain of its treaty obligations were purely myths. In other cases disclosures in the reports of this office have resulted in voluntary abandonment or dismissal of claims.

As illustrative of the extreme care necessary in work of this nature, and what might be included or omitted, reference is made to the report on the petition of the Delaware Tribe of Indians, Court of Claims No. H-221. Petition in this suit was filed May 31, 1937, and was based on certain transactions pursuant to an agreement dated December 14, 1843, between the Delaware and Wyandotte Tribes of Indians. Under this agreement the Delawares ceded to the Wyandottes 39 sections of land in the State of Kansas, and as consideration therefor the Wyandottes agreed to pay the Delawares $6,080 in the year 1844, and $4,000 annually for 10 years thereafter, or a total of $46,080, payable by January 1, 1855. It was alleged by the Delaware Tribe that the sum of $6,080 only had been paid by the Wyandotte Tribe, and that the balance of $40,000, with interest at 5 percent per annum from January 1, 1855, to date of judgment, was still due them. While this was a transaction between two tribes of Indians, the United States was made party to the suit as trustee of their funds.

A careful search of the records of this office failed to disclose any of their funds.

A careful search of the records of this office failed to disclose any information relative to the allegations of the Delaware Tribe, inasmuch as the records of this office pertain only to disbursements in fiscal officers' accounts and claims settlements, while the transaction concerned involved payment by the Wyandottes to the Delawares. Such being the case, it appeared that our report, if based solely on the records of this office, would be of no material value to a proper disposition of the issue. Accordingly, it was thought that since the transaction involved only the Indians themselves, some record might have been made of the payment by the Indian agent in charge of these Indians and forwarded to the Indian Office. Pursuant thereto, a careful and thorough search was made of the Indian Office files, which resulted in finding a receipt dated August 1, 1851, showing payment in full by the Wyandottes to the Delawares in accordance with the aforementioned agreement.

The petition was dismissed on plaintiffs' motion by the Court of Claims on May 5, 1930, based on the record of the receipt as set out in our report. By reason of this dismissal the United States avoided a possible liability in the amount of approximately $190,-684.88, representing the principal sum of $40,000, plus interest thereon at 5 percent per annum from January 1, 1855, to May 5, 1930, totaling $150,684.88.

The cost of compiling the report in this case was approximately $510.40. From the foregoing it can readily be seen that a saving accrued to the United States of approximately $190,174.48, which figure represents about one-sixth of the total cost incurred in compiling reports on all Indian cases during the period 1925-36.

An idea of the magnitude of the work performed from 1925 to 1936 may be had from the following. The records of this office indicate the receipt of more or less definite claims totaling $878,189,891.39. Original and supplemental reports were prepared and filed in connection with 103 cases or petitions; sai A careful search of the records of this office failed to disclose any tions, and statements, and 60 letter reports of varying numbers of pages. The Sioux petition, which incidentally has been split up into 24 separate causes of action, was reported in eight volumes comprising 4,385 pages of text, tabulations, and statements. This consumed approximately 7½ years and cost approximately $177,344.89 in examination and preparation. Work on other sizable reports consumed from 6 months to 3 years.

It is roughly estimated that the Menominee report now being prepared purpose of the prepared purpose of the

It is roughly estimated that the Menominee report now being prepared pursuant to petition filed in the Court of Claims on September 2, 1937, under the act of September 3, 1935 (49 Stat. 1085), will require 18 months for its completion. This claim is for $9,860,447.69, and represents a full accounting for all transactions beginning with the treaty of 1854 to date. Of course, gratuity expenditures will have to be compiled and reported as in other Indian cases. Furthermore, reports on five or more other petitions for which jurisdictional acts have been passed, but petitions not yet filed, roughly estimated, will consume the following time for their preparation: 12 months for the Tlingit and Haida Indians of Alaska, 24 months for the Indians of Oregon, 18 months for the Chippewas of Wisconsin, 24 months for the Utes, and 8 months for the Chippewas, Red Lake Band.

Mr. Chairman, as a result of the experience as outlined by the Comptroller General in the Delaware case, I recall several years ago a resolution was introduced not to send a case to the Court of Claims, but directing the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to a certain tribe of Indians an amount the Court of Claims held was due.

In that case the Department of the Interior filed a favorable recommendation. I called for a report from the Comptroller General and it was found Congress appropriated and the amount of the claim was paid to the tribe in 1876. Here you have examples which prove my statement, often made on the floor, that the Commissioner of the Indian Bureau does not have the records, and therefore the committees of the House and Senate should submit all bills affecting Indian claims to the Comptroller General and Attorney General for a report. Further, the replies of the Comptroller General and the Attorney General should be made part of the report if the committee reports the bill or resolution to the House. In the past I have secured the reports from the Comptroller General and the Attorney General and will continue to do so if the committees do not.

Every parliamentary means at my command will be used to defeat bills and resolutions where changes in the jurisdictional acts are recommended if the Government would be placed at a disadvantage by their passage.

I am likewise opposed to the efforts that have been made to provide for a direct appeal to the Supreme Court from a decision of the Court of Claims. There is no reason why special privileges should be granted in cases of this character when all other citizens of the country are required to apply to the Supreme Court for a writ of certiorari.

It is not generally known, but as all of the records relating to Indian tribes are in the possession of the General Accounting Office, and the attorneys for the Indians are entitled to the information that the General Accounting Office assembles without any cost to them, despite the cost to the Government; and further, it is not generally known that the suits filed in the Court of Claims cost the Indians nothing in the way of court costs. The Government foots the bill even when successful in defending the suit.

Mr. Chairman, in closing I want to cite a recent example of what these claims mean to the taxpayer. While I was ill several years ago and unable to attend the sessions of the House, two resolutions, to which I had previously objected and kept from passing, were acted on favorably. They both amended the original jurisdictional acts placing the Government at a great disadvantage. What was the result? Final judgments in favor of the Klamath Tribe of Oregon and the Shoshone Tribe of the Wind River Reservation of Wyoming were rendered in the Court of Claims. The Klamaths received $5,313,347.32 and the Shoshones $4,408,444.23.

In the last session of Congress, contained in the second deficiency bill, will be found an appropriation to pay the judgments, $9,721,791.65 in all.

In commenting on these cases the annual report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs said in part:

These two cases settled the question as to the scope of the title of an Indian tribe to the reservation set apart for it by treaty. In the Shoshone case the Supreme Court held that the tribe's right of occupancy was as sacred and as securely safeguarded as in fee-simple absolute title, notwithstanding the fact that the United States retained the fee. Following this theory, it was held that the tribe's right of occupancy in perpetuity included ownership of the land, mineral deposits, and standing timber on the reservation, and an award was made accordingly. Interest on the sums found to be due at the time the reservation lands were taken was awarded both tribes as a part of just compensation for a taking of property by the United States in the exercise of its power of eminent domain.

Notice the reference to mineral deposits and timber. Some of the suits now pending include claims for the timber that was taken from the land, as well as for mineral, and so forth, taken from the ground, one desiring to be reimbursed for gold taken from the Black Hills of South Dakota.

Following the passage by Congress of the appropriation to pay the claims, lawyers immediately appealed for their fees. The records of the General Accounting Office show that already one lawyer residing in the District of Columbia received $325,000 and another lawyer in the District of Columbia received $25,000, or a total of $350,000, in the Klamath case.

In the Shoshone case, three Omaha lawyers and one lawyer from the District of Columbia jointly received $424,190. One lawyer in Laramie, Wyo., received $15,000. A lawyer in Denver, Colo., received $7,500. Another lawyer in Laramie, Wyo., received $2,000, and a lawyer in Lincoln, Nebr., received $800, which was a total of $449,490 that has already been paid to the attorneys in this case.

When attorneys can receive fees amounting to $784,490 in two cases, is it any wonder why they are so insistent in their demands that Congress change jurisdictional acts that will place the Government at a disadvantage and enable them to secure judgments as a result?

Some of the claims date back over a hundred years. There are none growing out of alleged treaty violations that are not over 50 years old.

For many years the Court of Claims had jurisdiction and considered thousands growing out of the Civil War.

Back in 1915 the late Hon. Oscar Underwood, the then majority leader of the House, placed an amendment on an omnibus claims bill that provided, after the passage of the act, the Court of Claims should have no further jurisdiction over claims growing out of the War of the Rebellion. That ended such litigation. Does it not appear that it would be well for the Congress to take similar action now and end this racket in Indian claims?

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. COCHRAN. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BURDICK. Has the gentleman any figures now showing the amount of recovery that has been had on Indian claims in the Court of Claims since it started and what percentage of the claims has been paid in money?

Mr. COCHRAN. I cannot answer the gentleman's question as to the amount of recovery, because they have been recovering for a long time; but I do know they recovered within the last year nine million and some odd thousand dollars, close to $10,000,000, and the attorneys in the case have already received nearly $800,000. Let me also say to the gentleman that the General Accounting Office has the record, and not the Indian Bureau. The General Accounting Office is required when we pass a resolution to gather the facts for the Department of Justice, to base their defense, and, as I have shown, it has cost a very large amount for the General Accounting Office to gather these facts.

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield

Mr. COCHRAN. I yield. Mr. BURDICK. Is it not a fact that slightly over 2 percent is all the recovery that has ever been had on Indian claims before the Court of Claims since the beginning of that court?

Mr. COCHRAN. I say to the gentleman I do not know what the amount is, but we have paid a large amount of money to the Indians year after year-money that did not come through the Court of Claims.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. Yes.

Mr. RICH. Is it not a fact that the presentation of many of these claims is a great racket for the attorneys in an endeavor to get big fees in collecting this money, with the idea they are getting it for the Indians, but it is more for the attorneys than it is for the Indians?

Mr. COCHRAN. I know that the attorneys, if they fare as well as the attorneys did in the cases that we settled last year, are paid very liberal fees; $800,000 certainly is very

Mr. BOREN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Missouri yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma. Mr. BOREN. Is it not a fact that all of these bills contain a proviso limiting attorneys' fees?

Mr. COCHRAN. The bills do not, but there is a general law to that effect; but the court, I will say to the gentleman, is the one that awards the fees.

Mr. BOREN. Would it not solve the gentleman's purpose in this attack to restrict further the size of the fees that could go to the attorneys?

Mr. COCHRAN. As far as the attorneys are concerned. yes; but it would not solve the question so far as I am concerned as to legislation granting the right to tribes to sue in the Court of Claims and at the same time take away from the Government its defense.

Mr. BOREN. Would the gentleman indicate that he would be opposed to permitting the Court of Claims to act on its findings with respect to these matters?

Mr. COCHRAN. I am not opposed to permitting the Court of Claims to act, but I do say that we should provide, as the amendment to the deficiency act provides and which was placed on the statute books, I think in 1935, that the Government has the right to charge off gratuities and advances. This is what the new jurisdictional bill wants to set aside, taking away from the Government the right to charge off gratuities and advances and also for direct appeals to the Supreme Court, a right no other citizen has.

This is what I oppose. I feel that if we have made advances and granted gratuities to the Indians, if the Indians have a claim against us we should have a right to charge off that which we have already advanced.

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield

Mr. COCHRAN. I yield further; yes.

Mr. BURDICK. What does the gentleman understand by a "gratuity"?

Mr. COCHRAN. I understand by a "gratuity" that it is money we have given to the Indians for various purposes.

Mr. BURDICK. The gentleman will recall that moneys charged up per capita for the operation of the Indian Bureau in the United States every year equal about $36 per capita. Is not that true?

Mr. COCHRAN. I do not know what it is, I will say to the gentleman.

Mr. BURDICK. If the Indian claims were settled, would the gentleman want to charge that cost against that tribe?

Mr. COCHRAN. Let the court pass on that. I will say to the gentleman that a tribe in his own district has about seven or eight suits pending and they amount to about $250,-000.000—that is what is involved in those suits. They want money not only for the land but for the timber that was taken off of the land and for the minerals, including the gold that was taken out of the land.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield now to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Boren].

Mr. BOREN. Mr. Chairman, adequate hospitalization for tubercular Indians necessitates an increase in the present facilities.

The people of Oklahoma, including Indians and all other races, are faced with a steadily increasing threat of tuberculosis. It is a known fact that Indians are more susceptible to this white plague than any other race of people. The Office of Indian Affairs reports that more than 560 Indians died of tuberculosis in Oklahoma last year. Their surveys also show there is an average of 9 active cases of tuberculosis among Indians for every death recorded, which indicates that we have more than 5,000 active cases of tuberculosis among Oklahoma's 90,000 agency Indian population at the present time.

Medical authorities also have agreed that at least two beds for every death should be available in hospitals to treat tuberculosis victims. With an average annual death rate of more than 560 Indians in Oklahoma, this State should have available at least 1,100 hospital beds to treat victims of the disease.

As a matter of fact, the Indian Service now has available in the State only 343 hospital beds, as follows: Shawnee, 150; Kiowa, 27; Talihina, 150; and Pawnee, 16.

The Shawnee sanatorium is in urgent need of an additional appropriation of $275,000 to complete its building program. This will increase to at least 250 beds the present facilities. Infirmary, laboratory, and other facilities already installed cannot be used to the full extent of their capacity until this additional building program is completed.

There is no hospital facilities in the Indian Service where so small a sum can be spent for so large an increase in facilities. There is no other hospital in the Indian Service which operates at as low a per diem cost as the Shawnee Hospital. No other Indian hospital can boast of the fact that nine high-class surgeons in private life donate their services at $1 a year, as in the case at Shawnee.

The Shawnee Hospital has a waiting list of from 40 to 80 emergency cases on file all the time and is forced to deny hospitalization to many Indians who must have medical help or face immediate death.

The official Service surveys show that in spite of the slow increase in tuberculosis hospital facilities made available in Oklahoma, the steady increase in infection among the Indian citizens has not been checked. The birth rate among Oklahoma Indians is almost twice as high as that among other races, indicating a steady increase in Indian population, contrary to the common belief that the Indian races are vanishing.

Congress has assumed guardianship of more than 90,000 Indians in Oklahoma. It not only owes a solemn and sacred duty to these wards in the protection of their health and other welfare, but it owes a great obligation to the remainder of the people of Oklahoma. With the spread of tuberculosis so marked in the ranks of Oklahoma Indians, it follows that the danger of this disease spreading among the white population is growing constantly higher.

Shawnee's sanatorium is centrally located and offers excellent transportation facilities. At the same time, it is far enough removed from the heavily populated Indian areas to give ideal conditions for the treatment of Indian cases. Medical science has proved that any hospitalization of Indians presents many entirely different problems than is encountered with other races. With rest and diet so important in the treatment of tuberculosis, the fact that the Shawnee Hospital offers some isolation from friends and relatives of Indian victims is all the more reason why the Shawnee Hospital should be enlarged.

Conditions at the Shawnee Hospital cannot be made satisfactory until better housing facilities are provided. Most of the buildings have been in service for so long they are on the verge of tumbling down. Most of them are firetraps. A small amount of money can be spent to improve these facilities, smaller than is possible in almost any other hospital in the Indian Service.

It should be borne in mind that recent hospital developments in Oklahoma and elsewhere in the Indian Service have been almost entirely devoted to general hospital needs, and that only a small part of this money has been used to provide facilities for treating tuberculosis.

On the basis of actual statistics, hundreds of Indians of all ages will die in the next few years who otherwise could be cured, unless Congress provides sufficient appropriations im-

The administrative staff at the Shawnee Hospital has done a marvelous job in spite of its poor equipment. The hospital has brought credit from every medical source to the Indian Service and to the Government.

Congress should reward this fine Service by providing a little little extra help for the worthy program it offers. It should be remembered that after these additional buildings are provided, and the increase is made in the number of cases that can be handled, the cost of administration will be very small-much smaller than will be possible in any other Indian hospital in Oklahoma. Thus, this appropriation will actually be an economical step.

Indians from more than half the States in the Union have been sent to the Shawnee Hospital for treatment, particularly in cases where the most expert care is required to stave off death. The hospital enjoys the best reputation of any institution among the Indians themselves, which makes it much easier for the Indian Service to encourage Indians to submit to treatment there. This problem of convincing Indians they should enter hospitals is a difficult one because of the peculiar nature of the tribesmen and the confidence these Indians have in the Shawnee institution is no mere accident.

Congress already has appropriated and spent the money required for the most expensive improvements at the hospital. Unless additional funds are made available to complete the job, there is a waste of work already done which threatens.

recupitation brawnee salatoriam, brawnee, Okto	**
Project No. 1. Men's semiambulant building	$80,000
Project No. 2. Remodeling women's semiambulant building_ Project No. 3. Combination attendants' quarters and mess building	35,000
Project No. 4. Fireproof auditorium and occupational therapy building	35,000
Project No. 5. Central heating plant	100,000

Project No. 1, men's semiambulant building, $80,000: For purposes of treatment, patients with tuberculosis fall into three general classes, each requiring a different course of treatment, namely: (1) bed cases; (2) ambulant or walking cases; and (3) a transitional group known as semiambulant, or dressing-gown cases, who are not physically able to follow the regimen of the ambulant case, yet do not require continuous confinement in bed.

Good medical and administrative practice does not permit the treatment of the semiambulant case along with either the bed or the ambulant case because of the difficulties imposed by different hours of rest, differences in diet, and the different character of | nursing service required.

At this time there is absolutely no provision for proper treatment of semiambulant males and the need should be corrected by the construction of a fireproof building of proper arrangement with a bed capacity of about 30.

or semiambulant males and the need should be corrected by the construction of a fireproof building of proper arrangement with a bed capacity of about 30.

This would provide proper facilities for the treatment of a number of male patients now being treated either as bed or ambulant cases, but who, properly, should be treated as semiambulants, and would release beds to some of the many now on our waiting list whose condition requires complete bed rest, but who cannot now be accepted for treatment because no beds are available.

Project No. 2, remodeling women's semiambulant building, $25,000: The building now housing 18 female ambulant patients is a frame structure, built in 1905, with inadequate internal arrangements, and, as with a frame building a fire hazard. As an example of the danger from fire inherent in this type of structure, this one was struck by lightning at night several months ago, and upon examination the next morning it was found that holes were burned in the shingle roof at several spots, and probably the fact that a heavy rain was falling at the time was all that prevented a disastrous fire that could easily have resulted in loss of life, and at the best would have unduly exposed sick patients.

It should be remodeled so as to afford the maximum bed space for the cubic contents, and should be fireproofed and insulated against the weather, as in its present condition it can be kept warm only by heavy expenditure for fuel.

Project No. 3, combination attendants' quarters and mess building, $35,000: The attendant personnel and the employees' mess dining hall are now quartered in two old frame buildings, one two-storied and one one-storied, constructed about 1900. Both buildings are in a condition of decay; the foundations have settled until floors are out of plumb by as much as a foot in a room; they are major firetraps; they are totally inadequate as to toilet conveniences and as to floor space. Their condition is such that it is impossible to make more than temporary repairs to prevent them fro fireproof auditorium and occupational therapy Project No. 4, fireproof auditorium and occupational therapy building, $35,000: This is a two-story frame structure originally con-structed in 1916 for use as a schoolhouse. It is now used down-Project No.

dining hall

structed in 1916 for use as a schoolhouse. It is now used down-stairs for the occupational therapy department, and upstairs as a nauditorium for the showing of motion pictures and patients' parties. Up until this year there was only one means of egress from the second floor, by way of a narrow, crooked stairway. We were able to obtain a used tubular fire escape, which has been installed, thus somewhat lessening the possibility of a major disaster. However, the fact remains that in this type of structure a fire can spread very rapidly, and there is always the danger of panic, and in the cause of safety the building should be replaced with a one-story fireproof structure. structure.

Project No. 5, central heating plant, $100,000: At this time each building has its individual heating plant, burning natural gas. The economic waste in fuel and repairs, and general upkeep under such a system is quite obvious. It is believed that the institution would greatly benefit from a central heating plant.

Request for additional building funds for the Shawnee Indian sanatorium is not a mere matter of community pride in trying to get bigger and better Federal projects. The Shawnee Hospital is the only 100-percent tuberculosis sanatorium in the entire Indian Service in Oklahoma, and it holds the finest record of any institution of its kind in the United States

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN].

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, for weeks the President has been chiding and reproving Old World dictators. He has been very critical of the acts of Hitler, which, it is said, have deprived people in that country of their freedom of action-of their civil and religious liberty. He has expressed bitter condemnation of the acts of foreign dictators which he intimates have deprived the people of those countries of their opportunities to engage in business, to conduct their own private affairs, in their own way.

Whatever may be said of the wisdom of his policy of criticizing foreign rulers and their political policies, practically all of our people will agree with the broad principles which he advocates.

It is easy to see the mote in the foreign eye; the beam in the domestic organ escapes our attention, even though it be next door to the Nation's Capital.

Here in America on Saturday last, in this Hall and city, we celebrated the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the meeting of the First Congress. We boasted of, and we thanked God for, that surpassing degree of security of property, freedom of action, and possession of liberty which we as Americans enjoy. We pledged ourselves anew to forever in this land preserve those priceless heritages.

It is then, in view of the great value which we by our words put upon the liberties which we possess, strange, indeed, how easily we ourselves submit to the deprivation of some of those liberties and dodge the issue when someone here deprives us of our rights as free men.

It must be amazing to foreign dictators to note how the President himself and Members of the House obey the will of those who possess political power, who control votes.

It took us more than 2 years to get a formal, authoritative declaration that the right of a man to possession of his own property, the right of a man to work, was sacred, and that the deprivation of that right was a violation of the law of the land.

At the beginning, common sense, straight thinking, told us that the sit-down strikes were unlawful, but high Government officials condoned them, countenanced civil strife while they were carried on, and refused to set in motion the orderly processes of government to end them.

Now here in the National Capital today the same question which arose in the sit-down strikes is before the people. That question is this: Must a man, in order to hold a job in a Washington hotel, sign on the dotted line? Must be join a particular organization or quit his job? The statement of the question should bring its own obvious answer, if we are to live under a government where the individual is free.

In the General Motors sit-down strikes those who wanted to work were told that they must sign on the dotted line of a certain labor organization. Today those who would work in Washington hotels are told that they must join a rival labor organization. Some 13 hotels here in Washington are picketed because the owners or the management of those hotels refused to require free, law-abiding American citizens to quit their jobs or join a certain organization.

Since when has the right to earn a livelihood been dependent upon the joining or the not joining of some particular group or organization?

The degree of liberty which we surrender is not the important question. The all-important question is whether we retain our liberty; whether we as Americans will permit any organization to say that any man shall not work here or there, in this place or that, because he is not a member of that organization. If once we surrender to such a demand, there is no reason why it cannot and will not be extended to cover other activities.

If an organization can make good its demand that I shall not work, for example, in the Willard Hotel until I have joined its ranks, is there, then, any reason why some other organization shall not say that I shall not live in the Methodist Building, where I now reside, until all those who are employed in or about that building become members of that organization and contribute toward its support?

Within the week a Congressman from Michigan was called on the phone and requested in a polite but in a very firm manner that he should move out of the hotel where he has resided for several years and not return until the demands of those who were on strike at that hotel were granted.

Last year the same Member was told that, if he did not give up his residence in that particular hotel he would be reported back to his district as opposed to union labor. I happen to know that that particular Member is a strong and a stanch friend of labor and has consistently voted for labor legislation. Yet those whom he has aided, through their representatives, now presume to tell him where he shall make

Some persist in the statement that I am unfriendly to labor. Nothing could be further from the truth. Labor for many months has been the victim of some who would exploit it. The true friends of labor are those who favor legislation which will protect the man who works, not only against his employer, but against the profiteering organizer or the vociferous gentlemen who would use the labor vote for political purposes.

No one disputes the right of an employee to picket; no one would deny him the right to bargain collectively; but when any man or group of men takes the position that all those who would earn a livelihood by their daily toll must join their organization, set apart a portion of their wages as dues or special assessments for a particular union, regardless of the ability of the worker to pay, then that organization is striking at the very foundation of our Government and it and those who belong to it should remember that some day another group, a rival organization, may have a greater number of members and it then can insist that those who now make these demands submit to it, desert their present organization, and join the new union.

The principle that no man in America can work unless he belongs to a given organization is unsound, and an insistence upon its adoption will probably result in the creation of public sentiment and the enactment of legislation which will take from organized labor some of the advantages which it now enjoys. This has been the result in my own State. To a more marked degree it has been the result in the State of Oregon.

Within the last few days the President asked the head of the A. F. of L., or representatives from the A. F. of L., and the head of the C. I. O. to come down to the White House and meet with him and talk over their troubles. From the newspapers we learn that Madam Perkins, or some one in the Department of Labor, is now going to take over the burden of hearing those men discuss their troubles. It is to be hoped that these conferences will aid in composing the differences now existing between these rival organizations, for, in view of the local situation as it has existed during the past few days. the thought that comes to some of us is whether or not, after all, we really enjoy in this country the liberties that we were told last Saturday in this Chamber that we do enjoy.

I have been wondering since reading the papers this morning, knowing that so many of the Members of this House live at some of these hotels, how many of them, in the exercise of that great privilege given to every American, the privilege of walking the streets freely and not being hampered by anyone—how many Members of the House have been going in and out of the front doors of the hotels that are being picketed. I have been wondering how many of those who live at the Mayflower go out of the front door of that hotel. I am sorry that the chairman of the Rules Committee, the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Sabath], is not here, for perhaps he could give us the answer to that question. He lives at the Mayflower. Perhaps he could tell us how many of the Members who live at that hotel exercise this great right of going out of the front door of a public building. going out of the front door of the place that is their home, walk out boldly in the light of day, and how many of them go into the drug store adjoining and slip out the door of the drug store to avoid passing a picket line.

I am wondering if there is any truth in the report that the great Senator from New York, the author of the Wagner Act, instead of going out of the front door of the hotel where he lives, out of the front door of his own home, did, as has been rumored, not sneak out but walk boldly out of the side door or the back door of that hotel, so that the boys who control the votes, who were in the picket line, who may have something to say in the elections of 1940, would not see him.

Surely a great Senator would not feel that he was offending his friends or the pickets if, in going to and from his usual place of residence, he walked through or around the picket line. I have been wondering whether the President, when the press called off this dinner that was to be held Saturday night at the Willard, was thinking that if he went down there he would have to go through a picket line. I am wondering whether the dinner was called off because he did not want to offend the head of one of these two great labor unions.

Across the front page of the Washington News of today runs this headline in large type: "F. D. hosts cancel fete because of hotel strike." Following that headline we find this:

Washington's hotel strike today brought all the elements of major industrial warfare to the Capital.

Striking Hotel and Restaurant Employees Alliance members were to meet with Attorney General Murphy this afternoon to allege violation of the Byrnes Act forbidding transportation of persons to interfere with peaceful picketing.

This morning the strikers were cheered by the cancelation of the White House Correspondents Association banquet, at which President Roosevelt was to have been honor guest. The dinner was scheduled for Saturday at the strike-bound Mayflower.

Is this an intimation that Attorney General Murphy, who so well served the cause of the Communists in Michigan in the sit-down strikes, who permitted in that State while he was Governor the destruction of private property, who by his acts aided Communist-led strikers in driving men and women from their jobs, is to apply the third degree to the Washington hotel owners?

Do the people in Washington wonder now why Michigan defeated Murphy? Why our people say "Thank God, he has left us"?

Let me read you this editorial from the same paper:

MAYBE THIS WILL TEACH 'EM

While a labor peace meeting is on in Washington the biggest strike in the history of the Nation's Capital breaks out. That's irony. But not the kind to raise a laugh. It is too serious and costly a commentary on what is wrong with industrial relationships costly a commentary on what is wrong with industrial relationships in this country.

The lack of a mediation system once more is highlighted by the hotel strike, which, by the way, posed to the author of the Wagner Labor Act the question of "going through the picket line."

Had the issue arisen in the railroads or the airlines, where mediation machinery exists, the strike wouldn't have happened. Experience in those industries shows that settlement is arrived at before, not after, the fight starts. And, bear in mind, there must be a settlement some time, unless the industry involved is to go out of business, and labor along with it.

Wherever mediation has been established it has worked, here and abroad. Maybe this Washington strike will prove a blessing in disguise. Since a whole flock of Congressmen and Senators, Cabinet members, and other high officials who live in hotels are being inconvenienced, it may make them rub their eyes and wake up to the fact that there is a way by which peace can be maintained with fairness to employee and employer alike.

All they have to do is to use their great influence toward the adoption of the principle of the Railway Mediation Act for the rest of the Nation's industry.

of the Nation's industry.

I am wondering what Adolf Hitler will think of the President of the United States and of the liberty enjoyed by our President when he learns that the President cannot go, or does not choose to go, in and out of a hotel in the Nation's Capital because some particular organization wants to picket that building at that time. Freedom or liberty herewhen the head of the Nation, when the Chief Executive, the Commander in Chief of the Army and the Navy cannot go in and out, or at least does not choose to go in and out, of a hotel in the city of Washington because a picket line is marching back and forth in front of the door.

Mr. SACKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. HOFFMAN. Yes; if the gentleman will tell me at which hotel he lives.

Mr. SACKS. Yes; I live at the Fairfax Hotel. Mr. HOFFMAN. Are they picketing that?

Mr. SACKS. No; that is a union hotel.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Oh, that is a hotel where no one can work unless he signs on the dotted line?

Mr. SACKS. I do not know.

Mr. HOFFMAN. How about the fellows who live there? Mr. SACKS. What proof has the gentleman that the President cannot go in and out of the Willard Hotel?

Mr. HOFFMAN. The President can, if he chooses, for he is the Commander of the Army and the Navy; but because of the power of the unions or because the President does not desire to offend some organization—or it may be because he wishes to throw his moral support to the side of some organization—it is apparent from the newspaper article that he will not pass the picket line.

What a fine gesture of courtesy it would be if the press held its dinner and the pickets for the time being saw fit to courteously step aside and permit the President of these United States to enter without incurring their displeasure.

Mr. SACKS. How does the gentleman know the President does not choose to go in or out of the Willard Hotel?

Mr. HOFFMAN. You just watch Saturday night, if there are pickets there, and see if he goes through. "The proof of the pudding is in the chewing of the string." Ask your associate, the chairman of the Rules Committee, how many of those living at the Mayflower pass the picket line. Go down to the Mayflower and note whether or not Members of this House and high Government officials are willing to exercise the right to pass the picket line, walk in and out of the hotel where they reside, the hotel which is for the time being their home.

Mr. SACKS. In what hotel does the gentleman live?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I live at the Methodist Building.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield.

Mr. RICH. The gentleman spoke about John L. Lewis being on a committee to adjust differences. Does the gentleman know that Mr. Lewis, instead of being in committee, is over here trying to talk to the Senators, spending his time over there today?

Mr. HOFFMAN. No. I do not know about that. I do not know whether Lewis goes through the picket line or not. Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield. Mr. KNUTSON. The gentleman has informed the House that the dinner which the press boys were going to give the President on Saturday evening has been called off.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Oh, I do not say that. I only know what the newspapers of the city carry as a news item today, and as members of the press were giving the dinner, presumably their report is accurate. I say watch the paper and see if the picket lines are continued and if the President passes

Mr. KNUTSON. Of course, we, except possibly one or two ultra-new dealers, all know why it was called off. I understand that dinner was to have been given at the Willard. Of course, there are only two entrances to the Willard. Why should not the boys give the President his dinner up at the Mayflower, where they could use the drug store as a means of coming in? They could stop at the soda counter. I do not know whether they have an "on sale" permit there or not, but they could go into the drug store and spend a few pleasant moments, and then, when the pickets were not looking, go on into the lobby. I offer that to the newsboys for what it is worth.

Mr. HOFFMAN. But I understand that the side door is so constantly in use now that it would be rather crowded down there. Thus we may learn whether, in this country, we enjoy liberty of action, whether we are free, whether the President is free to pursue happiness by attending this dinner, or whether someone else exercises a power so great that even the press and the President of the United States must yield because some poor forgotten man or woman who has not joined a particular organization is trying to earn a livelihood in that hotel.

Mr. KNUTSON. Oh, I understand they have a traffic cop there protecting the traffic.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. In view of the fact that John L. Lewis bought a mortgage on the New Deal administration for $500,000, can the gentleman not see the reason why the New Deal permitted him to try to buy and sell every working man and woman in America into human slavery?

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Yes; I yield.

Mr. DINGELL. I would like to ask the gentleman what would be his solution and whether he would recommend that President Roosevelt handle this situation like President Hoover, who issued orders which resulted in their being shot down?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Let me see if I recall. How many men does the gentleman claim were shot down?

Mr. DINGELL. At least two were shot down at Anacostia flats.

Mr. HOFFMAN. That leaves a balance of 10 in his favor when you consider the number of air pilots who were killed when President Roosevelt canceled the air-mail contracts and 12 Army boys went to their deaths when they tried to fly the mail under unfavorable conditions and improperly equipped.

Hoover never intended harm to any veteran nor did President Roosevelt have the slightest idea that pilots would be injured, much less killed, as the result of the cancelation of those contracts. Let us not forget that the young men who died on both occasions were someone's boys.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. General MacArthur led the eviction of the bonus marchers, and he rode the white horse leading the inaugural parade of President Roosevelt. Those are the facts

Mr. HOFFMAN. The only purpose in speaking today is to call attention to the very serious results which may grow out of the present situation. How easy it may be for us to lose our liberty if we once permit the establishment of the principle that any men or group of men can deprive a citizen of his right to life, liberty, or the pursuit of happiness without due process of law.

It is the driving in of the opening wedge that should be prevented. The President took most admirable action the other day when he called upon the two great labor organizations to settle their differences.

He later destroyed much of the force of what he had done by saying, in a characteristic Rooseveltian fashion, that, unless the two organizations quit fighting and got together, he would withdraw all administration support from any labor legislation proposed in this Congress. That is a childish attitude to take. There are others than the officials of the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. who are interested in labor legis-

Let me here read an editorial from the Detroit Free Press of March 8, 1939:

MR. ROOSEVELT'S ULTIMATUM

President Roosevelt perpetrates a characteristic New Dealism when he says he will withdraw administration support for any labor legislation proposed in this Congress unless the A. F. of L.

and the C. I. O. quit fighting and get together.

An end to the war between these two big divisions of organized labor is highly desirable. It should be promoted in every legitimate way. For the present angry schism does nobody any good and is widely harmful.

and is widely harmful.

But any labor legislation worthy of the name is legislation enacted for the benefit and protection of all labor, organized and unorganized; and it should be formulated with the welfare of the individual worker in mind, rather than for the purpose of furthering the interests or meeting the demands of particular organizations or groups of leaders.

The idea that millions of wage earners who need relief from the evils of the Wagner Act should be left to suffer, because Mr. Green and Mr. Lewis cannot compose their differences is monstrous. It doesn't make sense.

Still less should the entire Nation be condemned to suffer from Still less should the entire Nation be condemned to suffer from the iniquitous measure on that account.

If any labor legislation introduced in Congress this session has intrinsic merit, it ought to get recognition and be promoted accordingly.

If any such legislation is bad, it should be discarded and thrown into the wastebasket regardless of who sponsors it or doesn't sponsor it.

At present the prevailing opinion in Washington seems to be that neither Mr. Green nor Mr. Lewis is likely to be influenced much by President Roosevelt's threats or by Miss Perkins' efforts to act as an intermediary; and that a peace pact, if any, will have to be the product of other influences and considerations.

In short, the President is finding it harder to heal a schism in organized labor than it was to do things provocative of such

One thing more: This Congress will neglect its duty; it will ignore the demands of the American people, if it fails at this session to amend the Wagner law.

The point is: Do we intend to let the days go by as they did at the last session and make no effort to remedy the very grave defects in this act? Being a Member of the minority, I have waited patiently and hopefully for some move from the majority side which would indicate that this question of amending the Wagner Act is being given consideration. Having failed to observe any activity on the part of the Committee on Labor, I shall within the next few days drop into the hopper a bill changing that law so that employees can bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, free from intimidation, coercion, and interference, not only from the employer but from every source.

When that bill is offered, I hope the Members will take the trouble to look it over, for, sooner or later, the defects in this act must be cured if we are to make any move toward industrial peace, and the quicker we set about our very difficult task, the sooner will we be on the road toward its solution, toward industrial peace in this Nation. [Applause.]

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I decline to yield, Mr. Chairman. I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish].

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, I thought this might be a proper time to discuss briefly the proposed revision of the Neutrality Act. According to this morning's papers Senator Lewis has introduced a resolution to repeal all the neutrality laws and give full power and control by Executive orders to the President of the United States in the handling of our foreign policies.

I would point out at the outset of my remarks that the House of Representatives has equal power with the Senate in considering and framing neutrality legislation. We have as much right to initiate any change in the neutrality laws as has the Senate, and whatever happens in the Senate must come over here for our final decision. I would also point out that the Democratic Congress by an overwhelming vote-I think there were only 12 votes against it—just a year or so ago adopted the neutrality law practically as a Democratic measure introduced in the House of Representatives by the chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. McReynolds], and in the Senate by the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, Senator PITTMAN. They were the sponsors and the authors of the bill. The principal purpose of the bill was to keep the United States out of war and to be neutral as against all belligerent nations. That is the law today, whether it is good, bad, or indifferent. Many of us on this side supported the bill reluctantly and opposed certain features of the bill, but we voted for it generally because we were in favor of keeping out of all foreign wars.

I repeat that is the law today, but the law has not been enforced by the President of the United States. The law reads that it shall go into effect whenever a state of war exists. There is not a thinking man or woman in the Congress of the United States, no matter what his partisanship may be, that does not know that a state of war exists in China. The neutrality laws did not say that a declaration of war must be made; it did not say that an old-fashioned war must exist; it merely stated that a state of war must exist before it is put into effect by the President. No one can deny these facts, and the President has deliberately refused to enforce an act passed almost unanimously by the Congress.

I am not here to defend the law, I merely rise to state the facts: That the law has not been tried out and that the President's duty under the Constitution is to enforce the law as it stands. He has a perfect right to recommend its repeal if he wants to, to recommend that it be changed or amended; but, in accordance with his oath of office, he must enforce the law. He has deliberately refused to enforce the law. How do we know, therefore, whether it is a good or a bad law when he has ignored the will of the Congress, deliberately repudiated an act of the Congress, and refused to comply with the mandate of the Constitution to enforce the acts of the Congress and the law of the land?

So now we find that we are called upon to repeal a law that has never been carried out. If Japan has gotten any war material, any airplanes, arms, ammunition, or implements of war, it is not due to the Congress of the United States, not due to the Democrats who voted for this bill and initiated it, not due to the Republicans who supported it practically as a body; it is due to one man, it is due to the President of the United States, who refused to comply with the law. No one else is to blame in the Congress or outside of the Congress, either here in this House or the Senate, or among the American people. These are facts and therefore undeniable. You can, if you want, give reasons and try to defend the President for not enforcing the law; you can say that enforcement of the law might favor Japan as against China. As a matter of fact it would have favored China to enforce the law, it would have been against the interests of Japan to put the law into effect, because Japan can buy everything she wants, and China has no harbors, has little wealth, has no ships, and can buy nothing. I submit, therefore, that it would have been against the interests of Japan if the law had been put into effect.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I do not want to go into this issue in detail. I have asked for a limited time to speak this afternoon. I propose to discuss it in detail probably next week, when I shall ask for extended time. The only reason I am bringing it up now is because it has been thrust upon us overnight by the action of certain Senators. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Had the President invoked the neutrality law in the Sino-Japanese situation, would not Japan have been favored? She has the ships, she has the money, she could buy and transport the war materials, whereas China has no ships, no cash, and could not come under the cash-and-carry provisions of the Neutrality Act. It would not have favored China, would it?

Mr. FISH. When the law is not applied, Japan can come over here and buy anything. If the law were applied, it would apply equally against both belligerents and Japan could not at any time have come over and bought any arms, ammunition, or implements of war.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. She could have bought raw materials.

Mr. FISH. She could have bought raw materials, and she is buying raw materials now. I am speaking about arms, ammunition, and implements of war. The law has not been invoked. Japan has come over and bought not only raw materials but has sent her own ships over to buy and carry away arms and implements of warfare. Congress has been criticized all over this land for permitting these arms, ammunition, and implements of war to be shipped to Japan.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. FISH. I yield.

Mr. CULKIN. Does the gentleman believe if the present neutrality law is repealed and the President is given complete discretion as it is reported he would be given under the legislation proposed by Senator Lewis, that we would be able to keep out of war for more than 6 months?

Mr. FISH. If the gentleman asks me my opinion; and, of course, I cannot speak for anyone else, but in my opinion, if Congress gave any such power to the President, we would be in war within 6 months' time.

Mr. CULKIN. And the gentleman bases that statement on the inflammatory statements of the President and various members of his Cabinet.

Mr. FISH. On his own repeated statements and on speeches of his Cabinet officers which have been highly provocative for the last year or more.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. FISH. Certainly; for a short question.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Does the gentleman think any nation is going to be rash enough to attack the United States after the experiences of the last World War?

Mr. FISH. I agree with the gentleman 100 percent; no nation in the world has the faintest conception of attacking the United States. What I am fearful of is that we will attack some other nation.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. It takes two nations to make a

Mr. FISH. Not if we give this power to the President. He can make war and we will have little or nothing to say about it in the Congress of the United States. I propose to talk next week about the danger of giving these powers to the President.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania. Mr. RICH. Does the gentleman believe the reason Japan never declared war on China was because of the fact they were afraid we might stop the shipment of arms, ammunition, and the commodities necessary for the purpose of waging war to them?

Mr. FISH. That is not only true so far as the United States is concerned, but the other nations would be involved also. She does not buy from us only. She has very definite reasons for not declaring war. She is also a signatory to the Kellogg Pact and pretends this is not a war when every thinking man knows a state of war exists over there without a declaration of war. That is why we put those words in the neutrality bill.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. FISH. I yield to the gentleman from Idaho.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Under a formal declaration of war by Japan on China it would automatically bring into operation our neutrality laws and shut off the shipment of supplies from this country?

Mr. FISH. We did not mention a declaration of war in the neutrality bill. We used the words "a state of war." A declaration of war is not necessary for the President to enforce the law. I am talking about the law as it exists and which he does not enforce. There is no reason why he should not enforce the law, and even if it is made stronger by an actual declaration of war, there is no assurance that he would enforce it.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. If they declared war it would automatically bring into evidence a state of war.

Mr. FISH. It would be further proof, but you do not need that proof. There is not a single person in the world who does not acknowledge that a state of war exists over there in China today.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. I am in agreement with the gen-

Mr. FISH. Regardless of our sympathies for China or anyone else. I am saying that the President has deliberately refused to enforce the law and I will go further and say that if President Hoover had ignored the will of Congress in a like manner he would have been impeached immediately.

Mr. Chairman, I want to read into the RECORD a statement I gave to the press a few days ago, so that it will be in the Congressional Record. It is very brief and gives my views and I think the views of the Republican Party on foreign policies. It is in answer to a letter by former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, who has been repeatedly bombarding the press with lengthy letters upholding the foreign policies of the Roosevelt administration. Everyone of these policies enunciated by Mr. Stimson have been repudiated by Herbert Hoover. I do not believe there is a single Republican in either the House of Representatives or the Senate who favors the views expressed by the former Secretary of State, Mr. Henry L. Stimson. I have never heard of any Republican in Congress expressing approval of such policies.

Mr. CULKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CULKIN. Is that the same Stimson who nearly got us into war in 1932? The only reason he did not get us into war at that time was because England refused to participate.

Mr. FISH. It is precisely the same individual. Mr. CULKIN. He is still up to his old tricks?

Mr. FISH. He has not changed one iota. He is the same person who, as Secretary of State under a Republican administration, came before the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives and asked for identically the same powers that the President is now asking for-the right to determine the aggressor nation, an unneutral act, a cause for war, which would lead us into war under international law if used against any first-class power. The Republican Members voted unanimously not to give this power to Secretary of State Stimson or to the President, whether he be a Republican or a Democrat. My opposition is the same today as it was then.

Mr. Stimson is in accord with the present administration on its collective security and interventionist policies. He was likewise for the League of Nations. He is for determining the aggressor nations. He is for economic sanctions, and he is for policing and quarantining the world with American blood and treasure, and openly advocates that we enter into a naval alliance with France and Great Britain. I am delighted he has spoken, because he has exposed the Roosevelt foreign policies so that the American people will know exactly what they are. The Roosevelt administration has not had the nerve to tell the people what its foreign policies were up to now. Let us strip the veil off all the mystery and secret diplomacy.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, this is the statement I want to put in the RECORD so that "he who runs may read." It is not an attack on Mr. Stimson, but merely on his views on foreign policies, which are opposed in practically every respect to the Republican national platform of 1936 and the attitude of the Republican Members of Congress. I do not in any way question his right as an individual to make known his views.

Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of State in the Hoover administration, has again been bombarding the press with letters in support of internationalism, aggressor-nation powers, and economic sanctions, and in favor of joint naval measures with France and Great Britain.

Mr. Stimson has a perfect right as an American citizen to express his views and to support President Roosevelt in affirmative action against the totalitarian nations. I am glad Mr. Stimson has stripped the Roosevelt policies of their secrecy and mystery and stated exactly what they mean: Collective security, military alliances, secret diplomacy, and war commitments without the consent of the Congress or the American people.

Mr. Stimson does not represent the Republican Party. which is definitely opposed to all entangling alliances, intervention, and interference in European feuds and conflicts. Every suggestion made by Mr. Stimson has been repudiated by former President Hoover in his recent speeches on the administration's foreign policies, and I doubt if there is a single Republican in either the House of Representatives or the Senate who favors the Stimson doctrine of having our armed forces police the world and again fight to make the world safe for democracy.

If the United States puts a chip on its shoulder and goes looking for war, we are sure to be accommodated by one or more of the totalitarian states. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I have just received a most important telegram which is of vital interest to Members on both sides of the aisle before making a determination whether we should scrap our traditional foreign policy as laid down by Washington, of neutrality, nonintervention, peace, and no entangling alliances, or, on the other had, follow the New Deal into collective security, aggressor nation powers, economic sanctions, and policing and quarantining the world. In the last analysis the people of America must determine this issue. This important and interesting telegram I submit to you for your edification, and it reads as follows:

HARTFORD, CONN., March 8, 1939. Hon. HAMILTON FISH,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:
Just learned that imaginary torpedo from "enemy" submarine recently sank cruiser Houston with President Roosevelt aboard. recently sank cruiser Houston with President Roosevelt aboard. Suspect the yellow peril, Orson Welles, Kaiser Wilhelm, Walter Millis, Count Ciano, Senator Nye, Hermann Goering, or the anonymous author of Great Britain's Europe in December Fortune. You may be able to suppress this as you have the facts about the martian attack in New Jersey, but these perils to democracy will out and crush your opposition to the administration's foreign policy. Am suggesting to White House a secret conclave, including Dorothy Thompson, Ambassador Bullitt, and the ghost of Colonel House, together with adequate British representation.

FREDERICK R. BRIGGS.

Mr. Chairman, may I say I have no objection to a reconsideration of the neutrality bill? It is far from perfect. There is no reason in the world why the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House and the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate should not write an effective, comprehensive, and workable neutrality bill. I certainly will not put anything in the way of this as a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House; but when it comes to giving the President of the United States the power to involve us in a war without the consent of the Congress of the United States and the American people, that is an entirely different proposition.

I imagine it will be again proposed that the Congress surrender its power to declare war and turn over to the President the power to lay economic sanctions and to determine the aggressor nation. If we do that, the reorganization bill we were considering yesterday will be as nothing and utterly harmless compared to the surrender and abdication of the powers of the Congress and its constitutional power to declare war, if we follow the advice of the internationalists and interventionists in Congress. That is all it amounts to; nothing more nor nothing less. If we give up any more of these warmaking powers to the President to involve us in foreign wars, to enter into collective security agreements or commitments for concerted action or military or naval alliances, the Congress will be surrendering our right to declare war. We will then be aiding and abetting the President of the United States by making it possible for him to take this country into war in the next 6 months, which would be the logical result of his vitriolic attacks on other nations and their forms of government. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCor-Mack].

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, it is rather an unusual situation when a Democrat in this House feels constrained to rise and, with reference to a former Secretary of State under former President Hoover, to defend him as a great American citizen. I do not always agree with him, but I respect him. I can disagree with a person and still respect him. In my capacity, not as a Democratic Member of this House but as a Member of the House and as an American citizen, I rise to express my feelings—and I feel that my views will be the views of the great majority of the American people—at the attempt to indirectly read out of his own party the former Secretary of State, the Honorable Henry L. Stimson. If ever I heard a man's views misinterpreted, it has been those expressed by former Secretary Stimson in the statements he made recently, and to which the gentleman from New York referred.

I read the letter of former Secretary Stimson. I did not see one word in it that showed an indication of a departure on his part from the traditional American policy of no entangling alliances. The mere fact that the former Secretary of State supports President Roosevelt is no justification for undertaking to interpret his position and his letter in support thereof in an erroneous manner. Secretary Stimson came out in support of the present foreign policy of President Roosevelt. In that same letter he disagreed with the domestic policies of President Roosevelt, and a fair comment on his letter would have incorporated that fact. Is it a crime for a former Secretary of State, although he is a Republican, and, above all, an American, to agree with the President of the United States on his foreign policy simply because the President's party affiliation is that of a Democrat? Is the gentleman from New York disturbed because the former Secretary of State, who occupied that position under a Republican administration, supports the present President of the United States in his foreign policy? That is the only justification, because a casual, but surely a careful, reading of the letter of former Secretary Stimson would show that he never took the position stated by the gentleman from New York on the floor only a few moments ago on the question of entangling alliances.

Mr. FISH. What position is that?

Mr. McCORMACK. That he is in favor of entangling alliances—that he is in favor of such concerted action as would bring about entangling alliances. That was in substance the statement the gentleman from New York made only a few moments ago.

Mr. FISH. Has the gentleman read his letter?

Mr. McCORMACK. Read it? Of course I read his letter. Mr. FISH. He said he favored having our Navy join with the Navies of France and Great Britain to protect the democracies. What does the gentleman call that?

Mr. McCORMACK. That is not the interpretation.

Mr. FISH. Those are the words he used, and the gentleman can interpret them in any way he pleases.

Mr. McCORMACK. I interpret what he said in the light of the man's service as Secretary of State—a man who while in office always followed the traditional policy of our country of no entangling alliances.

The purpose of the gentleman from New York is very apparent. It is political. An attempt is now being made to try to place the President of the United States in a false light and in a false position in the minds of the American people. An attempt was made to try to create the impression subtly, but erroneously, that the President of the United States is undertaking to enter the United States into entangling alliances.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. McCORMACK. When I have completed my statement I will yield.

That rumor went around the country, the newspapers picked it up in good faith, and the President of the United States had to term the rumor "a deliberate lie." Later, not content with that, the propagandists, those who go to any extreme to destroy the President, circulated a rumor that some instrument of national defense had been sold to the French Government, and the President had to term that as a "fake" rumor.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 additional minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. For a brief question.

Mr. CULKIN. The gentleman endorses Secretary Stimson heartily and completely?

Mr. McCORMACK. I defend Secretary Stimson against such an attack that his letter favored entangling alliances, since he is unable to defend himself on the floor of the House. I endorse no person's views, completely. I do not agree with him on all matters.

Mr. CULKIN. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. McCORMACK. Does the gentleman object to my undertaking? Does the gentleman resent my defending a great Republican?

Mr. CULKIN. I do not regard him as a great Republican. Mr. McCORMACK. Ah! Well, I am glad to hear it. I wonder how the Republicans of the country are going to feel when they hear and read that on the floor of Congress Republican Members of Congress have made the statement they do not regard former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson as a great Republican. The gentleman is getting himself in deeper and deeper.

Mr. CULKIN. Oh, no. That was my statement, and I do not qualify it.

Does the gentleman follow Stimson into the lifting of the Spanish embargo? He advocated that.

Mr. McCORMACK. The gentleman knows my position.

Mr. CULKIN. Answer my question.

Mr. McCORMACK. Wait a while, and I will answer it in my own way.

Mr. CULKIN. Oh, do not evade.

Mr. McCORMACK. I am not an evader. I do not want to accuse the gentleman from New York of being an evader.

Mr. CULKIN. I am watching the gentleman closely.

Mr. CULKIN. I am watching the gentleman closely.
Mr. McCORMACK. The gentleman can watch as closely as he wants to.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin and Mr. FISH rose.

Mr. McCORMACK. Wait a while.

I can disagree with a man and at the same time entertain the strongest feeling of respect for him. I disagree with former Secretary of State in that respect. I have opposed the lifting of the embargo on that question. My position is well known. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Culkin], as I remember, and I agree on this question.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. McCORMACK. I only have 30 seconds more. Certainly the position of President Roosevelt is well known on this great question. He, like myself and the gentlemen from New York [Mr. Culkin and Mr. Fish], stands for adequate national defense, for a militant preservation of our rights, but under no conditions for entangling alliances with any other nations. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. CULKIN].

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Chairman, this heated, perfervid, and rather rigorous discussion of the gentleman from Massachusetts requires some reply from me.

A distinguished former Secretary of State, if I may characterize him as that, although I disagree fundamentally and completely with all of his foreign policies, in 1932 led this country to the verge of war. Mr. Stimson got out on the end of a limb. He officially declared war against Japan, and got out on the end of a limb thinking that England would follow him. England very deftly sawed off the limb and the distinguished former Secretary of State fell awkwardly to the ground. Now he is playing the identical role and giving the same performance that he did in those days. The former Secretary of State believes that we have the duty of carrying out England's policies in China. I insist that is not the function of America any more than it was the function of America to lift the embargo in Spain. I did not clearly understand the answer to the question I asked the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CULKIN. I yield.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. President Roosevelt is now enunciating the same foreign policy which he enunciated in 1920, when he ran for Vice President on the Democratic ticket and got a terrific beating.

Mr. CULKIN. Yes. That is history.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Do you not believe that almost all of the Republicans are happy that Mr. Stimson, a League of Nations advocate who is now a rubber-stamp follower of the Roosevelt international policies, has left our party and affiliated himself with the New Deal, as has Mr.

Mr. CULKIN. I agree with the gentleman. The fact is the American people have three times repudiated this program. They repudiated it in 1916 in the second election of Wilson, when he was elected on the platform "He kept us out of war." They repudiated it in the next election in 1920 and in the Presidential election of 1924. I will say to the gentleman from Massachusetts that if he leads his party or permits Stimson to lead his party into this international debacle, the Democratic Party will not carry a single State in the Union in 1940. [Applause.] This for the reason that the people of the United States-not Stimson; perhaps not the distinguished gentleman in the White House; but the people of the United States-are universally opposed to shedding any American blood in a foreign war either in the Pacific or in Europe. [Applause.]

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CULKIN. I yield.

Mr. GEYER of California. Is it not true that the would-be President Landon made the statement that Secretary Stimson was only following the dictates of Mr. Hoover when he got out on a limb and fell into the Japanese Sea?

Mr. CULKIN. I do not believe that statement is historically correct, and I mean to be polite about it, too. [Laughter.] The fact is there is a small school of American statesmanship that believes America should get into the war in the Far East and pull Great Britain's chestnuts out of the fire. Mr. Stimson is an ardent Anglophile and belongs to that school.

Mr. GEYER of California. Is that the answer to my ques-

Mr. CULKIN. The answer to the question is that that was the procedure then, and that is the procedure now which the gentleman from Massachusetts now endorses, and which the gentleman from California seems to endorse.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CULKIN. I yield to the gentleman from Washington. Mr. COFFEE of Washington. The statement was made in reply to the gentleman from Massachusetts that if the United States were inclined to follow the foreign policy advocated by former Secretary Stimson, the Democratic Party would not carry a single State of the Union. Is that correct?

Mr. CULKIN. Of course I said that; and if the gentleman vere here he must have heard me. Of course, I stand by that statement.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. I just want to say that the Gallup poll disagrees with the gentleman, because it found that 69 percent of the American people agree with the view of former Secretary of State Stimson.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CULKIN. I yield.

Mr. FISH. Does the gentleman know whether the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCormack], who has recently spoken, also agrees with former Secretary Stimson in advocating a League of Nations?

Mr. CULKIN. I assume he goes that far, although, of course, I have no right to commit the distinguished gentleman. The League of Nations has been deader than a doornail for 10 years. Mr. Stimson thinks he can bring it back

May I say to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. Coffee] that I hope the Democratic Party, fond as I am of all its membership-I hope they will not rely too greatly on some phases of the synthetic Gallup poll. [Laughter.] I think they had better be bolstered by some other measure of public opinion and, incidentally-

Mr. POAGE. The Literary Digest?

Mr. CULKIN. No; I will waive the Literary Digest, but I will put the Gallup poll in the same category as the Literary Digest in some phases of its determinations. I do not question the good faith and ability of the gentleman who conducts this poll, but I think he is covering too wide a range of public opinion to be at the same time exact in all his conclusions.

I hope the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCon-MACK] will not follow the former distinguished Secretary of State, that ardent Anglophile, who apparently desires to involve us in war not only in the Far East but in Europe.

The House knows that the very able gentleman from Massachusetts is too resolute an American to stray so far afield from the true destiny of America.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CULKIN. Yes.

Mr. McCORMACK. Do I understand the gentleman to say that former Secretary Stimson stands for entangling alliances with other nations? Is that the gentleman's viewpoint on that particular question?

Mr. CULKIN. The gentleman reads the newspapers, and he knows that. Go back and read what occurred in 1932.

Mr. McCORMACK. Does the gentleman say that former Secretary Stimson is in favor of entangling alliances with other nations? Is that the gentleman's interpretation of his

Mr. CULKIN. If the gentleman knows-

Mr. McCORMACK. Oh, that is an easy question-yes

Mr. CULKIN. Oh, the gentleman has not got me in police court under cross-examination. I am trying to be courteous to the gentleman.

Mr. McCORMACK. Oh, the gentleman always tries to be

Mr. CULKIN. It is painful, but I am doing the best I can. Mr. McCORMACK. Is the gentleman in his own way reading former Secretary Stimson out of the Republican Party?

Mr. CULKIN. I am in some of his absurd and non-Republican views.

Mr. McCORMACK. And retaining him in others?

Mr. CULKIN. Possibly.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. DICKSTEIN]. Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Chairman, on March 2 the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Keefe] saw fit to launch an attack against my distinguished colleague from Colorado [Mr. MARTIN], who, in my opinion, is one of the finest Members of the House, an able gentleman whom we all respect. In that attack he also included me, accusing both of us as being flag wavers and being insincere in our denunciation of un-Americanism, because, as he claimed, we attacked the Nazis but did not see fit to attack the Communists. Unfortunately I was not on the floor at that time. He spoke, perhaps, in the late hours of the afternoon, with about 20 Members on the floor, and the RECORD states there was a lot of applause. was hoping to get the original script, but I did not have the Whether there was applause or not does not concern me, but it seems to me in all fairness to a Member of Congress, particularly to a person who has served in this House for 16 or 18 years, that he would have told me beforehand, "We are going to say something about you." At least I tried to get my colleague, Mr. KEEFE, here this afternoon. I do not know where he is, but I notified his office.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Keefe] is unavoidably absent. He had to return home on account of a serious illness in his family.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. I am sorry. Mr. Chairman, the portion of the speech of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KEEFE] which I wish to call to the attention of the House will be found in my remarks, because I do not want to take the time now to read it to you.

[Excerpt of Mr. Keefe's speech from Congressional Record of March 2, p. 2186]

Mr. Chairman, there stood upon the floor of this House last Mr. Chairman, there stood upon the noor of this House last week two gentlemen, the distinguished gentleman from Colorado and the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. Dickstein]. Both of these gentlemen worked themselves up into a frenzy, waved the flag, and proclaimed their patriotism in denouncing a meeting held at Madison Square Garden attended by some 20,000 citizens of America under the designation of the bund. These gentlemen denounced in no uncertain terms the activities of that organization of the themselves made at the meeting. tion and the speeches made at that meeting.

I hold in my hand one of numerous newspaper clippings reporting a meeting held in that same auditorium, Madison Square Garden, last Monday night, which was attended by 20,000 Communists, called for the purpose of celebrating the twentieth anniversary of the Communist Party in America.

Despite the fact that this meeting was given the same publicity by the newspapers of this country as the bund meeting held a couple of weeks ago, I heard nothing but silence from these liberal leftists over on the Democratic side, who take the opportunity whenever it is presented to take a crack at every other organization except the Communist Party.

Mr. Chairman, I am wondering, and I have wondered since last Monday, what has become of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Dickstein], who stated that he stood on the outside of the bund meeting, among his comrades, and saw this terrible disgrace to America taking place?

He has not been here denouncing this Communist meeting held in New York, neither has there been a word from any other liberal, so-called, denouncing this meeting of Communists in New York. I wish to say to you I think it is high time that these gentlemen not only denounce the meeting of the bund but, if they are sincere in their protestations of patriotic impulses, they ought to stand here on the floor and in the same language denounce the activities of the Communist Party, which is the major party of destruction in America. [Applause.]

I never heard of the German bund in America until the Communist Party of America began to destroy the institutions we love. It seems to be a matter of recorded history, as stated by responsible people in this country of ours, that the Nazi Party in Germany was a natural protest against the constant invasion of communistic Russia and its doctrine into the rest of the world. Let me say to you it is my humble opinion that once we are able to stamp out and stem this growing tide of communistic propaganda that is evidenced on all sides there will be a continuous growth of resistance to that form of propaganda and we will be having transferred to the internal affairs of this Government of ours the very battles that are being fought over there in Europe. that are being fought over there in Europe.

He also referred in his speech to "these liberal leftists on the Democratic side," and that no one on this side of the aisle has attacked communism. He particularly points me out and says that while I always knock nazi-ism and fascism, I do not attack communism. Mr. Chairman, I might say for the benefit of the gentleman from Wisconsin that I have attacked communism when he was still a young man at school, and I believe him to be a man about 40 years or over. I attacked communism when I was a boy in my own community because I did not like communism. I have attacked communism when my colleague [Mr. KEEFE] never dreamed that he would be a Member of this distinguished body. If the gentleman, in all fairness and decency, had examined the Congressional Record in the last 5 years, I am sure that he would have found in every speech I made that I attacked "isms" in all forms as a menace to the American form of government. I can only refer the gentleman to some of my speeches appearing in the Congressional Records of July 27, 1937, August 3, 1937, November 23, 1937, December 21, 1937, February 18, 1938, March 19, 1938, April 21, 1938, April 27, 1938, May 17, 1938, May 28, 1938, June 2, 1938, January 25, 1939, February 24, 1939.

If the gentleman would have taken the trouble, he would have found that I was responsible for creating the Committee on Un-American Activities, of which that great American, Hon. John McCormack, was chairman. I had the honor to be vice chairman. He would also have found that Mr. Mc-CORMACK, I, and the other five members of the committee signed a report condemning communism, fascism, and all other "isms" in this country. I do not think that such a biased attack upon me and other Members of this House should go unanswered. He seems to imply that I am in comradeship with Communists. If the gentleman had taken the trouble to check up, he would know that a few years ago the very Communists who, he says, are my comrades were boycotting my home because I was anticommunistic.

For months they boycotted my home. If the gentleman from Wisconsin had taken the trouble, he would have also found out that in all of my talks on this floor I asked you gentlemen to create a committee on un-American activities, the last one, which is the Dies committee, he would know that I was the sole person on the floor who pleaded with this Congress and the American people to make that thorough study and investigation of all "isms." The gentleman from Wisconsin spoke, as I quote him directly from his speech, that he never heard of the Nazi bund in the United States, and that he only heard of the Nazi bund a short while ago when the Communists attacked the Nazis.

Now, if the gentleman from Wisconsin is very much interested in the Nazi bund, I will tell him where he can find at least three or four Nazi bunds within the reach of his own district. I can tell him also of a Nazi camp in his city. I can also tell him of the activities, of which he should know, coming from Wisconsin. When he makes the statement that he did not know about the Nazi bund, I do not think the gentleman has given very careful study to the question.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. DICKSTEIN. I yield.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. When you tell him of the Nazi camp in his district I hope the gentleman will be more accurate than the misrepresentation he made with reference to Nazi camps in Milwaukee. To read the gentleman's speeches in the RECORD, one would think that Hitler had about seven divisions there in a Boy Scout camp.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Now, without going into any vindictiveness or sad and sour remarks, and with all due respects to my colleague from your State, I still say that what I have said in the RECORD is true. If the gentleman wants to take the trouble, we will establish a blue print for him so that he may go there and march with the soldiers in goose-step in that camp.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I know where that camp is. It is in my city. It is a small camp which is equivalent to a Y. M. C. A. camp, where a few children spend their vacations, the gentleman's allegations to the contrary notwithstanding. The gentleman had better go to Milwaukee and get his facts.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Then the gentleman admits there is a camp in his district?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. It is a bund, not a Nazi camp.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. It is a small, little Nazi camp.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. No; it is not any kind of a Nazi camp.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. It is a small, little Nazi camp. Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. No; it is not.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. What would the gentleman call that camp?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. The members of the bund in Milwaukee are American citizens. They are not Nazis.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. No American citizen can claim to be a true American citizen if he wears a foreign uniform [applause] and carries a foreign flag. [Applause.]

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. They do not wear a Nazi uniform and do not carry a Nazi flag.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. I tell you, ladies and gentlemen of this House, as I have told you a few years ago, there are over 100 of the so-called Nazi bunds, with a membership running into the thousands, the members of which under the guise of being Americans, are holding dual nationality. They are just holding their certificates of citizenship to either keep their jobs or for fear of being deported. I say, every one of them ought to be disposed of in some form or another, because this country has no room for any other uniforms than the American uniform of the American Army. [Ap-

It does not make any difference whether it is a small camp or a big camp, the menace is right there. If you want to go down to Camp Gregerstown, N. J., and other bund camps you will find they are taking American Yankee children between 4 and 12 years of age and teaching them the philosophy of hate and intolerance, teaching them everything against democracy and the United States, and for the benefit of the Hitler Government.

But I took the floor today to call your attention to another point.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman from New York 2 additional minutes.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. If I am wrong I want to be corrected and I will apologize, but I do not think it is fair for any Member of this House to hit any other Member below the belt. It is unfair to stand on this floor and tell the American people that I am in sympathy with communism. I will show you definitely and positively that I have fought the Communists on the same ground as I have fought the bund, and hope to continue, while I am a Member of this House, to do so. [Applause.]

I love my country and I want to keep it as our forefathers gave it to us. I say to all of you that all "isms" are a menace and that we ought to get rid of them. I hope the Dies committee will do a good job. I hope and trust that when I have the power in my committee to go into other alien details that I will do a good job, too. I assure you, ladies and gentlemen of this House, that I have never been in sympathy with communism or any other "isms," and that I have been responsible for the deportation of many of those un-Americans in this country who believe in "isms" subversive to our form of government.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. DICKSTEIN. I vield.

Mr. RICH. In the work which the Dies committee is doing, trying to make these investigations, the gentleman and his committee have a great deal of information that would be very valuable, no doubt, in stamping out these "isms." Would it not be wise for you to present that to the Dies committee?

Mr. DICKSTEIN. If the gentleman has read my speech which I think I made on the 24th of last month, in a discussion between myself and my colleague [Mr. DEMPSEY], a member of the Dies committee, I have given Mr. DEMPSEY the assurance of cooperation if I can get some definite program and understanding. There is no question that I could give them some very valuable information. In addition thereto, I hope that this Congress will adopt the rule which was reported out a few days ago to give the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization an opportunity to go into the question of alien smuggling, dual nationality, and other things, to clean house in this country.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 additional minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Dick-STEIN].

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. DICKSTEIN. I yield.

Mr. McCORMACK. I think the inquiry of the gentleman from Pennsylvania is a very pertinent one. I want to assure the gentleman that, having been chairman of a similar committee 4 years ago, I shall be glad to cooperate. I have already offered my services.

I also want to call attention to the fact that the committee of which I was chairman and the gentleman from New York vice chairman—and I want to say that no finer American lives today than the gentleman from New York [Mr. Dick-STEIN] [applause]; he is pro-American; he is opposed to all "isms"—that committee recommended a bill which passed last year, the Registration Act, a very effective piece of legislation. We also recommended another bill that I am going to introduce in a few days, making it a crime for any person knowingly and willfully to advocate the overthrow of government by force and violence. I have introduced this bill in previous sessions, but we have never been able to get the bill up. It is a bill that should pass. No American should be opposed to a bill of that kind, and I hope this Congress will pass it. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Kleberg].

Mr. KLEBERG. Mr. Chairman, on March 4 this Chamber rang with the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of this Congress under our present Constitution. I confess that on yesterday during the debate on the reorganization bill, in which I participated, and in line with the celebration on March 4 presented an amendment with all the devotion an American citizen anywhere could put behind an effort toward maintaining and keeping representative democracy safe, that I find myself today still confused and hurt and smarting for having had the attention of the Committee called to the fact that I used a truly American amendment as a dagger; and I ask the indulgence of the House on this occasion to hear a few words from one of the Doones-as I believe I was so referred to on yesterday.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. KLEBERG. I yield.

Mr. WARREN. I distinctly disavow that I placed the gentleman from Texas in with the Doones. I wish he would read that part again. But seriously, Mr. Chairman, if I in any way gave personal offense to the gentleman from Texas in my remarks yesterday, I wish to assure him that that was as far from my thought as it could possibly be. The gentleman from Texas is a man of great character, of high mind, and splendid ability. Since he first came here he has been one of my close personal friends, and he holds the respect and esteem of the entire House.

If he will further indulge me for a second, I do not propose to let the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Hoffman] try to torture the words in the Record that I used in reference to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber]. Mr. Taber and I have likewise been good friends since I have been in the House and I have frequently paid tribute to his ability. The same applies to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gifford]. The Associated Press referred to it as "goodnatured criticism." [Applause.]

Mr. KLEBERG. Mr. Chairman, I would be less than

Mr. KLEBERG. Mr. Chairman, I would be less than honest if I did not say that the statement by the gentleman from North Carolina comes to me as a real solace. I yield to no man in the affectionate regard which I hold for my friends, and I confess that my statement of hurt was a real and a true one, and I want to express my appreciation to my friend. [Applause.]

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KLEBERG. Briefly.

Mr. HAWKS. I just want to put in the RECORD here that perhaps the story of the Doones and the valley of the Doones used by the gentleman from North Carolina yesterday was probably a part of the dramatics employed to defeat the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. KLEBERG. I do not know about that. In any event,

I appreciate the gentleman's interest.

Mr. Chairman, my purpose in asking for this time this afternoon, which is short, is to lay before this Committee and to put in the Record for the attention of the Members of the House the importance of knowing something about the most serious pest which affects the cotton industry and cotton producers in North America.

In discussing the menace of the pink bollworm it will be impossible in the short time allotted to me to make an orderly statement leading to the absolutely essential conclusion to which rational minds must come. I think it proper to call attention to something of this peculiar pest's history. As a matter of fact it first was called to the attention of the Bureau of Entomology in the Department of Agriculture when its existence was discovered in North America in 1911 following an infestation which came into the Laguna area of Mexico in seeds brought from Egypt. At the same time the pink bollworm was introduced into Brazil.

At this very time of year, the spring, in the Cotton Belt the pink bollworm, in its adult form as a moth, is beginning to move around from the Laguna area in Mexico which produces the principal cotton supply of Mexico and where this moth is found. They are very weak little bugs and cannot propel themselves for any great distance laterally. Their migration is aided by the wind currents. They can, however, rise to unbelievable heights. The Bureau of Entomology through its investigations with nets hung between captive balloons have found these moths being carried by air currents 2,000 feet above the ground. The bollworm moth carried by air currents is drifted across into my State, into New Mexico, and Arizona.

The first attention to this character of infestation occurred in what is known as the Presidio area of Texas, up in Mr. Thomason's district. There for a 2-year period cotton production was stopped and the area that had been infested was cleaned thoroughly by the disposal of rubbish and the plowing under of the stacks. The feasibility and efficacy of this method was checked and found to result in complete eradication in an infested area in Georgia, but in the next crop planted in the Presidio area a small infestation was found.

Thereupon investigations were made, because the seeds which had come into the Presidio area had been carefully checked, and it was found that the way the moth came in was by these wind currents, showing that he may have traveled a distance of 600 miles.

Mr. Chairman, in North America the only places the pink bollworm is found today is in the State of Texas, in 36 counties, and in a small part of Arizona, New Mexico, and Florida, as well as in Mexico. In Texas, in the small area which you will note colored here, by reference to this map, including some 36 counties. The pink bollworm, however, is found in a list of countries which produce cotton, and I cannot at this juncture read this list because it would take too long. If unanimous consent is obtained by the chairman of the subcommittee, I will include a list of the countries in which the pink bollworm is found, and which now grow cotton. This is an interesting list.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. Buck). The Chair may say that the gentleman will have to secure permission to include extraneous matter in the House.

Mr. KLEBERG. Mr. Chairman, I understand that. I make the statement that if the chairman of the Subcommittee on Appropriations gets unanimous consent that Members who speak in this debate may extend their remarks, the tables and material I shall refer to in the remaining few minutes will be inserted in the RECORD.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. I may say to the gentleman that request will be made.

Mr. KLEBERG. Mr. Chairman, the pink bollworm is interesting to the people of the United States because he attacks the greatest single agent for the giving of employment in this country. You gentlemen will be interested in making an investigation into the part cotton plays in giving employment to people. Out of every 100 men gainfully employed by industry in the United States of America you will find that 40 out of each 100 are employed by industries which use cotton as an essential part of their manufactured product. This has no reference whatsoever to the enormous manpower employed in producing cotton, in harvesting cotton, or in ginning cotton before it goes into industry; so the production of North American cotton, Mr. Chairman, if you are interested in the unemployment situation, must certainly be a matter of primary interest to every thinking man within the sound of my voice.

One of the other interesting things is that the pink boll-worm may perchance prove, if we eradicate him here, to be the best friend not only to the cotton men in America but possibly to our country because of the fact that nowhere else where he is found—and he is found in every land which produces cotton—can he be as successfully coped with as he can be in this country and in Mexico, and here only with our assistance. The pink bollworm is responsible in the principal cotton areas that are competitors for the world market, such as Brazil, Egypt, and India, for a reduction in their cotton production of from 38 percent to 60 percent. In Brazil and in some other areas the reduction is from 30 to 66 percent.

Last fall, in an investigation of the fields in south Texas and Mexico, I personally investigated fields which would have produced, had the pink bollworm not touched them, in excess of one bale of cotton per acre. Those fields did not produce one single bale of cotton as a result of this infestation.

I have asked the Subcommittee on Agricultural Appropriations to look with favor on a requested increase in the appropriation for the eradication or the maintenance of sufficient control in the United States to prevent the spread of this bollworm to the main cotton areas of the United States, where he inevitably will go unless the steps that have been advocated are followed through.

In 1937 we noticed, following the first knowledge of an infestation in south Texas, a great spread of this bug, and despite the best efforts we could make in south Texas we found him still getting away. Time will not afford me the opportunity to go into detail as to just exactly the manner in which this money will be expended, but if the gentleman receives unanimous consent you will find in the extension of my remarks a discussion by the best qualified men in the Bureau of Entomology and statistical data showing the importance of this work to an extent I do not believe can be controverted by any person.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KLEBERG. I yield to the gentleman from Arizona. Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Is there a budget in this bill for the eradication of this pink bollworm?

Mr. KLEBERG. The Budget has agreed to an increased estimate, but this to be in the supply bill for agriculture. Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. And the gentleman proposes to ask for an increase over that?

Mr. KLEBERG. Yes. [Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

Mr. KLEBERG. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. THOMASON. In view of the very forceful and unanswerable argument the gentleman is making, does he not believe the only way this menace can be met, inasmuch as it is almost a national problem, is by substantial Federal aid?

Mr. KLEBERG. Absolutely.

Mr. THOMASON. That is the only way we can ever hope to solve the problem?

Mr. KLEBERG. Yes.

Mr. Chairman, in conclusion I want to call attention to the fact that with the enormous cotton surplus we have in the United States there is a definite possibility of our being able to utilize this surplus to save the cotton industry of the United States by working out an agreement with Mexico along certain lines that will be apparent to any thinking person in order to eradicate that pest in Mexico, from where we must continue to become infested if this pest is left in that small area in Mexico.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. KLEBERG. Mr. Chairman, that small area in Mexico infested by the pink boll worm produces on an average from 250,000 to 300,000 bales per annum.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KLEBERG. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsyl-

Mr. RICH. Does the gentleman have any idea what it is going to cost to eradicate this evil?

Mr. KLEBERG. Yes; I think I can tell very accurately.

Mr. RICH. How much will it cost?

Mr. KLEBERG. If the work is carefully gone into in this country, and if we can succeed in our plans with Mexico, an appropriation of $920,000, in excess of what is already authorized in the bill, will do the job.

Mr. RICH. The gentleman is a good financier and a very important Member of this House, and I should like to ask him, because I have asked everyone else, where are you going to get the money?

Mr. KLEBERG. I will answer that question for my good friend for all time. The minute you agree to permit the cotton farmer to make some money above costs you will find it a pretty easy job to get the money.

Mr. Chairman, in order to expedite this discussion it is necessary to call the attention of the membership to the fact that the pink bollworm (Pectinophora gossypiella Saunders) occurs, according to the Department of Agriculture, in countries listed under the following distribution:

North America: United States—Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Florida (wild cotton); Mexico—Coahulia, Chihuahua, Durango, Tamaulipas; West Indies—Cuba (report of interception only), Haiti, Puerto Rico, Jamaica, Santo Domingo, Bahamas; Lesser Antilles—Virgin Islands, Antigua, Barbados, Nevis, Grenada, St. Lucia, St. Vincent, St. Kitts, Montserrat, Anguilla, Virgin Gorda; Trinidad Trinidad.

South America: Brazil—Pernambuco, Parahiba, Sao Paulo, Ceara;

Argentina; Paraguay; Venezuela; Colombia.

Europe: Greece; Italy (Sicily).

Australia: Queensland (Holdaway: Related species only), North-

Astaria: Queensiand (Hotdaway: Related species omy), Northern Territory, western Australia.

Asia: India—Punjab, Ceylon, Straits Settlements; Burma; Siam; French Indochina—Cambodia; China; Japan—Taiwan (Formosa), Chosen (Korea); Turkey (Mesopotamia)—Aden, Smyrna, Cilicia; Syria; Palestine; Island of Cyprus.

Oceanica: Dutch East Indies—Java; Philippine Islands; Hawaiian Islands; Fiji Islands; Samoa; New Calidonia; New Guinea; New Hebrides.

Africa: Egypt; Sudan; Algeria; Tripoli—Cyrenaica; Tunisia; Italian Somaliland; German East Africa—Tanganyika Territory, Zanzibar; Portuguese East Africa—Mozambique; British East Africa; Kenya; Nyassaland; Nigeria—Lagos; Sierra Leone; Angola; Belgian Congo; Uganda.

It is important to note that no country outside of the United States, not even excepting Mexico, occupies a position, based on transportation facilities and literacy, comparable to the United States. This statement is made to illustrate the insurmountable difficulties confronting every cotton-producing country in this list with reference to compliance with an effective program for the eradication of the pink bollworm.

This program calls for, first, the plowing under of all stalks standing in fields and the elimination of all rubbish prior to approximately September 1 of each year, as well as the sterilization by heat treatment of all seeds in gins during the cotton season. You can readily understand, gentlemen, how difficult the consummation and effectuation of this program would be in countries such as China, India, Egypt, Brazil, and other Latin-American countries, including Mexico, in view of their lack of highways, together with educational attainments to be found among the farmers producing cotton.

For your information, the Texas delegation in the Congress appointed my good friends the Honorable Milton West and the Honorable George Mahon and myself as a committee to which was assigned the task of presenting the pink bollworm problem to the Subcommittee on Appropriations and to the Director of the Budget. These gentlemen, including myself, have undertaken to present this matter, after a detailed and exhaustive study, to the mentioned committee and to the Director of the Budget, and as chairman of this committee I am undertaking here and now to present the importance of this problem to the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States.

With particular reference to the situation in Mexico, from which country we may properly expect continued reinfestation of this insect pest, this committee has already presented to the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of State the importance of evolving a treaty between the United States and Mexico whereby the eradication of this pest may be consummated with the least possible delay. It is my opinion, as chairman of this committee, that worth-while consideration should be given to the idea of taking from our surplus cotton on hand a sufficient baleage each year by proper terms for the purpose of furnishing Mexico with a like amount of cotton to that produced in Mexico's infested areas in an effort to set up in our neighbor country, Mexico, a non-cotton-producing program in the area infested by the pink bollworm.

It is to the mutual interest of Mexico and the United States to give serious consideration to this proposal. The United States has every incentive to reduce our cotton surplus on hand. Mexico, like the United States, has every incentive to eradicate this destructive pest which bids fair to destroy the earning power of industry and agriculture if not intelligently and effectively curbed. The process of eradication is simple, and, in my candid and earnest opinion, requires the most serious attention, and should be undertaken with the least possible delay.

I refer you at this point to a memorandum prepared by Mr. Lee A. Strong at my request on the distribution of the pink bollworm, and the damage by this insect pest to the cotton industry:

PINK BOLLWORM DISTRIBUTION AND DAMAGE

The pink bollworm is generally accepted as the most injurious insect pest of cotton in most of the cotton-growing regions of the world. It first attracted attention as a serious cotton pest in 1904, when it was reported as causing great injury in German East Africa. The pink bollworm was apparently introduced into Egypt about 1906-7, and the first severely infested Egyptian field was found near Cairo in 1912. Since that time it has spread to practically every cotton-producing country of the world. Its habit of forming longcotton-producing country of the world. Its habit of forming long-cycle or hibernating larvae, which may live for more than 2 years within cottonseed, makes it particularly adaptable to spread, and accounts for its widespread distribution within such a short time. The known distribution includes Egypt and other countries in Africa; India, Ceylon, Burma, Siam, China, Japan, and other countries in Asia; the Philippine Islands; Australia; Hawaii; Brazil, Argentina, and other South American countries; the West Indies; Mexico and the Big Bend area of Texas. Its introduction into the Western Hemisphere is fairly definitely established with the introduction of Egyptian cottonseed into Brazil and Mexico in 1911.

In all of these regions it is the most serious cotton pest. Several of the larger cotton-growing countries, including China, India, Egypt, Russia, Argentine Republic, and Australia, have sent entomologists and others engaged in cotton investigations to this country to study our methods of pink bollworm research and control.

The pink bollworm feeds in the squares and bolls of cotton and reduces the quantity and quality of both lint and seed. Bolls are its preferred food, and the principal damage is caused by the worms feeding on the undeveloped fibers and seed. When small bolls are attacked they are completely destroyed, while the amount of damage to older bolls depends on the age of the bolls and the number of worms per boll. The lint in these bolls is cut and discolored, the interior of the seeds is eaten out, and in badly infested bolls the lint is short and kinky, the seed light, and with little oil. The pink bollworm affects not only the farmers but also the cotton spinners, oil crushers, and others by reduction in the quality of lint and seed.

lint is short and kinky, the seed light, and with little oil. The pink bollworm affects not only the farmers but also the cotton spinners, oil crushers, and others by reduction in the quality of lint and seed. Information on the losses caused by the pink bollworm in various countries leaves no doubt as to its seriousness as a cotton pest. King (Wellcome Tropical Research Laboratories Bull. 21, 1924) states that "of all the insect pests of cotton, that known as the pink bollworm is probably the most important." Bishara (Min. of Agric. Egypt, Tech. and Sci. Service Bull. 163, 1936) says: "It is now 20 years since the pink bollworm became the most serious pest of cotton in Egypt. The average losses are well over a million kantars of cotton in yield." (Equals 315,000.000 pounds seed cotton, or 210,000 bales.) Gough (Min. of Agric. Egypt, Tech. and Sci. Bull. 182, 1917) states that "it now occurs everywhere cotton is grown in Egypt; in the last week of October, 87 percent of the green bolls in lower Egypt, 78 percent in middle, and 60 percent in upper Egypt were attacked by it."

He estimated the loss in Egypt at 17 percent of the crop. Johnston (Well. Trop. Res. Lab. Bull. 26) estimated the infestation in the Sudan at 3.8 percent in 1927 and 24 percent in 1928. In the Laguna district of Mexico, Loftin (U. S. D. A. Bull. 918) estimated the loss in 1918–19 at 20 percent of the crop, and in 1920 at 38 or 39 percent. This was the worst pink bollworm year in Mexico to date. Ohlendorf (U. S. D. A. Bull. 1374) places the loss from 1921 to 1926 at 20 to 25 percent of the crop, and reports from Rude indicate that the average loss has been about 20 percent of the crop through 1936. Estimates by others than entomologists have usually placed the loss in Mexico at a higher figure. A commission, representing farm organizations, cotton associations, chambers of commerce, etc., of Texas, visited the Laguna in 1920 and estimated the crop loss for that year at 50 percent. Schutz and Haskell, of the Bureau of farm organizations, cotton associations, chambers of commerce, etc., of Texas, visited the Laguna in 1920 and estimated the crop loss for that year at 50 percent. Schutz and Haskell, of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, estimated the losses for 1915–21 at 23.49 percent. In Brazil the Minister of Agriculture placed the loss in 1917 at from 30 to 66 percent of the crop in different States. We were informed by the Governor of the State of Chaco that the pink bollworm now occurs in all the cotton areas of Argentina and bollworm now occurs in all the cotton areas of Argentina and causes serious loss.

Puerto Rico was formerly the largest producer of Sea Island cotton in the world with 20,000 acres planted in 1931. Leonard (Jour. P. R. Dept. Agric., vol. 16, No. 1) estimated the loss in yield to be at least 15 to 20 percent and probably more in 1931. Largely because of this damage no cotton was planted for several years; and. when resumed, Fife (Agric. Notes, P. R. Exp. Sta., No. 81) estimated 30 percent of the crop destroyed in 1936. The cotton industry in Hawaii and the Virgin Islands has been discontinued largely because of the pink bollworm damage, and has been greatly curtailed in all of the West Indies. Of the 161 insect pests of cotton in China, Li (Ent. and Phytopath, vol. 5, No. 1, 1937) estimates that the pink bollworm causes 50 percent of all insect losses, or $30,000,000 a year.

000 a year.

the pink bollworm causes 50 percent of all insect losses, or $30,000,000 a year.

Cotton is a hot-weather crop and requires a frost-free period of 200 days and average summer temperatures of about 74° F. for successful commercial production. Apparently the pink bollworm can survive in practically any climate where cotton can be grown. The only area in the United States where the pink bollworm has become sufficiently abundant to cause commercial damage is the Big Bend region of Texas, where the losses have been 15 to 20 percent of the crop in recent years. Low temperatures and heavy rainfall during the winter increase pink bollworm mortality. Very high summer temperatures also seem to reduce the pink bollworm population. Nevertheless, serious losses are caused in regions with extreme climatic conditions. At Tiahualilo Dgo., Mexico, where the pink bollworm has been established longer and causes more damage than anywhere else in North America, the minimum temperatures from 1918 to 1933 ranged between 16° and 26° F., and the maximum from 100° to 114° F., but during 10 of these 16 years did not exceed 102° F. In the Big Bend of Texas the extremes are somewhat greater than in the Laguna district of Mexico, ranging during recent years from 8° to 116° F. At Cairo, Egypt, the minimum temperature is about 25° F., but the maximum reaches 120° F., with several months averaging above 100° F. The pink bollworm causes serious damage in northern China in one of the most northerly cotton-growing regions of the world, where temperatures are low, although the rainfall is light. The rainfall in unirrigated regions, where the pink bollworm occurs, varies from the minimum requirements for cotton production from 80 to 100 inches per year in the Tropics. These extremes of climatic conditions in the regions where the pink bollworm occurs are greater than in any of the cotton-producing areas of the United States.

As to what damage the pink bollworm would cause if introduced ing areas of the United States

As to what damage the pink bollworm would cause if introduced into different cotton sections of the United States it is impossible to say. The United States is in a unique position among the cotton-growing countries in its relation to the pink bollworm. Ever since the first discovery of this insect in continental United States each new infestation discovered has received prompt and vigorous attention, and a continuous fight has been waged to hold it in check and prevent its spread. In other countries the pest was generally distributed before its presence was known by the authorities, or before research or control was started. It is known to be a serious pest in areas that have lower and higher temperatures and that are as humid or as arid as most of our Cotton Belt. In the colder areas, with heavy winter rainfall conditions would be unfavorable for the pink bollworm but in many sections conditions would seem to be more favorable for the worms than in the Big Bend.

The relation of the pink bollworm and boll weevil to the American cotton crop is very important. The United States is the only important cotton-producing country where the boll weevil is a serious pest. The Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimates an serious pest. The Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimates an average annual reduction from full yield caused by the boll weevil at 10.87 percent of the crop, or $200,000,000 annually. The losses caused by the boll weevil in the United States more or less correspond to the losses in other countries from the pink bollworm and we are on a somewhat comparable basis in regard to insect losses. The greatest damage by the boll weevil is to the squares (before bolls are formed) and by the pink bollworm to the bolls themselves. Studies by Rude in Mexico have shown that these two insects will work together in the same field and not compete to any extent against each other. In other words, the establishment of the pink bollworm would not reduce the weevil damage but would simply add to it. In addition the cotton produced would be lowered in grade and quality. American cotton is already receiving keen competition from foreign growths in cost of production and in quality. An additional increase in the cost of production from losses caused by the pink bollworm would still further jeopardize the position of American cotton in the world markets.

markets.

The fact that the Department of Agriculture has been able to cradicate the pink bollworm in Georgia, Florida, Louisiana, eastern Texas, and in the Salt River Valley of Arizona, and the further fact that it has not become a serious pest in New Mexico and Arizona and certain sections of western Texas has had a tendency to cause people interested in the cotton industry to have a feeling of security that may not be justified. There is probably no way that we can be certain just how serious the pink bollworm might become in other parts of the Cotton Belt until it has become established. As a matter of insurance we cannot afford to take the chance of allowing this insect to become established in other regions if this can be prevented.

Following this I hereby offer a boiled-down summation of conclusions reached by Mr. R. E. McDonald, of the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, submitted for the study of the State Wide Cotton Committee of Texas. Mr. McDonald is one of the best qualified and most indefatigable employees and entomologists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

INFORMATION FROM A STATEMENT REGARDING PINK BOLLWORM PREPARED BY MR. R. E. M'DONALD, OF THE BUREAU OF ENTOMOLOGY AND PLANT QUARANTINE, FOR THE STATE-WIDE COTTON COMMITTEE OF TEXAS

QUARANTINE, FOR THE STATE-WIDE COTTON COMMITTEE OF TEXAS

The pink bollworm is the worst pest of cotton in the world and the one most difficult to combat. During the last 20 years the United States Department of Agriculture and cooperating States have been fighting to prevent the establishment of this pest in cotton cultures of the United States. During this period it has gained limited establishment in sections within the main Cotton Belt. As the result of active and intensive work these infestations in the main Cotton Belt have been eliminated. It also gained establishment in cotton cultures along the southern boundary of the United States, contiguous to cotton cultures in Mexico, and quarantine and control operations have been responsible for preventing its spread into new areas from this section.

In the fall of 1936 an infestation was for the first time discovered in the Matamoros-Brownsville section. The source of this infestation is not known. No measures to control this pest were undertaken during the remainder of the crop year except to prevent spread by carriage of material. The 1937 crop carried a slight increase, and in that year an effort was made to have all farmers on both sides of the river clean their fields with indifferent success. There was a tremendous increase in the infestation in the fall of 1938. The effort has been continued to get all farmers on both sides of the river to clean their own fields with some better success than in 1937.

With the infestation in the Matamoros-Brownwille section the than in 1937.

with the infestation in the Matamoros-Brownsville section the pink bollworm is now in a strategic position where it can enter the Cotton Belt over a wide area. Considering the possibility that the moths will be spread by wind drift to other locations unless the infestation is controlled, spread to the main Cotton Belt may occur regardless of any quarantine measures that may be enforced. It would seem that there is only one way to solve the problem and that is to eradicate the pest at its source.

Before going into any suggestions as to methods that may be employed to control or eradicate this pest, it is well enough to review very briefly its life history. The pink bollworm is a moth. Its primary host is cotton, and this is the only plant that needs to be taken into consideration in eradication efforts in this country. The moths emerge in the spring from overwintering larvae. The moths live only a few days after emerging, and if there is not cotton in fruit when the moth emerges it dies without propagating itself.

If there is cotton in fruit, eggs are placed thereon, which develop into full-grown larvae and emerge into moths in 20 to 30 days. This life cycle is repeated over and over during the season. Toward fall, as the nights begin to cool, the worms cease to change into moths and go into hibernation, spinning for themselves cocoons, and perhaps going into the ground. If the winters are extremely cold—that is to say, about zero at intervals—most of these unprotected overwintering larvae will die. In such climates those hibernating in seed can be destroyed by sterilization, and those in other protected situations can be killed by cleaning up waste.

During the growing season when the cotton is fruiting and worms are in the bolls, squares or blooms, there is absolutely nothing that can be done that will have any effect upon the infestation. The two weak spots in the insect's life history are in the fall before the cool nights set in or in the spring before cotton begins to fruit. If the food supply—that is, green cotton—can be cut off before the time of the year for the worms to go into hibernation, they will emerge as moths and die. If cotton planting in the spring is delayed until most of the moths have emerged and died, the pests can thus be reduced year by year until final eradication results. Of course, in milder climates a great many pink bollworms can be killed by destroying crop residues even in the winter when the larvae are in hibernation therein, and in the case of light infestations this may result in eradication; but in such a favorable situation as exists in the lower valley area, or in the heavily infested spots in the Big Bend of Texas and adjacent northern Mexico, such mild measures cannot be depended upon. They would be helpful in connection with other more drastic means. Of course, if an area is free of cotton for a period of a year, good results can be expected, and in most cases there would be complete eradication. However, is free of cotton for a period of a year, good results can be expected, and in most cases there would be complete eradication. However, some larvae live over a longer period than that, and we could never be certain in an area heavily infested that a 1-year non-some larvae live over a longer period than that, and we could never be certain in an area heavily infested that a 1-year non-cotton zone would be completely successful.

In the lower Rio Grande Valley, as stated in the beginning, the problem is much more acute and serious. There are on both sides of the Rio Grande some 400,000 acres of cotton in this valley—250,000 in Texas and 150,000 in Mexico. A noncotton zone on both sides of the river taking in the whole area would undoubtedly effect eradication, especially if continued 2 years. Since this problem is international, it must of necessity be so considered. Mexico is willing to cooperate with us fully in any measures looking to the interests of both countries, and is most heartily cooperating. A noncotton zone of necessity immediately brings heavy losses on the community over which it is placed. There are many intangible losses to the community besides the actual losses to farmers for nonproduction. Among these might be mentioned the losses of processors, handlers, and workers, and the moving away of families indirectly affected by the nonproduction of cotton. However, in the past only losses of farmers have been recognized and paid.

Another plan of trying to handle this situation is to continue what we are now doing, improved in all respects possible. At the present time the Texas law and corresponding laws of Mexico, as interpreted in regulations, require the farmers to clean the fields—that is, kill all the growing cotton—prior to October 1. That is not working out entirely satisfactorily. However, by strengthening the laws and regulations perhaps in time it can be done more satisfactorily than in the past. If, however, in the meantime the pink bollworm spreads over the country, any control may come too late. There is no lack of cooperation. All interests are united in trying every way possible to get the job done, but the unwholesome fact remains that it has not been done as it should have been done. In August the ground is usually dry and hard, and difficult in the extreme to plow. Many cut the stalks in August, expecting to plow when it rains. Then, when it rains it gets too wet, resulting in the stalks sprouting again. Also, when the land is plowed many stalks have roots still hanging and continue to grow. The main trouble can be summed up in a few words. The cost of getting out these stalks quickly and effectively is about $2.65 per acre. Few farmers have that money to spend on the land. If they do have it, they probably do not want to spend it. Hence they try to save, and the result is an indifferent job. Except for those who plant winter crops, the regular farm practices do not call for any work or expense in field cleaning in the fall. In fact, many prefer to have the fields for winter grazing. We have tried to persuade, entice, or compel all the farmers on these 400,000 acres of land to destroy the crop residue in such an excellent manner and early enough to eradicate the worst cotton plague of the world, and the one most tenacious of life. After this effort in the fall of 1937 we had an increase in the pest a hundredfold in 1938. We tried again in 1938, and we tried to improve. The results will be known in 1939. Methods of controlling the pink bollworm must be exact. We are dealing with a terrible plague—one that can outwit the best minds of the world. Therefore, if we place our dependence on slipshod methods, it is altogether probable that we are going to be disappointed.

It has been suggested that funds in sufficient amount be raised to disappointed.

It has been suggested that funds in sufficient amount be raised to step in immediately after picking the cotton with adequate equipment and uproot all cotton on both sides of the river. It would have to be done by two methods: One, by using heavy tractors with heavy middlebusters, taking two rows at a time, and plowing the ground deep enough to uproot the cotton and bury it, regardless of how dry the ground might be. On the lands where tractors would not be practical, grubbing hoes would have to be used to cut the stalks off well below the surface. It is my opinion that if sufficient time should be given for the perfecting of a careful organization to handle such a job it can be largely completed in 2 weeks. In a normal year this would mean the cotton should be destroyed by September 1 or 15.

For the further information of the House, I include herein a statistical table showing the final estimates of production in Mexico, by States, from the years 1925-26 down to and including 1935-36, as well as a table showing the estimates of the acreage and production in the principal cotton-producing area of Mexico (the Laguna district), from which the States of New Mexico, Arizona, and Texas receive their principal infestation of pink bollworm by the high air-lane travel of the pink bollworm moth.

Cotton: Final estimates of production in Mexico, by States, 1925-26 to 1935-36

	N CONTRACTOR	IXMOUN	to III Dates,	478 pound	s neel	NOOT TO		1:10.03	SCULL.
	1925-26	1926-27	1927-28	1928-29	1929-30	1930-31	1931-32	1932-33	1933-34	1934-35	1935-36
North	114, 019	274, 073	128, 446	183, 630	142, 040	98, 099	175, 421	81, 971	235, 604	197, 909	191, 416
Coahuila Chihuahua Durango Nuevo Leon San Luis Potosi	68, 702 12, 755 16, 026 289 160	173, 908 17, 324 56, 023 1, 307	66, 922 8, 317 29, 945 503	115, 396 14, 656 36, 074 253	85, 841 11, 430 28, 122 394	47, 810 12, 605 19, 036 584 76	105, 770 11, 016 42, 797 313	45, 145 7, 946 15, 286 2, 453	99, 435 15, 246 77, 433 8, 807	82, 608 22, 685 30, 798 19, 485	98, 384 21, 216 27, 396 26, 875 277
Tamaulipas	16, 087	25, 511	22, 759	17, 251	16, 253	17, 988	15, 525	11, 141	34, 683	42, 333	17, 268
Gulf	308	288	-278	795	1,411	1, 214	765	424	414	912	1,074
Tabasco Veracruz	9 299	288	278	795	1,411	1, 214	765	424	414	912	1, 074
North Pacific	82, 797	83, 471	48, 640	92, 220	99, 280	73, 483	31, 627	18, 079	22, 918	23, 080	56, 254
Baja California Nayarit Sinaloa Sonora	78, 261 2, 433 404 1, 699	80, 215 359 69 2, 828	46, 214 501 69 1, 856	81, 220 1, 101 120 9, 779	81, 447 862 2, 085 14, 886	60, 880 1, 499 2, 029 9, 075	27, 484 1, 747 613 1, 783	14, 667 851 1, 072 1, 489	18, 363 1, 547 2, 583 425	- 18, 811 1, 725 1, 822 722	44, 276 1, 365 8, 419 2, 193
South Pacific	2, 455	1, 181	1, 105	1, 114	2, 715	4, 183	2, 374	1,010	1, 444	1,024	1, 275
Colima Chiapas. Guerrero Oaxaca	15 63 1, 424 953	1 625 555	10 36 394 665	10 27 436 641	54 9 1,041 1,611	35 6 1, 999 2, 143	9 1, 327 1, 038	2 356 652	41 482 921	331 691	7 7 305 956
Central	897	809	769	701	583	527	39	53	46	48	507
HidalgoJaliscoMichoacaan	28 823 46	123 686	83 686	55 646	98 485	89 438	39	53	46	48	415 92
Grand total	200, 476	359, 822	179, 238	278, 460	246, 029	177, 506	210, 226	101, 537	260, 426	222, 973	250, 526

Source: Boletin Mensual del Departmento de Economica y Estadística; 1925-26 issue of August 1928; 1926-27, November 1927; 1927-28, August 1928; 1928-29, April 1929; 1929-30, May 1930; 1930-31, September 1931; 1931-32, October 1932; 1932-33, November 1933; 1933-34, September 1934; 1934-35, June 1935; 1935-36, March 1938

Cotton: Estimates of acreage and production in Laguna district of Mexico

Area	Production	Source
Acres 169, 937 106, 824 194, 732 150, 302 164, 176 345, 628	Bales (478 pounds) 141, 446 59, 340 175, 853 132, 747 146, 412 176, 594 75, 000	Consular Report, June 10, 1937, No. 123547. Do. Do. Do. Do. Do. Consular Report, Apr. 13, 1938, No. 128641. Consular Report, June
	Acres 169, 937 106, 824 194, 732 150, 302 164, 176	### Bales (478 pounds) 169, 937 141, 446 194, 732 175, 853 150, 302 132, 747 164, 176 146, 417 345, 628 176, 594

Following this I include a restricted estimate of the cotton area in Mexico, including the Laguna district, which is infested by the pink bollworm.

Cotton: Mexico-estimate of 1938-39 crop. by districts strict: Torreon (Laguna)	95, 00

Matamoros	52,00
Don Martin	3,00
Ciudad de Delicias (Chihuahua)	24,00
Ciudad Juarez	16, 00
Mexicali	40,00
Coastal (Guerrero and Veracruz), including States of Sonora and Sinaloa	13,00
Miscellaneous	7,00

Total_______250,000
Report of Consul Stewart, Mexico, June 10, 1938, No. 129817.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, permit me to express my appreciation for the assistance of my colleagues in the Texas delegation, together with my colleague the distinguished gentleman from Arizona, Mr. Murdock, as well as the distinguished gentleman from New Mexico, Mr. Dempsey, in connection with this matter. I desire here and now to make particular mention of the invaluable assistance and advice of my long-time friend, the distinguished, able, and impartial Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Honorable William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, who, together with many other colleagues in the cotton-producing area of the United States, have offered and rendered notable aid in my humble presentation of this all-important problem.

It is my sincere hope that the Members of the House of Representatives will appreciate the inestimable importance of rendering timely and vital assistance looking toward the curb of this scourge of the cottonfields and agent of unemployment in our country when the appropriation bill for the Department of Agriculture comes before this body.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Crawford].

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I desire first to confirm as best I can in this manner the remarks just made by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Kleberg]. I have watched the development of the trouble with the pink bollworm with a great deal of interest. During the last cotton-growing season I also inspected fields in south Texas and found conditions identical with those which the gentleman has just described.

While I do not have time to go into the phase of the cotton subject which I desired to discuss some time this week, I wish to speak about another type of attack which is being made on the cotton growers of this country and which I believe is much more serious, certainly on the basis of the $920,000 required, than the pink bollworm.

Mr. KLEBERG. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. KLEBERG. I desire to thank the gentleman for his contribution. I also desire to say to the committee it has been my observation that the gentleman from Michigan is both observing and constructive in his thoughts with reference to the basic and fundamental questions which are of such vital importance to this country.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I thank the gentleman.

In 1932 the exports of cotton from Brazil amounted to 2,387 bales each of 478 pounds net. In 1936 the exports of cotton from Brazil amounted to 921,943 bales. Based upon reports I have received from the Brazilian cotton fields in the last 2 weeks, it appears Brazil alone will have for export from the crop that is now being harvested in excess of 1,500,000 bales of cotton this year; and within the next 3 to 5 years Brazil will have for export a minimum of 5,000,000 bales of cotton.

So when you tie that story in all of its ramifications up with the destructive effect of the pink bollworm and with the fact there are 13,000,000 bales of cotton now on hand, with only 2,000,000 bales of cotton available in the free channels of trade during the next few months, it is indeed apparent the cotton South is now on its knees. This serves notice to the rest of this country, particularly the automobile industry, that purchasing power in the southern area of the United States must necessarily decline. Unless we break the band that now surrounds 13,000,000 bales of cotton in this country so some of this cotton can move into the channels of trade, we will have a disaster of far-reaching consequences in this country within the next 12 or 15 months.

VIRGIN ISLANDS

Mr. Chairman, I desire to address my remarks now to a portion of this bill. I call the attention of the committee to that part of the hearings, beginning on page 952 of the bill, which pertains to the Virgin Islands. As you travel from Key West, Fla., to Cuba, to Santo Domingo, and to Puerto Rico, you come upon the Virgin Islands of St. Thomas, St. John, and St. Croix. There we have an American colony which we acquired from the Danish Government in 1916 because we feared it might go into the hands of Germany and become a military or naval base. The conclusion of our Government was that we should own and control that little empire, consisting of three islands. We have in these three islands approximately 25,000 American citizens, and sometimes we are inclined to forget they are under our Government.

In recent years we have been carrying on a great experiment there in the form of a "planned economy," which is not working out satisfactorily to our people in this country who are watching the situation, or to the people of the Virgin Islands. In reading these hearings you should go behind the scenes and get the story behind the story, because there is one to be had.

The Government went down there a few years ago and started the conversion of the islands back into a sugar plantation. The islands are subjected to extended droughts, which very often occur and run from 12 to 18 months. A drought has been in effect the last several months and has cut down the production of sugar and sugarcane. In addition, there is another drought which has been working against the operations in the islands in the form of a cut in the price of sugar, and this is described by the president of the Virgin Islands Co., which is the planned economy corporation operating in the islands as a Government undertaking. This is the testimony of Mr. Brown, of the Virgin Islands Co.:

The severe drought of 1938 caused a heavy reduction in the amount of sugar obtained from the St. Croix acreage planted in sugarcane. The economic condition in St. Croix is a difficult one, with the sugar industry confronted with very low sugar prices, very high freight rates to New York, very low sugar yields per acre—about 1 ton of sugar per acre for St. Croix, which has no irrigation, versus from 4 to about 7 tons of sugar per acre for Puerto Rico—very high export duty on raw sugar shipped from St. Croix (Congress reduced export duty from $8 per ton to $6 per ton, versus no export duty at all for Puerto Rico)—

Or Hawaii, and no export taxes of any kind on sugar in the United States, which competes with the Virgin Islands sugar.

When we enacted the National Labor Relations Act we extended its provisions to the Virgin Islands, and this immediately followed the application of two wage increases, which had previously been put into operation by the Government following its initiation of the "planned economy" program.

So as you read the testimony you find that exceedingly heavy increases in wages have applied. Then we have our theoretical set-up of planned economy in the islands wherein we went in and recovered land and started homesteading financed with Government funds. We established an ideal planned economy on sugar. We established an ideal planned economy on the fixation of wages at a minimum. We established an ideal planned economy with reference to the setting of prices through quota allotments on sugar, and all of this is destroying the economic life of the Virgin islanders, and the man who runs may read.

There is another story in the Virgin Islands. Apparently, they have become the dumping ground for political patron-You will find that the judiciary of the Virgin Islands has been taken over by the Department of the Interior and you will find that the Virgin islanders are now pleading with the Attorney General in the hope that he will take back under his wing the judiciary of the Virgin Islands to the end that they will not have to suffer as a result of this change, you might say, in the form of government.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield.

Mr. CULKIN. Does this crop of judiciary supplement the "Honest Harold" crop of rum there?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Not only does it supplement it, it is a part of it. There is no question about it.

Mr. CULKIN. It stimulates the flow of decisions, I presume?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Listen to this, if I may read editorials from their newspapers. That is a simple country down there, but the people are intelligent, white and black. I know them personally. Their intelligence—the leadersranks with the intelligence of this House. That was a Danish empire, you might say, and they are educated and they are trained. They are shrewd traders, they are students of government, and they know what is right and what is wrong. Just listen to this editorial in their leading news-

We find that our readers deeply resent the remarks made Governor Cramer before the Appropriations Subcommittee in Washington relative to the tax situation in the islands. Also in matters of sanitation, health, and what not. As a matter of fact, there is little he has said that has met their approval.

We are not surprised at the Governor. We know what he's capable of saying and doing even before he became the chief executive of the islands. Those who tried to punish us for expressing our frank opinion about him through our columns and otherwise have found that the chickens have come home to roost practically in What is intolerable is his awful gall. When he's in a hole he turns for help to the men whom he has just kicked. Better representation by any impostor who will treat you as a human being, instead of by a man who thinks he can use you today and kick

you tomorrow

That is just what Governor Cramer has been doing to the people of these islands, more especially to the members of the municipal councils.

Then the editorial goes on and calls the attention of the public to other matters.

Here is a second editorial which says:

During the past week the public was given a good helping of the "nice" things Governor Cramer said about the people of these islands before the House Appropriations Subcommittee in Washington.

It is to be hoped the public has been following up the installments of his remarks as carried in our columns. There can be no excuse for passing them up unless one has already read them directly from a copy of the hearings.

The more we think of the Governor's remarks, the more we are convinced that he did not expect these remarks to be spread before the eyes of the people of the Virgin Islands. It cannot be con-ceived he meant to insult them, flaunt their conscientious reac-tions to his half-baked theories, and otherwise shock their sensi-bilities in such a libelous and scandalous manner.

bilities in such a libelous and scandalous manner.

Such tactics are unbecoming of the high office of a Governor. He has reduced the status of the people under his charge to that of vassals who, ground down under the heels of their oppressor, have no legitimate means of obtaining redress for their grievances, or righting the wrongs perpetrated upon them.

Governor Cramer has given us to understand that we can talk and scream as much as we like, call him all sorts of names, but we cannot force him to respect us, or desist from any course of action, however wrong, for we don't pay his salary and can't fire him.

One might as well despair the possibility of obtaining justice and fair dealing under the present system. What we have is an oligarchy, willful, wasteful, obdurate, and malicious, which we are expected to love and revere as long as we are obligated to it for money and privileges to eke out an existence.

Another editorial states:

The Governor should be told that turn-about is fair play; that he cannot fool all the people all the time; that if he had had any practical business experience he would talk and act differently.

I ask the committee to study the many pages of testimony in the hearings and get the story back of these economic developments. It ties into a further situation which we have in this country and which, as you analyze it, becomes amazing, and it is about to be put into operation.

YELLOW AND BLUE MONEY

I say it becomes amazing because of its ramifications, and this goes back to cotton, it goes back to sugar, it goes back to all of these commodities which are construed as "surplus commodities."

We have a Commodity Credit Corporation; we have a Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, and we have a Dairy Products Marketing Association which has been set up for taking surplus butter out of the market. Did you folks know that we are about to put into circulation in this country two new types of money, yellow money, blue money-yellow chips, blue chips? Go to your Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, go to your Department of Agriculture, and get the story back of this.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. You will find that through our planned economy, whether it goes to the Virgin Islands or to continental United States, we have brought into operation what is known as surplus commodities, what is known as the W.P.A., what is known as the relief program. We now propose to issue to relief workers a check which can be converted, for instance, into $30 of currency and then give him $20 in yellow money, which makes a total of $50 for his pay period, and then issue him a bonus of $10 in blue money. The plan, which has been tentatively announced, and subject to change, permits the relief recipient to collect out of a $50 pay check $30 in currency, $20 in yellow money, and $10 in blue money.

That is a 20-percent increase in wages, subsidized by a blue check or a blue certificate or a blue stamp. These checks I have made up and hold in my hand here are symbolic, they are not replicas. We have to illustrate this to comprehend it. The farmers of this country sell to the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation primary produced goods on a depressed market. This blue money purchases goods designated "surpluses," through the retail distributing units and the subsidy does not go to the farmer, it does not give him the direct benefit of the new blue-chip money which is to be issued.

Mr. GORE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield.

Mr. GORE. I take it that the gentleman is not speaking without having verified the facts, because I have a very high opinion of him as he well knows.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I have been verifying the facts for 3 days

Mr. GORE. The gentleman says that this plan has been tentatively set down. By whom?

Mr. CRAWFORD. The gentleman will find it in yesterday morning's front page of the New York Journal of Commerce. If the gentleman would call up the Department of Agriculture and the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, he will be able to verify what I am saying. I wish to make it clear that I am here analyzing the uncompleted plan. I am not attacking it. We have 13,-000,000 bales of surplus cotton, we have millions of bushels of wheat and corn and tons of raisins and prunes and other commodities; a vast quantity of turpentine.

God only knows what we will designate as "surpluses" tomorrow when these chips go into operation. The Government, through its agencies, is to designate from time to time what commodities shall be construed as surplus, and what the blue chip shall be traded for by the recipient.

Mr. GORE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield fur-

Mr. CRAWFORD. In a moment. Suppose we hold the 13,000,000 bales of surplus commodities, and under section 32 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act suppose we hold that the Surplus Commodities Corporation shall proceed to process cotton, wool, mohair. The retailer who accepts this money in payment of goods that he releases to the relief recipient, takes these chips or the certificates and deposits them in the bank. They then become demand deposits and they enter into the Fractional Reserve System of our monetary scheme of things. They must be taken up in one way or another, redeemed by some Government agency. That particular plan has not yet been worked out. They propose to initiate this first in say six cities. They have an idea they may introduce this new money into a city with a population not to exceed 250,000 to 300,000, and its population must be not less than say twenty-five to fifty thousand, to see what happens. I do not know where this will lead to. I am calling it to your attention.

Mr. GORE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. GORE. The gentleman's argument is rather interesting, and, may I say, intriguing, but I am wondering if he would name me the gentleman who made this announcement.

Mr. CRAWFORD. It is announced through the public press.

Mr. GORE. Does the gentleman recall what official made the announcement?

Mr. CRAWFORD. If the gentleman will go to Mr. Perkins, of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, I believe it is, and to Mr. Hasselman, they can give him the facts.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Yes.

Mr. RICH. The gentleman is speaking of new yellow and blue chips. If we continue to issue new kinds of currency in blue chips and yellow chips, what relation eventually will that bear in our monetary system to the old form of German marks which I hold in my hand, as to their value, and also to the $20-every-Thursday note that I hold that is going to be paid to the people in California if we continue to issue money in the respect the gentleman is talking about in the form of these blue and yellow chips?

Mr. CRAWFORD. There are no limitations to a program of this kind, as I see it, based on a study of history, when it once starts. What will keep this body from declaring that cotton is a surplus commodity subject to redemption through blue chips? What will keep any legislative body from doing it? Who will defend us from the pressure? Under what circumstances and upon what basis will the departments of government announce each Monday morning the types of commodities which will constitute surplus commodities for that week redeemable in blue chips, which are a premium—keep this in mind—through the retail establishments? That does not give the cotton grower the buying power necessarily.

Does it put it in at the bottom? Not at all. It puts it in at the top. Who benefits? Of course the food-distributing industry wants the surplus commodities distributed through food channels, and I do not condemn them for that. Will the W. P. A. worker object to having his wages increased 20 percent, a $50 pay check being $60, by receiving a premium in benefits in blue chips? I do not think he will object to that. But this is to be money; and when you put the stamp of approval on something that is called money and send it out through the channels of commerce, you have indeed done something. Would you call this a commodity dollar? Would you call it monetization of surplus commodities?

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield.

Mr. HAWKS. That could not be an admission on the part of governmental officials that the A. A. A. program is a complete failure, could it?

Mr. CRAWFORD. As I say, this has so many ramifications that there is no end as to what you can apply this to if you will move it in different directions. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has again expired.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Hook] such time as he may desire.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, the Democratic administration has been most considerate of the needs of our educational and research institutions and especially with regard to the land-grant colleges. The Federal Government has been very generous in its attempt to assist those great institutions to function properly in the interest of all of the people.

During the coming 2 years a federally supported building and improvement program of over $6,000,000 will be in operation at the Michigan State College. This is the largest federally supported building program in the history of that great institution. It is for this reason that I rise on the floor of this House this afternoon to discuss some of the things that have been happening with regard to the expenditure of money in that institution. I think we, as Members of Congress, should be interested in any program that is assisted by Federal finance. We should know that the money that we appropriate for that purpose is placed in the proper hands and administered by individuals in the interest of the institutions that we hope to assist. It is of greatest importance that the vast expenditure authorized shall be made under the direction of men who will protect these funds from graft and racketeering.

The administration of the Michigan State College, our second largest educational institution, is of particular concern to the people of Michigan and I believe we, as Members of Congress, should be interested because of the Federal aid extended. Research and educational work in agriculture and home economics and applied science and the State-wide agricultural extension service are under the direction of the State board of agriculture that governs the Michigan State College. It is a primary objective of the Democratic Party to provide ample means for the work of this great institution. It is also our objective to free the Michigan State College from the political exploitation and financial racketeering that became firmly rooted during the administration of former Governor Brucker under the McPherson-Brcdy leadership of a hand-picked board of agriculture. The strangle hold of this political combination has not yet been

In 1934, before the Congress of the United States, I called attention to the grievous state of affairs existing at the Michigan State College, due to the protected manipulations of those responsible for the illegal expenditure, misuse, and in some instances theft of over $250,000, according to the report of the Michigan State Senate investigating committee. I attributed the prostitution of our courts and of the then State attorney general's office resulting in the protection of perjury and theft at Michigan State College to the intriguing influence of the men then controlling our State, particularly the Brucker-McPherson-Brody combination. The facts brought out by the Michigan State Senate investigating committee and by myself on the floor of Congress, the most public rostrum in the United States, have never been challenged in the slightest degree by these political exploiters or involved officials at the Michigan State College.

Since the recent outbreak of undulant fever, causing 45 students to contract this dangerous disease and the death of 1 student, I have made further investigations of the methods employed by the profiteers and faculty of Michigan State College in the corrupt under-cover use of funds of that institution. Eight months ago I wrote a letter to President R. S. Shaw asking him whether or not members of the faculty-Dean of Veterinary Ward Giltner, Dean Emmons, Treasurer Schepers, and others-continued to rent farms that they owned to the college for the purpose of pasturing cattle affected with undulant fever in animal disease research projects. Driving these cattle from college paddocks across the farm lane to these faculty-owned farms, I claimed. caused the herds and flocks of the college to be infected. During the past 6 years over 40 cases of undulant fever among faculty, townspeople, and students have occurred previous to the recent outbreak. The illegal rental of faculty-owned land for undulant fever investigations was one of the things that was investigated by "Stalwart Republican Judge" Leland W. Carr, through a one-man grand jury, and Republican State Senator Joseph Baldwin, appointed by former Governor Brucker to serve as a special assistant attorney general. These things were whitewashed and misrepresented to the public in the college case.

President R. S. Shaw did not answer my recent official inquiry in regard to the isolation of this dread disease, undulant fever, as attempted by the dean of agriculture in 1932, nor did he answer my inquiry at the same time in regard to the results of the experiments of the Michigan State College with a proprietary kelp feed of which Clark L. Brody, member of the board of agriculture, has sold thousands of tons to Michigan farmers at three times its feed value as sole agent for this feed in Michigan.

Secretary Hannah informed me that the Michigan State College had conducted no experiments with this feed, yet I am authoritatively informed that the Michigan State College, for the past 7 years, has conducted experiments with this feed with cattle, hogs, and poultry and has proved it to be grossly misrepresented to Michigan farmers. The McPherson-Brody influence in 1932 prevented these facts from being given to the public, and since then, with Clark L. Brody, the State salesman of this feed, continuing on the board of agriculture, no publication has gone forth from the Michigan experiment station, or through the Extension Service, warning farmers against the use of this spuriously misrepresented feed known as Manamar. The Ohio Experiment Station, Cornell University, and seven other experiment stations, not dominated by such political influences as the McPherson-Brody gang, have exposed this feed racket to the farmers of their State and the Nation.

During my investigation into this state of affairs that I consider of interest to the Federal Government and the people of the United States I was unable to get much of a check on the misuse of the funds although at one time the officials of the Michigan State College, after inquiry by me, stated that the questions were so controversial that they would rather not put them in writing. After further correspondence they finally admitted the truth of a great many of these statements. Having further checked into this matter I have secured information from the Office of the Experiment Stations of the United States Department of Agriculture that questionable deals in land or with the feeds handled by Clark L. Brody were removed from the Federal-State joint account and charged to State accounts or to a special fund administered directly by President R. S. Shaw in the sum, I am informed, of about $125,000. This enormous fund was built up. I am informed, by withholding raises to deserving faculty members. I presume this is the reason why the faculty at the Michigan State College receives less than is paid for staff members of corresponding grades at neighboring institutions of like status. No wonder discontent and dry rot has set in at our great pioneer land-grant college, the Michigan State College, at Lansing, Mich. This money is not directly appropriated by specific action of the Michigan Legislature or by Therefore, President Shaw does not have to account for the details of its expenditure to Federal or State agencies. In this way the purposes for which the Federal and State money is appropriated are defeated.

I claim that this is a hush fund. This hush fund was set up beginning in 1930 when the McPherson-Brody combination dominated the State board of agriculture and was all powerful in Michigan politics. I found during my research work personally that a military theft of approximately $8,600 was denied by the board of agriculture and officials of the college before Judge Leland Carr's one-man grand jury. It was misrepresented by Joseph Baldwin in his whitewash investigation. The equivalent of this theft, however, was paid by the college to the United States military authorities although the theft was denied by the college officials, as were the land deals and faculty-controlled bank deals and the music racket that was subsequently disclosed.

Another instance of the use of this so-called hush fund according to the official investigator of the United States Department of Agriculture was when President R. S. Shaw drew a check of $3,200 on this secret fund to the credit of the United States Department of Agriculture after the investigator objected to the fact that a son of Dr. Robert Snyder, a former illustrious president of the Michigan State College, who was working under the orders of Dean Ward Giltner, dean of veterinary of the Michigan State College, truthfully answered the investigator's inquiry and informed him that he, the son of Dr. Robert Snyder, had been doing service work, this work being of a private nature on private projects and on private herds under the direction and by the orders of his superior, Dean Ward Giltner. This work was not authorized in connection with the Federal grant.

In order to straighten out the Federal Government after they had been caught in their neat little trick, President R. S. Shaw, as before mentioned, drew a check payable to the United States Government which immediately took it out of the hands of the Federal investigator. This employee told the truth about his work and admitted that as a Federal public servant he was being used to further private interests and working on private interests while on the Government pay roll. However, it was he who was discharged and not his grafting superior. This young man was discharged by the president of the State College. At that time this research worker was suffering from undulant fever contracted on the Michigan State College campus.

From this so-called hush fund disguised payments of taxpayers' money were made to well-known politicians such as Fred Woodworth, Republican politician, and to Gifford Patch, who was one of the tools of the McPherson-Brody combination. It is my understanding that Gifford Patch was on the public pay roll as an extension specialist. This money was used to line up farmers and to lobby in the Michigan Legislature against a fair investigation of the state of affairs at the Michigan State College.

In the interest of the Michigan State College, its service to the student body and to the public, and especially to the farm population of the State of Michigan, and on behalf of the honest majority of the faculty of the Michigan State College, I intend to go to the bottom of this graft and protection of graft at this institution and call upon the citizens of Michigan to aid by electing the Democratic candidates, Mr. Halsted and Mr. Lockwood, as members of the State board of agriculture.

Mr. Downing, former member of the State board of agriculture, has lent a great deal toward helping to clean up this sore state of affairs. He assisted me in my investigation and insisted on honesty and integrity on the State board.

The Republican convention affronted the intelligence and decency of the citizens of Michigan by again nominating Melville B. McPherson as a candidate for the State board of agriculture, in spite of his proven record in political connivance and in aiding and protecting educational racketeers and academic swindlers during his service as a member of that board. Apparently the Fitzgerald-McKay-McPherson political machine is little changed from the old Brucker-McKay-McPherson machine that was turned out of office.

I have faith that the people of Michigan have sufficient interest in good government and in eradicating such methods and connivance from the Michigan State College not to return to office Melville B. McPherson or any other member of the board with known records as political exploiters.

I beseech the people of the State of Michigan to elect to the State board of agriculture candidates whose hands are unstained and whose abilities are unquestioned.

We who are interested in the proper expenditure of Federal funds and interested in building up the great land-grant colleges should be in a position to know that when we appropriate money for such purposes that it will be properly spent by honest people.

It may be of interest to a number of the Members of this House to know that in certain other States of the United States practically the same conniving is carried on. If they will take the time to check with the Office of the Experiment Stations of the United States Department of Agriculture they will find similar conditions existing with regard to these secret hush funds.

It is of great importance that the vast expenditures of money by the Federal Government sent to these land-grant colleges shall be under the direction of men of integrity, men who will protect these funds from connivance and trickery, men who will keep these land-grant colleges on a high place and plane in this Nation in the interest of the student body and in the interest of education. If this is done in the State of Michigan, and the proper men are elected to the State board of agriculture, the Michigan State College will be returned to its high place among the land-grant colleges of this Nation.

It may be of further interest to note that in 1934 I made public a full investigation of the fact that the dean of veterinary of the Michigan State College and certain other faculty members were renting farms that they owned to the college and moving diseased cattle back and forth to their farms. This is an example of criminal negligence and gross avarice. I found that in 1932 the dean of agriculture at that time, Mr. Joseph F. Cox, had secured the authority from the Department of Agriculture to spend $25,000 with which to buy a farm and properly isolate research work with cattle and other animals directed toward the control of undulant fever. I found that the dean of veterinary, Dean Ward Giltner, Jacob Schepers, along with Dean L. C. Emmons, as trustee, had taken a piece of land for a farm from the college-controlled bank of East Lansing and frustrated Dean Cox's efforts to protect the Michigan State College and the State by illegally trying to sell to the Michigan State College this unsuited piece of property. They were not able to sell the property, but they later rented it to the college. The McPherson-Brody-Burkey combination knew all about this transaction and protected these exploiters.

To my knowledge, the dangerous research work with contagious abortion with cattle resulting in undulant fever in human beings has never been properly isolated at the Michigan State College and the blood of those who died from this dread malady is on the hands of those responsible, the college officials and politicians whose avarice and political machination has resulted in this exemple of flagrant failure in their duty as public servants.

As a Michigan citizen, proud of our State college, I was shocked to read, on February 5, 1939, in the New York Times and in the Washington Star the account of an outbreak of the dread disease of undulant fever at the Michigan State College that caused the death early in February of one student and jeopardizing the lives of many more. It is my understanding that the officials of the college are attempting to place the blame in the laboratory. I feel certain and charge the fact to be that it is the result of political exploitation and the renting of this unsuited farm to the college by college officials and those responsible for the administration of college business.

The farmers of Michigan, those interested in the great field of agriculture and home economics, should rise up and demand a thorough accounting of this institution. I believe that if political exploitation is divorced from this institution it would again be placed among the great educational institutions of the United States.

There are many, many other things that I intend to cover a little later that will show to the farmers of Michigan that it is their duty to become acquainted with the facts as they exist. I feel certain that this is of such vital interest to the great field of agriculture that the farm population will interest itself to such an extent that men of integrity, honesty, and ability will be placed in that institution in the interest of good government. Farmers and citizens of Michigan should break this political combination. This can only be done by united effort. It may take an amendment to the present law to put a stop to this thing, and if so, I intend to present such an amendment. At this time, however, it is a political question. My advice is to cast your lot with the party that is making an honest effort to remove those responsible for this sad state of affairs. The Democratic Party is your only hope at the present time. The farmers should know their enemies and act accordingly. [Applause.]

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. Carter] such time as he desires.

RECLAMATION'S BIPARTISAN ORIGIN

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, today presents an excellent opportunity to recall how the Federal Government came to embark on a national policy of reclamation.

While reclamation in its physical aspects affects only the area in the western third of the country, its operations carry benefits to every State of the Midwest, the East, and the South; and all of the 130,000,000 people in this Nation have a vital interest in the development and stabilization of the area west of the one hundredth meridian.

Reclamation has never been a partisan or a sectional issue. Theodore Roosevelt, the first President to advocate the policy, was an easterner, who had lived in the West and had first-hand knowledge of its needs and opportunities. With the support of Democrats as well as Republicans, he led the Congress of the United States in 1902 into enactment of the reclamation law that laid the foundation for perhaps the most constructive undertaking since Thomas Jefferson originated the idea of internal improvements in the early part of the nineteenth century.

Previous to Theodore Roosevelt's accession to the Presidency on the death of the lamented McKinley, the three leading political parties of the day endorsed reclamation as a national policy. In the national conventions of 1900, the Democratic, the Republican, and the Silver Republican Parties pledged their support to the undertaking.

While conservation and utilization of the natural resources of the West were a major objective, business and industrial interests of the country saw opportunities in the development of the region. They realized that broader home markets for the products of the factories of the Fast would follow and that increased consumption of foodstuffs would effectually prevent competition with agriculture of older sections of the country.

That was the view of Theodore Roosevelt expressed in his first message to the Congress in December 1901, who saw in the policy not merely the irrigation of agricultural lands but the creation of homes as a contribution to the upbuilding of the Nation.

NATIONAL ADMINISTRATIONS SUPPORT RECLAMATION

Every national administration, beginning with that of Theodore Roosevelt, and regardless of its political complexion, has thrown its support to reclamation.

In Senate Document No. 36, on National Irrigation Policy, Its Development and Significance, you will find reference to expressions by six Presidents of the United States, all endorsing the undertaking.

In 1910, 4 years after the first project had made water available, President William Howard Taft gave his commendation

In 1921 President Warren G. Harding not only urged expansion of reclamation but emphasized the importance of using the limited water resources of the West for both irrigation and the development of electric power.

President Calvin Coolidge, in 1924, declared:

It is my purpose to unremittingly stimulate and encourage the development of these projects by every authority of the Federal Government.

In 1930 President Herbert Hoover wrote western Governors in conference at Salt Lake City that reclamation "had been the cause of adding much wealth to the Nation."

The present occupant of the White House has lost no opportunity to show his recognition of the importance of reclamation and of the need for its continuance.

Present-day conditions, President Franklin D. Roosevelt has emphasized, makes reclamation even more vital to the West and the Nation than it was when President Theodore Roosevelt threw his energies and leadership into the establishment of the policy.

WHAT IS THE INTEREST OF THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT?

The question is frequently asked why the Federal Government should be concerned with the development of the West. One major reason is that in the 11 States of the Mountain and Pacific group, the United States owns more than 50 percent of the land area and controls vast water supplies, as well as other natural resources.

As far back as the administration of Thomas Jefferson a policy of internal improvements in the interest of conservation was inaugurated, and in the administration of Andrew Jackson funds from the Federal Treasury were appropriated to the States for public improvements.

WHY IRRIGATION IS NECESSARY IN THE WEST

The Department of Agriculture reports that between 15 and 20 inches of rain, depending on summer temperature, are necessary during the growing season for farming without irrigation. In the arid and semiarid regions west of the one hundredth meridian, less than 20 inches can be expected during the whole of a normal year.

By contrast to the eastward, the rainfall is generally adequate for crop production and averages around 40 inches annually in most areas.

Federal reclamation projects are located in the areas receiving less than 20 inches annually, and virtually all irrigation in the United States is confined to this section of the

If 20 inches of rainfall, or even 15 inches, could be counted on during the growing season for crops, irrigation might not be necessary, but in some sections the precipitation is as low as 3 inches during an entire year. During the growing season, in most sections, no more than 8 to 10 inches can be expected; in others the precipitation is much less. In only a few tillable areas, outside of the high mountains and in a limited area on the northern Pacific coast, can as much as 15 inches be anticipated.

The records of the Weather Bureau of the Department of Agriculture, as revealed by two illustrations in Senate Document No. 36, show that the moisture that does fall in the arid and semiarid regions is unfavorably distributed so far as agriculture is concerned.

Consequently, conservation of the scant water supplies through storage and their distribution during the growing season is essential to stabilized farming in the area west of the one hundredth meridian. Irrigation is the only means of providing for the close settlement of the rural areas of more than one-third of the land area of continental United States.

MULTIPLE PURPOSES OF RECLAMATION

Much emphasis has been laid by critics of the Federal policy on that phase of reclamations which had to do with bringing new agricultural lands into production with the assertions that the policy contributes to the distress of farmers in other sections of the country.

When that charge is made the full facts are not revealed. In 1937 the acreage actually brought into cultivation by Federal reclamation projects was only one-half of 1 percent of the entire cultivated area in the United States.

As a matter of fact, bringing new land into cultivation is but one objective. In my own State of California 90 percent of reclamation is directed toward providing supplemental water for areas in established agricultural sections which are threatened with disaster by a shortage of supplies from systems created by private capital.

In 1937 reclamation projects provided a full supply of water for 1,725,000 acres and supplemental supplies for 1,389,000 acres.

A glance at the program of the Bureau of Reclamation, embracing projects that are now under way, reveals that the ultimate acreage to be benefited by supplemental water supplies will be larger than the area that will have been brought into cultivation more than 20 years hence.

The facts are the maximum area within projects constructed from 1903 and included with completion of the present program, probably in 1962, will be 4,666,819 acres. Compare this with 5,256,443 acres that will have been provided with supplemental water.

Reclamation has spread the benefits of Federal activities by the development of hydroelectric power as incidental to irrigation works but without supplanting coal as a fuel. In the 11 Mountain and Pacific States in 1937 electric public utilities consumed only 2 percent of the coal used in the production of electric energy for public use in the United States.

RECLAMATION CROPS AND COMPETITION

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration of the Department of Agriculture points out "how insignificant from a competitive standpoint is the wheat, cotton, and corn production" on reclamation projects by comparing the yields on this limited acreage with those of the Nation at large. It cited that in 1936 the wheat crop on reclamation land was only seven-tenths of 1 percent of the Nation's production, cotton was 1½ percent, and corn less than one-tenth of 1 percent.

As a matter of fact, the trend has been toward decreased production of these three crops on reclamation projects, compared with areas planted in the latter twenties. No tobacco is grown on irrigated land and relatively few hogs are produced in the West.

Less than one-fourth of 1 percent of the country's total acreage in corn, wheat, and cotton was represented by land brought into cultivation by reclamation operations in 1937.

Products of approximately 50 percent of the acreage of reclamation project land are fed to livestock in the immediate areas. The remainder, principally specialty varieties, are consumed largely in the West and can be marketed eastward only when the produce of farms near the great consuming centers is not in season.

The distance of 1,000 to 3,000 miles from reclamation projects to the big cities of the Midwest, South, and East serves as a virtual tariff barrier that precludes competition when the truck farmer nearby can fill the demand.

In discussing reclamation crop production and surpluses it is informative to note the imports of agricultural products and their effect on American agriculture.

During 1935, 1936, and 1937 imports of wheat, corn, and cotton and their byproducts displaced annually 27 times the American acreage that reclamation projects have brought into cultivation.

NATIONAL BENEFITS FROM RECLAMATION

When you bear in mind that reclamation projects do not add to the distress of the farmers of other sections of the country but provide a market for agricultural as well as manufactured products of the East, Midwest, and South some idea of the national benefits arising from reclamation may be secured.

Take the record of a typical project, west of the Rocky Mountains, as an example. In 1937 the Boise project in Idaho alone received by railroad 300 carloads of foodstuffs from nearly a score of States outside of the reclamation area.

As the West grows no tobacco and does not produce sufficient cotton for its regional needs, the planters of the South find their surpluses in these commodities reduced by the market for the reclamation States.

The factories of 30 States of the Midwest, of the East, and the South shipped nearly 2,000 carloads of manufactured products to the Boise project in that one year. Automobiles from Michigan and other States, farm machinery, building material, furniture, electrical supplies, household equipment, wearing apparel, and general merchandise were included among the commodities.

Conservative estimates have it that the reclamation project areas alone provide a wholesale market worth on the average of $200,000,000 a year for the farms and factories of the Midwest, the East, and the South.

Typical project reports show that 75 percent of the income of the farmers is expended for the agricultural and manufactured products of the areas outside of the reclamation States.

Theodore Roosevelt predicted the reclamation and settlement of the arid lands of the West would "enrich every section of our country just as the settlement of the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys brought prosperity to the Atlantic States." Results confirm his prediction.

CONTRIBUTION TO WEST AS A MARKET

While the reclamation projects represent only a relatively small area in the West, their contribution to its development has been far-reaching. From the time of the passage of the reclamation law in 1902, the population of the 11 States of the Mountain and Pacific groups has increased 300 percent, outstripping the agricultural production.

Some idea of the market which the West as a whole provides for industrial and agricultural products may be gleaned from the requirements for hogs and pork products produced in the Midwest. Based on official figures, estimates are that the average annual purchases of live hogs, processed pork, and corn products approaches $210,000,000, which goes to the farmers and meat packers of the Central States.

Cotton requirements of the West, after deducting the relatively small volume produced in the area, average more than $97,000,000 annually.

Automobile shipments exceed $200,000,000 annually, and other industrial products represent relatively large amounts.

The purchasing power represented by crop values of reclamation land has been more stable than the American export trade with most foreign nations.

The average annual crop values from 1934 to 1937 were exceeded by the export trade of the United States with only four countries: United Kingdom, Canada, France, and Japan.

Crop values on Federal projects from 1934 to 1937 averaged $110,145,198, an amount exceeding the value of exports to the Philippines, to Argentina, to Brazil, to China, and to all the Central American republics combined. From 1928 to 1937 the value of American exports to Brazil decreased nearly 50 percent, while the value of project crops decreased less than 20 percent.

These crop values do not include the income of settlers from livestock, poultry, and dairy products.

DISTRIBUTION OF CONSTRUCTION EXPENDITURES

The charge has frequently been made that indicates a belief in some quarters that appropriations for the construction of reclamation projects are expended in the immediate area or the States in which the projects are located. Nothing could be much further from the fact.

Facing page 24 of Senate Document No. 36 is a map illustrating the distribution of expenditures for the construction of Grand Coulee and Boulder Dams. Purchases of material were made in 46 States and the District of Columbia.

Based on analyses of reports of the National Industrial Conference Board, the Department of Labor, and other official agencies, 45.6 percent of the costs of the Central Valley project in my State of California will be expended in other States.

In building the All-American Canal in southern California 3,368 carloads of material and equipment were provided by industrial States of the Midwest, South, and East.

The benefits from construction expenditures are not confined to any one State or even to the immediate regions in which projects are located. The entire Nation benefits.

NO CONFLICT WITH LAND RETIREMENT, CROP CONTROL, OR SOIL CONSERVATION

Reclamation does not conflict with programs involving land retirement, crop control, or soil conservation.

In fact, a major objective of reclamation is conservation of productive soils through providing moisture by irrigation.

The inconsequential areas brought into cultivation that are planted to wheat, corn, and cotton—less than one-fourth of 1 percent of the national total in these crops—demonstrates how little reclamation contributes to the production of staple crops of which the United States has exportable surpluses.

Land retirement provides for the abandonment of land uneconomically farmed. All reports agree there are many millions of acres of submarginal lands incapable of producing crops that will provide support for families.

Reclamation, on the other hand, seeks to provide a few farmers with the best quality and type of land available, with security in water supply. Newly irrigated land brought into cultivation is more than offset by retirements of poor land.

In the 17 Western States of the arid and semiarid regions the land planning committee of the National Resources Board has estimated there are more than 40,000,000 acres that should be retired from farms, of which 10,607,000 acres are in crops. Up to March 1938 there has been retired in the Great Plains States alone more than 5.400,000 acres of farm lands—an area greater than will have been brought into cultivation when the reclamation program is completed 20 years hence.

WHY IS THERE A DEMAND FOR RECLAMATION?

In addition to the need for supplemental water for established areas already irrigated, every State in the West is faced with a demand for newly irrigated land by families that have migrated from the drought areas of the Great Plains States or from other sections of the country, where readjustments of agricultural life have forced thousands of families to move.

In the seven far Western States alone, from 1934 to 1937, there were 58,400 families from the drought areas, of whom it had been possible to settle less than 3,000 on land where they would have reasonable opportunity to become self-sustaining. The remaining 55,000, now doubtless increased, are seeking a precarious existence through seasonal agricultural employment or are wholly on relief.

The Department of Agriculture, through Under Secretary M. L. Wilson, has estimated that 20,000 additional families from the Great Plains States will be forced to move under a land-readjustment program, and most of these will doubtless migrate westward.

While California and the other Pacific Coast States have been compelled to handle the bulk of these migrating families because they can get no farther west, every State west of the Great Plains has been confronted by its share of the problem. Including the families from other sections of the country who have moved westward, it is probable that half a million people have moved into the Western States since 1930.

Walter S. Duffy, northwest regional director of the Farm Security Administration, declares the solution of the problem arising from the migration of these families to the West lies in their reestablishment on the land—"planned settlement on new reclamation and irrigation projects."

If all the newly irrigated land planned in the present reclamation program were available for settlement, it would be insufficient to meet the demand.

FINANCIAL ASPECTS OF RECLAMATION

Reclamation financial operations will compare favorably with those affecting any similar Federal undertaking.

Of the construction costs of projects in operation and subject to repayment, more than 30 percent have been repaid.

Delinquencies in the repayment of construction costs at the close of the fiscal year were only 2.2 percent of the total amount due and payable at that time.

Under the present wise policy of the Bureau of Reclamation, projects are recommended for construction only after the most thorough and detailed investigation shows that under normal conditions construction costs will be repaid in 40 years.

Revenues from electric power produced incidental to irrigation operations will materially assist in repaying the construction costs of a score of projects in operation under construction.

Of the estimated completed cost of the reclamation program as now planned of $1,169,000,000, including Boulder Dam and other projects completed or under construction, more than half a billion dollars will be paid by power revenues.

ACHIEVEMENTS OF FEDERAL RECLAMATION

A summary of major achievements of Federal reclamation in the 15 Western States should include:

Creation of more than 50,000 farm homes.

Establishment of or support for 254 cities and towns.

Population of more than 900,000 persons on farms and in urban communities dependent on them.

Protection for 30,000 farms provided with supplemental water supplies.

Support for 863 public schools and 1,076 churches; construction of hundreds of miles of highways and many other improvements.

Farm values in land and improvements of more than $400,000,000, with values in city, town, and utility property of half a billion dollars.

A $200,000,000 annual market for the products of the factories and farms of the Midwest, East, and South.

This work, which has contributed so much to the welfare of our country, must be carried forward. [Applause.]

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the Delegate from Alaska [Mr. Dimond] 10 minutes.

Mr. DIMOND. Mr. Chairman, it is only fitting that I should first express my appreciation to the members of the subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee which has jurisdiction of the bill now before us, the Department of the Interior appropriation bill, for the careful consideration which they gave to all matters coming before them affecting the Territory which I have the honor to represent here.

Sometimes I fear that the Members of Congress as well as the people of the United States do not realize that Alaska belongs to them just as much as it does to the 70,000 people who reside in the Territory. Alaska is part and parcel of the United States, and the Supreme Court of the United States has decided in a case in which the question was involved, that the Constitution of the United States extends with full force and vigor to Alaska, and for the protection of the citizens of Alaska. So Alaska is not a colony; it is not a dependency; it is a Territory. It is a State in embryo, and it is just as much a part of the United States as is one of the 48 States.

Alaska belongs to the people of the United States in a peculiar manner, because more than 99 percent of the total area of Alaska, a region twice as large as the State of Texas, still belongs to the United States. It is still in the public domain or in one of the several types of reservations that may be created by the Federal Government, either by Executive order or by act of Congress. So Alaska is not only a part of the United States and belongs to the people of the United States, but the Congress, I think, viewing Alaska as a part of the territory of the National Government, justly gives to all matters concerning the Territory, very careful and studious thought, as was given by the subcommittee in considering this bill.

Alaska resembles some of the States in that it has a very considerable Indian population. I know there are more Indians residing in Oklahoma than reside in Alaska, yet the Indian population of Alaska is substantial, about 30,000, according to the census of 1930. The Federal Government has the same responsibility with respect to the Indians of Alaska that it has with respect to the Indians of the United States, and that relationship has sometimes been called by the courts and by others as the relationship of guardian and ward. I do not know the exact definition, or whether there is any legal relation that exactly fits the relation between the Indians and the Federal Government. I have often thought, Mr. Chairman, that perhaps the relation of a trustee and the beneficiary of the trust might more exactly define the status of the Indians as regards the Federal Government-trustee and cestui que trust-as the term is used in law. The committee, in considering this bill, and the Congress generally in considering other things with relation to Alaska, have recognized the definite responsibility of a trustee to look after the welfare of the beneficiaries of the trust, namely, the Indians and Eskimos of Alaska, just the same as the Indians of the United States.

Yet the Congress was late in coming to even think of the natives of Alaska. Alaska was acquired from Russia in 1867, so while legislation had been enacted by the Congress for years and years, even almost back to the time of the meeting of the First Congress, the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of which we celebrated the other day, for the Indians of the United States, for a great many years after the acquisition of Alaska the Congress took no steps whatever to protect or to promote the welfare of the natives of Alaska. That responsibility has been assumed gradually and yet it is far from being what it should be. It is far from being what it is with respect to the Indians of the United States.

The other day in appearing before the committee I was able, with the help of information that I received from the Bureau of Indian Affairs, to point out that to this very day the Indian schools of Alaska are not receiving the same degree and the same kind of support that is being enjoyed by the Indian schools in the United States.

On page 733 of volume II of the hearings you will find a tabulated statement. The conclusion expressed in that statement is that if the Indian schools of Alaska were maintained on the same scale and with the same degree of efficiency as the Indian schools of the United States, that there would be included in this bill $98,100 above the amount carried for the education of the Indians in Alaska. This condition ought not to be permitted to exist.

I suppose there is not a Member here representing a constituency which has any considerable number of Indians who thinks that the Indians of his district are too well taken care of. In fact, from my own very meager observation of what is being done for the Indians in the United States, I think that the Indians generally over the United States, and in Alaska as well, have been shamefully neglected and in many instances shamefully ill-treated.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIMOND. Yes; I yield gladly to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. It has been the thought among the Members of Congress, as I gather it, that the Indian population would gradually decrease and that eventually we would find the Indians self-supporting. Year after year, however, we see the amount contributed to the Indian Bureau increased; and if I interpret the trend correctly, it is going to increase annually. Does the gentleman think there will ever come a time when the Indians will be self-supporting?

Mr. DIMOND. Answering the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. Chairman, not only do I think so, but I am certain of it

Mr. RICH. When will that time be?

Mr. DIMOND. It may take 25 years; it may take 50 years; but the time certainly will come when the Indians will be entirely self-supporting.

The other day while reading a recent biography of that great genius of Pennsylvania, Benjamin Franklin, I was forcibly struck by a remark attributed to Franklin that even back in that day he observed that whenever there was a war between the white men and the Indians in the colonies, without exception it arose because of some injustice or some crime committed by the white men against the Indians; and so it has been all down through the 150 years of our history as a nation. Until comparatively recent years the Indians have been shamefully neglected or abused. They have been robbed of their territory, they have been deprived of their property, and they have been herded in general onto lands which the white men did not want. Only lately have we begun slowly to take steps to make amends for some of the terrible injustices we have inflicted upon the Indians. The job cannot be done in 10 days or even in 10 years; it is going to take time. The aim ought to be to help the Indians to help themselves. I am therefore particularly encouraged by the bill reported out by the committee, for it marks a definite advance, definite improvement, although a vast amount still remains to be done.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. Thorkelson].

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Chairman, I am very happy to have an opportunity to speak to the Members today, for I have heard many things that interest me. Our colonial policy has been debated. No one is responsible for this policy except the Congress itself. I also heard a discussion about alliances—and permit me to say that alliances should be handled by Congress. It is the rightful duty of the Congress to handle such serious things. I also heard the importance of national defense. This is a rather large question and something that we ought to bear in mind and give serious consideration to because it intimately concerns our security. Then, again, I heard my colleague speak about Alaska.

I want to say a few words about Alaska, just to recall to the Members of Congress that it is a great piece of land-a country that has not been fully developed by any means whatsoever. The fishing industry of Alaska is large. It has hardly been touched. Bristol Bay inside the Aleutian Islands abounds with fish of all sorts and it is a source of wealth to the country. The mineral deposits of this Territory have not been touched. They include copper, tin, gold, lead, and many other metals. There are also large deposits of coal in Alaska. In other words, it is a country with undeveloped sources of wealth.

Were this Territory of the United States developed to its fullest extent, it would employ many of our idle people, but we must treat it differently from the manner in which we have treated our colonies in the past. We must offer some inducement for our business people to develop this country, and it must not be done by subsidizing the people. We could make the Territory self-sustaining as other powers have made their territories. As a suggestion, I would say that the United States Government might well say to the business people that Alaska is open to them. The Government should reduce all oppressive taxation in Alaska for 25 or 30 years. I venture to say that under such a policy many thousands of people would go to Alaska. It is a country that rightly deserves much consideration; and if given to it, it will be self-sustaining and profitable to all.

I want you to know that this Territory is important to the United States as a matter of protection to the west coast, which we should bear in mind.

I heard the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD] speak a while ago about money, and I desire to make a few remarks about that.

In 1934 the Gold Reserve Act was passed, which took us off the gold standard at home, but we still remained on a gold standard abroad. The peculiar part of the situation is that the money we are using here is a commodity or managed money. When it leaves the boundaries of the United States each dollar becomes worth exactly 15.21 grains of gold. Money we are using here today is a commodity of managed money, a money that has no actual, real value within itself, no intrinsic value whatsoever, but its purchasing value depends entirely upon the ability of a committee to control prices throughout the land so that this dollar may buy the necessities.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THORKELSON. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Does the gentleman know of any country in the world that has a more stabilized currency than the United States?

Mr. THORKELSON. I did not catch the gentleman's question.

Mr. EBERHARTER. A country that has a more stabilized currency, so far as value is concerned, than has the United

Mr. THORKELSON. It is not a question of stabilized value of a currency. Our currency is not stabilized. The only thing that stabilizes currency is gold, which gives it an intrinsic value. If you deprive our currency of gold, then you cannot have a stabilized currency, because it has nothing upon which to be stabilized.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Is it not a fact that the currency of the United States is and has been stabilized for the past 5 years?

Mr. THORKELSON. No. Our currency has not been stabilized.

Mr. EBERHARTER. One more question.

Mr. THORKELSON. Our prices have been held within bounds, so far as our currency has been able to buy certain commodities. As a matter of fact, it is the price fixing of commodities that has stabilized the currency, but not the intrinsic value of the money itself.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Does the gentleman know of any country in the world that does not have what the gentleman terms "a managed currency or a managed control of money"?

Mr. THORKELSON. At the present time most of the countries have, as a matter of fact, a managed currency. Of course, in England the pound sterling has not a fixed value in gold like our dollar has. We fixed our value of gold at 15.21 grains. The pound sterling, of course, is regulated somewhat in proportion to our own money.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THORKELSON. I yield to the gentleman from Penn-

Mr. RICH. The gentleman knows that the Congress gave the Secretary of the Treasury and the President $2,000,-000,000 to stabilize the currency?

Mr. THORKELSON. I understand that. I also say that in doing so the Congress did something that was absolutely unconstitutional.

Mr. RICH. And they did not ask the President to give any accounting for the money.

Mr. THORKELSON. That is right. The Constitution also demands that money taken from the Public Treasury must be accounted for and the receipts and expenditures published from time to time.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THORKELSON. I yield to the gentleman from Mich-

Mr. CRAWFORD. Does the gentleman know of any world power operating in the world today, such as France, England, Belgium, Italy, Australia, or Germany, where the power of their domestic exchange has been as unstable, uncertain, and as fluctuating as it has been in the United States during the past 5 years?

Mr. THORKELSON. I do not. Mr. CRAWFORD. Does the gentleman also recall that Dr. Goldenweiser, the present chief technical adviser of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System of the United States, has recently said we have not had monetary control and that we cannot have monetary control within the framework of our present constitutional form of government?

Mr. THORKELSON. That is correct.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Does the gentleman say that we have a stabilized currency?

Mr. THORKELSON. I say no, we have not.
Mr. CRAWFORD. Then he did not give an affirmative answer to the question asked by the gentleman a moment ago.

Mr. THORKELSON. The point I wish to raise is that in the Constitution you will find "the Congress has the power to coin money and regulate the value thereof, and of foreign Upon this paragraph alone the Gold Reserve Act was passed. There is nothing within the paragraph itself to give the Congress the right to pass that particular act.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 addi-

Mr. SCRUGHAM. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THORKELSON. I yield to the gentleman from Ne-

Mr. SCRUGHAM. Does the gentleman know of any nation whose money is more stable than is the money of the United States; and if so, what are those nations?

Mr. THORKELSON. No money is stable except when it is secured by gold. The fact that one nation is wrong does not justify us in doing the same things; in other words, one error does not make right another.

Mr. SCRUGHAM. Can the gentleman answer the ques-

Mr. THORKELSON. I answered the question.

Mr. SCRUGHAM. Does the gentleman know of any nation whose money is more stable; and if so, what are they?

Mr. THORKELSON. I say no; but I also say that that does not justify this administration in depriving the American people of being secured by gold.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THORKELSON. I yield to the gentleman from Penn-

Mr. RICH. If we continue for a few years more as we have in the last 6 years running the Nation into debt, and if our course in the future is going to be the same as it has been from July 1 of last year up to the present time, when we have gone into debt more than $2,364,726,000, how can our money ever become stable, as long as we are doing the things we are doing now, squandering the taxpayers' money?

Mr. THORKELSON. Our money cannot become stable if we continue as we are at the present time, because money cannot become stabilized unless it is based upon gold. If we continue as we are now, it can only end in dismal failure and national bankruptcy. Gold is accepted as the general standard throughout the whole world upon which money is stabilized.

At the present time we have about $13,000,000,000,000 of gold certificates issued to interests outside of the Treasury, and we have about $7,000,000,000 in currency of different kinds in circulation. This makes approximately $20,000,000,000 in circulation today. We are in the midst of a great inflation at the present time. The reason we are reasonably secure is that the business people do not know and do not realize that we are in the position we are in; that our currency is actually worthless. It is indeed to the credit of the courage of the American people that they remain in their business, put up security to borrow money, and use currency which as far as anyone knows might collapse tomorrow. That is the position we are in today.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

yield?

Mr. THORKELSON. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Add to that the fluctuating, erratic characteristic of our currency at the present time, which causes people with savings to hesitate to make long-term commitments.

Mr. THORKELSON. Let me reply to the gentleman in this manner: Why should I take a stable security that may be worth, say, $50,000 and borrow $20,000 from the bank and then start in business? I begin to operate and the first thing I know other taxes are placed on me, or some sort of restrictions. I finally reach the point where I cannot pay interest on the money borrowed and I lose a stable security for what? For nothing but inflated commodity money that is worthless.

Mr. CRAWFORD. With reference to the question raised by the gentleman a few minutes ago, I think he was directing his remarks perhaps unintentionally to the stabilization which has been given dollar exchange externally on the foreign exchange markets. I believe the gentleman will agree with me our stabilization fund has operated in that manner quite successfully, but I am directing my remarks to internal prices.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 additional minutes to the gentleman from Montana.

Mr. THORKELSON. The reason international money is stabilized is that the dollar is backed by 15.521 grains of gold.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Exactly.

Mr. THORKELSON. Our money here in the United States is not backed by that. It has no value whatsoever. No international transaction is carried on with the money we are using here. All international transactions are carried on upon the gold standard, the same standard we had in 1932, and this is why international currency is stable.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THORKELSON. I yield to the gentleman from Wis-

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I just wanted to make a constructive suggestion. The gentleman from Michigan indicated that Brazil now has a great deal of the export cotton market which America had prior to our New Deal administration. We find in the press this morning that although Brazil, with a dictatorship form of government, owes to American investors several hundred million dollars on defaulted bonds, our New Deal Secretary of State has opened the Treasury and has entered into an agreement to advance Brazil many millions of dollars.

Mr. THORKELSON. May I remark at this point that the money that will be loaned to Brazil will be gold, and the people right here in the United States who have earned that gold cannot get it and cannot even be secured by such gold?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. And Brazil will use that money taken from the American taxpayers to take more of our American cotton export markets and further wreck our American cotton producers.

Mr. THORKELSON. Yes; and it will wreck the United States in the end.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Absolutely.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Chairman, yesterday my Democratic colleagues expressed their elation in a very jubilant manner after having passed the reorganization bill. There really was no occasion for this expression of joy, because the present Democratic majority has committed constitutional rape for 6 years. This unfortunate irresponsibility or constitutional immorality is responsible for the chaotic state we are in today.

Yesterday when the crew of the New Deal steam roller began to act as statesmen, an amendment introduced by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Kleberg] was adopted. It was about the only period of intelligent reaction in yesterday's debate. To rally his crew, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Warren] took the floor, accompanied by the Doones. It is true that his own forces were divided momentarily, during a period in which constitutional responsibility was rekindled. But his divided crew from the west and east mountains did not train their guns upon the Doones—they trained them instead upon the people who sent them to Congress. They shot the Constitution full of holes.

The gentleman from North Carolina said to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KLEBERG]:

He does not propose to write into this legislation one single, solitary thing that is not already guaranteed to the President of the United States under the Constitution. He comes up with a dagger in his hand and tries to strike the whole proposition down.

I say the gentleman from Texas should be acclaimed for his courage in defending the people's rights and the Constitution of the United States.

What excuse can the gentleman from North Carolina find, or wherein is power delegated to anyone in Congress, to give the President more than his constitutional power?

As I understand it now, the President proposes a measure. It comes to the House. If it is not acted upon within 60 days, it becomes law. This holds for both Houses. It now goes back to the President—not for approval—it was approved by him before it was presented to the House. The procedure is entirely reversed from the procedure outlined in the Constitution. I quote:

Every bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the President of the United States. If he approves, he shall sign it; but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to that House in which it shall have originated.

As it stands now, if the President proposed the measure, which, of course, Congress expected him to do, he passes the bill, and Congress approves it by negative action.

I shall now take you back 163 years and briefly review causes which led to the formation of our Government. The people who lived in the colonies at that time were well acquainted with everything putrid in government. Their experience dated back not years but centuries. It began before Christ and was carried through from the time of our Saviour's crucifixion, from the period when those who believed in Christ were persecuted for their faith. It extended practically without interruption, and was horribly revived in the Thirty and Seven Year Wars in Europe. This persecution was brought to a climax during the Spanish Inquisition, the French Revolution, and into the period when the same intolerance was felt acutely by the people in England. The history of this had been passed on from parents to children, so that all lived in fear of their masters.

If you recall the history of that time, and the prison ships that carried these innocent and defenseless people from their homes and families to penal colonies, it should be a warning to you today.

No doubt some of you have seen those ships and the instruments of torture aboard them. I have been on board such ships. I have seen those instruments of torture: The iron woman, with its inverted spikes, within which the victim was placed, the door closed until death came to his rescue; the shackles and chains in the hold of the ship, to which the prisoners were chained; the iron frames on the deck to which the prisoners were chained-neck, wrists, and anklesso they could not move; the thumbscrews, in which their fingers were placed until in sheer agony they confessed to anything to be relieved of pain. Such confessions often led to persecution of innocent victims who in turn became objects of the same torture, a sort of endless piecemeal destruction of human lives and liberties. Somewhat similar to your expression yesterday when you so jubilantly expressed your joy after having passed the reorganization bill, which can only end in the loss of the people's liberties and rights. Yes, my friends, the people whom you took a solemn obligation "to preserve, to protect, and defend" against the Government and against the politicians who are now running it-yes, against the head of the Democratic Party-I do not want you to forget that.

With this experience vividly impressed in their minds, these people rebelled when the reptile of persecution reached its fangs into the heart of the colonies of America. After years of strife to free themselves from this monster, and with suffering still in their hearts, they, in common united effort, attempted to provide for themselves and their children a government to exist only by public grant "by the people, of the people, and for the people." And so the Constitution of the United States came into being 151 years ago.

The Constitution is the expression of a people who asked only for life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; to be free of intolerance, persecution, and excessive taxation—I might say, destructive taxation. With this in mind, they established the principle that each person should work to sustain himself so that he would be a useful unit among his fellowmen, that in furtherance of this civilized state each family should assume responsibility for its own and its children's welfare. These are the fundamental principles of a popular government such as ours.

When the community life reached a population where it could not be well regulated by each unit, officials were elected to represent a community comparable to town or county. These elected officials were not to rule the people who had placed them in office but were to adjust differences between family units for the general welfare of all and to provide for collective protection and for all things that should be shared equally by each and every unit within the county.

These separate county units found it impractical and too costly to negotiate with each county, for distances between them were too great for economical operation. In order to overcome this each county elected men to represent them. which, of course, we recognize as our State government. The duty of the State government is not to rule the people within each county, but is instead to adjust differences among the counties for the general welfare of all.

The State government became the first major unit in which officials were elected by the counties to represent them in the State capital. The people provided a State constitution, which delegated certain powers to the State legislature for the general welfare of all counties and the population thereof. The State government, therefore, is a sovereign government within itself and occupies exactly the same relation to the counties as the Federal Government does

The 48 States now find that it is inconvenient and too costly for each State to negotiate directly with the other 47 States, so each of them elects men to represent them in the Nation's Capital, and this is the Congress of the United States. The fundamental principle of this form of government is based upon the fact that the greatest economy may be enjoyed if each unit assumes full responsibility and respects mutual rights. The State, as a sovereign government, is responsible to the counties and to the people within the State and to its own population for a sound Federal Government. In this plan each State occupies the same position in the 48 States as the county government occupies in its relation to the counties within the State.

I want to call my colleagues' attention to the fact that these are the fundamental principles of a popular form of government such as ours. It is the only manner in which a republican form of government may be maintained and perpetuated. It is based first upon the rights of the States to regulate the affairs within the State and for each to maintain representatives in Congress to adjust and regulate differences among the States with the foreign nations and with the Indian tribes.

If my colleagues have followed me, they will now understand that Congress represents all States and Territories for the general welfare of the United States. In such administration, the Federal Government is relieved of all responsibility except as representative of the United States in foreign relations, and must provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States, not by dealing directly with the people but instead by helping the people through the several State governments.

After this brief discussion, I have reached the point which I desire to set clearly before you, and which I hope you will not misconstrue. When you come here to Washington, the people hand you the Constitution of the United States, and they say to you: This is the Constitution, and in it you will find certain powers delegated to you. You have our permission to enact any legislation within the powers so delegated in this document, but you must not exceed the powers granted to you or deny to the States or to the people the powers reserved to themselves.

It is my desire to call the attention of Congress to the fact that the constitutions of the various States differ, because each is formulated for the general good of the people within that State. When it comes to the United States, the Constitution does not differ but provides equality to all the States. That is the difference between the State constitution and the Constitution of the United States. It is also a clear certification of the sovereign status of the States. It is now my desire to inform the majority of Congress who voted for the reorganization bill, H. R. 4425, yesterday that the bill is not within the legislative power delegated to this body. In other words, it is absolutely unconstitutional. The arguments expressed in debates on this floor yesterday were not expressions of the knowledge of the Constitution, but they were, instead, clear demonstrations of the lack of such knowledge. You failed to recognize one essential principle, and that is the instrument upon which the constitutionality rests. Congress should know that Congress itself, the Supreme Court, or the President of the United States do not make legislation constitutional, but such certification must rest entirely upon the provisions which are found within the Constitution itself.

I now challenge any Member of Congress, the Supreme Court, and the Attorney General, and the President himself, to point out the paragraph in the Constitution where power is delegated to Congress to create the various private corporations which Congress has provided in the last 6 years. I ask you to designate where in the Constitution power is delegated to Congress to enact the Gold Reserve Act, to set up the stabilization fund, and to pass the reorganization bill which you enacted yesterday. I say there is no provision for it in the Constitution.

It was lamentable to observe those in debate on this bill defending the rights of the President of the United States to act in the capacity of the Members of this House. It is well for my colleagues to bear in mind that each of us is elected to represent the people of the United States, not the President, not the Supreme Court, nor anyone else. It is also well for the Members of this House to remember that a solemn obligation was taken to perform this service without equivocation or mental reservation on our part.

The first duty of Congress is to see that all legislation comes within the limit of the Constitution. Even with this carethrough stress or carelessness—legislation will be enacted that is not constitutional. It then becomes the duty of the Supreme Court to send it back to this House and declare it unconstitutional. I shall go a little further in my statement and say that the Supreme Court has not observed the principles of the Constitution either. It is well for the Supreme Court to know that when a great difference of opinion exists in that body, or when there is a question of doubt in their minds, the ninth amendment of the Bill of Rights prevails.

To stand on this floor, as you did yesterday, and fight to take the rights away from the people and give such rights to the President or anyone else, makes you traitors to your own people. It is time for Congress to know that. The life of this Nation and the rights of the people come first, and political parties and political expediency should not be considered where the security of our people is jeopardized.

I shall recite to you what happened in my own State when the elected officials did not confine themselves within the accepted laws of the community; when they constantly deprived the people of their right to own property and even confiscated it. When the people found that the very ones they trusted were the culprits, they organized what is known as the Vigilantes. These law-abiding citizens rounded up these betrayers of public rights and they hanged all of them. I just mention this to you so that you may understand the power of the people. The people are supreme in this land of ours, the supreme power, if you please, and the Constitution is their mandate to you here in Congress. They might take the law in their own hands.

In a few days you will have the National Health Act coming up on this floor. It was introduced in the Senate on the 27th of last month. That act is a red stepbrother to this reorganization bill. It is also clearly unconstitutional.

I cannot understand the psychology of this body in its abject fear of and subservience to the Chief Executive. I respect the President of the United States as much as anyone, but in taking this stand I am acting for his protection, so that he will not step out of office to be despised at some future date because Congress bestowed upon him powers and duties for which Congress alone should be responsible. It is well to bear in mind that a person may be destroyed by kindness, especially kindness of this sort.

In closing I want to remind you that the President enjoys only two definite powers-to grant reprieves and pardonsthat is all. He is Chief and Commander of the Army and Navy. He can appoint officials with the approval of the Senate, and he must see that the laws are faithfully obeyed. If Congress has any respect for the President and for themselves, they should insist that each department confine itself within the power delegated to it by the Constitution of the United States. In such observance, as I have tried to explain. rests the soundness and the perpetuation of our Government.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. MURDOCK] such time as he may desire.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?

There was no objection.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Mr. Chairman, I wish to say, in agreement with my colleague from California on the other side of the aisle, that when the Interior appropriation bill is before the House it is a splendid opportunity to speak concerning some great enterprises of the West, such as reclamation and mining. He was thinking of reclamation, and so am I, but I want to discuss mining.

Remarkable changes have come about in metallurgy during our generation and, no doubt, greater changes are ahead within the same length of time. As an illustration of this I would like to repeat to the House a story told me by our Arizona cowboy author and historian, Will C. Barnes, which I think is not only amusing but highly illustrative of some facts concerning mining and minerals. But I must explain the setting of this story before telling it.

About 20 miles west of Winslow, Ariz., and 6 miles south of United States Highway No. 66, there is on that open, level plateau a peculiar feature of Nature. It is a great circular and cone-shaped hole in the ground known as Meteor Crater. Around the edge of this circular opening is a surrounding mound lying there on the flat plateau like a huge doughnut on the table, the height of the mound being 75 or 80 feet above the level of the plain. This crater, or inverted cone-shaped hole, is about a half mile in diameter and its sloping sides extend down a depth of about 600 feet, the bottom of the hole being a level, grass-covered area. It is now called Meteor Crater because scientists tell us that the hole was made there by the falling of a giant meteor upon this rocky plain ages ago. When the meteor struck it not only cracked the rock crust but splashed earth material up and out into the doughnutshaped mound which I have just mentioned somewhat as if you threw a marble into rather thick mud. Of course, the meteor buried itself below the surface.

Will C. Barnes says that he was working for the Hash Knife cattle outfit in that region about the year 1892 and that he and his fellow cowhands were well acquainted with this giant hole in the ground and sometimes used it as a natural corral for their herds without knowing the facts of its geological orgin. One day the cowboys saw a man from Washington, a scientist from the Smithsonian Institution, going around the rim picking up stones scattered about. They asked him what the objects were that he was examining, and he told them that they were fragments of the meteor which had buried itself in the ground at that place. He explained that the hole had been caused by a great meteor striking the earth and burying itself. They asked the scientist whether the pieces of rock had any value, and he said that the stuff was probably worth a dollar a pound. The cowboys then asked if he felt sure that the meteor was down there and about how much a meteor weighed. The man from the Smithsonian said it was undoubtedly down there and that it no doubt weighed between ten and fifteen millions of tons. These scientific facts gave the cowboys a great idea.

According to Will C. Barnes, they straightway organized an exploring company and used what capital they could get together to purchase shovels, wheelbarrows, poles, ropes, pulleys, and buckets to dig for it. This exploring party went down to the bottom of the crater and out near the middle of the level area at the bottom and began to dig. They soon found that the digging was not very easy, although the material was loose and not hard to remove. When they got below the grass roots they discovered that the material was a finegrained, sandlike or asheslike composition. When they took out a bucketful of it in attempting to dig straight down the other material would roll down upon them, and they found that they could not have perpendicular walls to their excavation, for it was like digging a well in sand. The cowboys worked for a couple of weeks and had gotten down only a few feet when they saw the scientist again up on the rim further studying the phenomena.

Seeking more information, they clambered out to ask this gentleman one more question and that was about how far down he thought that meteor might be. He expressed the opinion that it might be down 1,000 or possibly 2,000 feet. That so discouraged the stockholders that the exploring company broke up without declaring a dividend. Now, we may laugh at the hopes, dreams, and ambitions of these cowboy miners who lacked insight, but it is just such zeal and determination on the part of courageous souls and optimistic adventurers which made the West.

I should explain here that later companies have searched for this buried meteor and with better luck than the cowboy effort. Of course, later searchers used more modern methods such as would be needed for a deep exploration, and, although they have found it, it is not worth today a dollar a pound as it once was. Man now can produce in his laboratory the alloys which were at one time found only in the product of the laboratory of Nature and hence so valuable.

I think that in the future of mining and metallurgy there will be a development somewhat parallel to the expected development in agriculture. We are now trying to apply our scientific knowledge to find new uses of old agricultural products and along with that to find and develop new agricultural products. Of course, we shall continue to use corn to feed hogs, which is one of its old uses, but we may make new uses of corn to produce sugar or fuel or many other things which the scientist tells us may be made from corn. So it is in regard to mineral products. We shall, of course, continue to use iron and copper as early man used them, but we shall undoubtedly use more alloys to make a better grade of product out of iron and copper more suitable to our needs. I am hopeful that we shall continue to find new uses for gold, silver, iron, copper, lead, and zinc, but I also believe that new minerals will be found to be used with the old to the great advance of mankind.

My colleague, Judge Leavy, of Washington, has called my attention to an ore called magnite, which he says exists in his district in great abundance, and he has also shown me the remarkable metal known as magnesium obtained from this ore. The judge has indicated to me some of the marvelous properties and possibilities of this metal. I can scarcely imagine what some scientific Aladdin will do with this slightly known product of the earth.

Although copper today is regarded as the basic mineral product of Arizona, and I believe it will continue to be such, I expect to see new uses found for copper and I also expect to see new kinds of mineral brought into use in the metallurgy of the near future to be used with copper. We hear talk of conservation, but if copper is indestrucible, which it is, there is very little need of our attempt at conservation in regard to the red metal. Again, if it is true that there is enough manganese in one of our States to match all the iron ore in the United States there would be very little need of emphasizing conservation in regard to that mineral.

I am optimistic enough to believe that there is really no need of our getting some of these minerals from foreign countries under the plea of conservation of our own resources. However, that brings up the question, How large is our supply? It is true that there is a limit to the most precious mineral we have in the Southwest, and I mean by that remark that our most precious mineral is water. Therefore, a kind of conservation is desirable concerning that mineral but by that I mean proper use. In regard to some minerals the claim is made that we should get our current supply from abroad because we do not have much and it is contended that we ought to husband the limited supply of what we do have. Right in that matter we are in need of facts, scientific facts, gathered by reliable and unprejudiced persons.

I noticed that the United States Bureau of Mines has an appropriation of $274,000 suggested for this bill. I certainly am in favor of appropriating this amount, or even more, for I believe that there are larger supplies of, say, manganese and tungsten within the State of Arizona than governmental authorities know about or consider. If we are shaping the wrong policy it may be through ignorance and we ought to have the facts. I would like to have the United States Bureau of Mines find and furnish us the facts.

Mining is one of the great extractive industries of this country. It is so productive of wealth that I am not surprised that the ancient school of economists known as physiocrats overemphasize its importance when they contended that all wealth comes from the earth. It is, in my judgment, hard to overestimate the industry of mining as a factor in the production of wealth, but I feel sure that some American economists, many American big-business men, and most of America's lawmakers have greatly underestimated mining as a means of producing wealth. Mining is a predominant industry in the Rocky Mountain area and in my State

This great industry has suffered more during the years of depression, and received less stimulation from the Government, than any of our other basic industries. Transportation, banking, various lines of commerce, the building trades, and agriculture have all been subsidized in some way by the Government through public assistance of funds or of credit.

This is not true of mining. I think it has been very unwise for the Government to be so neglectful of mining.

Just now I am not asking for subsidy or financial aid for the encouragement of mining, for I do believe that right public policy, together with individual enterprise, will enable the mining industry to carry on and grow. I have talked with mining men, large and small, in my State, and while some of them feel that the Government ought to subsidize the industry in this way or that, many of them merely ask for a sane policy, sensible legislation, and a more or less free hand. I heard experienced mining men say last summer that many of our mining laws ought to be revised. Some say that prospecting and entry on the public domain, and particularly in the Indian reservations, is too restricted. Still others say that the great need of western mining is new capital and that a more consistent and favorable attitude of Government and a more sympathetic treatment of investments would be all that is necessary for the mining industry to flourish.

Many of the small mine operators in the West feel that the Government ought now to purchase large quantities of the strategic and critical minerals as a part of our national preparedness. These, they say, should be taken off the market and stored for wartime uses only, so that their existence in marketable form might not depress the price. These men feel that if the mining industry flourishes all the other industries would necessarily flourish, because all others are dependent upon it. My own feeling is that mining shares with agriculture the high distinction of being a mother industry. However, one school of economists who create value out of fiction and who build an economic structure on paper, have taught another philosophy, and accordingly those men who are engaged in taking wealth from Mother Earth have been given scant consideration. The very least we can do in the bill now before the House is to appropriate liberally that the United States Bureau of Mines may investigate and give us scientific facts.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Buck, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill H. R. 4852, the Interior Department appropriation bill, 1940, had come to no resolution thereon.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. Harrington, for 2 weeks, on account of official business.

To Mr. Allen of Louisiana, for 2 days, on account of illness in his family.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend the remarks I made today and to include therein a letter I received from the Attorney General, as well as an excerpt from the annual report of the Comptroller General.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. KLEBERG. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend in the Record the remarks I made today and to include therein some statistics and statements from the Bureau of Entomology concerning the pink bollworm.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIMOND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend in the Record the remarks I made today in Committee and to include therein some brief excerpts.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alaska?

There was no objection.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members who have spoken on this bill may be permitted 5 legislative days within which to extend their own remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

SENATE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS REFERRED

Bills and joint resolutions of the Senate of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S. 50. An act to provide for recognizing the services rendered by civilian officers and employees in the construction and establishment of the Panama Canal and the Canal Zone; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

S. 270. An act for the relief of Lofts & Son; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 421. An act for the relief of the estate of O. K. Himley; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 439. An act to confer the Distinguished Service Medal on Col. Richard C. Patterson; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 509. An act to add certain lands of the Front Royal Quartermaster Depot Military Reservation, Va., to the Shenandoah National Park, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Public Lands.

S. 510. An act to authorize certain officers and enlisted men of the United States Army to accept such medals, orders, and decorations as have been tendered them by foreign governments in appreciation of services rendered; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 511. An act for the relief of Dolores P. de Williamson; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 512. An act for the relief of certain disbursing officers of the Army of the United States and for the settlement of individual claims approved by the War Department; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 518. An act to provide for the further development of cooperative agricultural extension work; to the Committee on Agriculture.

S. 645. An act to provide funds for cooperation with Wapato School District No. 54, Yakima County, Wash., for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children of the Yakima Reservation; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

S. 661. An act for the relief of Ida A. Deaver; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 749. An act for the relief of Harry F. Baker; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 793. An act for the relief of Worth Gallaher; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 810. An act for the relief of Joe Pizl, Sr.; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 811. An act for the relief of George A. Rogers; to the Committee on Claims. S. 827. An act for the relief of John H. Barry; to the Committee on Civil Service.

S. 828. An act to permit the President to acquire and convert, as well as to construct, certain auxiliary vessels for the Navy; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 829. An act to authorize alterations and repairs to certain naval vessels, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 1045. An act to give effect to the International Agreement for the Regulation of Whaling, signed at London June 8, 1937, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

S. 1098. An act to amend section 12 of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, by authorizing advances for crop insurance; to the Committee on Agriculture.

S. 1281. An act to prohibit reproductions of official badges, identification cards, and other insignia; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

S. 1357. An act for the relief of Chester J. Babcock; to the Committee on Civil Service.

S. 1363. An act to repeal subsection (4) of subsection (c) of section 101 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938; to the Committee on Agriculture.

S. 1374. An act for the relief of Cohen, Goldman & Co., Inc.; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1517. An act for the relief of F. E. Perkins; to the Committee on Claims.

S. J. Res. 2. Joint resolution providing for consideration of a recommendation for decoration of Sgt. Fred W. Stockham, deceased; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. J. Res. 59. Joint resolution authorizing the Bureau of Labor Statistics to collect information as to amount and value of all goods produced in State and Federal prisons; to the Committee on Labor.

S. J. Res. 76. Joint resolution to authorize the Postmaster General to withhold the awarding of star-route contracts for a period of 45 days; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, March 10, 1939, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS

Public hearings will continue Friday morning, March 10, 1939, at 10 a.m., on social-security legislation in the Ways and Means Committee room in the New House Office Building.

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at 10 a.m. Friday, March 10, 1939. Business to be considered: Railroad legislation—H. R. 2531.

COMMITTEE ON NAVAL AFFAIRS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Naval Affairs Friday morning, March 10, 1939, at 10:30 a.m., for the consideration of H. R. 2878, to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to proceed with the construction of certain public works.

COMMITTEE ON RIVERS AND HARBORS

The Committee on Rivers and Harbors will meet Friday, March 10, 1939, at 10: 30 a.m., to continue hearings on H. R. 3222 and H. R. 3223, bills for the completion of the construction of the Atlantic-Gulf Ship Canal across Florida.

COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries will hold public hearings in room 219, House Office Building, Washington, D. C., at 10 a. m., on the bills and dates listed below:

Tuesday, March 14, 1939:

H. R. 180, H. R. 202, construction of a Nicaraguan Canal; H. R. 201, additional facilities for Panama Canal; H. R. 2667, construction of a Mexican Canal.

In listing the bills to be heard on March 14, 1939, House Joint Resolution 112 (Tinkham), to create a commission to study and report on the feasibility of constructing the Mexican Canal, was inadvertently omitted from the notice.

This is to advise all interested parties that House Joint Resolution 112 will be considered at that time with the following bills: H. R. 180 (IZAC), relative to the construction of a Nicaraguan canal; H. R. 202 (Bland), relative to the construction of a Nicaraguan canal; H. R. 201 (Bland), need for additional lock facilities at Panama; H. R. 2667 (Tink-Ham), relative to the construction of a Mexican canal.

Tuesday, March 21, 1939:

H. R. 137, H. R. 980, H. R. 1674, relating to annuities for Panama Canal construction force.

Thursday, March 23, 1939:

H. R. 141, H. R. 142, H. R. 1819, miscellaneous Panama Canal bills.

Tuesday, March 28, 1939:

H. R. 197, relating to the clearance of vessels; H. R. 199, relating to the allotment of wages by seamen; H. R. 200, relating to foreign towboats towing between American ports; H. R. 1780, relating to penalties on certain undocumented vessels and cargoes engaging in the coastwise trade or the fisheries; H. R. 1782, relating to change of masters of vessels. Wednesday, March 29, 1939:

H. R. 198, relating to the measurement of vessels; and H. R. 132, authorizing the use of condemned Government vessels for breakwater purposes.

Tuesday, April 4, 1939:

H. R. 3209, making it a misdemeanor to stow away on vessels; H. R. 3398, regarding the down payment of construction of new vessels; H. R. 3935, relating to the discharge of seamen.

Wednesday, April 5, 1939:

H. R. 3052, uniform insignia for Naval Reserve radio operators.

COMMITTEE ON THE PUBLIC LANDS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on the Public Lands on Wednesday, March 15, 1939, at 10 a. m., in room 328, House Office Building, to consider H. R. 3794, to establish John Muir-Kings Canyon National Park, Calif., to transfer thereto the lands now included in the General Grant National Park, and for other purposes.

There will be a meeting of the Committee on the Public Lands on Thursday, March 23, 1939, at 10 a.m., in room 328, House Office Building, to consider H. R. 3759, to authorize a National Mississippi River Parkway and matters relating thereto.

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

Beginning at 10 a. m. on Wednesday, March 22, 1939, there will be a hearing held before subcommittee No. 4 of the Committee on the Judiciary on House Joint Resolution 176, declaring the conservation of petroleum deposits underlying submerged lands adjacent to and along the coast of California, below low-water mark and under the territorial waters of the United States of America, essential for national defense, maintenance of the Navy, and regulation and protection of interstate and foreign commerce; reserving the same as a naval petroleum reserve, subject to any superior vested right, title, or interest; and authorizing appropriate judicial proceedings to assert, ascertain, establish, and maintain the right and interest of the United States of America in such reserve and to eject trespassers.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

500. A letter from the president, Board of Commissioners, District of Columbia, transmitting the draft of a proposed bill to authorize the central heating plant to furnish heat to such buildings as may be erected by the District of Columbia on the property in the District of Columbia known as squares 533, 490, 491, and reservation 10; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

501. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Department of Agriculture, transmitting the draft of a proposed bill to amend an act approved April 26, 1926, entitled "An act fixing the fees of jurors and witnesses"; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

502. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a notice of transfer by the Interior Department to the War Department of 1.03 acres of lands belonging to the St. Elizabeths Hospital for an Army airways radio-transmitter station; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

503. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting the draft of a proposed bill to provide for the detail of a commissioned medical officer of the Public Health Service to serve as assistant to the Surgeon General; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

504. A letter from the Federal Power Commission, transmitting suggested amendments to the act of August 2, 1937 (50 Stat. 551); to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation.

505. A letter from the Chairman of the Commission of Fine Arts, transmitting a report of the Commission of Fine Arts concerning the Thomas Jefferson Memorial; to the Committee on the Library.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ANGELL:

H. R. 4893. A bill to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government; to the Select Committee on Government Organization.

By Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri:

H. R. 4894. A bill to authorize the attendance of the Marine Band at the opening session of the national convention of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks of the United States of America to be held on July 10, 1939, at St. Louis, Mo.; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. MERRITT:

H. R. 4895. A bill to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in connection with the New York World's Fair, 1939, to be held in commemoration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the inauguration of the First President of the United States and of the establishment of the Federal Government in the city of New York; to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

By Mr. SIROVICH:

H. R. 4896. A bill to amend section 12B of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended, to increase the maximum amount of insurance for any deposit which may be insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. VINSON of Georgia:

H.R. 4897. A bill to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to proceed with the construction of a naval supply depot, Oakland, Calif., and for other purposes; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. ELLIOTT:

H. R. 4898. A bill to amend the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, to provide for a tariff on importations of charcoal; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GERLACH:

H.R. 4899. A bill to authorize a preliminary examination and survey of the Delaware River at and in the vicinity of Morrisville, Bucks County, Pa., with a view to the control of floods resulting from ice jams; to the Committee on Flood Control.

By Mr. GWYNNE:

H. R. 4900. A bill to amend section 13 (a) of the act approved June 25, 1938 (52 Stat. 1069), entitled "Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938"; to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. HARE:

H. R. 4901. A bill authorizing a refund to the States the amount of direct taxes collected, 1866, 1867, and 1868; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. McREYNOLDS:

H. R. 4902. A bill to meet the cost of travel and transportation of household effects of Government employees transferred other than by their own request; to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

By Mr. RANDOLPH:

H. R. 4903. A bill to exempt from taxation certain property of the American Friends Service Committee, a nonprofit corporation organized under the laws of Pennsylvania for religious, educational, and social-service purposes; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

H. R. 4904. A bill relative to certain annuities; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. DIES:

H. R. 4905. A bill to provide for the exclusion and expulsion of alien Fascists and Communists; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. HOFFMAN:

H. R. 4906. A bill to amend an act of June 24, 1936, the same being chapter 746, United States Statutes at Large, entitled "An act making it a felony to transport in interstate or foreign commerce persons to be employed to obstruct or interfere with the right of peaceful picketing during labor controversies," by adding four new sections thereto; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DIES:

H. R. 4907. A bill to require the registration of certain organizations; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. CASE of South Dakota:

H. R. 4908. A bill authorizing the construction of dams and other works in the basin of the South Fork of the Cheyenne River, S. Dak.; to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation.

By Mr. DIES:

H. R. 4909. A bill to make ineligible for employment by the Government of the United States of Communists or Fascists; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. HOFFMAN:

H. R. 4910. A bill to provide for the registration of labor organizations having members engaged in interstate or foreign commerce and to impose duties upon such labor organizations and the members thereof and to impose liability for unlawful acts upon such organizations and the members thereof, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. WALTER:

H. R. 4911. A bill to create a commission to prepare a plan for the cession of certain parts of the District of Columbia to Maryland; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. KING: H. J. Res. 200. Joint resolution authorizing a preliminary survey of Kalepolepo Boat Harbor, island of Maui, T. H.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. COCHRAN:

H. Con. Res. 12. Concurrent resolution authorizing the printing as a document of the congressional proceedings held in the House of Representatives on March 4, 1939, in commemoration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the commencement of the First Congress of the United States under the Constitution; to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. ALEXANDER:

H. Res. 117. Resolution to prevent competitive bidding by truck drivers on Works Progress Administration projects; to the Committee on Appropriations.

MEMORIALS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, memorials were presented and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their resolution with reference to income taxes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Montana, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their resolution, introduced by Mr. Woods, with reference to flood-control and water-conservation measure; to the Committee on Flood Control.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Montana, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their resolution, Senate Joint Memorial No. 16, introduced by Mr. Nutt and others, with reference to the Civilian Conservation Corps; to the Committee on Labor.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their Senate concurrent resolution, by Mr. Scott, with reference to Senate bill 126 and House Resolution 188, concerning freight rates; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their Senate concurrent resolution with reference to an adequate ship canal across this State; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their Senate concurrent resolution, by Mr. Scott, with reference to Senate bill 223, providing for the exemption of certain vessels of the United States from the requirements of the officers' competency certificates convention; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Alabama, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their concurrent resolution (H. J. Res. No. 33), with reference to the cotton trade; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Oregon, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their Senate Joint Memorial No. 2, with reference to the forest-products industries; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ANDREWS:

H. R. 4912. A bill for the relief of the Eberhart Steel Products Co., Inc.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CARTWRIGHT:

H. R. 4913. A bill for the relief of Floyd Jones; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. GEARHART:

H. R. 4914. A bill granting an increase of pension to Harriet L. Liggett; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GEHRMANN:

H. R. 4915. A bill granting a pension to Anna Norton; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HARE:

H.R. 4916. A bill for the relief of Dawson A. Bell; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HARTER of Ohio:

H. R. 4917. A bill for the relief of Michael Friday; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. HOLMES:

H. R. 4918. A bill to entitle Effie Canning Carlton to now file with the Register of Copyrights a corrected application for renewal of copyright to her musical composition entitled "Rock-A-Bye Baby"; to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. LANDIS:

H. R. 4919. A bill granting a pension to Jessie Myrtle Bennett; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ROMJUE:

H. R. 4920. A bill granting a pension to Mary L. Bruner; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WALTER:

H. R. 4921. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Hugh J. Finn; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

1647. By Mr. FITZPATRICK: Petition of the Westchester County Grand Jurors Association, White Plains, N. Y., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to immigration laws, and that all aliens should be fingerprinted; also that a bill similar to House bill 9690 should be submitted to the Seventy-sixth Congress; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

1648. By Mr. GAMBLE: Resolution adopted by the members of the Italian-American Civic Association of the Tarrytowns, in the State of New York, opposing the sale of war materials abroad; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1649. Also, petition signed by Morris Weinstein, a member of the Rotary Club of Katonah, N. Y., urging the stoppage of war supplies to Japan; to the Committee on Foreign | Affairs.

1650. Also, petition signed by Hazel Kingsley and other members of the Catholic action group of Holy Trinity Parish, New Rochelle, N. Y., urging opposition to any attempt to empower the President to determine the aggressor in a war among nations; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1651. By Mr. HINSHAW: Petition of several citizens of Pasadena, Calif., urging the President to bring to an end shipment of supplies to Japan from the United States; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1652. By Mr. MARTIN J. KENNEDY: Letter from the pastor of the Church of the Covenant, New York City, expressing the opposition of his congregation, and of all churches of Presbyterian faith, to the proposal to include churches and ministers under the extended provisions of the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1653. By Mr. KEOGH: Petition of the Church of the Covenant, New York City, opposing amendments to the Social Security Act that would include churches with their ministers and other employees under the provision; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1654. Also, petition of the Acheson Harden Co., of New York, concerning amendments to the Fair Labor Standards Act: to the Committee on Labor.

1655. Also, petition of the Presbytery of Brooklyn-Nassau, Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning House bill 101, amending the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1656. Also, petition of the Marshall County schools, Moundsville, W. Va., concerning the Federal-aid bill (S. 1305); to the Committee on Education.

1657. By Mrs. NORTON: Petition of the House of Assembly of the State of New Jersey, memorializing the Congress of the United States to adjust and regulate the collection of income taxes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1658. Also, petition of the Society of the War of 1812 in the State of New Jersey, urging adequate national defense and endorsing the measures proposed by President Roosevelt to this end; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

1659. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association, No. 33, New York City, concerning the nonenforcement of section 2, Public, 808; to the Committee on Labor.

1660. Also, petition of the Allied Printing Trades Council of Greater New York, opposing the Hobbs bill (H. R. 2203); to the Committee on the Judiciary.

1661. Also, petition of the Greenpoint Presbyterian Church. Brooklyn, N. Y., opposing inclusion of churches, their ministers and employees, in amendment to the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1662. Also, petition of the Presbytery of Brooklyn-Nassau. Brooklyn, N. Y., opposing House bill 101, which would repeal exemption granted to churches, ministers, and other employees under the present Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1663. Also, petition of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., concerning amendment to the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1664. Also, petition of Rev. D. B. Blackstone, pastor, the Church of the Covenant, New York City, opposing the proposed amendment to the Social Security Act to include churches, ministers, and other employees; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1665. Also, petition of the united telephone organizations, New York City, concerning retention of their pension benefits in place of social security; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1666. By Mr. POLK: Petition of William Thompson and 133 other residents of the Stockdale, Ohio, community, urging support of House bill 3842, which proposes to amend the wage and hour law to exempt operators of telephone exchanges having less than 1,000 subscribers, which would apply to the operator of the above-mentioned community and enable them to continue their much-needed service; to the Committee on Labor.

1667. By Mr. SIMPSON: Resolution of the Christian Endeavor Society of St. John's Reformed Church, Mifflinburg, Pa., protesting against the huge increases in our military budget, the fortification of Guam, and any attempt to force Japan to conform more closely to our wishes in the Far East, etc.; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1668. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the Board of Commissioners, Newark, N. J., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to a bill taxing municipal bonds; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

FRIDAY, MARCH 10, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Eternal and everlasting God and our Father, we thank Thee for the hidden spring within us which bids us bow and pray and urges us upward and onward; it bridges the gulf and makes the continuity of life an abiding reality. praise Thee for Him who is the light of life, who imparts His calm fearlessness to all who put their trust in Him. Almighty God, remember the suffering and the homeless in all warring lands. They are washed by bitter tears, lashed by stinging shame, and driven by wanton cruelty; oh, here is a pathos too deep for words. May the believers of the holy, humane Saviour move courageously in the highways of progress. We pray that they may traverse the beaten ways of this shuddering earth and bless and save those who are trembling on the verge of despair. We entreat Thee that the spirit of monstrous inhumanity may be removed from beneath and heaven be shaken down from above. In the spirit of the world's immortal Peacemaker. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. St. Claire, one of its clerks, announced that the Vice President had appointed Mr. BARKLEY and Mr. GIBSON members of the joint select committee on the part of the Senate, as provided for in the act of February 16, 1889, as amended by the act of March 2. 1895, entitled "An act to authorize and provide for the disposition of useless papers in the executive departments," the disposition of executive papers in the following departments and agencies:

- 1. Department of Agriculture.
- 2. Department of the Interior.
- 3. Department of the Navy.
- 4. Post Office Department.
- 5. Department of the Treasury.
- 6. United States Civil Service Commission.
- United States Coal Commission.
- 8. Veterans' Administration.

RESIGNATION FROM A COMMITTEE

The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House the following resignation from a committee.

The Clerk read as follows:

MARCH 8, 1939.

Hon. WILLIAM B. BANKHEAD,
Speaker of the House, House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.
Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Speaker: I herewith respectfully submit my resignation as a member of the District of Columbia Committee of the House of Representatives.

Hoping that it may be possible to release me from this committee at an early date, I beg to remain,
Sincerely yours,

L. M. FORD.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the resignation will be accepted.

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I do so for the purpose of asking the majority leader about the program for today and next week.

Mr RAYBURN. We will run along with this bill as far as possible today.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. It is not expected to finish the bill today?

Mr. RAYBURN. I do not think there is any hope of that. It is the purpose to adjourn over until Monday. Monday is District day, and business on that calendar will take just a very short while. On Tuesday last we passed over the Private Calendar. It is my purpose to ask unanimous consent today that the Private Calendar may be called on Monday next after disposition of the District business.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. And the gentleman would rather do that than finish the pending bill?

Mr. RAYBURN. Yes. After that some rules probably will be presented. On Tuesday there will be nothing to do except to go on with this bill. Also, I might say that we will start on Wednesday calling the calendar of committees, and on Thursday we hope to take up the Agricultural Department appropriation bill.

RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute and to extend my remarks in

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I have for some time been convinced, not only by observation but by actual experience, that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has been grossly derelict in its obligations to the little-business men of this country. During the last session of the Congress we passed an act which was intended to liberalize loans by the R. F. C., especially to the small-business man, but small business has about the same chance to obtain a loan at the R. F. C. as the proverbial celluloid cat would have to catch an aspestos rat in that land where icicles are unknown.

Now, it is not so with the big "city slickers" who come to Washington and by some sort of mysterious magic secure loans of most any desirable proportion, and upon bases which, to me, is a vulgar violation of at least the spirit of the act.

The case described in the following newspaper article which appeared in the March 4 issue of the Washington Times-Herald, which I have obtained leave to print as a part of my remarks, is a clear prostitution of the law creating the R. F. C., in my opinion:

MERRY-GO-ROUND

(By Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen)

(By Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen)

In the center of the Capital's financial district a historic landmark is being pulled down. It is the old McLean mansion, famous for the days when two New York bands jazzed alternately at opposite ends of the room, when several hundred bottles of champagnewere opened in an evening, and when the elite of Washington danced the New Year into the dawn.

Ned McLean, its owner, was one of the rulers of Washington, a friend of Harding, Fall, and Daugherty.

Today the era of Ned McLean's parties, his house, his power is over. But on the site of this one-time glory is being erected a new building, which demonstrates that, despite an alleged New Deal, the old days of personal pull and privilege have not changed.

Briefly, two officials who resigned from the New Deal have now turned around and borrowed $5,600,000 of Government money from the R. F. C. through their old friend, Jesse Jones, and are now erecting on the McLean site a new office building, into which Jesse Jones will move his R. F. C. In other words, Jesse Jones having advanced Government money to build a building, later will pay out Government money as rent so his two friends can repay their Government money. Government money.

All of which would indicate a profit of about $1,100,000. The two gentlemen who will receive most of this are Col. Horatio "Rash" Hackett, former head of the Public Works Administration under Ickes, and Angelo "Mike" Clas, former Director of the P. W. A. Housing Division.

To get the full story, it is necessary to go back to the pre-Roosevelt days when Clas was a salesman with the Holabird & Root architectural firm in Chicago, and when Hackett was an architect with the same firm. Later Secretary Ickes, also of Chicago, brought the two men to Washington and they became the Castor and Pollux of P. W. A.

Castor and Pollux of P. W. A.

Where one went, so went the other. When Hackett was promoted from Director of Housing to be Assistant Administrator of P. W. A., he got Clas the job of Director of Housing. And when Clas proved a dud as Housing Director, Hackett promoted him to be Assistant Administrator of P. W. A. When Hackett resigned from P. W. A., Clas followed a month later.

Horatio Hackett then became president of Thompson-Starrett, New York contractors, and suddenly put in an appearance in Washington last fall to camp on the R. F. C. doorstep of Jesse Jones. Jones and Hackett are old friends, Jesse having once taken Hackett to the Kentucky Derby in his private car. Mrs. Hackett also came to Washington and was seen with Mrs. Jones almost every day playing bridge and visiting mutual friends.

After all this personal pow-wowing was over, the R. F. C. put out an official and very innocent announcement that it had approved a loan of $5,600,000 to the Lafayette Building Corporation to construct a 12-story office building on the site of the McLean mansion.

MYSTERIOUS DUMMY

No explanation was given regarding the incorporators of the Lafayette Building Corporation, and as far as possible it is kept a mystery to this day. George Rogers, listed as assistant secretary of the corporation, says: "I don't know who the directors are or anything else about the set-up. All I know is that I'm assistant secretary. But I don't have anything to do with the affairs of the company. The whole thing is run from New York.

Jesse Jones' henchmen at the R. F. C. are equally mysterious. Although information regarding Government loans is supposed to be a matter of public record, the R. F. C. refuses to give any information regarding the Lafayette corporation. Any publicity, it says, "might reveal secrets to competitors."

Officials of the American Security & Trust Co., however, trustees officials of the American Security & Trust Co., however, trustees for the McLean estate which sold the property, state that the Lafayette Building Corporation was formed by the Thompson-Starrett Co., of which Col. Horatio Hackett is president.

Furthermore, Thompson-Starrett are constructing the new building while Angelo Clas is listed as architect. Clas, it is also revealed is one of the incorporators of the Lafayette Building Corporation.

In other words, Colonel Hackett, after getting out of the New Deal, set up the Lafayette corporation, borrowed $5,600,000 from the New Deal through his friend, Jesse Jones, then turned around and hired his own firm, Thompson-Starrett, to construct the building, with his old friend, Clas, as architect. But, inasmuch as Clas never has had any architectural experience on anything important, Hackett also hired his old boss, John Holabird, of Chicago, to do the real architectural work. Finally he rented the new building to Jesse Jones, from whom he had borrowed the money.

Interesting fact is that the transaction is perfectly legal. It merely bears a resemblance to the old practices at which the New Deal so sanctimoniously holds up its hands.

Note.—While Jesse Jones was advancing $5,600,000 of R. F. C. funds to his old friends he was refusing thousands of applications from small-business men, with the result that Congress is considering special legislation to obtain funds for small business.

The R. F. C. was created to render financial aid to business in distress. Pray tell me what distress is shown in the instance mentioned in this article. Absolutely none.

This article, Mr. Speaker, breathes implications which I would not dare to make; however, it occurs to me that it presents a case which would be thoroughly investigated.

It might be apropos to state that the writers of this article, Mr. Drew Pearson and Mr. Robert S. Allen, are well known for their loyalty and obsessions for the New Deal, and the fact that they would censure this transaction is certainly

Mr. Speaker, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was originally set up under the administration of President Hoover. I voted for it and, as I recall, it had the support of practically every Member of the Congress. It performed such a magnificent job under the Hoover administration that the Democrats, or rather the new dealers, adopted it when they came into power in 1933 and enlarged upon it. I should regret very much to see this agency, which has rendered such splendid service in the past, get into disrepute, but unless it shows more sympathy and consideration for the little-business men of the country I very much fear that such may be the case.

I recently had up with the R. F. C. a loan for a small manufacturing plant in Knoxville, Tenn. The amount sought was only $25,000. This little factory was in the greatest possible distress, and it was perfectly obvious that unless it could secure this loan it would be forced to "fold up," which would mean the loss of their jobs to fifty or a hundred men and women. The people back of the business were men of the highest integrity, but because of an unsatisfactory business experience which was shown to be due to sabotage they were turned down. They were refused a loan notwithstanding the fact that they were able to show orders for goods which would have soon netted them far more than the loan requested. It is cases such as this that should command the sympathetic consideration of the R. F. C. rather than such artificial cases as that described in the article I have submitted.

I greatly fear, Mr. Speaker, that the small-business men of this country have little to hope for from the R. F. C. as it is being administered today.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a short letter I received from the chairman of the social education committee of the Milwaukee Presbytery, of Milwaukee,

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? There was no objection.

TOBACCO FARMERS OF SOUTHERN WISCONSIN

Mr. BOLLES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute and to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOLLES. Mr. Speaker, I wish to call the attention of the House to the crisis in the tobacco market and the affairs of the tobacco farmers of southern Wisconsin. For years this was one of our great cash crops and formed a large part of the income of the farmers in Rock, Dane, and Columbia Counties. Perhaps the situation is best expressed in the following letter from T. S. Biggar, of Edgerton, Wis., who is a leader in tobacco growing and among his fellow producers. Mr. Biggar writes as follows:

Tobacco growers in this section, and that means quite a large number of your constituents, are right now in a critical situation. I believe something can be done for them and for the general welfare of this tobacco district.

welfare of this tobacco district.

Let me give you a brief sketch of the facts: The 1938 tobacco crop, known federally as type 54, is still practically all on the farms, consequently no money to producers. Ordinarily this tobacco sells and moves off the farm during January and February. This crop is "stemming tobacco" and must eventually be sold to the four stemming firms that operate in this State. It is the general impression here, and my earnest belief, that if events are allowed to take their course, that before summer this Rock and Dane County tobacco district will lose from one-half to a million dollars through a demoralized market.

Last season stemming tobacco brought from 10 to 12 cents a pound. Right now the talk is 5 and 6 cents, but no sales, because growers are holding off and so far their morale is very good despite the financial straits of many. At a meeting of leaders in Stoughton about 3 weeks ago, Andrew Mell, Deforest, Lars Lein, Albion, and myself were chosen as a growers' committee to head a movement attempting to prevent almost certain loss which this district cannot afford.

cannot afford.

we have been working with the college of agriculture, department of markets, and the local Government A. A. A. agencies, and I have proposed to the A. A. A. in Washington that it send representatives to Wisconsin to appear at growers' meetings and discuss the possibility of a Federal emergency loan to individuals where they need it on this tobacco in the sheds. We believe that such a move at this time would keep the poorest growers from breaking the market for all, and that as a direct result the four stemming firms would come into the market and take this crop at a fair price. This appeal was made to Washington a week ago today with no definite reply as yet.

We are confident that this would be a self-liquidating project worth the Government's attention, and that it would not require a very large amount of money. We estimate that there are about 3,000 farmers in this southern Wisconsin district holding about 19,000,000 pounds of tobacco; that possibly 50 percent of them might apply for such loans, which should be at a rate of about 5 cents a pound; tobacco to be kept on farms, which is cheapest and safest place to store. Details would be handled by local A. A. A. set-up, which could administer the project with very little

A. A. set-up, which could administer the project with very little expense. This would work similar to corn loans.

The loan angle is, of course, only one important part of our program. The following brief outline hits the high spots: (1) Secure loan soon to keep desperate growers from breaking market; (2) get change in 1939 A. A. A. benefit program so that growers may get benefits without producing 80 percent of their base acreage, as was the rule; (3) if 1938 crop lays in sheds until planting time (June), secure growers' agreement to drastically reduce 1939 plantings; (4) secure three-way conference (buyers, Government, and growers' committee) to discuss future interests of this important industry.

We have confidence that the situation can be handled if loan proposal goes through, because stocks of this type of tobacco are lowest in 10 years, market outlook for manufacturers is favorable, 55 percent of raw material for established scrap tobacco brands must be obtained from Wisconsin, and manufacturers cannot afford to have 1939 crop shortage in this State.

We know that manufacturers could pay 14 or 15 cents per pound for this tobacco and still show a nice profit; growers would be satisfied with 10-cent average. We are confident that the buyers' much-expressed fear of the quality of this crop is just so much hokum to depress prices.

The affairs of tobacco farmers are critical; the same is true of businessmen in the country towns who have backed them with credit; and tobacco price failure, if it comes, would hit our tobacco communities mighty hard.

BRITISH WOOL EXPORTS

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute and to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I do this to bring to the attention of the House a report not yet published, but . available at the Department of Commerce, relative to the import of woolen goods and materials from England, and to insert with my remarks a comparative table showing the imports in the month of January 1938 as compared with the imports in the month of January 1939 under the newly adopted reciprocal-trade treaty recently made with England, and also a dispatch appearing in the New York Times of March 7, 1939, from London, England, respecting export orders of wool from England.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The matter referred to is as follows:

Imports into the United States for the months of January 1938 and January 1939 and the state of t	Pounds

planes a letter seek view filtede akeer See see alsem en 20 jaar 10 seek seek in 10 seek	1938	1939
Noils	277, 984 91, 371 99, 108 4, 656 79, 990 323, 017 30, 973	1, 007, 119 535, 160 1, 119, 025 11, 936 196, 886 614, 978 9, 584

BRITISH WOOL EXPORTS UP-GAINS FROM ANGLO-AMERICAN TRADE TREATY INDICATED

London, February 24.—The Bradford wool trade reported improvement in export orders this week, and available figures indicated that substantial advantage would be derived from the Anglo-American trade treaty. Great Britain exported 1,204,000 yards of wool textiles to the United States in January, compared with 550,000 in December and 616,000 in January last year.

Manufacturers in the worsted dress-goods section continue to complain about the competition of Italian fabric imports, which, they claim, are offered at below cost. Such imports are increasing, and Bradford firms, convinced that some kind of subsidy is operating, are making representations to the board of trade about the ing, are making representations to the board of trade about the matter.

matter.

Belfast reported a marked improvement in the American linen business, though orders are not of great size. Canadian buyers have also been active in the market. Existing stock is changing hands quickly because replacement at current prices is impossible. The South American market continues to expand.

Factories reported that a good number of looms in the finer end are again working. Household and fancy lines are in demand and the handkerchief output has advanced.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SHANLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection.

There was no objection.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL, 1940

Mr. SCRUGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 4852) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes. Pending that, I ask unanimous consent that general debate on the bill may close at 5 o'clock p. m. today, the time to be equally divided between myself and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich], after which time the first paragraph of the bill shall be read.

Mr. RICH. And with the privilege of amending the first paragraph when we take it up again?

Mr. SCRUGHAM. Yes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nevada moves that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 4852; and pending that motion, asks unanimous consent that general debate on the bill shall conclude at 5 o'clock p. m., the time to be equally divided between himself and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich], after which time the first paragraph of the bill may be read under the 5-minute rule. Is there objection?

the 5-minute rule. Is there objection?

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I inquire if the request means there will be consideration of the first paragraph, or does the request mean that it will just be read?

Mr. SCRUGHAM. It will be just read under the rule and not considered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nevada?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Nevada.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 4852, with Mr. Buck in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered. There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, we are considering the Interior Department appropriation bill for 1940. We have already considered a number of the appropriation bills this year, and I wish to call the attention of the Members to the fact that each and every appropriation bill each and every year is increasing-increasing by leaps and bounds. We are coming to the point in our national life when something must be done. It is imperative. It is compulsory. When we realize what our national income is, when we see what the Members of Congress are considering from time to time in their expenditures, and we find that these bills are all increasing away beyond what the revenues which we receive amount to, it certainly means a wreck ahead unless we stop spending. I have been trying to issue that warning for the past 5 years, but it does not seem to have much effect. It has fallen on deaf ears so far as Congress is concerned.

The statement has been made a great many times by my colleague from Virginia [Mr. Woodrum], "We will see what happens when they bring in the Interior Department appropriation bill," referring to my efforts for economy.

In the first place, I want to say to the Members of Congress that the men who work with me on the subcommittee considering this bill are just as fine men as you will find any place in the world. Every one of them is a real, true, red-blooded American. They are men who look after their own districts, and you cannot blame them for that. They see more of their district than they do of the country. But when we come to the consideration of the bill, my colleague from Virginia asked me what we are going to do when we bring this bill in, and I just have to say that I am in the minority—so far in the minority on this committee that sometimes I can hardly see my way out. But I warn you I am here fighting all the time.

A newspaperman asked me to reply to the statement by Mr. Woodrum of Virginia, "We are going to save it when the Interior Department appropriation bill comes before us." That statement by the gentleman from Virginia has been made a number of times. I can say generally that if I were making the appropriation for the Interior Department I would cut from this bill $40,400,000. It can be done, and it would be for the best interest of America.

Mr. SCRUGHAM. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. Yes; I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Nevada, a most congenial fellow and a real gentleman.

Mr. SCRUGHAM. Would you cut the appropriation for the Pittsburgh Experiment Station of the Bureau of Mines?

Mr. RICH. The gentleman asks me about something that happens to be spent in Pennsylvania. There is an item of $35,000 for that—a lot of money, I must agree. The situation is just this about the Pittsburgh Bureau of Mines Experiment Station: You have there a building and equipment that is worth $500,000. It is going to be of no use very soon for experimental purposes unless the Government buys some land in order that people do not encroach upon this property, which they now own, and get the Government into trouble after a while because they cannot do their experimental work. You can see whether it is an advisable thing to do or not, and I will leave it up to the wisdom of this House if it is not the wise and businesslike thing to do, then I say cut it out.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I yield.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. There is an exactly comparable situation existing in connection with the experiment station of the Forest Service out in California and in Utah, where we have equipment, all constructed, ready to be used, from which very important facts regarding water conservation can be obtained if we only have enough money to staff it. It is in the same situation as that which the gentleman just mentioned with reference to Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. If you will help me cut down Pennsylvania $35,000, I will do it, providing you will cut down this bill $40,400,000, then we will get down to brass tacks. I am not here trying to do something for Pennsylvania when I think we can get along without it. But let me call your attention to this fact: It is the only salvation to our country and to our form of government. Pennsylvania gets only a drop of this bill and others get a lake.

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. RICH. I will in a few moments when I show the gentleman from Washington the statement of the Federal Treasury. [Laughter.]

Since July 1, 1938, this New Deal administration has put the Treasury in the red $2,364,726,000. You have increased the national debt since you first went into office in March 1933 from $19,000,000,000 to $40,000,000,000. Now, you have the responsibility for that, after you promised the economy that you did in your platform of 1932; after you said you were going to give us a good business administration. With 11,000,000 men out of work and now 12,000,000 unemployed. Never in the history of this Nation have we had the ruthless expenditure of funds which we have had in the past 6 years. There is nothing approaching it in any nation in the world. It is a travesty on our American institutions. It is a travesty on American justice; it is a travesty on the American people that we have had such ruthless expenditure of Government funds. It is a blight on our children. There is no accounting for such foolish, unbusinesslike, unethical action as this

New Deal administration is guilty of. After your promise to the American people of economy in government, the promise of consolidation of offices, and the cutting of Government expenses of at least 25 percent.

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. RICH. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. LEAVY. The gentleman has sat by my side for 3 years during hearings on the Interior Department appropriation bills. He has been a consistent fighter for the reduction of appropriations. He is an individual I have learned to admire very much and whose judgment I respect very highly, but whose judgment I think sometimes in appropriation matters is not based upon that fine business sense he dis-

Mr. RICH. I thought the gentleman was going to ask me a question.

plays in his own activities. I want to say to him-

Mr. LEAVY. I am coming to it—in reference to the Pennsylvania item that was included in the Budget, evidence was presented to our committee that it was extremely meritorious. I was delighted to support it upon the case they made before us. I may say to the gentleman that it will be no reflection upon his good judgment if he goes along and supports the item for his own State.

Mr. RICH. The gentleman from Washington is one of the finest fellows I have ever known in my whole life. [Applause.] If the State of Washington ever did a good job, it was when they sent Mr. Leavy to Congress, for if there ever was a man who could get by the Budget Bureau, get by the President of the United States, and get by the Congress, certainly Mr. Leavy is that man, second to none in the whole Congress. A real go-getter. [Applause.]

Mr. LEAVY. I profoundly thank the gentleman for his kind words.

kind words.

Mr. RICH. I told you that the members of this committee were all fine fellows; but if they are not men who know how to get items in this bill for their districts and out of the Congress, then I am no judge of human nature.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. RICH. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.
Mr. McCORMACK. Not for the purpose of entering into any controversy on anything the gentleman stated— Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I yielded for a question only.

Mr. McCORMACK. This is in the interest of keeping the record straight. When a few moments ago the gentleman told us of the outstanding indebtedness of the country, he made somewhat of an error.

Mr. RICH. Oh, no, no; I quoted from the Treasury statement.

Mr. McCORMACK. Pardon me. Former President Hoover left us with an indebtedness of $22,000,000,000, not $19,000,000,000.

Mr. RICH. When the Democrats took over the administration on the 4th of March 1933, the indebtedness was $19,000,000,000 plus. If the gentleman doubts my statement, I refer him to the Treasury figures.

Mr. McCORMACK. But the gentleman must realize, of course, that appropriations for the coming fiscal year had been made. It is true that after the World War the national debt went down to $16,000,000,000, but during the last 3 years of President Hoover's administration it rose $6,000,000,000, so that when he went out of office it stood at $22,000,000,000 plus.

Mr. RICH. The gentleman is wrong. I do not yield further, but the gentleman is wrong. The increase in debt during President Hoover's administration of 4 years was $3,491,-800,000; Roosevelt's 4 years' deficit was $11,500,000,000, or more than three times as much as Mr. Hoover's.

Mr. McCORMACK. All right. I wish the gentleman would look into it.

Mr. RICH. The present administration has gone hay-

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 additional minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. I do not want to get too involved, but in order to correct some of the erroneous impressions that have been spread, let me remind the gentleman that from March 4, 1933, to June 30, 1933, the Democratic administration went into the red $892,000,000. In 1934 the Democratic administration went into the red $3,409,000,000; in 1935 it was $2,-938,000,000; in 1936 it was $4,361,000,000; in 1937 it was $2,707,000,000; in 1938 it was $1,459,000,000. This year you will be $4,000,000,000 in the red. Next year you will be $3,-500,000,000 in the red. Where are you going? It is bankruptcy for you and everybody else. Where are you going to get the money? Here I show you the kind of money you want to start issuing in 6 weeks, rubber money. That is the kind of money the New Deal wants to issue. I prefer to have and we want to have this old-fashioned staple, gold and silver money. Not funny money that the New Deal is now advo-

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for one question affecting the State of Pennsylvania?

Mr. RICH. I do not have time for that. Pennsylvania always has, will, and can take care of itself.

Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania measures the stature of Congressmen by their influence in getting things for their districts. I just attended a committee meeting in which we were told that there is recommended for flood control at Williamsport, Pa.—the town where the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich] resides—several millions of dollars. I just want the people to know that that district, measured by the gentleman's own standard, has a great and efficient Congressman. [Applause.]

Mr. RICH. I have been looking after the Nation.

Mr. RANKIN. Surely he would not let the Williamsport item be taken out.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, expenditures must be cut down. We have reached the point in our national life when we must be sensible. We must bring our expenditures within our income; the two must be brought closer together. Every Member knows this, I am sure. What are you going to do? Can we go on with deficits year after year, $4,000,000,000 this year and $3,500,000,000 next year? It is as reasonable and sensible as anything can be. No man can spend more than his income without getting into trouble. No business can spend more than it takes in or it will go into bankruptcy eventually. What will happen to our Nation if we do not have an income equal to our outgo? We cannot expect our children to stand the burden of our New Deal folly. It is not reasonable, it is not just. It shows your inability to operate the Government. You are "passing the buck" to your children and children's children.

We are going to find ourselves in the same place Germany found itself when that country repudiated its debts of every kind and description and the gentleman from Mississippi, who is chairman of the Veterans' Committee of the House will find that when we repudiate our debts, we will repudiate all the obligations which we owe the ex-service men who fought and thought they were going to have something in the form of pensions on account of the services they rendered to their country in 1918. These debts will be repudiated with all other debts, and we will clean the slate and start all over again. It is going to be a sad, sad day for the American people when we do that.

Mr. Chairman, we can pay our bills if we get down to hard rock and find jobs for the people. Some laws have been enacted during the last 3 or 4 years that must be changed. We might as well face the situation and come to the conclusion that if we want good, honest business in government we will have to take the Government out of business. There is no one who has tried to put the Government in business more than has the gentleman from Mississippi. What do we find? We find that the tax base of this country becomes so narrow that the people cannot stand it. When you put the Government in business you take away from the individual citizen the rights which the Constitution of the United States gave him. You are putting it into a political pot where it will boil over one of these days, with the result there will be inefficient Government operation, and the whole Nation will suffer.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I must yield to the gentleman from Mississippi because I made a statement about him. He is a good fellow, but goes haywire when it comes to the electrical-energy business.

Mr. RANKIN. May I say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich] that before we began this drive in connection with the electrical business, as he calls it, the power interests were levying a tax of $1,500,000,000 a year on the consumers in exorbitant overcharges. Now they are still taxing the people over $1,000,000,000 a year.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, my time is about to expire. They paid the Government taxes, which we lose under this plan of Government ownership. I will have to give further data in reference to this bill when it is read for amendment. It can and must be reduced. I hope we will accomplish it.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. SHANLEY].

Mr. SHANLEY. Mr. Chairman and my colleagues, in beginning my talk on the doctrine of recognition and its instant application to the Spanish Nationalist situation, I cannot but feel encouraged in my development of the subject by the news concerning the Brazilian trade agreements. I confess that I am one of those followers of the hearty good-neighbor doctrine who believe in affording to the nations, large and small, to our southward every available facility of our Nation consistent with the rights and welfare of our Nation.

Thus the threefold aspects of the commercial and financial pacts between Brazil and America seemed especially opportune. The willingness of the Brazilian Government to unharness its exchange market and to create a Central Reserve Bank means that we are counter-attacking against the yoke of restricted German currency and also linking them to our American dollar. On their side their promise to protect our American investors is most timely and reassuring.

I have asked permission of the House to insert a brief outside summary of the features of that manifold treaty. think that it will prove helpful to all of us in the days that are to come, for unless the signs are wrong we will multiply this activity with many other nations.

1. The Export-Import Bank undertakes the extension of credits to Brazil in the amount of $19,200,000 for freeing Brazilian exchange to make possible payments to American exporters covering merchandise heretofore shipped to Brazil and not yet paid for.

2. The Export-Import Bank undertakes to assist in the financing of future exports by American manufacturers and producers to Brazil by granting banking credits under arrangements the details of which will be worked out at the time of the negotiations for this aid.

3. The Washington Government proposes to ask Congress for authority to provide up to $50,000,000 of gold to Brazil for its Central Reserve Bank, repayment to be made from Brazil's future production of gold.

4. The Washington Government will undertake to furnish to Brazil such agricultural and other technical aides as will enable it to diversify its production and increase its national development.

5. Brazil will issue an edict freeing its exchange to enable its importers to acquire American products.

importers to acquire American products.

6. Brazil proposes to guarantee to American investors treatment equal to that now or hereafter accorded its own nationals, this in the face of pending ultranationalistic legislation that might otherwise affect adversely United States interests.

7. By diversification of its production Brazil will undertake extensive rubber operations, which will have a tendency to free the United States from dependence upon other areas for its supplies, as well as to mitigate price shifts that have been so disconcerting in the past to automobile tire and other rubber goods manufacturers in the United States.

United States. Under a separate agreement made with Foreign Bondholders Protective Council, Inc., in New York, beginning July 1, 1939, Brazil will resume service on a temporary basis on its dollar-bond indebt-edness of $357,000,000 that has been in default since November 1937, and after 2 years will seek permanent readjustment of this

The estimate in authoritative circles of a possible total of $120,-000,000 in financial aid to Brazil was reached in this way: $50,000,-000 in gold credits for the Central Reserve Bank, $20,000,000 in acceptance credits extended by the Export-Import Bank, and up to $50,000,000 in Export-Import Bank credits to American exporters and manufacturers to finance operations with Brazil. The actual total that might be involved will depend upon circumstances in the future.

I think when the history of this period is written, which will cover the great war that has existed for foreign ex-change, the most hidden, the most difficult subject we have today, and any nation has, it will demonstrate conclusively that our efforts in Brazil will have brought us untold benefits.

Mr. HINSHAW. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHANLEY. I yield to the gentleman from California.
Mr. HINSHAW. I do not fully understand the move that is reported in the papers today. Does it mean that Brazil intends to resume the payment of interest on its indebtedness to the private citizens of the United States?

Mr. SHANLEY. As of July 1, that is the understanding. Mr. HINSHAW. They intend, then, to place their entire debt structure to the United States in good order?

Mr. SHANLEY. Yes. The terms of the agreement just completed between the United States and Brazil, containing official recognition of the status and rights of United States holders of defaulted foreign dollar bonds, set an important precedent in the Government's policy toward those bondholders, according to Wall Street opinion. In most former trade pacts the bondholders have been ignored and left to deal independently with the debtor nation. The State Department's new concept of the position of the holders of defaulted dollar obligations is interpreted as an encouraging step which may bring some relief eventually to the holders of a long list of foreign bonds who have received little or no income for several years. Here is a comment in a news-

As one phase of the new Brazilian agreement, it is recalled, the Brazilian Government has promised to resume service on July 1, next, on the $357,000,000 of dollar bonds of Brazilian origin. That next, on the $357,000,000 of dollar bonds of Brazilian origin. That this disclosure came as a surprise to the financial community has been demonstrated by the spectacular advance in all of the Brazilian issues in the last 3 days, many of them having doubled their value in this short space of time. They are now selling at the highest prices since late in 1937, or just after the collapse of the unexpired Aranha plan.

There remain undisclosed, too, many important details of the plan to resume debt service, as well as contingencies, to justify unrestrained optimism on the part of the bondholders, according to some observers in the financial community. It will be several weeks before any announcement will be made of the details of the scale and amount of payments to be made under a transitorial arrangement which has been discussed by Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, Brazilian Foreign Minister, and the Foreign Bondholders Protective Council, Inc.

Does that answer the question of the gentleman?

Mr. HINSHAW. I hope it does. I hope to see the debt payments being resumed right away. I do not see any particular reason why we should lend them money for trade purposes when they refuse to pay their regular debts.

Mr. SHANLEY. Of course, the distinction between private debts and commercial debts is the distinction between what we are doing today and what we did after the World War through the Debt Commission. Of course, the gentleman's party has given us an undoubted example and an undoubted precedent in that direction, although a most unfortunate example.

Mr. HINSHAW. I am not so much interested in precedents, and I do not happen to know just what the gentleman refers to, but I do say that much money was loaned by the American people to municipalities as well as to the state governments of Brazil, Sao Paulo, and so forth. Certainly they ought to be able to resume payments on such debts if they can do a good commercial business with the United States.

Mr. SHANLEY. I think the gentleman will agree with me that the question of how much we are going to get out of it is within the knowledge of the State Department. I do not think they would forswear our opportunities by unduly indulging in a loan where there was real uncertainty of getting the money back.

Mr. HINSHAW. Can the gentleman place in the RECORD what payments are to be resumed on July 1?

Mr. SHANLEY. Yes; I believe I can.

Discussions between His Excellency Senhor Oswaldo Aranha, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Brazil, and officials of the Government of the United States were summarized by the State Department as follows:

The Government of Brazil plans to free the exchange market

The Government of Brazil plans to free the exchange market for commercial transactions and to facilitate the transfer of an equitable return upon investments made in Brazil by United States citizens under normal conditions in the Brazilian balance of international payments. In order to facilitate this improved exchange situation the Export-Import Bank will extend appropriate acceptance credits to meet amounts due American exporters for imports from the United States.

The Minister has likewise engaged in discussions with the Foreign Bondholders Protective Council, Inc., relative to the status of the Brazilian dollar debt and has announced that the Government of Brazil intends to resume payments on July 1, 1939, on account of interest and amortization on such debts in accordance with a transitional arrangement, the details of which will be made known following his return to Rio de Janeiro.

The Minister has also stated that it is the hope and expectation of his Government that with the improvement in its foreign commerce which it now foresees, a permanent settlement which will be equitable and satisfactory to all interests involved will follow upon the expiration of the Government of Brazil to issue a decreelaw freeing the exchange market for commercial transactions. This will ensure the provision of funds in payments for imports from the United States in accordance with the note of the Brazilian Ambassador to the Secretary of State of the United States of February 2, 1935. This measure will also facilitate the transfer of an equitable return upon investments made in Brazil by United States citizens under normal conditions in the Brazilian balance of international payments.

The Brazilian Government will give further study to this matter.

of international payments.

The Brazilian Government will give further study to this matter. I believe that, as a result of the discussions between the authorized representatives of our respective Governments during the course of my visit, a substantial accord has been reached as to the basis of these provisions and for the necessary cooperation between our institutions.

Mr. HINSHAW. I thank the gentleman. I have constituents in my district who have invested their life's savings in these bonds and who have been suffering severe privations because they defaulted. These people will be happy to know that payments are to be resumed.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SHANLEY. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CULKIN. I agree with the gentleman. I believe this is a step forward. Of course, I believe it is necessarily a departure from the multilateral trade agreements the Secretary of State has been promulgating. I think it is distinctly a progressive step in the recapture of the South American business.

May I say to the gentleman, the Brazilians, who are our best friends and biggest clients in South America, are not Spanish but Portuguese?

Mr. SHANLEY. I said the Iberian Peninsula, if the gentleman will recall.

Mr. CULKIN. I did not hear the gentleman say that. Mr. SHANLEY. I am sorry. I thank the gentleman for his contribution because I believe it is a definite step. have said repeatedly, and I know Americans are apt to forget it, that the Portuguese element is there, but I covered all races by referring to the links with the Iberian Peninsula. The solidarity of these people, their independence, and their desire to continue with us on the basis of the heartiest of goodwill is probably best evidenced by the reactions of those who have had the good fortune to meet the Foreign Minister of Brazil, Oswaldo Aranha.

However, I am convinced more than ever that in our foreign policy we must adhere to the question of our vital interests. I will go anywhere with anyone at any time provided he shows me our vital interest is concerned. I said before that the extension of American interests in the Mediterranean by the Republican administration on one side and the extension of American vital interests by the Wilsonian adventures are examples of bipartisans' leaps into a diplomatic dark hitherto unthinkable. I make no comment on what both administrations have done. That is too long a chapter.

I have tried to believe, and I hope to believe, that the entire foreign policy of our Nation is something that must be viewed from a nonpartisan point of view. Unless we do that we cannot compete with the British. I pay them the tribute that they are among the most astute, able, and shrewdest diplomats in the world today. I have never been classed as an Anglophile. Their government, their finance, and their business are tied up as one unit. They give that department their best men and their best thoughts. Wherever they move they move as a unit. I am hopeful that this unity of all of our departments—for latterly we have seen the Treasury Department enter into dealing with foreign policy; we have seen the National Munitions Board dealing with foreign policy, and, of course, we understand the ramifications of the State Department-will be a most helpful thing.

I am not one of those who believe that we can get much by the speeches that are being made. I believe we are doing more by this day-by-day contact with not only the Central and South Americans but Europeans and others. I believe the proper way is the practical way, and that is why I started this discussion hoping that we might revive what the Spanish people have done for us. Do not forget that in the stormy days of 1778 loans and subsidies were made to us by the Spanish governments. Do not forget that the subsidies and loans of the Spanish people amounted to almost $6,000,000. Do not forget that the mere fact that they were alined with us vis-à-vis England had something of a moral effect. [Applause.]

May I continue on?

While the Brazilian people are linked more with Portugal than Spain it must be remembered that the greater part of South America has cultural, spiritual, and racial ties with Spain. Their interest in that tragic land is understood. What we will do in the matter of Spanish recognition will be watched by them.

The Christian Science Monitor had a very able editorial in its paper yesterday, and I may say that paper probably has made more profound, scholarly, and nonpartisan comments on foreign affairs than any other journal or publication in the world. I shall ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD and include therein a short editorial of not more than 14 lines. Here it is:

The resignation of President Azana and the ousting of Premier

The resignation of President Azana and the ousting of Premier Negrin by a revolt of military leaders leaves little in Madrid that can be called a Spanish Republic. Even while respecting the desperate courage which says, "We will fight to the death or have an honorable peace," one must hope that General Casado's seizure of power will not prolong a war in which the Spanish people as a whole have little now to gain.

Starting as a representative government, the loyalists have gradually lost the right to speak for more than a fraction of the nation and have no stronger moral claim than the original military insurgents. It would be well now to recognize that their democratic ideals, insofar as they transcend personal or partisan interest, will be best worked out in peaceful lines. The tenacity with which the Republic has hung on proves that those ideals have vitality and gives hope that they will revive in Spain, whoever controls the Government.

The alacrity with which both Britain and France have hastened to accord recognition to the Nationalist forces is such as to cause us instantaneous and, I may say, permanent interest. Why are these great commercial nations so interested and we seemingly so hesitant? That is a problem that we in the Congress are naturally concerned with.

Mr. Chairman, I am going to place in the RECORD the history of recognition in this country. I shall start with that distinguished statesman, Daniel Webster, who said that partisan politics in foreign policy ends at the seashore.

The doctrine of recognition is, of course, one of the outstanding questions of today. I want to say right from the start that is a high prerogative of the executive department. It has been an undoubted privilege of the President to exercise this power in an almost exclusive manner. He has a legal basis for that, despite the fact that there is no direct provision in the Constitution. Inferentially also a number of other powers are placed in the President which may give him that right. The power to appoint ambassadors and public ministers is subject to the confirmatory power of the Senate, to be sure, but while the policy may indicate that the President should receive senatorial confirmation of his appointments, diplomatic agents are selected frequently by the President upon his own authority.

The sending of an agent may not be the equivalent of a grant of complete recognition, but it may constitute an acknowledgment of the de facto existence of the government in question. In addition the President may appoint ambassadors and ministers while Congress is not in session, and thus afford complete recognition though senatorial confirmation may not be secured.

Beyond this the President has complete power to receive ambassadors and other public ministers and recognition accorded by the granting of exequators. I have stated also that the right of initiating treaties belongs to the President, and thus from this power he has these great prerogatives. Professor Corwin says:

The other methods of according recognition are even more clearly within the hands of the Chief Executive. The issuing of new letters of credence to ministers and foreign officers who have already been accredited is entirely a Presidential act. The same observabeen accredited is entirely a Presidential act. The same observa-tion holds true of the recognition granted by a formal acknowledg-ment of the existence of a new government or a new state—the ex-press declaration is made by the President, subject to no legal re-strictions. Thus the President is in a position of vantage. His power to recognize depends upon the methods which he takes, but at most his power is limited legally by the Senate in only an indirect meanure. indirect manner.

indirect manner.

Even if we should admit that Congress, incidentally to discharging some legislative function like that of regulating commerce, might in some sense recognize a new state of government, the question still remains how it would communicate its recognition, having the power neither to dispatch nor to receive diplomatic agents. As we said of the States of the Confederation, Congress is as to other governments both "deaf and dumb." Why, then, claim for it a power which it could not possibly use save in some roundahout, and inconclusive fashion? about and inconclusive fashion?

Of course there has come into modern diplomacy a theory known as the so-called Stimson doctrine, virtually placing recognition upon a moral basis. It is also known as the concept of nonrecognition as a sanction. An authority has

Secretary Stimson also points out three effects following from such a policy: First, nonrecognition of the fruits of aggression obtained by violation of the treaty; second, it tends to strengthen the sanctity of treaties; and third, it marks a milestone in the development of actual international cooperation when war threatens the world. It is only the first of these effects—nonrecognition of the fruits of aggression obtained by the violation of a treaty—that is to be considered here.

The most recent development in the recognition policy of the

The most recent development in the recognition policy of the United States, and one which has now been accepted by most of the members of the international community, is that which Secre-tary Stimson outlined in his note to China and Japan of January 7, 1933, which declared that the United States would not recognize 7, 1933, which declared that the United States would not recognize any situation, treaty, or agreement brought about by means contrary to the Pact of Paris. It thereby implied the nonrecognition of new states or governments. It is a departure from a de facto policy of recognition dependent for its success upon the joint action of all the members of the international community and makes of the recognition process a collective procedure whose ultimate effectiveness depends upon the power of moral force.

At the same time Professor Lowell, of Harvard, in an address before the Foreign Policy Association has declared that this policy is one which rather than preventing war would tend to lead the world into war and that it was an ineffective instrument to right what Secretary Stimson and President Hoover believed to be wrong.

Dr. Lowell at the time had very pointedly asked-

If we fail to recognize Manchuria, can we recognize the tariffs, taxes, laws and regulations, and officials set up there under Japanese control? Our merchants can trade at their own risks, but can we protect them?

Of course, it has been suggested that Congress could by passing a statute over the Presidential veto grant recognition to a new government. However, this has never been at-tempted and never will as that is a departure in pure Practically every state has a right to send recognition to another state on such terms as they may see fit to impose. According to Rivier:

Recognition is the assurance given to a new state that it will be permitted to hold its place and rank, in the character of an independent political organism, in the society of nations.

Charles Cheny Hyde, in his "International Law Chiefly as Interpreted and Applied to the United States," has this to States are free to accord recognition on such terms as they may see fit to impose. A group of states contemplating collective recognition may lay down those which it deems imperative. According to the Treaty of Berlin of 1878, Bulgaria was recognized as an autonomous and tributary principality of the Sultan of Turkey, but was a Christian government and a national milita; Servia and Rumania were recognized subject to the condition that complete religious toleration should prevail within the territories of those countries; and in the case of Rumania, the further condition was imposed that certain specified territory should be restored to Russia.

If the terms on which recognition is conceded be violated by the new state, the group of states according recognition may assert the right to intervene for the purpose of establishing a state of affairs in accordance with the condition specified. Experience has shown, however, that the exercise of such a right is likely to be ineffective. Consequently a new system has been devised and applied with reference, as has been observed, to certain of the new states of Europe, as in the Treaty of June 28, 1919, between the principal associated and allied powers, on the one hand, and Poland on the other.

the other

the other.

It has been observed that European and other states have found it possible to maintain diplomatic relations with countries not possessed of or attached to that civilization which is commonly described as European, without recognizing those countries for all purposes as states of international law.

The recognition of a foreign state is a matter peculiarly within the province of the political as distinct from the judicial department of the Government. The position taken by the former is rigidly followed by the latter. As Sir William Grant expressed it in 1809:

"It always belongs to the government of the country to determine in what relation any other country stands toward it; that is a point upon which courts of justice cannot decide."

Such is the position of the courts of the United States.

I hope, therefore, that our State Department, the strongest proponent of the good-neighbor policy of our South American neighbors, will be able to examine this question with their usual sympathy. If they do, I believe we can present to the descendants of the Iberian Peninsula added evidence that America is sincerely expounding the good-neighbor policy. We want them to forget those acts in our diplomatic history that have been responsible for harmful repercussions. We have done much during the last 6 years to eradicate its unfortunate reactions.

Obviously the problem in its entirety is not easy, but we have much in common with these great neighbors to the South. They, too, were pioneers in this New World. They threw off the shackles of foreign dynasties. They tried to avoid participation in the quarrels of Europe and knew their best defense meant separation from these quarrels. They are closer to the democratic form of government than they are to the European models of monarchy or despotism. I believe, however, that our approach should always be one of cooperation. The way we invited the ABC nations to help us work out a doctrine of recognition for Mexico before the war should be typical of our methods of approach in the future. We want them to feel that the Monroe Doctrine is just as much their doctrine as it is ours, and its success must rest with them also.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Mc-

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, it is apparent from the news of the past few days of happenings in so-called loyalist Spain that the charges that the Communists controlled and dominated that government are correct.

It is also true that there has been a revolt in that part of Spain and that those in control have been overthrown, This means that the so-called loyalist government is nonexistent.

Therefore the question arises as to what government the present Spanish Ambassador represents. He is the accredited representative of the so-called loyalist Spain, but that government, according to reports, does not exist any more. According to international law he no longer has any status as an ambassador, and the necessary steps should be taken to meet and handle this situation. Our approval of his cre-dentials should be withdrawn. He no longer represents a foreign government even under the conditions that exist in Spain today

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield.

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. He has about the same status as the Ambassador from Ethiopia.

Mr. McCORMACK. Exactly; except that the Ambassador from Ethiopia is entitled to more sympathy.

When the Soviet Union was recognized it was after public utterances had been made by Senator Borah, Senator La Follette, and others that the friendship of 165,000,000 of Russians must be considered. There were many of us then, as now, who doubted the advisability of such action in view of the antagonism of Communist Russia to all other nations of the world, and particularly to democracies. Not only has Soviet Russia represented a political, social, and economic theory in direct antagonism to our country but it harbors the Third Internationale, dedicated to world revolution. This situation exists today despite hypocritical protestations to the contrary by the Third Internationale and by the American section of the Communist Party.

However, the argument was made that we should evidence feelings of friendship for the people of Soviet Russia, many of whom are not in sympathy with communism and the vicious dictatorial form of government that dominates them. The same argument, to say the least, applies with equal force to Nationalist Spain. However, there is an additional reason from the angle that the government of Nationalist Spain is not of the vicious and destructive type as is Soviet Russia. There is also the broad reason that the government of Nationalist Spain represents the great majority of the people of that country. It has shown its ability to function. It is the only government now existing in Spain. The so-called loyalist government has been overthrown. It is now nonexistent.

It is not our prerogative to dictate to the people of other nations the form of government they shall possess. We would like to see the peoples of all the nations of the world possessed of democratic institutions of government. We hope the peoples of the totalitarian nations will soon demand and obtain personal liberty and those essentials which make for a democracy. It is only under a democracy that personal liberty can exist as a right. It is only under a democracy that religious liberty, freedom of speech and of the press, of the right of freedom of assembly under the law, of the right of petition, the cornerstone of personal liberty, and the rights of the individual in the possession of his own dignity and personality, such as the personal rights of the individual in the sanctity of the home life, in the possession of his property, of his right of trial by a jury, and so forth, can exist, as a right, without destruction or abridgement by government itself

While our Government and our people have a right to express their views when persecutions and oppression exist in other lands, usually in the first instance by offering our good offices to try to remove or alleviate such conditions, as a condition of recognition of a nation, we should not, directly or indirectly, impose any conditions, particularly as to the form of government that another people should establish.

If a nation such as Soviet Russia openly admits its enmity of our form of government and harbors or permits or establishes agencies to engage in efforts to subvert our Government, we would be justified in withholding recognition. That situation does not exist in this case.

There are other compelling reasons why we should act at once, without regard to what other nations have done, and that is as a piece of evidence as we are deeply interested in Central and South American countries. The recognition at once of Nationalist Spain would add greatly to our prestige among the people of those nations.

We should not permit agitators of communism and their front in this country, their intellectual and chaotic liberal allies, to interfere with the proper action being taken. We should not permit any agitation of any kind to interfere with what is for the best interest of our country. In accordance with international law, it is apparent that a clear case for recognition exists. That duty rests with the executive branch of our Government. It is my opinion, and the opinion of millions of Americans, that such action should be taken at once. [Applause.]

Mr. SCRUGHAM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Colmer].

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Chairman, I shall not discuss this morning any international situation, nor shall I discuss anything that is foreign to the legislation that the Committee is now considering. I invite attention briefly to one phase of the bill, a phase of the bill that I discussed a year ago when this matter which I am going to discuss was under consideration. We have heard this morning a very learned and, I think, appropriate talk upon the condition of the Treasury by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich]. Sometimes we want to criticize our friend from Pennsylvania about some of the things that he says, but I make public acknowledgment of the debt of gratitude to him for the position that he takes in the matter of being watchdog of the Treasury. I think it is time that we should overcome partisanship in the matter of public expenditures. We are faced with a $40,000,000,000 national debt. We are going into debt at the rate of $10,000,-000 a day. In other words, we are spending $10,000,000 a day more than the national governmental income. That certainly should be a stop, look, and listen sign; and we all realize, however much we might be interested in getting money for our particular districts, however much we might be interested in approving these Utopian schemes and having humanity relieved, that we are bound to realize sooner or later that we will have to stop this spending some place.

With these few introductory remarks, I address myself particularly to an item in the appropriation bill on page 60 that appropriates approximately a million and a half dollars-one might say a small sum these days, but a million and a half dollars that goes into this ten million daily deficit-for the purpose of buying reindeer up in Alaska and turning them over to the natives. That is a fine idea, as I pointed out on the floor of the House a year ago when the authorization was under consideration, but it is purely utopian. As I said then, it would be a fine thing, and everyone, I am sure, would like to see the Eskimos receive this gratuity from the hands of the Government, with the possible exception of the taxpayers of the country. As I pointed out before, it might be a fine thing to go out into the West in the mountains there and gather up all the billy goats and turn them over to the native people out there, or it might be a fine thing to go into the South Seas and gather up all of the turtles and turn them over to the native people on the adjacent islands.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

yield?

Mr. COLMER. Yes.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Just to say to the gentleman that the billy goats out there are too poor for the people to eat.

Mr. COLMER. I am glad to know that because then I know that we are not going into that business, but it is almost ludicrous when you come to think of the extent to which we go in trying to help somebody. I have no interest in this matter except that I realize that sooner or later we must stop the expenditure of public money.

What is the history of this matter? It is very brief, and if I am in error I want someone to point it out, because I am as interested in seeing justice done as anyone else. The history of the proposition is that some gentlemen named Lomen went up there and acquired these herds of reindeer. They constructed slaughterhouses and corrals and all these necessary things for the purpose of what? Of engaging in a doubtful venture of making money—not to help the Eskimos. Later they found out it was not a successful venture—and all of this is in the hearings—but I say something now that is not in the hearings, but which we all know to be true, and that is that thing having failed they are looking to the Federal Government to pull their chestnuts out of the fire and have it acquire this herd of reindeer. According to the hearings there are approximately 500,000 reindeer in Alaska and according to the table inserted in the hearings 260,000 of those reindeer are claimed by the Lomen people, and the Lomen people are broke and want to sell these deer to the Government so that your taxpayers and my taxpayers will pay for them so that they may be given to the Eskimo, ostensibly, but in reality to relieve these gentlemen who have engaged in an unsuccessful venture. I wish you would all read the hearings on this matter. I was impressed by some things said by some members of the Committee on Appropriations about the matter. I notice that the ranking member on the subcommittee referred to it as a white elephant on the hands of the Lomen people, and in another place another member of the Committee on Appropriations asked the following question:

Do you think it is the duty of the taxpayers to go in there and save these people who made that investment?

That is a member of the Committee on Appropriations who is speaking and that question is in the hearings. That is what we are asked to do. We are asked to do that at a time when every effort is being made to reestablish the confidence of the people in their Government and to hold out the olive branch as a token to the business interests whom we are to tax to purchase the reindeer. Is it not a fine thing to approach the taxpayers, the businessmen, with an olive branch in one hand and a stiletto in the other? If we are going to ask business to cooperate, if we are going to try to get this Government back on a sound, fundamental basis, the way to do it is to carry an olive branch in both hands. I know there is probably a difference of opinion on this thing. I do not think we ought to go into this venture. I made the fight upon it when the authorization bill was under consideration. I regard it as my duty as a Member of this body to again call attention to it on this occasion. It is my purpose, at the proper place, to offer an amendment to strike out this appropriation which is for approximately $1.500,000. Mind you, that is just an entering wedge. That is where the Government goes into the reindeer business. It will cost untold millions to maintain it in the future.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 12 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Curtis].

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Chairman and Members of the House of Representatives, I wish to speak to you for a few moments to focus your attention upon a much-neglected valley in my district. To prevent confusion, let me state at the outset that this problem of which I speak is not included in the bill now being considered. I merely take this opportunity to state my case. I believe in the justness and fairness of this Congress, and I expect to come before you again with a more definite request.

If you will refer to the map here before you, you will notice that I have marked a river in red. This river rises in Colorado and enters Nebraska near the corner where the States of Colorado, Nebraska, and Kansas converge. It flows eastward across Nebraska, through the district which I have the honor to represent, through the counties of Dundy, Hitchcock, Red Willow, Furnas, Harlan, Franklin, Webster, and Nuckolls. It then leaves the State of Nebraska and goes down into Kansas and finds its way into the Kansas River and thence into the Missouri River.

In the spring of 1935 there was a terrific flood in this valley. A wall of water came rushing down this valley, leaving devastation and misery in its wake. Homes were destroyed. Livestock drowned. Farm machinery, implements, and grain were carried away and utterly destroyed. The finest farm land in the world was covered with debris and several feet of fine sand and thus rendered worthless. Many miles of highways and railroad were utterly destroyed. Transportation was suspended and for many days there was no mail service.

I have mentioned some of the property losses briefly. The human loss in that flood was astounding. Somewhere between 100 and 140 people lost their lives in that terrifying disaster. You cannot go into a community but what you will find families scarred by the effects of that disaster. The tremendous loss of human life in that flood of 1935 makes it one of the major disasters of our country.

Although almost 4 years have elapsed since that flood, not one cent of Government relief has come to that valley. Not one bit of protection has been provided against a recurrence of such a flood. Not one dollar has been appropriated to harness and utilize this water and pour it onto the parched lands of those sturdy, honest, and hard-working farmers of that district. May I say here that this valley not only needs some protection against floods but it needs some assistance to utilize this water in bringing irrigation to what was once a fine productive territory.

I realize that the Congress of the United States has never before been asked to do anything for this valley. Those heretofore in charge of assisting this valley, with honest and faithful intentions, sought the aid of the Public Works Administration. The P. W. A. considered this project, and it appeared that it would be allowed; then this New Deal agency made a startling discovery. They discovered the name of the river. It is the Republican River. The result was, the P. W. A. picked up their papers, ran away, and disallowed the project.

Now, this last statement was uttered in the spirit of jest. I do not believe that the P. W. A. disallowed this project because the river was named Republican. But I do think the rejection of those projects along that river was not justified. But be that as it may, no help has come to the people of that territory, and I am here to say that they are entitled to it.

Now, let me say a word to certain of my colleagues who are inclined to oppose all irrigation and reclamation projects. To turn a deaf ear to this problem would be to render a great injustice to a fine people. To bring flood control and irrigation to the Republican Valley of Nebraska would not bring into cultivation any land heretofore uncultivated. This territory has been settled a long time. The farmers are sturdy, hard-working people. They have built their homes there and they have been excellent taxpayers. They represent the highest kind of American citizenry. Foreign "isms" can make no headway there.

They have a splendid soil. It is deep and it can receive and use water to a good advantage in most any season of the year. It is in that section of the country where we never do get quite enough rainfall. The productivity of the soil has gradually been reduced and they have reached that point that unless they receive irrigation they cannot continue to be self-sustaining.

I cannot overemphasize the needs of this valley. It means the preservation of farms and homes for which men have fought for a half a century. The peculiar hardships that have befallen the Republican Valley, together with the general prevailing conditions, have left this territory in want and destitution. I have in mind one county where there will be no money in the public treasury to pay their local officials for about a year.

To do something for this valley would be the best and highest type of national defense in which this Congress could invest. It would restore economic independence and a wholesome morale to America's first line of defense—a group of its great people. [Applause.]

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CURTIS. I yield.

Mr. CULKIN. The gentleman is making a very able speech. Does not the gentleman believe that these areas which have been settled and established by the blood and sweat of these pioneers might better get help so that they may continue to be self-sustaining, through the medium of water supply, than that vast new areas should be reclaimed in other parts of the country?

Mr. CURTIS. I agree with the gentleman, and I thank him for his contribution.

Mr. CULKIN. In other words, they should have the first call upon the Republic.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CURTIS. I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. Is there any water power in that river to be developed?

Mr. CURTIS. There is.

Mr. RANKIN. How much?

Mr. CURTIS. I do not know.

Mr. RANKIN. If there is water power in this river, it ought to be developed for power purposes as well as for flood control and irrigation purposes. You can save the water there and generate power for those people and at the same time control the floods and use the water for irrigation.

Mr. CURTIS. I might say that it is within the territory served by one of the Nation's major hydroelectric projects already.

Mr. RANKIN. I understand that.

Mr. CURTIS. For that reason, I understand that project is not in favor of this project developing electricity, because of the limited market.

Mr. RANKIN. The reason they think the market is limited is because they have not been using electricity for anything except lights and few small appliances, but when the people of that area begin to use electricity for the purposes for which it was created, you will find you will not have enough of it. You are speaking about the tri-counties project, are you not?

Mr. CURTIS. I am.

Mr. RANKIN. I have been over both the tri-counties project and the Loop River project. Both of them will not actually supply the needs of those people when they begin to use electricity for the purposes for which it is intended. So if you have power in this Republican River of any appreciable amount, it seems to me the gentleman should get at it in one of two ways. One of them would be to ask for the creation of an authority to develop the entire river. Another one would be for a survey for the development of a dam for flood control and irrigation purposes under the Flood Control Act that was passed last year.

Mr. CURTIS. I may say the people of that valley sought something like that, and the gentlemen over in the Public Works Administration said "no."

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CURTIS. I yield.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Will the gentleman state again for the benefit of the House the number of people who lost their lives in that 1935 disaster?

Mr. CURTIS. The number of people has been estimated at around 110. That is known dead. There were undoubtedly a number of people, transients and the like, in the valley, as the main line of the Burlington Railroad, as well as Highway No. 6, follow that valley. We do not know how many people were actually drowned.

Mr. BOLLES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CURTIS. I yield.

Mr. BOLLES. Is there any navigation on that river?

Mr. CURTIS. There is not.

Mr. BOLLES. If you put power dams in there and had an electric plant for the purpose of distributing electricity, the price would not be reduced by navigation paid by the tax-

Mr. CURTIS. I might say that I do not want the interests of those people to be sacrificed upon the altar of any power dispute. I am not hostile to those things necessarily, but primarily what they want is protection against floods and something to make their crops grow.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Nebraska has expired.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SHAFER] such time as he desires.

Mr. SHAFER of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I take this occasion to commend the subcommittee in charge of this legislation for its action in recommending an increase in the appropriation for Freedmen's Hospital this year. It is my understanding that the increase, amounting to $30,740, has been recommended to enable hospital authorities to correct unfavorable work conditions at the institution by hiring needed additional help and, in some instances, to raise wages.

It is to be regretted, however, that the committee has failed to recognize a serious situation existing at the hospital—that of making compulsory deductions from employees' wages for board and room, regardless of whether these facilities are used. A slight additional appropriation, properly earmarked, would have taken care of this question.

As has been pointed out in the hearings of this committee, nurses, waiters, waitresses, and five members of the dietary staff of Freedmen's Hospital have compulsory deductions made from their salaries for board and room whether or not they eat or stay at the hospital. I am certain most Members of Congress will agree that this practice is unfair and undemocratic and should be abolished. I would like to see a committee amendment to this legislation calling for a slight additional earmarked appropriation to enable authorities of Freedmen's Hospital to end this practice.

I feel it is unjust to charge Government employees for meals they do not consume and for lodgings they do not use. These employees should be permitted the option of taking their meals at the hospital or outside and should be given the option of living outside of the hospital, especially if they have families.

A similar problem, although worse, exists in all veteran facilities where compulsory deductions from already meager wages are made for quarters, subsistence, and laundry, regardless of whether these facilities are used. And the unbelievable situation in this connection is that in many instances the Government makes a profit through these deductions.

This is an evil that should be recognized and abolished by this Congress. Quarters, subsistence, and laundry should be made optional in all Government institutions, and where deductions are made, certainly only actual costs should be charged. H. R. 2402, now pending before the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation, would abolish this unjust practice. I call upon all Members of this Congress to assist me in my efforts to bring this legislation to the floor of this House for consideration.

Because of the practice of compulsory deductions from wages, employees in veterans' facilities throughout the country are maintaining their families on less than W. P. A. wages. At Camp Custer, Mich., in my district, attendants at the veterans' facility receive $1,020 per year salary, from which is deducted $396 for quarters, subsistence, and laundry, and $35.70 per year for retirement deduction under civil service, or total deductions of $431.70. This leaves them $588 per year to support themselves and their families, or a net pay per month of $49.02.

At Camp Custer there are 52 attendants, with an equal number of dependents, receiving from $1,080 to $1,260 per year, who, because of these compulsory deductions, are forced to live on $588 a year.

This unfair practice should be abolished, and I urge Members of this Congress to assist me in my efforts. Let us show those Government employees who are affected by this practice that we are seeking to be fair. [Applause.]

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 25 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WHITE].

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, it is my intention to confine my remarks to the Interior Department appropriation bill which is under consideration here today. I am sure you have all noticed that this bill includes appropriations totaling approximately $160,000,000. This represents a cut of $6,000,000 below the figures presented by the Budget, but it also represents an increase of approximately $15,000,000 over the same appropriation bill last year. This in my opinion affords an excellent example of the never-ending spiral of Government bureaucracy. Included in this measure are many extremely worthy functions of government. There is no question but what they have a valuable place in the service we expect the Government to render its people, but I wonder if they have been considered and will be considered in the light of the insufficiency of Government revenue to meet more imperative expenditures? You and I all know that there is a necessity for a reduction of the costs of government, and that upon such a reduction, and its amount, depends the speed with which the country will be placed back on the road to genuine recovery, with a restoration of private employment. It seems to me we ought to consider the bill in the first place from the standpoint of expenditures which are not justified; and in the second place from the standpoint of expenditures which even though they may be extremely worthy, ought, at least, to be reduced in keeping with the present necessity for reducing the cost of every operation of government. The Government spends money in such vast sums that the average individual cannot grasp them. I confess an utter inability to envision these huge sums. I cannot comprehend such things unless I can reduce them to some kind of individual experience. You know and I know that when, as individuals, we encounter a condition whereby we make less than we spend, there inevitably comes a day when we have to bring our outgo in line with our income; we have to forego things we consider worth while, things we regard as very desirable. This analogy must be carried forward into the realm of government, for government itself is nothing more nor less than a magnified cross section of the citizens it governs.

There are items in this bill aside from the more worthy things that ought to be reduced, if not eliminated, to bring about the result we should be working for; items that do not justify the amounts of money that have been appropriated for them. Under the office of the Secretary of the Interior, for example, we find a Division of Information which calls for the expenditure of $14,000 in the form of transfer of salaries; and $36,740 additional is included, making a total expense of $50,000 for 21 new positions each. There is no increase of other employees, but 21 new places are added for press relations, which is largely another name for propaganda. This so-called publicity work is increasing at a tremendous rate and spreading in every department of the Government. It seems to me this is an item that ought to be reduced. Certainly it does not justify an increase of 21 people in the press relations work.

As we go through the bill we come to various other items; for instance, the item on reclamation. Other members are specializing on the study of reclamation and irrigation, so I will not dwell on it longer than to state that here is a place where the money is not exactly an outright expenditure on the part of the Government. In similar fashion, a good deal of the outlay for the National Park Service comes back in fees from the parks.

Indian affairs is another item being studied by certain other members of the committee. In this case a large amount of the money belongs to the Indians themselves. I do think we go pretty far in handling it. As I look through the bill I find tribes of Indians I never heard about before. I have come to the conclusion that about the only tribe that has been left out is the ancient and honorable tribe of wooden cigarstore Indians. [Laughter.]

In large measure, however, the money for the Indian items belongs to the Indians themselves.

On the reindeer item, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Colmer] and the gentleman from California [Mr. Carter] and others have made a special study, which I am sure they will present to you.

The Bituminous Coal Commission received a cut of $600,000 in committee. The appropriation still carries $2,900,000 for this Commission and an additional $285,000 for the Consumers' Counsel. I have in mind the testimony presented in the hearings regarding the Bituminous Coal Commission and think I can weigh it without prejudice, because I voted for the enactment of the legislation in the first place. But when I did so I had in mind the thought that it would accomplish the stabilization of employment for the miners of America; in other words, that it might provide some remedy for the condition whereby thousands upon thousands of miners work for perhaps a period of 60 days and then find themselves out of work for a period ranging from 4 to 6 months. Had you listened to the hearings, however, as I did, and if you study them, you will find by the testimony of the Commissioners themselves, clearly stated on page 603 of the hearings, that this act has not contributed to the stabilization of employment in the coal-mining industry of the country.

You will also find in the hearings that testimony was presented which indicated an admission on the part of the members of the Commission, particularly the Consumers' Counsel, that they feel the purposes of the Bituminous Coal Act cannot be completely effective unless and until there is corresponding regulation of all the fuels.

You will also find in the testimony the purpose of the Bituminous Coal Commission clearly stated is to raise the price of coal to the extent that the revenue received from the annual coal production will be equal to the cost of its production, which means an addition of 11 cents per ton to the price of coal. This does not sound very large, but according to their own figures it means an increase of $37,000,000 on the annual coal bill paid by the people of the United States. Do not these admissions on the part of those who are responsible for the administration of this law indicate that there might wisely be a further reduction made in the appropriation for the Bituminous Coal Commission?

Next I come to the United States Housing Authority.

Mr. DOWELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. As soon as I complete my general review of the bill I shall yield in whatever time I have left.

Mr. DOWELL. I would like to ask a question.

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. I will be glad to give the gentleman an opportunity to ask a question if I can cover all of this bill. I have quite a little ground to cover yet.

Mr. Chairman, for the United States Housing Authority we find there is appropriated five and a half million dollars for administrative expenses. We find there is also appropriated one and one-half million dollars for construction advisers in the field, which sum is supposed to be paid back to the Government. In addition, we find $5,000,000 for annual contributions. I would like to focus attention on a speech made by Senator Tydings, of Maryland, recently, in which several very vital observations were made, and they go to the very core of this United States Housing Authority appropriation.

Senator Typings explained that the United States Housing Authority to date has contracted for the construction of 141 apartment houses to cost $356,695,341, or an average of $2,529,045. These projects contain 64,431 dwelling units, so that the average cost for the slum dwelling is $5,520 per family dwelling unit.

Those figures apply solely to the original cost of construction.

This-

Said Senator Typings-

is $136 more than the cost of the average American home as constructed and reported by the Federal Housing Administration under the F. H. A. program.

He added:

The rent subsidy to be paid by the United States Government over the 60 years of annual contributions on these 141 projects will amount to $831,861,000, according to the figures from the U.S. H. A. report. This is approximately two and one-half times the original cost of erecting these apartment houses. If we divide the total rent subsidy by the number of families occupying these apartment houses, we find this amounts to $12,910 for each family.

There are two or three things I would like to repeat from what I said when this legislation was under consideration. I agree with every Member of the House that slums are a blight on civilization and should be eliminated in this modern age.

There are two schools of thought. One school of thought is that the people of Podunk, Ohio, Adrian, Mich., Tuscaloosa, Ala., or Biloxi, Miss., should not bear the burden of expense for clearing the slums in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, and other cities. No one can deny the fact it is a justifiable and a greatly needed thing to have waterworks and sewage disposal in every community, but would you contend it is the responsibility of your communities and mine to provide such facilities for New York City, or that New York should provide them for us? Why, then, does not the same reasoning apply to slum clearance? However, that is not the greatest wrong in the method adopted. I would not object to that so much and I would be willing to forego the idea, although I agree with that theory fundamentally, if I could still believe that the Federal Government was undertaking these projects on a basis that was fair to the average citizen of your State and my State.

Let us look at this thing again and see if it is fair to the average citizen. The main fault with the whole business is that it misses the target of slum clearance entirely, for the simple reason that even after the Government subsidizes this proposition the slum dweller cannot afford to pay the rent necessary to live in one of these slum dwelling units. That is one of the main troubles.

On top of that, according to the figures I have cited, we find that the average family unit under the U. S. H. A. program costs $5,520, plus $12,910 for the annual contribution, which, if I figure correctly, makes a total of over $17,000 per family dwelling unit.

Who is going to pay for this and who is building them? I do not know what the conditions are in the communities of the various Members here, but I may say that I represent just as good a community as there is in the country. I know the value of the dwelling of the average citizen in my area is about $3,500; yet, by this legislation, you are saying to the man who lives in the $3,500 home that he has to pay for a slum dwelling home, in which even a slum dweller cannot live, costing a total of $17,000 per family unit, while he himself, as a private taxpayer, who does not get such beneficent assistance from the Federal Government, has to live in a $3,500 home, which he had to pay for out of his own sacrifices, out of his own toil, and out of his own years of saving. This situation should be corrected. Under U. S. H. A. we also find $36,000 for another one of those press sections.

I say that Mr. Strauss, head of the U. S. H. A., has indulged in what is probably an unintended piece of misinformation when he contended that this legislation is self-liquidating, as he did in the hearings.

That is just so much poppycock because if you will take the formula under the U.S. H. A. original authorization and apply it to a $1,000,000 project you will find that with slight variation the figures come out something like this: For each $1,000,000 project, the Federal Government, when this formula is applied and you determine the net results, has furnished not only the full sum of $1,000,000, the original cost of the project, but in addition has furnished almost $500,000 which the local housing or slum-clearance authority is able to use to pay interest to the Federal Government, the original source of the money. The Federal Government gives them the entire $1,000,000 and almost $500,000 in addition for interest-paying purposes. It is the Federal Government that gives them the money, and it is the Federal Government that collects $500,000 of its own money for interest. Yet some people would have you believe that the original outlay and all of the interest is actually borne by the local slum-clearance authorities.

On the basis of these facts, I contend that here again is a place where there could very properly and very wisely, in keeping with the dictates of sound conscience and judgment, be a cut in order to bring the expenditures of the Government in line with our income.

Next I would like to discuss the Bonneville and Grand Coulee power projects. The annual appropriation listed for Grand Coulee is $23,000,000 and $13,000,000 for Bonneville. Right at the very beginning let me say that I am not in any way, shape, or form attacking the wisdom of these projects. I mean by that I am not saying it is wrong to have them. Maybe it is, but my point, based entirely on principle and not in any sense of the word upon partisanship—and I believe you will note I have not brought a partisan word into this discussion—is, Are they getting money out there for these projects faster than they can digest it and chew it and masticate it and consume it and put it to work in accordance with the dictates of sound judgment?

Let us take a look at some of the facts in this connection. In the first place, I refer you to the hearings. There you will find that for Bonneville the Government has furnished a total of $45,000,000, and the ultimate cost will be approximately $100,000,000. This project was undertaken with the assurance on the part of Mr. Ross and the sponsors of the plan that it would not interfere with private industry or employment; in other words, that they were going to cooperate with private industry and employment and were not going to replace them in any way, shape, or form.

Then the sponsors of this plan contended, and have contended until this very day in all the hearings relative to this bill, that there would be no duplication of existing lines. Let us look at these two claims briefly. If you check up in the hearings you will find that when Bonneville and Grand Coulee are completed there will be a total production of 1,600,000 kilowatts. If you will check further you will find in the hearings that the consumption in the entire area at this very minute is approximately 1,600,000 kilowatts. Can anyone tell me how it can be contended that they can produce and dispose of 1,600,000 kilowatts under this project—

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. If the gentleman will yield, I think I can give the gentleman an answer.

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. Not just now. I will gladly yield if I can complete my review.

When the consumption in the entire area at the present time is 1,600,000 kilowatts, and when the combined total is for sale from Bonneville and Grand Coulee, how can it be contended that there is a market in that area without encroaching upon private enterprise and private employment? The answer given by the administrator is that there are tremendous potentialities in this field.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 additional minutes to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. I am very deeply indebted to my colleague of the committee.

If you will examine the hearings, you will find that Mr. Ross, the administrator of this Authority, stated that the potentialities of this field are growing at such a tremendous pace; that the consumption of the area has doubled about every 5½ years, and this is supposed to be the justification for furnishing additional production and transmission facilities. However, the fact remains that such has not been the experience, and that to increase consumption to the level that would be required to consume this additional power would take 12 to 15 years, according to the experience there over a period of 15 or 20 years. In other words, the point I wish to make is that the statement in support of the need for such large sums so quickly is not justified by the increase in the demand for power that has been evidenced in the territory, according to the figures of the Federal Power Commission.

Here is a field with a total consumption of 1,600,000 kilowatts at the present time. This volume is furnished by local agencies. Not Bonneville or Grand Coulee. But along comes the vast appropriations for these two projects, based on a pledge that there will be no interference with those local agencies. They say Bonneville and Grand Coulee will have 1,600,000 kilowatts for sale, and that it can be marketed without violating the pledge of noninterference. Obviously that is impossible unless consumption needs show an increase during the next few years that is somewhere near as large as the growth of annual consumption from the start of all power service up to the present time.

You can judge for yourself whether this is likely by the following figures taken from the Federal Power Commission reports, page 116 of the hearings:

Production of energy in the States of Washington and Oregon (in 1,000 kilowatt-hours)

1,000 KHOWALL-HOWS)
1920	1, 672, 268
1921	1, 645, 398
1922	1, 789, 429
1923	2,040,920
1924	2, 181, 955
1925	2, 352, 866
1926	2, 638, 927
1927	2, 966, 593
1928	3, 401, 767
1929	3, 713, 711
1930	3, 774, 483
1931	3, 749, 121
1932	3, 455, 634
1933	3, 404, 310
1934	3, 749, 704
1935	4, 065, 439
1936	5, 523, 569
1937	15, 107, 000

¹ 10 months actual, 2 months estimated.

In 1936 and 1937 a large block of kilowat!-hours were generated in Washington and transmitted to Montana where there was a most unusual drought.

The next point is, the sponsors of these projects stated there would be no duplication with the lines of private enterprises. I have here a map which represents the proposed transmission lines for Bonneville, when completed, superimposed upon the existing system. The solid red lines indicate transmission lines completed or under construction in 1939. The red lines with the spaces in between mark the ultimate Ross plan. the transmission lines that will exist when this plant is completed. Then alongside of that you have the existing transmission-line system, marked in black lines. I ask any Member of this House to look at this map and decide for himself if there is actual truth in the statement that was made to the Congress as a solemn pledge when this project was originally authorized and the statement that has been repeated in the hearings last year and this year that there would be no duplication of existing lines.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. I should like very much to yield to my distinguished colleague, but I have had to decline to yield on this side and I should like to maintain the same batting average on both sides.

We find these three points met by this argument: First, that there is an element of interference, that there is duplication of lines, that the consumption of the area is now taken care of by private industry and they cannot add to the power production of the area and sell it without infringing upon the production of private enterprise, which is supposed to be in conflict with the entire plan.

In addition to this, I was interested in finding out how much demand there was there for the power that already was available. In the hearings we found out that the present production at Bonneville is 86,400 kilowatts. Last year, and again this year, the administrators were repeatedly asked how much of their existing production they had actually sold or how much they had actually under contract. Invariably the answer was, "We have requests and applications for contracts amounting to a couple of hundred thousand kilowatts." It was necessary to press with diligence and with care, emphasizing that the question was not based upon applications but upon actual sales, and you will find these questions and answers at page 115 of the hearings:

Mr. White. All right. Let me ask you this question: Have you signed any contracts to deliver power to any public-utility district or town, and if so, to what district or town, and how much power were you delivering on January 1, 1939, in round figures?

Mr. Ross. We could only reach the little city of Cascade Locks. We have been serving those people. They are small. They bought their company there.

Mr. White. How many kilowatts?

Mr. Ross. It is around a couple hundred kilowatts.

Let me repeat, if you will, that I am not attacking the wisdom of the establishment of the Bonneville Authority in this discussion this afternoon. What I am asking is, Are we going to meet our responsibilities applying to all projects, no matter whether they be worthy ones or not, of reducing the expenses of government? Are we going to take advantage of an opportunity, if one exists here, to cut down the expenditures on an item where money has already been furnished faster than it could be economically used?

In substantiation of my belief that money has been furnished more rapidly than it could be used on a sound and economical basis for these projects, the sole basis of my contention, I further want to call your attention to the fact that a year ago the Bonneville administrator came to the Congress and asked for an appropriation totaling $6,000,000. Congress considered his plea, Congress examined it, and the members of the Appropriations Committee made a thorough study of the matter. After such careful consideration, they determined that their request was too high and that they needed not $6,000,000 but $3,500,000.

So it was that the appropriation was made in that amount. Then what happened? The Bonneville administration went around to the back door and succeeded in obtaining from P. W. A. $10,750,000 and from W. P. A. $2,850,000, making a total of $13,600,000, in addition to their appropriation from the Congress of $3,500,000, making a total of $17,100,000 which was provided by the Federal Government for Bonneville in a year when the administrator himself said that their total need was $6,000,000. Is it any wonder, therefore, that Mr. Ross described those funds as "pennies from heaven"?

Now let us go back to this question once more. Are we furnishing money faster than they can use it on an economical basis? Are we furnishing them with the means to construct transmission lines in far greater proportion and far ahead of the time when they will have the demand and the contracts and the business to make use of such transmission

In order to get another answer to that question. I was interested in how much the unexpended balance might be at both Bonneville and Grand Coulee. So this morning I called up Mr. Burlew, the Assistant Secretary of the Interior. Mr. Burlew said he could not give me the figures as of this date but could give the figures as of June 30, 1939. We realize, of course, there will be a beautiful opportunity to spend a lot of the present money between now and June 30, 1939. But, nevertheless, according to his own statement, the unexpended balance-

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. His reply showed that the unexpended balance on June 30, 1939, would be $3,100,000 for Bonneville and the unexpended balance for Grand Coulee would be $7,000,000.

Now, let us boil this statement down and see just what it means. It simply means that after this Congress said last year their need was $3,500,000 and they confined their own figure to $6,000,000, they got "pennies from heaven" that made their total $17,100,000; in other words, they got almost $14,000,000 more than Congress said was their real need for the year.

Yet they are coming back here and asking for $13,000,000 more for Bonneville this year. They are getting money faster than they can put it out in an economical way. Last year they received a total of $17,100,000, and this year they are asking for $13,000,000 more when, as a matter of fact, they have for Bonneville and Grand Coulee an unexpended balance on June 30 of $10,100,000. This proves the point I make that they are getting money faster than necessary, and that we should reduce these amounts, and that we can do so without tearing down the structure of the project in its fundamental form. We can take this means of doing it. It presents an opportunity for us to bring Government expenditures this much nearer in line with Government revenues. There are a good many departments that deal largely in service of personnel. It is difficult to cut down on them, but here is a question simply of holding back expansions for a little while longer, of not making enlargement or expansion at such a rapid rate. It is not a question of destroying something already in existence. There is another illustration that I want to give you to illustrate the point that I am making. In the T. V. A., according to these people who appeared before the committee, the total production will be 1,400,000 kilowatts. For Grand Coulee and Bonneville the total production when it is all completed will be about 1,600,000 kilowatts for sale. In other words, 200,000 more than T. V. A. Yet the total population of the T. V. A. area, comprising all of the dams under that project, is 13,402,000, while the total population in the transmitting area of Grand Coulee and Bonneville is 2,316,000. So I contend again there is decided proof that they are overbuilding the present needs.

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. There are some other points that I desire to call to the attention of the Committee, and then I shall be glad to yield if I have the time. We all know—and I am speaking in the utmost sincerity—that there is confronting us a solemn obligation to reduce expenses of government; that it is an essential factor in restoring this country to the road of recovery and 10,000,000 American people to the road of employment. We all know that the President of the United States stood on this rostrum within the last couple of months and not only placed upon Congress the responsibility for determining those cuts, but he even double-dared Congress to do it. Do you not think the time is here when we ought to meet that challenge? In the Senate and in this House we have great men, men of lovable character, men of intense patriotism, both Democrats and Republicans, who have had the courage to rise up and proclaim the needs of this situation. Senators Byrd and Glass just a few days ago advocated that all of these needless expenditures should be eliminated and on top of that there should be a 10-percent cut made on all expenditures of the Federal Government from one end to the other. So, Mr. Chairman, here is an opportunity to do it. Senator Byrn went up to the White House yesterday and came away saying the President is in sympathy with the economy proposals. Let us start now. Let us eliminate, first, the excess amounts in this bill; and then after that we ought to make a 10-percent cut on all of the expenses in the bill from one end to the other, worth-while things though they may be; and then do the same thing on all other appropriation bills that come before the House. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Chairman, I yield now to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. O'CONNOR].

THE NECESSITY OF RECLAMATION

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, reclamation has been fittingly defined as the very lifeblood of agriculture. Reclamation holds the same important place in the life of agriculture as the blood stream does to man and animal.

It is highly significant to note in our consideration of reclamation projects that 73,000,000 American farm acres in 1935, 75,000,000 in 1936, and 87,000,000 acres in 1937 have been displaced by agricultural commodities grown on foreign soil and imported into this country. This is more than 20 times the acreage now under all Federal reclamation projects, according to statistics compiled by the research division of the Raw Materials National Council.

No longer is it possible for the farmer in Montana and other Western States to plant his seed in the ground and then raise his calloused hands to the high heavens in a prayer for rain. The prayers of the farmers have not been answered. Today he must safeguard the life of his crops against drought through a unified scientific approach to the agricultural problem. That solution lies in irrigation and reclamation, as has been proven by projects over the arid West.

In agriculture, and in agriculture alone, lies the key to our national prosperity. And in irrigation and reclamation alone lies the key to prosperity on the farm.

I am not unearthing a new revelation when I tell the Members of this House that agriculture is our orphan industry. The farmer purchases his needs on a closed market and sells his products on an open market. When he purchases items necessary on the farm he pays the price placed on the article by the various handlers, from the manufacturer to the retailer. When he sells his products he receives what is offered, not what he asks or what he deserves. He receives no figure near his cost of production.

I have seen thousands of acres of crops planted in the richest soils in the West wilting in the middle of summer, and when the harvest season arrives the crops are dead from thirst. I cannot impress upon Members of this House the supreme importance of irrigation and reclamation projects to the agriculture industry of our land. It is my firm conviction that large-scale construction of irrigation and reclamation projects will be our first step toward restoring normal prosperity to our Nation.

